QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

EXPERIMENTAL CREW SYSTEM ON THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.

1. Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : (a) Have the Government decided to institute an experimental crew system on the East Indian Railway to prevent the public from travelling without tickets ?

(b) Is it a fact that an officer has already been appointed to recruit staff for the purpose ? If so, will the Government give the name of the officer appointed for the purpose ?

(c) What is the number of crew inspectors and crew subordinates already recruited and to what community do they belong ?

(f) Was there any death due to the pushing of a woman from a running train at Burdwan, East Indian Railway ? Has the crew guilty of pushing resulting in the death of the woman been found out and prosecuted ?

(g) What is the educational qualification required of those recruited to the crews and to what provinces do they belong ?

(h) Are Government aware that the crew system is condemned by the general public ? If so, do the Government propose to discontinue the same ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Yes.

(b) The answer to the first part of the question is in the negative ; the second part does not arise.

(c) & (d). A statement showing the sanctioned strength of the crew staff for the Howrah, Lucknow and a portion of the Asansol Division on which the crew system has been introduced, together with information as to number of ticket collectors' appointments brought under reduction, is being sent separately to the Honourable Member.

Government have no information as to the various communities to which the members of the crew system belong.

(e) Government have received copies of two such reports and have been informed of three court cases of this nature instituted against members of the crew.

(f) A report to this effect was made but the Government understand that it was found to be untrue.

(g) The recruitment of the crews is in the hands of the Agent, East Indian Railway, and Government do not know what educational qualifications are required nor the provinces to which members of the crew belong.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : As regards (f) may I inquire where did the Government get the information from ? Was it from the Railway Police ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : From the Agent of the East Indian Railway.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : May I ask if Government will find out from the Agent what the educational qualifications of the men recruited are ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I don't think any educational qualifications have been definitely laid down.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Are they likely to be laid down soon ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Not at present.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Are the Government aware that in the Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway sections of the East Indian Railway there are serious complaints against men recently recruited because of their improper behaviour towards the travelling public, particularly the third class travelling public ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : No, Sir.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Will Government inquire ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : If the Honourable Member can give me information which justifies my making an inquiry, I am perfectly prepared to do so.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : May I point out, Sir, that I have made as definite a statement as possible. I cannot be expected to find out the names of the actual offenders.

Mr. President : Order, order. Will the Honourable Member put a supplementary question.

DEFECTIVE CONSTRUCTION OF THE COUNCIL CHAMBERS AT NEW DELHI.

2. Mr B. Das : (a) Are Government aware that the defective construction of the Council Chambers at New Delhi has already brought lateral cracks along the arched roofs of the corridors on both floors ?

(b) Will Government be pleased to state if the Consulting Engineers and Architects of the Council Chambers at New Delhi took into consideration the likelihood of the appearance of cracks through defective design or defective construction or other causes and did they provide sufficient safeguards to avoid such cracks ?

(c) Will Government be pleased to lay on the table a statement showing the provision made by the Consulting Engineers and Architects in their initial design ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) & (b) Government are not aware of any cracks due to defective construction or defective design. Some cracks are inevitable in a building of this size which is founded on a variable foundation, partly of rock and partly of clay, and subjected to such wide variations of temperature and humidity as in New Delhi. Government are informed that such cracks as exist are not a matter of serious concern, and that it is not possible to provide sufficient safeguard to avoid such cracks.

(c) Does not arise.

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : Will the Government be pleased to state if there are any cracks in the Delhi Jumma Musjid or the old Fort at Delhi ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : I have no information, Sir.

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : Will the Government be pleased to collect the information and inform the House ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : I shall try to get the information and send it on to the Honourable Member.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Why not place it on the table ?

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : May I know, Sir, what exactly has been done to the dome of the Assembly which caused so much risk of injury ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : Sir, there is another question on that point. If the Honourable Member will wait he will get the answer to his question.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : May I beg to inquire if the Honourable Member is aware of any cracks in the old temporary Secretariat in Delhi where the Assembly Chamber used to be before it was shifted to the Imperial Capital.

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : I am pretty sure there are cracks in that building. I have myself noticed it.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I ask, Sir, in view of the fact that these cracks are due to variations in the temperature, whether the Government of India will make arrangements for taking the temperature of this House from hour to hour ?

SAFETY OF THE CEILING OF THE ASSEMBLY CHAMBER AT NEW DELHI.

3. Mr. B. Das : Are Government prepared to invite an independent committee of Consulting Engineers to give their opinion on :

(a) the safety of the ceiling of the Assembly Chamber at New Delhi, and

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : Government do not consider the action suggested to be necessary.

REPORTS OF THE DIRECTOR OF WAGON INTERCHANGE.

4. Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state if the wagon exchange officer makes any reports to the Railway Board and whether these reports are made every three months or every year ?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to lay the reports made by this officer for the last two years on the table ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) The Director of Wagon Interchange is an officer of the Indian Railway Conference Association and makes no direct reports to the Railway Board, but copies of the following reports prepared by him are received by the Railway Board :

Annually—

Weekly—

(b) These are purely departmental reports but copies will be shown to the Honourable Member if he will call at the Railway Board's office for the purpose.

PURCHASE BY GOVERNMENT OF THE WORKS OF THE PENINSULAR LOCOMOTIVE COMPANY.

5. Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state whether on account of the wagon surplus they have made an offer to purchase the works of the Peninsular Locomotive Company ?

(c) Have Government rejected the offer of an independent valuation and if so, why ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : (a) Yes. When last autumn the Government of India became aware that they would not be able to place orders for the supply in 1927-28, and probably in 1928-29, or possibly for some years thereafter, of broad gauge general service wagons—the types of wagon which Indian firms had been manufacturing under the bounty scheme introduced on the passing of the Steel Industry (Protection) Act—they immediately placed the position before representatives of the firms concerned, and discussed with them what measures should be adopted to help them to tide over an admittedly difficult period. As a result of these discussions they made the firms the offer which is described in paragraphs 6 and 7 of a memorandum presented to them, a copy of which I lay on the table. Briefly, the offer was to place orders in India only for wagons of other types and underframes which they would require in 1927-28, and also for certain other railway material needed in that year, provided a reasonable price could be agreed upon, and the firms were unanimous that this would be the best course. I may mention that, though the firms were not unanimous on the subject, the Government of India have implemented this offer. At the same time a suggestion of purchase had been made in the course of the discussion with the firms, and the Government of India accordingly stated that, if either the Indian Standard Wagon Company or the Peninsular Locomotive Company, the two Indian firms which had hitherto specialised in wagon building only, were unwilling to acquiesce in this offer and would prefer that their works should be taken over by Government, they would be ready to discuss the terms on which they would be prepared, as an alternative, to purchase the works. The Peninsular Locomotive Company considered the offer inadequate, and stated that they had therefore no option except to request the Government to take the entire works over. The Government of India thereupon deputed two officers to inspect the works of the Peninsular Locomotive Company, and, after receiving their report, offered the Company a sum of 20 lakhs for the property in a letter dated the 6th of January, 1927, a copy of which I place on the table.

(b) Yes. After the Peninsular Locomotive Company had received the offer made verbally on the 5th of January, 1927 and in writing on the following day, they wrote on the 31st of January, 1927 expressing their willingness, should Government desire that the process of fixing a price should be by valuation, to abide by the decision of an independent valuation at the hands of an approved party on the basis of replacement cost or earning capacity in normal conditions.

(c) Yes. The price offered by Government was not entirely based on a valuation of the property, but took into consideration all the facts of the case. The Government of India are satisfied that it is a more liberal price than would have been obtained by an independent valuation, and in the circumstances they did not consider that an independent valuation would have served any useful purpose.

MEMORANDUM.

The position of the firms engaged in the manufacture of railway wagons in India arising out of the decision of the Railway Board that for the present the purchase of broad gauge wagons of the usual types is not required, was discussed in Calcutta with representatives of Messrs. Burn and Co., Ltd., and the Indian Standard Wagon Company, Ltd., and in Bombay with the representatives of the Peninsular Locomotive Company.

2. In 1916 the Government of India raised the question of encouraging the manufacture of wagons in India. They recognised that some form of encouragement was necessary, and after discussions with certain of the firms interested, they issued on 1st March 1918 a communiqué in which they guaranteed to purchase in India 2,500 broad gauge and 500 metre gauge wagons annually for a period of ten years, provided that the price was not higher than the price at which wagons could be imported and that the materials and workmanship were satisfactory. Tenders in accordance with the terms of this communiqué were first called for in March 1920. But this form of encouragement proved ineffective, and in 1924 on the recommendation of the Tariff Board the Government of India instituted a new method of assistance. The essential feature of the new scheme was that the Government of India were authorised by the Steel Industry (Protection) Act to pay for Indian wagons a price higher than the price at which wagons could be imported. The theory of the scheme was that the number of wagons purchased in India would be determined by the amount set aside for bounties divided by the difference between the lowest satisfactory tender and the accepted Indian tender. Another feature of the scheme was that it was decided, in order to assist the Indian firms, that orders should be placed in India for as few types of wagons as possible. In view of the material change in the position caused by the enactment of the Steel Industry (Protection) Act, the Government of India issued on the 27th June 1924 another communiqué in which they formally withdrew the communiqué of 1st March 1918. In this later communiqué they expressly stated that they were not in a position to forecast the exact number of railway wagons of different types that they were now likely to require annually in the future, but they went on to say that they had every reason to expect that their requirements would be amply sufficient to give effect to the policy contained in Section 4 of the Steel Industry (Protection) Act. This communiqué elicited no protest or objection from the firms engaged in the manufacture of wagons in India.

3. The Government of India have thought it necessary briefly to re-state the position as they see it, in view of the statements which were freely made by the representatives of the firms in Calcutta and Bombay that the communiqué of March 1st, 1918, was still in force. The Government of India are unable to accept this view. At the same time, they recognise that their policy since 1918 has been directed towards fostering the wagon industry in India, and they are anxious to do what they can to find the best solution of the difficulty which has now arisen.

4. The position is that after a careful assessment of the results of the measures which have been and are being taken to expedite and improve the working of Indian Railways, the Railway Board have arrived at the conclusion that the broad gauge Railways in India should be able to carry efficiently with their existing stock of wagons all the traffic that is likely to offer in 1927-28 and 1928-29 and possibly for some further years. They are not likely to require therefore in 1927-28 more than a few wagons of special types.

5. Various proposals have been made by the firms concerned. But the one which seemed to find most favour was that the Government should lease, until such time as they found themselves again able to guarantee continuity of orders, the works of the Indian Standard Wagon Company and of the Peninsular Locomotive Company, and that they should endeavour to provide the remaining firms with remunerative work. The Government of India are not prepared to accept this proposal, nor do the other suggestions made commend themselves to them.

6. If the firms are unanimous that their best course is to face the risk and to hold on until the Railways are again in a position to place orders for wagons of the type usually made in India, the Government, after giving their most careful consideration to the problem ; are unable to make any other suggestion for assisting them than that made by Sir Charles Innes at the interviews in Calcutta and Bombay. That offer was as follows :

(i) They will call as soon as possible for tenders in India only on such miscellaneous wagons of different gauges and different types as they will require in 1927-28. The exact number of the wagons will depend upon the conversations now going with the Company Railways, but it is hoped that the number will reach between 1,700 and 1,800.

(ii) The Government will also call, as soon as possible for tenders in India only for such underframes as they will require in 1927-28. Here again, the exact number will depend upon the conversations now proceeding with the Companies, but it is hoped that the number will be in the neighbourhood of 600.

(iii) The Government will instruct the State-worked Railways to place orders in India for such spare parts as they require and as they cannot conveniently make in their own workshops, and (iv) Government will undertake to instruct the State-worked Railways to call for tenders in India only for shedding, roof trusses and bridge spans up to 80 feet span.

7. This offer will relate to the material required in 1927-28 only, and the Government cannot say more than that they will consider the situation again in the autumn of next year. The offer, moreover, is subject to the stipulation that orders will be placed in India only if a reasonable price can be agreed on.

8. This offer is being made to each of the four firms concerned. It may be that some of them may be unwilling to acquiesce in this offer and may prefer that their works should be taken over by Government. If this is so, the Government will be prepared to discuss the terms on which they would be willing to purchase the works either of the Indian Standard Wagon Company or of the Peninsular Locomotive Company or of both these firms. In this connection, they would wish to inspect the works and equipment of these two firms with the object of determining what in such an event would be a fair offer. But it should be clearly understood that if they do take over these works, it is their intention ultimately to use the Indian Standard Wagon Company's works for the manufacture of railway wagons and to use the works of the Peninsular Locomotive Company for the manufacture of underframes.

Copy of a letter, dated the 6th January 1927, to Mr. Manu Subedar.

I write to confirm what I told you yesterday, namely Firstly, that whether or not the Government of India take over the Peninsular Locomotive Company and the Indian Standard Wagon Company or only one of them, and notwithstanding that the Indian Wagon Building firms are not unanimous in their views as to what is the best course for them to adopt, the Government of India intend to carry out the offer contained in clauses (i) to (iv) of paragraph 6 of the memorandum which formed an enclosure to Railway Board's letter No. 3420-S.III, dated the 19th November 1926, subject only to the conditions stated in paragraph 7 of that memorandum ; Secondly, the Government of India are not prepared to extend the scope or duration of that offer; and Thirdly, that Government of India offer to purchase the whole of the buildings, fixtures, plant, tools, machinery, materials, equipment, land and stock in trade of the Peninsular Locomotive Company hereinafter referred to as the " property ", subject to the following conditions :

(a) that the Company are in a position to sell the property to Government free of all encumbrances and particularly that Government will not be bound by the terms of any leases or agreements executed by the Peninsular Locomotive Company. Government will not take over any contractual obligations entered into by or any liabilities of the Company in respect, for instance, to loans or to agreements with employees ;

(b) that the property referred to shall be that existing on the 31st December 1926 in accordance with certified lists to be agreed upon by representatives of the Company and the Government and shall also include all other equipment obtained in replacement of any part of the said property ; also all small tools obtained after the 31st December 1926 and used for the work carried on in the workshops. But it shall not include any equipment, plant, machinery or tools under order on the 1st January 1927, or ordered thereafter. If the Company wish to sell to Government any such equipment, plant, machinery, or tools this will be a matter for separate negotiation and the purchase price therefor will be in addition to the purchase price offered for the property ;

(c) that Government are able on terms suitable to them to obtain possession of all the land in the occupation of the Company and to secure the continuation of such of the conveniences and arrangements incidental to the business of the Company as will enable Government to make use of the purchased property for the conduct of the business they have in view ;

(d) that the date of purchase will be decided later with reference to the time when the Company will have completed all their existing contracts ;

(e) that Government shall not be charged with any expenses incurred by the Company in connection with the sale of the property to Government or the winding up of the business of the Company ;

(f) that Government shall pay as the purchase price of the property Rs. 20 lakhs. This is a final figure, and the Government of India are not prepared to discuss it.

The offer to purchase will expire on the 28th February 1927.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : May I know, Sir, if the Companies acquiesced in the proposition that an independent valuation will be worse for them than the offer that was made by the Government of India ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I have no information to that effect, Sir.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : Then upon what basis do the Government say that, as a matter of fact, the independent valuation will be worse for the Companies than what the Companies themselves consider good for them ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : That was the opinion of the Government of India, Sir.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : I know. Have the Government any opinion as to what the Company thinks of this matter ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : There has been considerable amount of correspondence between the Company and the Government of India. But I do not wish to suggest in any way that the Company took this view of the case.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : May I know, Sir, whether the Company still urges an independent valuation ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I do not think the question arises, Sir, of an independent valuation. The Company have accepted the Government of India's offer and the transaction is complete.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : May I know once again what exactly is the offer which the Company have accepted now ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : Rs. 20 lakhs, Sir.

NUMBER OF CASUALTIES AMONG PUNJABI TROOPS AT SHANGHAI.

6. Diwan Chaman Lall : (a) Will Government state the number of casualties and the circumstances under which they took place, among Punjabi troops at Shanghai since their arrival there ?

(b) In view of the danger of Indian troops being involved in hostilities at Shanghai and the danger of consequent loss of Indian lives, will Government state whether they intend to recall their forces ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) One of the Indian contingent has been killed and two wounded.

(b) The Indian troops, with the exception of the Company of Sappers and Miners and a few ancillary units, are under orders to return to India.

RIOT AT PONABALIA.

7. Maulvi Abdul Matin Chaudhury : Will the Government be pleased to make a statement with regard to the shooting incident at Ponabalia in the district of Barisal as foreshadowed in the Honourable the Home Member's reply to Mr. K. Ahmed's question on March 4th, 1927 ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : A full statement was issued by the Bengal Government in a communique, dated March 5th, 1927. I am afraid I am unable to add any information to the facts contained in that communique except that the latest report of casualties was that they amounted to 19 killed and 12 wounded. The whole circumstances connected with this occurrence are, as the Honourable Member is probably aware, at present under judicial examination in connection with the case of rioting which has been instituted against certain persons, and it would not be proper for me at this stage to make any further statement.

Maulvi Abdul Matin Chaudhury : Do the Government intend to hold a public inquiry after the cases are finished ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Government will await the result of the judicial inquiry before forming any opinion on the subject.

HARDSHIPS OF PILGRIMS RETURNING FROM THE GURUKUL KANGRI (HARDWAR) FAIR.

8. Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava : (a) Are Government aware that the pilgrims who attended the Gurkul Kangri (Hardwar) Fair in March 1927 numbering about 70,000 people were put to much inconvenience and trouble on their return journey owing to the inadequate and unsatisfactory arrangements of the railway authorities ?

(b) Is it a fact that no enquiry office was opened by the Railway up till 21st March either in or about the railway premises ?

(c) Are enquiry offices generally opened for the convenience of the passengers at big fairs ?

(d) Was any mela officer appointed on the occasion ? If so, will the Government kindly name the gentleman ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) No.

(b) A special officer and extra staff were posted at Hardwar early in March and were available to supply any information required.

An enquiry office was opened in April before the outward rush commenced.

(c) Government understand that enquiry offices are opened when occasion renders this advisable.

(d) Yes. If the question refers to railway officials, the name of the officer is Khan Sahib M. A. Rashid.

ALLEGED HARASSMENT OF PILGRIMS AT HARDWAR.

9. Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava : (a) Is it a fact that originally there was a proposal to run special trains on 20th and 21st March to enable pilgrims to leave Hardwar but subsequently these trains were cancelled with the result that the pilgrims had to wait for a much longer time at Hardwar ?

(b) Is it a fact that coolies and subordinate railway staff harassed the pilgrims and, owing to the absence of information in respect of the arrival and departure of trains, pilgrims and their family members and children had to run from one passenger hall to another ?

(c) Is it a fact that no platform tickets were issued and no passenger could have access to the railway station authorities for getting information or making any complaints ?

(d) Is it a fact that the two ticket collectors on duty between 8 and 11 P.M. at the first class entrance were very rude to passengers so much so that gentlemen connected with the personal staff of Mahatma Gandhi and Mr. Deshbandhu, editor of Tej, were very roughly treated and that the latter lodged a complaint with the station master on duty ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Two special trains were run on the 21st March 1927 conveying outward pilgrims from Hardwar and in addition extra coaching rakes were available at Hardwar if required. The Railway reports that no pilgrims were detained at Hardwar.

(b) No complaints of harassment were received. Railway officers and extra supervising staff were stationed at Hardwar and every endeavour was made to assist pilgrims by distribution of explanatory pamphlets, special marks on tickets and exhibition of signs.

(c) A number of platform passes were issued enabling passengers to get on to the platform and it is reported that any passenger who wished to make a complaint could without difficulty have seen the special officer posted at Hardwar.

(d) Government have no information and understand that no complaints against the ticket collectors were received by the Railway.

APPOINTMENT OF INCOME-TAX OFFICERS, INSPECTORS AND STENOGRAPHERS IN THE PUNJAB AND THE NORTH-WEST FRONTIER PROVINCE.

10. Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava : (a) How do the Government propose to fill the posts of Income-tax Officers, Inspectors and stenographers who are to be appointed from 1st April 1927 in the Punjab and the North-West Frontier Province ?

(b) If the answer to part (a) is that these posts are to be filled by direct recruitment, will the Government state if any departmental men possess the qualifications necessary for such posts and in case such men are available why their claims should be ignored ?

(c) Are there any clerks in the department who have passed the departmental examination of Inspectors ?

(e) Do Government propose to consider the advisability of filling the newly created posts of Inspectors and stenographers by clerks already working in the Department ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : (a) and (e). Appointments of Income-tax Officers are made by the Commissioner of Income-tax subject to the approval of the Local Government. Appointments to the other posts mentioned are made by the Commissioner of Income-tax.

(b), (c) and (d). The Government have no detailed information as to the qualifications, etc., of men in the Department. They have no reason to suppose that their claims have not been (or will not be) duly considered in making the appointments referred to.

Nawab Sir Sahibzada Abdul Qaiyum : Are the Government aware that the posts of stenographers in the North-West Frontier Province are practically monopolised by clerks from outside the province ? Are they prepared to find facilities for local people with proper qualifications ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : I doubt, Sir, whether the question arises, but I am afraid the answer is not within my knowledge.

LIQUIDATION OF THE ARMY CANTEEN BOARD AND REVERSION TO THE SYSTEM OF INDIAN CONTRACTORS.

11. Mr. T. A. K. Shervani : 1. Is it a fact that a Circular No. 30946|4, dated the 25th January 1927, has been issued by the Army Department ?

2. (a) Is it a fact that on the 17th January 1927 the Quartermaster-General in India called a meeting of the Army Contractors at Delhi to intimate to them the Government's decision to liquidate the Army Canteen Board and to revert to the system of Indian contractors ?

(b) If the answer to part 2 (a) is in the affirmative, was the decision based on the recommendation of the Commission appointed to investigate into the working and financial position of the Army Canteen Board and also on the almost universal condemnation of the Army Canteen Board by the Commanding Officers in India and their approval of the tenancy system ?

(c) Did the Quartermaster-General in India on the 17th January 1927 read over to the Army Contractors certain proposals, now embodied in the Circular referred to above ?

(g) Is it a fact that the contractors were not allowed to get from the office copies of the above proposals, and that scores of such copies in typed form were then available ?

3. Are Government aware that some of the contractors at that very time objected to the measures as being exacting and unworkable ?

4. (a) Are Government aware that the Quartermaster-General in India tried to secure consent, threatening to import the Navy, Army and Air Force Institutes from England ?

(b) Did the Quartermaster-General in India try to silence any objections and criticisms by threatening to remove from the approved list the names of those contractors who did not agree to these proposals in toto ?

Mr. G. M. Young : 1. A letter was issued by the Government of India bearing the number and date mentioned by the Honourable Member, and laying down the terms on which Government was prepared to revert to the unit contractor system for Army Canteen arrangements. A revised letter containing modified terms is under issue.

2. (a) The Quartermaster-General called the meeting referred to in order to intimate the Government's decision to liquidate the Army Canteen Board (India) and to inform those present of the conditions on which Government was prepared to revert to the system of unit contractors.

(b) In deciding to liquidate the Army Canteen Board full weight was given by Government, amongst other considerations, to the recommendations of the Commission referred to, and to the wishes of a large number of Commanding Officers.

(c) The Quartermaster-General read over and explained the conditions on which Government were prepared to revert to a system of unit contractors. These conditions were in the main based on proposals made by the contractors in a memorial submitted by them to His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, praying for a return to the unit contractor system. The conditions were embodied in the letter referred to by the Honourable Member.

(f) The contractors were given about an hour to consider and discuss matters among themselves, after some discussion had taken place between them and the Quartermaster-General.

(g) Each contractor present had a typed copy of the conditions.

3. Yes, but a considerable number of the contractors expressed themselves as satisfied with the conditions, which, as I have already stated, were largely based on proposals made by the contractors themselves. Some of the terms are being modified in the revised letter to which I have already referred.

4. (a) The Quartermaster-General was not concerned to secure consent by threats. His object at the meeting was to ascertain whether there was a sufficient number of contractors ready to accept the conditions and render possible a reversion to the unit contractor system. He found that there was a sufficient number. He explained that if there were not a sufficient number, the only alternative was a central system, which would probably be the Navy, Army and Air Force Institutes.

(b) The answer is in the negative. The approved list was not then in existence : but it now exists, and is composed of the contractors who accepted the terms.

DISPOSAL OF THE STOCKS OF THE ARMY CANTEEN BOARD.

12. *Mr. T. A. K. Shervani : (a) Is it a fact that the Government have suffered much financially in consequence of the failure of the Army Canteen Board and is at present anxious to replenish the losses by the disposal of the Board's stock ?

(b) Are Government aware that the Army Canteen Board has already been declared to be no quasi-Governmental Institution but a private concern, incorporated under the Indian Companies Act ?

(c) Are Government interested in furthering the Board's interests even at the cost of those of Indian tradesmen ? If so, why ?

(d) Is it a fact that the objects of the institution of the Army Canteen Board were mainly two, namely :—

(a) improvement of the Canteen Service ; and

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) Yes, Sir. The actual extent of the losses will not be known until the Board's stock is finally disposed of.

(b) The Government are not aware of any such declaration. The Army Canteen Board is a company guaranteed by the Government of India.

(c) No, Sir. The second part does not arise.

DISPOSAL OF THE STOCKS OF THE ARMY CANTEEN BOARD TO INDIAN CONTRACTORS.

13. *Mr. T. A. K. Shervani : (a) Is an intending contractor in the Northern or Western Command bound to purchase from the Army Canteen Board stocks apportioned to each regiment, which may roughly be estimated to be about Rs. 80,000 ?

(c) Is he given fixed tenures or a period sufficient to enable him to get a return on his investment, and within which he could not be turned out except for a serious breach of the terms of the agreement ?

(d) Are Government aware that the " terminable-at-will " nature of the contract is causing great dissatisfaction and unrest among the bona fide contractors who have in consequence evinced no keen interest in taking over Institutes from the Army Canteen Board ?

(e) Are Government prepared to consider any amendment in the duration of contract which might be a stimulus to and foster enterprises for the betterment of the condition of the troops ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) The answer is in the affirmative, except that the estimated figure is greatly in excess of the actual.

REFORMS IN THE CANTEEN SERVICE.

11. Mr. T. A. K. Shervani : (a) Are Government aware that certain reforms in the Canteen Service have been proposed by an eminent contractor, wherein a war time organisation finds a conspicuous place ?

(b) If so, are Government prepared to consider a syndicate as therein suggested, financially self-supporting promoting co-operation among contractors for war time emergencies and always at the beck and call of the Army Headquarters ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) The answer is in the affirmative.

(b) Government are now considering what is the most effective and economical method of utilizing the services of contractors in war.

PURCHASE OF THE STOCK OF THE ARMY CANTEEN BOARD BY INDIAN CONTRACTORS.

15. Mr. T. A. K. Shervani : (a) Are Government aware that under the rules recently enforced a contractor purchasing stores from the Army Canteen Board has no option, but is constrained to accept the decision of the Board's representative ?

(b) If so, do Government propose to see that contractors are given a free hand to refuse to purchase those things which they have reason to believe to be unfit for use or unsaleable from the nature of the thing ?

(c) Are Government aware that the scale of valuation of the Board's stock has been arbitrarily fixed ?

(d) Have the prices been calculated on the invoice (not sale) price of the stuff to be sold, and has a percentage of reduction been fixed thereon ?

(e) Has any regard been paid to the fact that prices generally and more especially those of machinery have now considerably gone down ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) Under the strict letter of their agreements the contractors had no option : but in practice their objections were sympathetically dealt with by the Liquidator.

(b) No, Sir : but the contractors are not compelled to take over articles which in the opinion of the Liquidator are unfit for use or unsaleable.

(c) and (d) The answer is in the negative. Prices were calculated on retail prices, as in the latest available official price lists of the Army Canteen Board, less 15 per cent. discount for beer stocks, and 12½ per cent. for other stocks. Further concessions have since increased the discount on individual articles

UNIVERSAL RATE OF REBATE IN CONNECTION WITH THE CANTEEN SERVICE.

16. Mr. T. A. K. Shervani : (a) Is it a fact that the Government have sanctioned a universal rate of rebate applicable to the whole of India ?

(b) If so, are Government aware that business conditions on the plains differ from those in the hills ?

(c) If so, are Government prepared to see that in sanctioning universal rebates, the rates for the hills and the plains are to be separately considered ?

(d) Are Government aware that under the new rules an Officer Commanding has the power only to increase the rebate above the minimum fixed at Rs. 3-4-0 per head per mensem and that he is not to reduce it under any circumstances ?

(e) Do Government propose to sanction a universal rebate after due consideration of all conditions and circumstances and without leaving anything in the hands of the Officer Commanding to enhance the same ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a), (b) and (d) Yes.

(c) and (e) Government are now reconsidering the terms of rebate.

ESTABLISHMENT IN INDIA OF THE BOARD OF THE NAVY, ARMY, AND AIR FORCE INSTITUTES.

17. Mr. T. A. K. Shervani : Is it a fact that the Government are anxious to import and establish the Board of the Navy, Army and Air Force Institutes and are therefore putting obstacles in the way of contractors ?

Mr. G. M. Young : The answer is in the negative in both places

(Mr. President then called on Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas in whose name question No. 18 stood.)

Mr. K. C. Neogy : May I request you, Sir, under Standing Order 19, to direct that the answer to this question may be given ?

Mr. President : Does the Honourable Member wish to put the question standing in the name of Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas ?

Mr. K. C. Neogy : It is for you, Sir, to ask the Government to answer this question.

Mr. President : I am perfectly prepared to allow the Honourable Member to put the question standing in the name of Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas if he is willing to do so.

(Mr. K. C. Neogy then put question No. 18).

REFUSAL OF THE SWEDISH MATCH COMPANY TO FURNISH DETAILS OF THEIR WORKS COST TO THE TARIFF BOARD.

18. Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : (a) With reference to the examination before the Tariff Board on 13th, 14th and 16th April last of the representative of the Swedish Match Combine in India, have Government noticed the report in the press that the said representative refused to supply the President of the Tariff Board with any details regarding the cost of production of matches by that Combine in India even in camera ?

(b) If the reply to the above be in the affirmative, will Government be pleased to state what action they propose to take against such a foreign Combine, manufacturing in India, thus challenging a technical body set up by the Government for the purpose of enquiry into the industry ?

(c) Will Government be pleased to state if they propose to undertake any legislation to prevent a repetition of such an incident in connection with any future enquiry by the Tariff Board ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : (a) Yes.

(b) and (c) The attention of the Honourable Member is invited to the Tariff Board's press communique, dated the 7th July, 1927. In view of the changed attitude of the Swedish Match Company as announced therein, the Government of India do not propose to take any action in this matter.

Mr. B. Das : May I enquire if the Swedish Match Combine have received any concessions from the Government of India or from any Local Government in any shape or form ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I am afraid I must ask for notice.

COASTAL SERVICE MAINTAINED BY THE BRITISH INDIA STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY BETWEEN BOMBAY AND KARACHI.

19. Mr. Harchandrai Vishindas : 1. Will Government be pleased to state if it is a fact :

(a) that the British India Steam Navigation Company used to ply two steamers every week for coastal ports between Karachi and Bombay and back ?

(b) that of late such service has been reduced to one steamer to the great hardship of the passengers of those ports ?

(c) that such action on the part of the above company is due to the lack of competition with them owing to their having the monopoly of the Government mail contract ?

2. Do Government propose to take steps to alleviate the public inconvenience by breaking the monopoly of the above company by making competition free or by any other means ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : 1. (a) The British India Steam Navigation Company ordinarily maintains a coastal service of two steamers between Bombay and Karachi and vice versa.

(b) It is understood that at the beginning of this year, one steamer had to be withdrawn from this service by the British India Company for a short period owing to other vessels of the Company being requisitioned by Government for transportation of troops for the Shanghai Defence Force. The withdrawal was unavoidable, but the Government understand that it caused no great inconvenience to passengers as on no occasion were any passengers unable to obtain accommodation on the reduced service.

1 (c) and 2 The Bombay Steam Navigation Company, Limited, also maintains a service of two steamers per week, one from Bombay to Karachi direct and back, and the other via intermediate ports. The British India Steam Navigation Company do not therefore hold a monopoly of this service.

Mr. Harchandrai Vishindas : May I enquire if the full service has been restored after the emergency for which some of the steamers were withdrawn to Shanghai and China was over ; that is to say, I wish to know whether the original service has been reinstated ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I understand so. My information is that the service was reduced only for a short period.

Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : May I enquire if the Government propose to make any proportionate reduction in the mail subsidy in view of the fact that one ship had been removed from the mail service ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I think that enquiry ought to be addressed to my Honourable Colleague in charge of the Department of Industries and Labour.

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : Will the Honourable Member kindly repeat the question ?

Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : In view of the fact that one of the mail ships for which the subsidies are granted was temporarily withdrawn, will Government consider the advisability of reducing proportionately the amount of the subsidy ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : So long as there was no interference with the conveyance of mails the question of reducing the subsidy did not arise.

Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : Is it no inconvenience if one ship is run instead of two ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : There is a certain volume of mails to be carried, and so long as the company carries that volume of mails, the question of reducing the subsidy cannot arise.

Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : Whether it is once a week or twice a week does not matter ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : As it is, the mail steamer takes the mails once a week. A subsidiary steamer does take certain mails occasionally, but the fact that the subsidiary steamer is not employed cannot be used as an excuse for reducing the subsidy.

Mr. B. Das : Is it a fact then that the steamship company was showing a favour to the Postal Department by carrying mails in the subsidiary steamer ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : It is not a question of favour at all. The steamship company do put in two vessels on that service mainly for commercial purposes, and the conveyance of mails was really a subsidary function

SUPPRESSION OF THE TRAFFIC IN WOMEN AND CHILDREN.

20. Mr. Ganganand Sinha : (a) Have Government prepared or are they preparing any report for presentation to the Traffic in Women and Children Committee of the Assembly of the League of Nations regarding the suppression of the traffic in women and children ?

(b) If the answer is in the negative, will the Government be pleased to state the reasons for the same ?

(c) If the answer is in the affirmative, are Government prepared to circulate the same among the Members of the Central Legislature ?

Mr. W. T. M. Wright : (a) The annual report for 1926 has been forwarded to the India Office for transmission to the Secretary General of the League of Nations.

(c) A copy of the report has been placed in the Library for perusal by Honourable Members

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I know whether there is any Indian lady on the Committee of the Assembly of the League of Nations which is considering the question of the traffic in women and children ?

Mr. W. T. M. Wright : I believe not.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I ask whether Government will take steps to secure the appointment of an Indian lady on this Committee

Mr. W. T. M. Wright : A reference in this sense was received from a certain society and the letter was forwarded to the Secretary of State.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I ask whether the Government of India have recommended the appointment of an Indian lady to the Secretary of State ?

Mr. W. T. M. Wright : I am not sure of that— whether the communication amounted to a recommendation or not.

REPORTS OF THE VARIOUS COMMITTEES OF THE ASSEMBLY OF THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS.

21. Mr. Ganganand Sinha : How many copies, if any, are Government receiving of the Reports of he various Committeec of the Assembly of the League of Nations ? How many copies of them are kept in the Library for the use of Members ? Why are not these reports circulated among the Members of the Central Legislature for information ?

Mr. W. T. M. Wright : The number of copies received by Government is usually three and is in no case in excess of the number required for official use. Government doubt whether they would be justified in incurring the very great expenditure involved in the printing of additional copies for circulation. The reports are, however, reproduced in the Official Journal of the League of Nations, one copy of each issue of which will be placed in the Library.

(1) SUPPRESSION OF THE CIRCULATION OF, AND TRAFFIC IN, OBSCENE PUBLICATIONS.

(2) EXPULSION OF FOREIGN PROSTITUTES.

22. Mr. Ganganand Sinha : (a) Have Government sent any report to the Secretariat of the Assembly of the League of Nations regarding :

(i) suppression of the circulation of and traffic in obscene publications ;

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a) (i) Yes.

(ii) Apart from the annual report on the traffic in women and children, which also refers to foreign prostitutes, no separate report about the latter has been sent to the League.

(b) The reports (a) (i) received from local authorities were transmitted in original and no copies have been kept. For the report on (a) (ii), the Honourable Member is referred to the annual report for 1926, now in the Library, on the traffic in women and children.

APPOINTMENT OF INDIANS IN THE SECRETARIAT OF THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS.

23. Mr. Ganganand Sinha : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state how many Indians, if any, have been appointed in the Secretariat of the League of Nations ?

(b) What hand had the Government in these appointments ? How are they paid and by whom ? What are the qualifications of the gentlemen appointed ? How were selections made and on what basis ?

Mr. W. T. M. Wright : (a) Four, including two in the Secretariat of the International Labour Office.

(b) (iv) Under Article 6 of the Covenant appointments to the League Secretariat are made by the Secretary General with the approval of the Council. The principles followed in making appointments are indicated in the statement of the Secretary General printed on page 21 of the Official Journal, Special Supplement, No. 37, a copy of which is in the Library. Government have no information regarding the circumstances in which the Indians employed in the Secretariat were selected.

Mr. R. K. Shanmukham Chetty : Was not some representation made by the representative of the Government of India to the League of Nations that more Indians ought to be appointed to the Secretariat of the Assembly and the International Labour Office ?

Mr. W. T. M. Wright : That was done, I believe, last year.

Mr. R. K. Shanmukham Chetty : May I know whether any more Indians have been appointed as a result of the representation thus made ?

Mr. W. T. M. Wright : I am not in a position to say whether any further appointments have been made since that representation was made ?

Mr. R. K. Shanmukham Chetty : I remember that this representation was made some years back by the Right Honourable Srinivasa Sastri when he represented the Government of India, and I would like to know whether, since that representation was made, the Government of India have taken any steps to bring to the notice of the authorities of the League the necessity of appointing more Indians to the Secretariat ?

Mr. W. T. M. Wright : I believe the Honourable Member is aware that the matter was brought to notice by the Indian Delegation in the last Assembly.

Mr. R. K. Shanmukham Chetty : What steps have the Government of India taken so far to see that the representations thus made are fruitful ?

Mr. W. T. M. Wright : The Delegation was instructed to make representations.

Mr. R. K. Shanmukham Chetty : Do the Government of India think that it is not necessary for them to take any further steps to bring this matter to the notice of the authorities of the League ?

Mr. W. T. M. Wright : If the Honourable Member wishes me to give a full history of the representations that the Government of India have made for the last 4 or 5 years, I must have notice of the question.

Diwan Chaman Lall : Is the Honourable Member aware of the fact that the Government of India lent the services of one of their officers to the League of Nations, and how can he say now that the Government of India do not know how these appointments are made ?

DIFFERENT NATIONALITIES REPRESENTED ON THE STAFF OF THE SECRETARIAT OF THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS, ETC.

24. Mr. Ganganand Sinha : Have Government any up-to-date information as to the strength of the staff of different nationalities appointed to the League of Nations Secretariat and the respective contributions of those nations to the League ? If so, will the Government lay a statement on the table detailing the same ? What is the proportion of such appointments to the contributions of the different nations in general and India in particular ?

Mr. W. T. M. Wright : Information on the two points referred to in the first part of the question will be found on pages 73 to 91 of the League of Nations Official Journal, January, 1927, 8th Year, No. 1, a copy of which is in the Library. It has however been ascertained that an Indian, Mr. Dalal, whose name is not shown in the Staff List on pages 76 et seq. is in fact employed in the Legal Adviser's section of the League Secretariat. The Government of India have been unable to undertake the somewhat elaborate mathematical calculations which would be involved in extracting the proportions referred to in the last part of the question.

Diwan Chaman Lall : May I ask the Honourable Member whether this is not a very simple calculation which would take less than half an hour ?

Mr. W. T. M. Wright : In that case I would suggest that the Honourable Member might make the calculation himself.

Diwan Chaman Lall : Is the Honourable Member aware that the subject has been raised time and again and that replies to this question have been given not only here but in Geneva as well ?

Mr. W. T. M. Wright : Yes. The facts are before the Honourable Member, and, if he likes to work out the proportion, it is perfectly open to him to do so.

Diwan Chaman Lall : Will the Honourable Member make inquiries as to what was said in Geneva ?

Mr. Ganganand Sinha : With reference to the question just asked, may I know what time is likely to be required in making that calculation ?

SUPPLY TO THE HEALTH ORGANISATION COMMITTEE OF THE ASSEMBLY OF THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS OF DATA REGARDING INFANT MORTALITY, PHYSICAL HYGIENE AND NUTRITION.

25. Mr. Ganganand Sinha : (a) Have Government received any direction or suggestion from the Health Organisation Committee of the Assembly of the League of Nations regarding furnishing it with data regarding infant mortality, physical hygiene and nutrition ?

(c) Will the report of the Government on the subject be available to the Members of the Central Legislature ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : (a) No.

RECOMMENDATIONS AND CONVENTIONS ON UNEMPLOYMENT ADOPTED BY THE INTERNATIONAL LABOUR CONFERENCES.

26. Mr. Ganganand Sinha : (a) Have Government received any suggestion or direction from the International Labour Office regarding measures proposed in the recommendations and conventions on unemployment adopted by the International Labour Conferences ?

(b) If so, will the Government be pleased to lay the same on the table and indicate what steps, if any, they are taking to act up to it ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : Several Conventions and Recommendations relating to unemployment have been adopted at different sessions of the International Labour Conference. The Draft Conventions and Recommendations so far passed will be found in the statement laid on the table in answer to the Honourable Diwan Chaman Lall's starred question No. 286 on 27th January 1925. The effect given to these Conventions and Recommendations will be found in the same statement. A Resolution concerning unemployment was adopted by the Eighth International Labour Conference in 1926, and the Government of India are at present endeavouring to collect certain information for which the International Labour Office has asked in this connection.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I ask whether the Government of India are aware that at this year's session of the International Labour Conference a committee was appointed to go into the question of the action taken on the ratifications, and the Committee laid some blame on the Government of India for not taking action on the Convention regarding unemployment and the establishment of labour exchanges in India ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : I have seen something to that effect in the papers but have not yet received authoritative reports from Geneva. As soon as we get the reports we shall certainly look into the matter.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I ask whether the Government of India does not receive reports from their representative on the Governing Body of the International Labour Office ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : If the Honourable Member will have a little patience, he will get that information in my reply to another question. We are still awaiting those reports. We shall get them very soon and then we shall look into the whole question.

APPOINTMENT OF A CORRESPONDENT OF THE INTERNATIONAL LABOUR OFFICE IN INDIA.

27. Mr. Gangananda Sinha : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state whether or not they have received any information regarding the appointment of a Correspondent of the International Labour Office in India in pursuance of the Resolutions passed by the International Labour Conferences ?

(c) What hand, if any, have the Government in such an appointment ? If the appointment has been made, will the Government be pleased to state the name and qualification of the Correspondent ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) The Governing Body of the International Labour Office has decided to create a correspondent's office in Delhi in 1928.

(b) This information will be found in the Report of the Director of the International Labour Office for 1927. I do not propose to lay the Report on the table.

(c) No appointment has yet been made, and the Government of India understand that it is the Director's intention that the correspondent should, if possible, be appointed in 1928 after a period of training in his office. The Director intends to consider in this connection the claims of those Indians who recently applied for a higher grade appointment in the International Labour Office, but the appointment will not necessarily be made from among these candidates. These applications were received at the request of the Director by an officer of the Government of India and were forwarded to the Director with a report upon them : they were not examined by the Government of India.

CONDITIONS OF LABOUR IN INDIA.

28. Mr. Ganganand Sinha : Have Government been in communication with the International Labour Office with regard to the conditions of labour in India in pursuance of the Resolutions passed in the International Labour Conferences ? How far has the matter progressed ? How is the matter to be investigated and by whom ? What have Government so far done to help the inquiry ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : I presume that the Honourable Member is referring to the documentary enquiry which is being conducted by the International Labour Office into conditions of labour in a number of Asiatic countries, including India. The Government of India have been in communication with the International Labour Office on the question, and they understand that the enquiry is in progress. They have supplied the International Labour Office, from time to time, with a large amount of documentary material bearing on labour conditions in India and are endeavouring to collect further information desired by the Director of the International Labour Office.

PROMOTIONS TO HEAD POSTMASTERSHIPS OF PERSONS WHO HAVE PASSED THE POSTAL ACCOUNTANTS' EXAMINATION.

29. Mr. B. P. Naidu : (a) Is it a fact that the Director-General of Posts and Telegraphs in his special circular No. 50, dated the 16th October 1924, introducing the Postal Accountants' examination, has clearly stated as follows :

"As soon as the effects of this scheme begin to mature, Heads of circles will, in making appointments to Head Postmasterships ordinarily give preference to an official who holds a current certificate as Accountant, it being understood that the Accounts work in the Post Office must necessarily be defective, if the Postmaster himself is deficient in the knowledge of accounts."

(b) Is it a fact that 88 officials passed the Postal Accountants' examination held in April 1925 and 94 in the examination held in August 1926 ?

(c) Has any preference been given to those who passed the Postal Accountants' examination in making appointments to the Head Postmasterships in the Madras Circle ? If not, why ?

(d) What are the principles regulating the promotion to Head Postmastership from those who have passed the Postal Accountants examination ?

(e) Will the promotions be given according to seniority in the gradation list, irrespective of the date of passing the examination or regulated according to seniority and priority of passing, taken together ?

Mr. H. A. Sams : (a) Yes.

(c) No, because preference for the appointment of Head Postmasters is ordinarily to be given to passed Accountants only when they are sufficiently senior to be considered for promotion.

(d) Among the officials eligible for promotion to the appointment of Head Postmaster, preference will ordinarily be given to one who has passed the Accountants' Examination. It was not intended that promotions to Head Postmaster will be made only from among passed accountants irrespective of seniority.

(e) Promotion will ordinarily be given according to seniority in the gradation list irrespective of the date of passing the examination.

APPOINTMENT OF A JUNIOR POSTAL OFFICIAL AS ACCOUNTANT OF NELLORE.

30. Mr. B. P. Naidu : Is it a fact that while the seniormost qualified Accountant in the Nellore Division was actually working as Accountant, Nellore, not only attending to the work in the Accounts Branch but also attending to the Telegraph Branch for 4 hours a day, in addition, for months together, an absolute junior, who was quite a novice, so far as practical work was concerned and who had to be trained by the former, was posted as permanent accountant, the former being transferred elsewhere as Sub-Postmaster ? If so, why ?

Mr. H. A. Sams : I have enquired into the matter and am satisfied that the transfer referred to was in the interests of the service.

PRINCIPLES REGULATING THE APPOINTMENT OF PERSONS WHO HAVE PASSED THE POSTAL ACCOUNTANTS' EXAMINATION AS ACCOUNTANTS.

31. Mr. B. P. Naidu : What are the principles that generally regulate the appointment of those who have passed the Postal Accountants' examination as Accountants ? Are not seniority and efficiency taken into consideration ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : The principles are seniority and efficiency.

APPOINTMENT OF A PACKER IN THE KANDUKUR SUB-POST OFFICE.

32. Mr. B. P. Naidu : (a) Is it a fact that there is no messenger or packer attached to the Kandukur Sub-Post Office under the Nellore Head Office ?

(b) Have the postmen who belong to the superior service to perform these functions also which are usually done by members of the inferior service ?

(c) Is it proposed to appoint a packer to that office to have the telegrams delivered promptly and relieve the postmen of the packer's work, for the performance of which they have to break their beats and attend the office in the noon alternately at considerable inconvenience ?

Mr. H. A. Sams : (a) Yes.

(c) The question has been under consideration and a packer will be sanctioned shortly.

HOUR OF DESPATCH OF SECTION MAILS AT KANDUKUR.

33. *Mr. B. P. Naidu : (a) Are the section mails at Kandukur despatched at 13 hours daily ? Are not the staff and the public put to considerable inconvenience, on account of the whole transactions to be included in the mails having to be performed within one hour, namely, from 11 to 12 ?

(b) Are Government prepared to consider the question of altering the hour of despatch of mails by availing themselves of the motor bus services which are now plying regularly between Singarayakonda and Kanigiri ?

Mr. H. A. Sams : (a) The reply to the first portion is in the affirmative. Regarding the second portion steps are being taken to remove the inconvenience by altering the working hours of the Kandukur Post Office.

COST OF THE SIMLA EXODUS.

34. *Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : With reference to my starred question No. 890 of the 14th March 1927, regarding the cost of the " Simla Exodus ", and the following statement of the cost subsequently furnished to me, namely :

	Rs.
1922-23	6,40,049
1923-24	2,70,145
1924-25	4,47,120

will the Government kindly give reasons for the increase in the cost in 1922-23, and 1925-26 ; and also state if the total cost includes house rent, hill allowances, etc., paid in Simla ? And if not, what is the additional expenditure on this account ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Information is being collected and will be supplied to the Honourable Member.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : I wish that the information collected should be laid on the table, considering its importance.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I will consider the matter when the information is before me.

CURTAILMENT OF THE STAY OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA IN SIMLA, ETC.

35. *Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Is there any proposal to curtail the length of the stay of the Government of India in Simla ? If so, will the Government be pleased to give the result, and also state what offices and establishments it has been decided to locate permanently in Delhi all the year round ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : The question of the duration of the stay of the Government of India in Simla is under consideration, but no decision regarding it or upon the question of locating permanently in New Delhi further offices and establishments has yet been reached.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : Is it a fact that when the project of constructing a new capital at Delhi was decided in 1911 the main reason urged was that it would avoid the Simla exodus and the huge additional cost involved in it ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I am not aware that in 1911 it was contemplated that it was possible for the Government of India to remain for the whole year round at Delhi.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Is it a fact that it was expected at one time that it would be possible for the Government of India to stay at Delhi for seven months in the year and at Simla for five months ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I think that proposal has been considered. As I informed the Honourable Member who asked the question, the whole matter is under consideration and no decision has yet been arrived at.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : Is it a fact, Sir, that an enormous amount of expenditure has been incurred in Delhi with a view to making it suitable for Honourable Members and the Secretariat to live there during the hot season ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : It is certainly a fact that the construction of New Delhi has involved very considerable expenditure.

HOLDING OF THE AUTUMN SESSION OF THE CENTRAL LEGISLATURE IN DELHI.

36. *Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Is it in contemplation to hold the Autumn Session of the Central Legislature in Delhi in future, instead of in Simla, in September and October ?

(b) Is it a fact that a query addressed to the Health Officer of Delhi has elicited the reply that the climate of Delhi at that time is extremely malarious, and should be avoided, if possible ? If so, will the Government be pleased to lay a copy of this communication on the table ?

(c) Is it not a fact that it is more costly to the tax-payer to hold a Session of the Indian Legislature in Delhi than in Simla, on account of motor haulage, and conveyance allowances paid to Honourable Members ?

Mr. W. T. M. Wright : (a) No, Sir, but the question of holding an Autumn Session in Delhi in November instead of in Simla in September is under consideration in connection with the question of the duration of the stay of the Government of India in Delhi.

(b) A copy of a letter from the Honourable the Chief Commissioner of Delhi to the Government of India giving information on the subject is laid on the table.

(c) The answer is in the affirmative, so far as the budget of the Central Legislature is concerned

(d) I am not in a position to give any definite assurance on this point at present, but Government would certainly be concerned to ascertain the views of the Legislature.

Copy of a letter No. 3482-Home, dated the 11th May 1927, from the Honourable Mr. A. M. Stow, O.B.E., I.C.S., Chief Commissioner, Delhi, to the Joint Secretary to the Government of India, Home Department.

In reply to your letter No. F.-202|1|27-Public, dated the 20th April 1927, I have the honour to forward a copy of Statement 2—Temperature, in Volume B of the Delhi District Gazetteer, 1913, which has been brought up to date by the Director General of Observatories, who remarks that, as fortnightly normals of 8 hours temperature are not available, monthly normals have been given instead. He adds that the periods during which temperature changes most rapidly on the average in Delhi are the middle of March and the middle of November. The average changes occurring in April and October are exemplified by the following normal data of temperature :—

		1st.	8th.	15th.	22nd.	29th.
April	(Max.	93·4	95·5	97·9	100·0	102·2
	(Min.	55·8	58·3	61·1	64·1	66·9
October	(Max.	93·4	93·3	92·5	90·7	88·2
	(Min.	74·1	71·6	68·8	66·1	63·2

2. I also enclose statements supplied by the Chief Medical Officer, Delhi, showing—

(a) Maximum and minimum temperatures and rainfall in April, May, June, October and November 1922 to 1926 inclusive ;

(b) total deaths from fever during the same five months with an explanatory note dealing with exceptional conditions. Particulars for fortnightly periods cannot be furnished ;

(c) the number of cases of " fever " treated at the New Delhi Hospital, month by month, for the last three years.

The Chief Medical Officer, who has 3 years' experience of Delhi, points out that the diagnosis shown by these figures cannot be relied on, but that the total figures can be taken as a very reliable guide to the health of the community. He suggests that, if the Government of India contemplate spending a longer period in New Delhi than they have done hitherto, they should remain there for April, May and June which are the healthiest, although the hottest months of the year, and avoid New Delhi in October, which is the unhealthiest month. The particulars given by Colonel Franklin have been collected in collaboration with the Health Officer of New Delhi who has five years' experience of health conditions there throughout the year. It is common knowledge locally that September and October are " bad " months.

Comparative statement showing death from fever in Delhi Province.

	Fever.					Total deaths.
	April.	May.	June.	October.	November.	April.	May.	June.	October.	November.

In 1923 there was plague throughout Delhi Province.

In 1924 owing to the measures taken, the plague was confined to rural circles.

In 1926 there was a general epidemic of Malaria.

SEPARATE ESTABLISHMENT FOR THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

37. *Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) With reference to starred question No. 971 of the 16th March 1927, regarding a separate establishment for the Legislative Assembly, have the Government received any scheme from the Honourable the President of the Legislative Assembly for the separation of the office of the Assembly from the Legislative Department ?

(b) If so, are Government in a position to place the scheme on the table, and to indicate their decision thereon ?

Mr. W. T. M. Wright : (a) Yes, the scheme was received only yesterday and will be considered by Government with as little delay as possible, after the close of the present Session.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : I beg to inquire if a copy of the scheme will be made available for inspection by Members on this side of the House ?

Mr. W. T. M. Wright : I am not in a position to answer that yet. We will consider the matter.

APPOINTMENT OF A COMMITTEE OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA TO CONSIDER THE QUESTION OF REFORMS AND THE STATUTORY COMMISSION.

38 *Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Is it a fact that a Committee of the Government of India, consisting of the Honourable Mr. S. R. Das, the Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman, the Honourable Sir Basil Blackett, and the Honourable Sir John Thompson, have discussed certain proposals regarding the Reforms, and the Statutory Commission, about May last ? Was there any conference held in Simla about that time ; and are Government in a position to indicate the nature of the conference, and the decision arrived therein ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : The Honourable Member is correct in supposing that the Viceroy, accompanied by certain members of his Government, held certain informal discussions, to which I presume his question refers, a short time ago. These discussions were confidential, and the Honourable Member will therefore appreciate that it is impossible for me to make any statement in regard to them.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : Is it a fact that certain Governors were also consulted in this connection.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I have no information on that point.

STATUTORY COMMISSION ON REFORMS.

39. *Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Has there been any correspondence between the Government and the Secretary of State for India, regarding the appointment of the Statutory Commission on Reforms ; and are Government in a position to make any statement on the subject ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : The reply to both parts of the Honourable Member's question is in the negative.

OPENING BY THE BENGAL NAGPUR RAILWAY OF A BOOKING OFFICE IN THE TOWN OF PURI.

40. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Are Government aware that Puri (in Orissa) is an important place of pilgrimage, as well as a health resort ?

(b) Is it a fact that a largely-signed petition was submitted by the public and the pilgrims of Puri to the Agent, Bengal Nagpur Railway, asking for a booking office to be opened in the town ?

(c) Are Government aware that when this matter formed the subject of an interpellation in the Bihar and Orissa Legislative Council on the 8th March, last, the Local Government stated that " they are aware that the absence of such an office is a local grievance with which they have some sympathy " ?

(d) Do Government propose to have a booking office of the Bengal Nagpur Railway opened in Puri town for the convenience of the public and the pilgrims ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a), (b) and (c). Yes.

(d) The Agent of the Railway reports that after a careful examination of the subject it has been decided that the opening of a booking office in Puri town will not be an advantage to ignorant and illiterate pilgrims, who form the bulk of the passenger traffic, as it would not be possible to supervise a booking office in the town as effectually as at the station.

Mr. B. Das : Is the Honourable Member aware that the Pilgrims' Committee in 1915-16 recommended that a booking office should be opened in Puri Town, as also in Gaya ? How is it that that recommendation has not been given effect to for so long ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The recommendation has not been given effect to for the reasons I have just given in my reply to the main question. I was not myself aware of a committee having dealt with the matter before, but I am quite prepared to take it from the Honourable Member that that is the case.

Mr. B. Das : Will the Honourable Member consult his colleagues on his left in the Department of Education, Health and Lands regarding the recommendations of the Pilgrims' Committee ?

CONSTRUCTION OF A RAILWAY FROM RISHIKESH TO KARNAPRAYAG.

41. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Will the Government kindly state what progress, if any, has been made in the proposal to construct a railway from Rishikesh to Karnaprayag, on the way to Badri Nath, and when is the survey of the section likely to be completed ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Owing to the difficult nature of the country and the late start made last working season due to staff not being available, the progress on the Rishikesh Karnaprayag Railway survey has been rather slow. It is expected, however, that the field work will be completed by March, 1928.

OPENING UP OF THE SANTHAL PARGANAS BY RAILWAYS.

42. *Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Is it proposed to launch any railway project (East Indian Railway) in Bihar, which will open up the Santhal Parganas areas, and bring them into touch with centres of trade and industry ?

(b) Are Government aware that this tract of the country is rich in coal and iron, and awaits development ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) The Bausi-Naya Dumka-Sainthia Railway, which will serve the Santhal Parganas, is under investigation.

(b) Coal and iron are known to exist in the locality.

REMODELLING THE STATION OF BAIDYANATH DHAM ON THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.

43. *Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Are Government aware that the railway station of Baidyanath Dham (East Indian Railway) is insufficient to cope with the requirements of the heavy pilgrim traffic, and is there any proposal to make necessary extensions in connection with it ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Government understand that the remodelling of Baidyanath Dham station has already been sanctioned by the East Indian Railway authorities and that the work is expected to be completed by 31st March 1928.

CASES DEALT WITH BY THE RAILWAY RATES ADVISORY TRIBUNAL.

44. *Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Will the Government kindly furnish a statement, showing the number and details of cases submitted to the Railway Rates Advisory Tribunal since its inception, together with the decision or other steps in connection with them ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I am having a copy of the statement required placed in the Library.

Mr. B. Das : Will Government be pleased to state whether they have considered the advisability of changing the function of the Rates Advisory Committee to that of a Rates Tribunal, as was recommended by the Acworth Committee ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : There is no present intention of doing so, Sir.

Mr. B. Das : What are the reasons why this has not been given effect to ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The reasons have, I think, been previously explained in this House, but I am afraid in any case it would not be possible for me to give a complete answer to that question without notice.

Mr. B. Das : Does the Honourable Member realise that the Rates Advisory Committee has no statutory powers ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I am well aware that the Rates Advisory Committee has no statutory powers.

LEGISLATION FOR THE REGULATION OF TRADE DISPUTES IN INDIA.

45. *Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Is it a fact that about August 1924, the Government drafted a Bill for the regulation of trade disputes in India ? If so, what has happened to it ; and is there any such measure likely to come up before the House ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : A Bill relating to the investigation and settlement of trade disputes was drafted by the Government of India in August 1924. Thereafter it was circulated to Local Governments and published for criticism. A number of criticisms were received and it is probable that, as a result of these criticisms, it will be necessary to modify the original proposals. In this connection the provisions of the law recently passed in England are also being examined. A Bill dealing with this subject will in all probability be introduced in the next Session of this House.

WORKMEN OF THE EASTERN BENGAL RAILWAY AND MEMBERSHIP OF LABOUR UNIONS.

46. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Has the Agent, Eastern Bengal Railway, issued a notice (No. 438-0-3-27), dated 16th March last, warning the workmen of that Railway not to join Labour Unions which have not been registered under the Trade Unions Act ? If so, what is the reason for this pressure for compulsory registration ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : The answer to the first part of the question is in the affirmative. As regards the second part of the question Government do not accept the interpretation put upon the notice by the Honourable Member. The Agent issued it in the interest of the workmen themselves.

Diwan Chaman Lall : May I ask the Honourable Member whether the workmen themselves are more competent to consider their own interests than the Agent ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I do not think that arises, Sir, but I think it is clearly within the province of the Agent to take action which he believes to be in the interests of his workmen.

Diwan Chaman Lall : May I ask the Honourable Member whether it is not a fact that under the Trade Unions Act it is not compulsory for a union to register itself, and if workmen want to form a union there should not be any objection ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : If this is a question of law which he has put to me, I am afraid I must ask for notice.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : Does not that amount to a certain amount of pressure ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I do not think so, and I am quite sure it was not meant as such by the Agent.

Diwan Chaman Lall : If, as the Honourable Member has said, it was in the interests of the workmen, may I ask why the Agent refused permission for the formation of this union ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I think it is obvious, Sir, that the Legislature having provided for the registration of trade unions, it must be to the advantage of workmen to belong to a registered union rather than an unregistered union.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : But why did the Agent issue a notice if it was not to compel people ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I do not think there was any compulsion.

Pandit Nilakantha Das : May I ask if this is confined to one railway ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : The notice to which the question refers relates to one railway only.

ISSUE OF THIRD CLASS ORDINARY RETURN TICKETS.

47. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Have the Government received any representation addressed to the Secretary, Railway Board, from certain citizens of Patna, in which the following passage occurs, relating to the grievances of third class passengers :

" The necessity of granting third class ordinary return tickets looms large to those observers, who experience the terrible rush at the window of the third class booking office, which is always found at almost all the big stations. The rush generally at stations, such as Gaya, Patna, Allahabad, etc., is so terrible that it becomes almost impossible to reach the window, and the passengers are often left behind."

(b) Are Government aware that the above represents a substantially correct state of affairs ? What steps have been taken to remedy this evil ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Yes.

(b) The reply to the first part of the question is in the negative. Both the Railway Board and Railway Administrations are paying particular attention to improving the facilities for the issue of tickets to third class passengers, and I am sure that the Agent of the East Indian Railway will be glad to consider whether the arrangements at any particular station are capable of improvement, if the matter is brought to his attention by his Local Advisory Committee. But the issue of third class ordinary return tickets is likely to encourage fraudulent travelling, which, as the Honourable Member is aware, is already far too prevalent ; and the Railway Board are not therefore prepared at present to consider their issue.

EXPULSION OF HINDUS FROM THE NORTH-WEST FRONTIER TRIBAL TERRITORY.

Mr. H. G. Cocke : With your permission, Sir, I desire to ask the Foreign Secretary if he is in a position to make a statement about the recent expulsion of Hindus from the North-West Frontier tribal territory ?

12 NOON.

Sir Denys Bray : Excitement over the Rangila Rasul case spread to the frontier districts early in June and reached its height in Peshawar towards the latter part of July. The atmosphere became tense and caused the authorities much anxiety. Under Sir Norman Bolton's skilful handling, however, the frontier districts issued from a grave crisis without a serious breach of the peace. For though the economic boycott of Hindus was freely advocated, especially in Peshawar, the movement met with little success ; and though in one or two villages Hindus were maltreated, order was restored on the arrest of the culprits, coupled with action under the Police Act and the Code of Criminal Procedure.

The spread of the indignation across the border into tribal territory was more serious. Here feelings, always acutely sensitive to the appeal of religion, rapidly became deeply stirred. The Afridi and Shinwari countries were inflamed by the preaching of a well-known Mullah, who called upon the tribesmen to expel the Hindus from their midst, unless they dissociated themselves in writing from the doings of down-country Hindus. The first class to expel their Hindu neighbours were the Kuki Khel and Zakka Khel on the 22nd July. Fired by their example the Shinwaris gave their Hindus notice to quit a few days later ; but after some of them had gone, agreed to allow the rest to remain. Some of the Hindus on leaving the Khyber were roughly handled. In two cases stones were thrown though happily without damage. In a third a Hindu was wounded and a large amount of property carried off ; but the property was recovered by Afridi Khassadars in full, and the culprits fined for the offence. Thereafter arrangements were made for the picketing of the road for the passage of any Hindus evacuating tribal territory. Under pressure from the Political Officer an Afridi jirga decided towards the end of July to suspend the Hindu boycott pending a decision in the Vartman case. In the following week, however, several families, who had been living in sarais at Landi Kotal moved to Peshawar, refusing to accept the assurances of the tribal Maliks, yet leaving one person from each family behind to watch over their interests. In all between four hundred and four hundred and fifty Hindus, men, women and children, came into Peshawar. The latest news is that a jirga of the leading Maliks has been summoned to Peshawar from various parts of Tirah to discuss their return.

It will be seen that the trouble has been confined to one small section of tribal territory in the neighbourhood of the Khyber Pass, and this localising of the movement is a matter for which Sir Norman Bolton and his officers may justly take credit. Some of the Hindus were definitely expelled ; some were induced to leave their homes by threats ; some left from fear ; some no doubt from sympathy with their neighbours. Now expulsion and voluntary exodus from tribal territory are alike without parallel. These Hindus have lived there, most of them, for more generations than they can record, as valued and respected, and indeed essential members of the tribal system, for whose protection the tribesmen are jealous and whose blood-feuds they commonly make their own, and throughout this unhappy business it has been the aim of Government to use their influence so that as soon as the passions of wrath and bitterness on either side permit, the Hindus may return to their homes and take up their old position of respect among the tribes of Tirah. Powerful economic and traditional forces are already at work to heal the breach. That the breach will be healed before long I am confident, provided always that nothing untoward arises from any malicious or thoughtless intrusion from without. I do not like to add more, lest something be said that might retard the return of these Hindus to their homes, or worse still, that might open up fresh tribal areas to the contamination of a bitterness which is now fast dying out.

Nawab Sir Sahibzada Abdul Qaiyum : May I know whether the Government are aware that these tribal Hindus had voluntarily and for various reasons sympathised with the Mussalmans of the country in their troubles in connection with the Rajpal case but that after the down-country propaganda extended to that place from their own co-religionists, they retracted their sympathy and came up to the authorities and demanded extraordinary protective measures to be taken in their favour, which according to the custom of the country, it was not the business of the authorities to interfere in ?

Sir Denys Bray : If the Honourable Member would allow me to say so I would venture to deprecate any questions of detail on the case.

Mr. B. Das : Will the Honourable Member kindly make a statement showing the result of the meeting that takes place between the Maliks and the Chief Commissioner in order to allay the feelings of the Members of this House ?

Sir Denys Bray : I shall gladly do so if it seems to be in the public interest that I should.

Diwan Chaman Lall : May I ask the Honourable Member if the Mullah who went about preaching in the territory came from Peshawar or from down-country ?

Sir Denys Bray : The Mullah came up from India ; he had just returned from the Haj.

Diwan Chaman Lall : May I ask whether any steps were taken to prohibit the entry of the Mullah into that tribal territory, or to prosecute him when he came back ?

Sir Denys Bray : I possibly did not make myself clear. The Mullah belongs to the trans-frontier.

Nawab Sir Sahibzada Abdul Qaiyum : Do Government know that there is a Mullah called " Chaknawar Mulla " who comes from Afghan territory, that on his way back from the Haj he passed through the Khyber, where there are a good many followers of his in the Shinwari and other countries, and that his preaching was also a factor in this matter ?

Sir Denys Bray : That is so. Sir.

(7) In view of increased cost of living and other hardships occasioned by increasing the water taxes at Kasauli, do the Government propose to drop the proposals, if any, for increasing the water tax at Kasauli ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (1) The waterworks at Kasauli were established in 1904 at the expense of the State.

(2) The existing water rate is Rs. 2 per 1,000 gallons. The existing water tax is :

(a) 3 per cent. on the annual rental of buildings within 1,000 feet of the nearest standpost, and

The question is under consideration in view of the fact that the loss to the State during 1925-26, under the existing rates, amounted to Rs. 30,022.

(4). (a) No. The water costs Rs. 2-8-0 per 1,000 gallons to produce, and the Military Engineer Services have claimed to be paid at this rate. The question of accepting this enhanced rate is under consideration by the Cantonment Board.

(5) A meeting of the residents of the bazaar was held on the 16th January 1927, and a copy of the proceedings was sent to the Cantonment Board in the form of a petition. The whole situation was explained and the Board assured the deputation of sympathetic treatment.

(6) The Cantonment Board has not yet come to a decision on the subject.

(7) No, but the Government are considering the possibility of assisting Cantonment Authorities generally by grants-in-aid to pay for water supplied by the Military Engineer Services at full rates.

(b) Is it a fact that on receiving the application the Executive Officer found that the house in question did not exist in the Survey Plan and the site under the house was shown there as an open plot ?

(c) Is it a fact that the Executive Officer, on his own authority, not only rejected the application of the house owner but also directed him to demolish the house as it was an encroachment according to the Survey Plan ?

(d) Is it a fact that on the protest of the non-official members, the Executive Officer withdrew the notice of demolition issued by him, but insisted on the application being referred to the Government of India for orders ?

(e) Are Government aware that the Survey Plan in Ambala was prepared by petty subordinates of the Cantonment Authority in 1902 without informing the people of the results of the survey and giving them an opportunity to contest the same where they conflicted with their rights ?

(f) Is it a fact that in scores of cases in the past the Survey Plan has been found to be wrong and has either shown houses where none existed or shown sites of old houses as vacant plots ?

(g) Are Government aware that in the past the Cantonment Authority in Ambala has been deciding each case, where the Survey Plan has not tallied with the existing conditions of land, on its merits ?

(h) Is it a fact that some secret instructions were issued by Colonel Lawrinson in November 1926 directing the Executive Officer to stick to the Survey Plan regardless of its discrepancies ?

(i) Is it a fact that these instructions having been enforced by the Executive Officer with the support of the official members have caused great hardships to house owners in Ambala Cantonment and trampled upon their rights in many cases ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) and (b). Yes.

(c) No. The Cantonment Board directed the Executive Officer to issue a notice to remove the encroachment.

(g) Government have no information of individual cases.

(h) The Government of India understand that no such instructions were issued to the Executive Officer.

(j) The Government do not propose to issue any such instructions, but they have no doubt that any case in which discrepancies are disclosed will be dealt with on the merits.

ELECTRIC STREET LIGHTING OF THE SADAR BAZAR, AMBALA.

12. Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava : (a) Are Government aware that a large portion of the Sadar Bazar, Ambala, with a population of 10,000, is still without electric street lighting ?

(b) Is it a fact that for further extension of electric street lighting, a sum of Rs. 70,000 was provided for in the budget of 1927-28 ?

(c) Is it a fact that the major portion of this allotment has been diverted from the Sadar Bazaar and is being spent on providing electric lights on the roads leading to N. I. Lines ?

(e) Do the Government propose in view of the obvious undesirability of the proposal to direct that the same may not be given effect to ?

(c) No. Less than half the budgetted sum is to be utilised for this purpose.

APPOINTMENT OF THE VICE-PRESIDENT OF THE CANTONMENT BOARD, AMBALA, AS CHAIRMAN OF ALL SUB-COMMITTEES.

13. Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava : (1) Is it a fact that in the regulations framed under section 44 of the Cantonments Act by the Cantonment Board, Ambala, in June 1926 and submitted after the unanimous approval of the Cantonment Board to the Local Government, it was provided that the Vice-President should be the ex-officio Chairman of all sub-committees ?

(2) Is it a fact that in the meeting of the Cantonment Board held on 28th February 1927, it was decided by a majority of votes that instead of the Vice-President, as originally proposed, the President should be the Chairman of all sub-committees ?

(4) Is it a fact that the Government of India have recognised that at the present time, the non-official Vice-President is a figurehead in a Cantonment Board and has held out assurances, to the All-India Cantonments Association that the Government would shortly either by executive instructions or by a modification of the Cantonments Act, confer increased and definite powers upon the Vice-President ?

(5) If the reply to the above question be in the affirmative, do the Government intend to take steps that the amendment proposed and passed by the majority of the Cantonment Board to make the President instead of the Vice-President Chairman of the sub-committees, is not accepted by the Local Government ?

Mr. G. M. Young : I am making enquiries and will let the Honourable Member know the result.

REGULATION RELATING TO THE LAYING OF PAPERS APPERTAINING TO THE AGENDA OF THE CANTONMENT BOARD, AMBALA, ON THE TABLE FOUR DAYS BEFORE A MEETING.

14. Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava : (1) Is it a fact that in the regulations submitted to the Local Government for approval by the Ambala Cantonment Board under section 44 of the Cantonments Act in June 1926, it was provided that the Secretary shall lay on the table all the papers pertaining to the agenda four days before the date of a meeting of the Cantonment Board ?

(2) Is it a fact that in the amended form in which the regulations have been adopted in the meeting of the Cantonment Board held on 28th February 1927 by a majority of votes mainly official, it has been proposed to reduce four days to two ?

(3) Are Government aware that there are bulky papers, files and account papers to be seen by a member before he is able to express his opinion about the same in the next meeting of the Cantonment Board ?

(4) Are Government aware that the responsible non-official members of the Board filed a strong note of dissent protesting against the change ?

(5) Do Government propose to take steps to see that the amendment is not approved by the Local Government ?

Mr. G. M. Young : I am making enquiries and will let the Honourable Member know the result.

COMPLAINTS OF HOUSE-OWNERS IN AMBALA CANTONMENT.

15. Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava : (1) Is it a fact that when an owner of a house in a cantonment having a large compound attached to it, desires to sub-divide the compound, for building another house, the Cantonment Authority requires him to execute a fresh lease for the whole site ?

(2) Will the Government be pleased to lay on the table the number of cases with particulars, in Ambala Cantonment, in which a fresh lease has been demanded in case of the sub-dividing of the site during the last three years ?

(3) Will the Government quote the law under which such lease is demanded ?

(4) Is it a fact that the demand for a new lease has been made in Ambala Cantonment even where the site happens to be an old free grant ? If so, why ?

(5) Are Government aware that this practice has caused great discontent among the house-owners in Ambala Cantonment who contend that the municipal powers of the Cantonment Authority should not be used to destroy people's rights in land ?

(6) Will the Government be pleased to state in what way Government interests will suffer, if a house-owner is allowed to build another house, on the old existing site already in his occupation ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (1) If the site belongs to Government, Government requires a fresh lease to be executed for the sub-divided portion only.

(2) The answer is in the negative.

(3) A fresh lease is required by Government as landlord before agreeing to any large modification of the purposes to which the site is put.

(5) Government are not aware of the existence of any discontent ; nor are the municipal powers of the Cantonment Authority in any way concerned.

(6) Government interests are liable to suffer, if land that is in their ownership is subjected by the tenant to any encumbrance not provided for in the original grant.

EXPENDITURE ON ROADS IN THE BAZARS IN AMBALA CANTONMENT.

16. Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava : (1) Are Government aware that out of Rs. 23,000 set apart for Cantonment Fund Roads in Ambala, the Cantonment Board has, by an official majority of votes, allotted only Rs. 8,500 for roads in the bazars and decided to spend the large balance of Rs. 14,500 on roads in the Cantonment area outside the bazars ?

(2) Are Government aware that prior to the constitution of the elected board in Ambala, a very large portion of the grant under roads was spent from year to year on the roads outside the bazars with the result that some of the metalled roads of the bazars were not renewed for over a score of years and several roads continued to be ' kachha ' as at the time of the establishment of the Cantonment ?

(3) Is it within the knowledge of the Government that five non-official members including the Vice-President pressed for Rs. 15,500 being spent on the bazar roads and the balance for the outside ?

(4) Is it a fact that the bazars contribute 70 per cent. of the Cantonment Fund, have all local trade and industry there and have several kachha roads without drains which by becoming marshy in the rainy season form a great menace to public health ?

(5) Is it a fact that the official members disregarded the wishes of the elected members in this respect and put forth the plea of dividing the grant between the two areas according to the length of roads in each ?

(6) Are Government aware that the condition of roads in the two areas differs greatly and the bazar roads stand no comparison with roads outside ?

(7) Have Government seen the note of dissent filed by the elected members against the decision of the majority, namely, the official members ?

(8) Do Government propose to go through the note and direct if they think fit, that the grant under roads be divided as suggested by the elected members—at least for the next year ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (1) The figures quoted by the Honourable Member are correct : but, as by themselves they might convey a wrong impression, I may add that in the previous year 1926-27, Rs. 40,000 were spent on roads in the bazaars and only Rs. 5,000 on roads in the Cantonment area outside the bazaars.

(2) Government are informed that the facts are not as stated in the question.

(4) It is difficult to estimate the actual contribution of the bazaars to the income of the cantonment, as much of the wealth of the bazaars is derived from the cantonment area outside the bazaars. Government understand that the Cantonment Board is pursuing a policy of gradual improvement in the roads and drains throughout the whole cantonment.

(5) No, Sir. Government are informed that the matter was reported on by a special Committee, and that both points of view were put forward and fully discussed in the Cantonment Board.

(6) No, Sir. Government are informed that the bazaar roads are in a better condition, if anything, than those outside the bazars, as the result of the very large expenditure recently incurred on the former.

(7) and (8) The answer is in the negative.

PUBLICATION OF THE AMENDMENTS MADE BY THE CANTONMENT BOARD, AMBALA, TO THE REGULATIONS FRAMED UNDER SECTION 44 OF THE CANTONMENTS ACT.

17. Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava : (1) Are Government aware that section 44 (3) of the Cantonments Act requires that the regulations framed under section 44 be published for public objections in such manner as the Local Government may prescribe ?

(2) Is it a fact that the Local Government of the Punjab have so far prescribed no system or procedure of publication for such regulations ?

(3) Are Government aware that the Central Provinces Government have decided that such regulations framed by the Cantonment Board of the Cantonments in its jurisdiction, should be translated into the vernacular of the Province, displayed at conspicuous places, announced by beat of drum and published in the local Gazette and other papers having circulation in the Cantonment concerned ?

(4) Are Government aware that no such thing was done by the Ambala Cantonment Board when it framed its regulations in June 1926 ?

(5) Is it a fact that these regulations have been materially altered by the Cantonment Board, Ambala, by a majority of votes in its meeting of 28th February 1927 and submitted to the Local Government without notifying the amendments to the public or inviting their opinions and views about the same ?

(6) Do Government propose to direct that the regulations be published in the manner adopted by the Central Provinces Government, before these are considered and approved by the Local Government ?

(7) Are Government aware that there is a strong public feeling against the non-publication of these amendments and that several non-official members have filed notes of dissent against non-publication ?

(8) Do Government propose to peruse those notes of dissent and see that the regulations are passed in a way that their legality may not be challenged in future ?

Mr. G. M. Young : I am making enquiries and will let the Honourable Member know the result.

GRANT OF PERMISSION TO NON-MEMBERS TO ADDRESS MEETINGS OF THE CANTONMENT BOARD, AMBALA.

18. Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava : (1) Are Government aware that in the regulations framed by the Cantonment Board, Ambala, under section 44 of the Cantonments Act, provision has been made to allow a person, not a member of the Board, to address a meeting of the Board, if the majority of the members present desire the same ?

(2) Is it a fact that in the meeting of the Cantonment Board held on 28th January 1927, the President allowed one Mian Khan to address the meeting and on an objection being raised by the Vice-President to the illegality of the procedure, a reference was made to the Northern Command to give a ruling on the point ?

(3) Is it a fact that the Northern Command in its letter No. 36264-A.I.L.C., dated 10th February 1927, informed the President that no one who was not a member of the Board could address its meeting ?

(4) Are Government aware that in spite of this ruling, the Cantonment Board, Ambala, in its meeting held on 28th February 1927, decided by a majority of votes that permission to address the meeting of the Board could be given to a non-member if the majority of the members so desired ?

(5) Are Government aware that there being a standing majority of official members in the Cantonment Board, the regulation in question would practically give them the power of allowing outsiders to speak in or address a meeting of the Cantonment Board ?

(6) Do Government propose to direct that this regulation be cancelled as being both illegal and opposed to the instructions given by the Northern Command ?

Mr. G. M. Young : I am making enquiries and will let the Honourable Member know the result.

IMPROPRIETY OF DISCUSSIONS OF THE AGENDA OF BUSINESS BY THE PRESIDENT OF THE CANTONMENT BOARD, AMBALA, WITH INDIVIDUAL MEMBERS, BEFORE THE MEETING.

19. Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava : (1) Is it a fact that the President, Ambala Cantonment Board, discussed certain items of the agenda fixed for the meeting of the Cantonment Board, Ambala, held on 28th January 1927, some days before the date of meeting, with a member of the Cantonment Board ?

(2) Is it a fact that on the fact coming to the notice of the Vice-President, he wrote to the President to come to the meeting with an open mind and to protest against his discussing the agenda with individual members before coming to the meeting ?

(3) Are Government aware that as a result of these secret discussions, the Cantonment Board either approved the decisions already arrived at and brought in typed form to the meeting or passed them by a majority of votes ?

(4) Do Government propose to issue instructions as to the impropriety of such discussions by the President with individual members before the meeting is held ?

(5) Do Government propose to put a stop to the practice of bringing in, by the Executive Officer, of typed decisions already arrived at in such secret meeting, to be passed by the Board or at any rate by the standing official majority ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (1), (2), (3), (4) and (5). The Government of India have no information of this incident, and propose to take no action. They see no reason why the President of a Cantonment Board should not discuss the agenda with any member of the Board at his discretion.

REJECTION OF MOTION FOR ADJOURNMENT PROPOSED BY NON-OFFICIAL MEMBERS OF THE CANTONMENT BOARD, AMBALA.

20. Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava : (1) Are Government aware that a motion for adjournment of the meeting of the Ambala Cantonment Board was brought forward by 5 non-official members, as a protest against certain high-handed and illegal acts of the President ?

(2) Will the Government state the circumstances under which the adjournment motion was brought forward ?

(3) Is it a fact that after the motion was rejected by a majority of votes, mainly official, the non-official members filed a note of dissent stating the facts which necessitated the motion ?

(4) Do Government propose to direct the official President of Ambala Cantonment Board to show greater regard and consideration to the views of the non-official members ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (1), (2) and (3). The Government understand that a motion for adjournment was put forward and rejected by a majority of the votes of the Board including those of certain elected members, and that certain other elected members filed a note of dissent. They are not aware of the grounds on which the motion was put forward and do not consider that any useful purpose would be served by making enquiries.

HOLDING IN CAMERA OF MEETINGS OF THE CANTONMENT BOARD, AMBALA.

21. Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava : (1) Are Government aware that in the ordinary meeting of the Cantonment Board, Ambala, held on 29th January 1927 and in the special meeting of the same Board held on 5th February 1927, the President directed the discussion of one or two items in camera ?

(2) Is it a fact that as required by section 42 of the Cantonment Act, no reasons were recorded by the President for the decision of these items in camera ?

(3) Are Government aware that on the Vice-President's pointing out the illegality, the President on 28th February 1927, while confirming the proceedings of the meetings mentioned above, added to the proceedings that the meeting was held in camera, in the interests of the Cantonment Board ?

(4) Do the Government know that the giving of this vague reason has caused great stir among the people, some of whose representatives had to leave the meeting when it was declared to be held in camera ?

(5) Will the Government be pleased to enquire why the reasons were not recorded at the time the meeting was held in camera and why these reasons were not specified ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (1) Yes.

(2) No.

(3) The Government of India understand that the President did not record his reasons in writing until his attention was drawn to the section.

(4) The Government are informed that there was no stir.

(5) In view of the facts stated above, the Government do not propose to make any further enquiry into this incident.

INDIANIZATION OF THE SUPERIOR SERVICES.

22. Mr. N. M. Joshi : Will Government be pleased to place on the table a statement on the Indianization of each of the Superior Services for 1920, 1921, 1922, 1923, 1924, 1925 and 1926 showing :

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I would refer the Honourable Member to the statements laid on the table in reply to his questions of the 15th September 1921, the 2nd July 1923, and the 8th March 1924, and in reply to Mr. J. These statements, I think, show in a convenient form what is essential for observing the progress of Indianization, and I hope will meet the requirements of the Honourable Member.

The percentages of recruitment recommended by the Lee Commission are stated in Chapter V of their Report.

OPENING OF A HOSPITAL FOR RAILWAY SERVANTS IN JHANSI CITY.

25. Mr. N. M. Joshi : (a) Are Government aware that a large number of railway servants residing in Jhansi City have to go to take medicine and get their attendance marked in the railway hospital when they are on sick list leave ?

(c) Will the Government consider the advisability of opening a hospital in the Jhansi City ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) It is not compulsory for the railway servants residing in Jhansi City to go to the railway hospital when sick. They have the option of being attended to by their own family doctor provided they report their illness to the Railway Medical Officer in charge of their station within 48 hours.

NON-EMPLOYMENT ON SATURDAYS OF WORKERS ON DAILY WAGES IN RAILWAY WORKSHOPS.

26. Mr. N. M. Joshi : (a) Is it a fact that men on daily wages in workshops are given holidays on Saturdays also ? If so, since when has this practice been started and why ?

(c) Has this practice been started in the Jhansi City only or throughout the Great Indian Peninsula Railway ?

(d) Are Government aware that a similar practice has also been started in the Madras and Southern Mahratta Railway workshop at Perambur ?

Has any other Railway in India adopted this practice ?

(f) Will Government be pleased to state what they propose to do to make up the loss in wages which the workers suffer ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a), (c) and (d). As a general practice workshops are kept open on Saturdays. Recently some portions of the Jhansi Workshops on the Great Indian Peninsula Railway were closed on Saturdays for a short period, as the public traffic requirements would not permit of sufficient vehicles being sent in for periodical repairs. The workshops on the Madras and Southern Mahratta Railway were also closed on Saturdays for a short period owing, I believe, to absenteeism. In both these cases the practice of keeping the workshops open on Saturdays has been resumed.

CONTRACT WITH THE EMPLOYEES OF THE GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY NOT TO ENGAGE ON PRIVATE WORK ON SUNDAYS AND HOLIDAYS.

27. Mr. N. M. Joshi : Is it a fact that workers in railway workshops have been bound by contract not to take up any other work on Sundays, Saturdays and other holidays for which they do not get any pay from the Railways ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Under the terms of his agreement no employee of the Great Indian Peninsula Railway can carry on or be interested in any business or trade without the permission of the authorities.

POSTING OF ORDERS AND CIRCULARS ON NOTICE BOARDS IN THE JHANSI RAILWAY WORKSHOPS.

28. Mr. N. M. Joshi : Is it a fact that orders and circulars are not posted on Notice Boards in the Jhansi workshops ; if not, why not ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : No. Orders and circulars intended for workmen are posted on the Notice Board in the Jhansi workshops.

INDIAN GUARDS AND DRIVERS EMPLOYED ON THE MAIN LINE OF THE GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY.

29. Mr. N. M. Joshi : Will Government be pleased to state how many Indian guards and drivers are running on the main line of the Great Indian Peninsula Railway for passenger trains and for goods trains ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Government have no information.

MEDICAL CERTIFICATES OF EMPLOYEES OF THE GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY.

30. Mr. N. M. Joshi : Will Government be pleased to state whether the certificates regarding sickness of railway employees of the Great Indian Peninsula Railway issued by the Civil or Assistant Surgeons are not accepted by the railway authorities ; if not, why not ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The certificates are accepted if countersigned by Railway Medical Officers.

SICK LEAVE PAY OF EUROPEANS AND INDIANS ON RAILWAYS.

31. Mr. N. M. Joshi : (a) Is it a fact that the European staff on Indian Railways when on the sick list get full pay and the Indians only half pay ? If so, why ?

(b) Is it a fact that the sick leave period of the European staff is excluded from long leave while in the case of Indians, it is not ? If so, why ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The position as stated in the questions only applies, as far as State-managed Railways are concerned, to old employees of the old East Indian and Great Indian Peninsula Railway Companies, who were taken over by the State under the original terms of service. It does not apply to employees of those Railways appointed since the lines came under State management, who have been brought under the Fundamental Leave Rules, nor does it apply to the other State-managed Railways.

The State Railway leave rules are now under revision and the employees of the old East Indian and Great Indian Peninsula Railway Companies will be given the option of electing these new rules, when issued, under certain conditions.

The position also on most of the Company-worked Railways is as stated in the question, but the leave rules for the employees on these Railways are framed by the Board of Directors under their own powers subject to the condition that the rules are within the basic rules prescribed by Government for Company-worked Railways. Under the terms of the contracts Government cannot interfere with the discretion of the Board of Directors in this matter.

INTRODUCTION OF THE FUNDAMENTAL LEAVE RULES ON THE GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY.

32. Mr. N. M. Joshi : (a) Is it a fact that the Fundamental Leave Rules are not yet brought into force on Great Indian Peninsula Railway ? If not, why not ?

(b) Will the Fundamental Leave Rules apply to all new as well as to the old employees of the Great Indian Peninsula Railway ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The Honourable Member is referred to the answer just given to his question No. 31.

GOODS SHED ACCOMMODATION AT JHANSI STATION.

33. Mr. N. M. Joshi : (a) Are Government aware that the goods shed on the Jhansi Station platform is quite insufficient to meet the needs of the traffic of the Station ?

(b) Is it a fact that goods remain lying in open space for several days for being despatched and delivered and that much loss is caused by rain thereby ?

(c) Will the Government consider the advisability of erecting sheds early ?

(d) Why has Orai Station (on the Jhansi-Cawnpore section) been abolished as a Headquarters and Chauranh opened instead ?

(e) Has the change increased the hours of duty of the drivers to 18 hours ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) No. The goods shed accommodation at Jhansi was increased by 25 per cent. early this year.

(c) This is not considered necessary.

(d) and (e). The engine-runs on the Jhansi-Cawnpore section have recently been revised, but the change of engine crews at Chauranh instead of at Orai has not increased the hours of duty of drivers to 18 hours.

SUPPLY OF WATER NEAR THE GOODS SHED AT JHANSI.

34. Mr. N. M. Joshi : Is it a fact that there is no arrangement for the supply of water near the goods shed at Jhansi ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The reply is in the negative.

There is a stand pipe and a howd near the goods shed and chatties at the gate lodge at Jhansi station.

WIRE FENCING OF THE RAILWAY LINE IN THE JHANSI-MANIKPUR SECTION.

35. Mr. N. M. Joshi : (a) Is it a fact that there is no wire fencing on both sides of the railway line in the Jhansi-Manikpur section ?

(b) Will Government be pleased to state how many animals were run over by the absence of wire-fencing during the past year ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) The Jhansi-Banda portion of the Jhansi-Manikpur section is unfenced.

(b) During the 13 months January 1926 to January 1927, 61 animals were run over on the unfenced length or an average of 0·51 animals per mile as compared to 0·34 per mile on the fenced portions of the Jhansi Division.

CHARGE OF FULL FARE TO RAILWAY SERVANTS FAILING TO GET THEIR PASSES INITIALLED.

36. Mr. N. M. Joshi : Is it a fact that full fare is now being charged from railway servants if they fail to get their passes initialled on the journey ? If so, why ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The penalty of being treated as passengers without tickets was imposed on railway servants who failed to comply with the rule requiring that passes should be dated before commencement of journey, in order to prevent passes being used more than once.

PERIOD OF MID-DAY REST IN THE WORKSHOPS AT JHANSI.

37. Mr. N. M. Joshi : (a) Will Government be pleased to state when the workshop at Jhansi remains closed for mid-day rest and for what period ?

(b) Is it a fact that the open space where they used to sit and take their food is just being fenced ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Jhansi workshops are closed for the mid-day rest from 11 to 12 hours, Monday to Friday.

PERIODICAL MEDICAL EXAMINATION OF RAILWAY EMPLOYEES.

38. Mr. N. M. Joshi : (a) Is it a fact that men in railway service are now medically examined periodically ? If so, why ?

(b) How many workers after this examination have been discharged or reduced during the last three years on the Great Indian Peninsula Railway and how many of them were Indians and how many were Europeans ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) I would refer the Honourable Member to the reply given to question No. 141 asked by Dr. K. G. Lohokare on the 20th August, 1926.

REDUCTION OF THE HOURS OF WORK OF THE STATION COMMERCIAL STAFF ON THE GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY.

39. Mr. N. M. Joshi : (a) Are Government aware that the Great Indian Peninsula Railway station commercial staff have to work for twelve to fourteen hours a day ?

(b) Is it a fact also that they have to work from 18 to 20 hours a day on Sundays ?

(c) Have Government considered the effect of this on the health of the servants and the advisability of reducing the hours of work ? If not, are they prepared to do so ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Government have no information on the subject but will make enquiries.

CLOSING OF THE CITY BOOKING OFFICE AT JHANSI.

40. Mr. N. M. Joshi : (a) Since when has the City booking office at Jhansi been closed and why ?

(b) Is it a fact that the Jhansi Municipal Board has passed a resolution requesting the re-opening of the booking office on account of the inconvenience caused to the passengers ? Do Government propose to order the office to be re-opened ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) The Jhansi City booking office was closed on the 1st May, 1923, as its continuance was not financially justifiable.

The Great Indian Peninsula Railway have elaborate and adequate arrangements at Jhansi station for dealing with passenger traffic.

(b) A petition on the subject was received by the Great Indian Peninsula Railway from the Chairman, Municipal Board, Jhansi. Government do not propose to intervene in the matter, but are forwarding a copy of the question and the reply to the Agent, Great Indian Peninsula Railway.

(2) If so, why ?

(3) Are Government prepared immediately to grant the same privilege to the Railway Mail Service employees both in the mufassil and the City of Madras ?

Mr. H. A. Sams : (1) No.

(2) and (3). Do not arise.

42. Maulvi Muhammad Shafee : (1) Will the Government be pleased to state whether the Ministers, the Executive Councillors, and the High Court Judges, who are exempted under clause (1) (a) of Schedule I of the Indian Arms Rules, 1924, can be allowed to keep retainers for their arms ?

(2) If the answer to the first question is in the affirmative, will the Government be pleased to state whether the Members of the Indian Legislature, who are also exempted under clause (1) (a) of Schedule I of the Indian Arms Rules, 1924, can be permitted to keep retainers for their arms ?

(3) Has the matter been brought to the notice of the Government that the Provincial Government of Bihar and Orissa has taken the view that the Members of the Indian Legislature are not fit persons to be allowed to keep retainers for their arms ?

(4) Do the Government propose to take some immediate step to remove the difficulty from the path of the Members of the Indian Legislature ?

(5) Are Government prepared to consider the advisability of issuing a detailed notification with regard to the question, clearly laying down the persons or the classes of persons who are entitled to enjoy the privilege of keeping retainers for their arms ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (1) Retainers of the officials mentioned are not exempted from the provisions of the Arms Act and the rules framed thereunder.

(5) If the answer to the last question is in the negative, will the Government be pleased to lay down the reasons for the same ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (1) Four.

(2) Yes ; one cadet.

(3) The term " Indian Officer " refers only to military officers.

(4) and (5). Government do not propose to institute special pecuniary concessions at Dehra Dun for the sons of civil officials. The reason is that those officials are not considered to be any more in need of such concessions than private individuals.

(c) If so, do Government propose to provide for the proper representation of this community ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a) Yes.

MOTION FOR ADJOURNMENT.

REPRESENTATION OF INDIANS ON THE ROYAL COMMISSION TO CONSIDER THE FEDERATION OF KENYA AND OTHER EAST AND CENTRAL AFRICAN COLONIES.

Mr. President : I have received the following notice of a motion for adjournment from Mr. K. C. Roy :

"I beg to give notice of my intention to move an adjournment of the business of the Assembly on the 18th August to discuss a definite matter of urgent public importance, namely, the situation created by the announcement by the Secretary of State for the Colonies of the early appointment of a Royal Commission to consider proposals for a closer union by federation of Kenya and other East and Central African Colonies and States, and the urgent necessity of immediate action on the part of the Government of India for securing adequate Indian representation in the said Commission and obtaining proper terms of reference to the Commission with a view to protect the rights, status and interests of Indians in the said Colonies."

I must confess that I have not got enough materials before me to justify me in determining the question of the admissibility of this motion. I would therefore like to know if Government are prepared to throw any light on the question of admissibility.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett (Leader of the House) : Sir, the public importance of the announcement of His Majesty's Government's decision to send a Commission to Africa to consider the possibility of a closer union by federation between Kenya and the other territories cannot be questioned. But I submit, Sir, that this motion ought to be opposed on the ground that the matter is not urgent. The plea for urgency is, I suppose, based on three factors,—the appointment of the Commission, its terms of reference and its personnel. No urgency can attach to one or two, the appointment of the Commission or the terms of reference : they have been publicly announced. As regards the personnel, it has been stated that it was announced by His Majesty's Secretary of State for the Colonies in the House of Commons that the Secretary of State for India would nominate one member. This constitutes a recognition by His Majesty's Government of the importance of including in the Commission a person conversant with Indian conditions. The Government of India are fully alive to the importance of the decision of His Majesty's Government and are determined to do everything in their power to safeguard India's interests. Representations have in fact been made to His Majesty's Government, and I submit, therefore, Sir, that it cannot be said that there is a special urgency which would justify this motion being taken up to-day, and that if a substantial number of Members of this House desire an opportunity for discussing it the ordinary opportunities are open through the ballot.

Mr. K. C. Roy (Bengal : Nominated Non-Official) : Sir, while I congratulate the Honourable Sir Basil Blackett on his appointment as the Leader of the House (Loud Applause), I fear I cannot congratulate him on the opposition which he has offered to my motion. I am sorry, sincerely sorry, that the first step of the new Leader should be to oppose a motion which has been dictated by the one solitary consideration, and that consideration is, well being of 60,000 to 70,000 Indians who are settled in the East and Central African territories. I am glad, Sir, that he has admitted the public importance of the motion. But he pleads that there is no urgency. I shall prove, Sir, that there is a great deal of urgency, and that we have suffered in the past—since 1908—due to the lethargy and inactivity of the Government of India. Sir, the operative clause of my motion is that we want immediate action on the part of the Government of India. Are we right, or are we wrong ? Sir Basil Blackett says.....

Mr. President : What action does the Honourable Member wish the Government of India to take ?

Mr. K. C. Roy : Sir, I am coming to that. I want the Government of India to make immediate representation to His Majesty's Government and I want also the Government of India to hear the Non-Official Members of this House. First and foremost, Sir Basil Blackett has said that the announcement of the Commission has been made. What is the announcement ? The announcement is that the Secretary of State has been asked to send out a special Commission, but the Commission has not yet been appointed. There is no Royal Warrant or Instrument of Instructions. Then, there are the terms of reference. I look upon them as mere tentative terms of reference. Those terms of reference are entirely inadequate in regard to the citizenship status of Indians as defined by the Imperial Conference of 1921. Then, Sir, I come to the question of Indian representation. Mr. Amery, the other day—the full text of his speech came only by the last mail—said that there will be a representative of the India Office, and what is the representative of the India Office going to do ? Are we going to be content with the representative of the India Office ? Will he represent the Government of India or will he represent the people of India ? And, Sir Basil Blackett seems to be satisfied with one representative. What has been the practice in the past ? In 1910 His Majesty's Government appointed a very important Commission to inquire into the Crown Colonies.

Mr. President : The Honourable Member is going into the merits of the case. We are now discussing the point of order.

Mr. K. C. Roy : I am not going into the merits of the case. My Honourable friend the Leader of the House is satisfied with one representative of the India Office. But there was a Commission in the past and His Majesty's Government appointed three members, namely, Sir George Scott Robertson, Sir James Latouche and Sir Selwyn Freemantle. Are we going to be satisfied with one member now ? I think, Sir, there is great urgency in regard to this matter ; we should make immediate representation to His Majesty's Government to widen the terms of reference and to afford full representation of Indians on the personnel of the Commission. The personnel of the Commission is impending ; it has not yet been announced. We know only of one name, he is the President, Commander Hilton Young, not a very inspiring name in India. We are very anxious to make immediate representation, and, Mr. President, I hope you will see your way to admit my motion.

Mr. N. M. Joshi (Nominated : Labour Interests) : Sir, may I say one word on this point ? The discussion on this question is very important from the point of view of Indians in East Africa.

Mr. President : It is admitted that the discussion on this question is very important. The question is whether it is urgent.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : It is urgent in this way, Sir, that if the Royal Warrant is once issued, it will be very difficult to change it, and therefore if we want the terms of reference not to contain any matter which is against the declared policy of the British Government as regards Indian emigration and the Indian residents of East Africa, this is the time for us to do so, and the matter is also urgent from the point of view of the personnel. The Indian community in East Africa is several times larger than the British community in East Africa and they promise to give only one seat on the Royal Commission to Indians. It is therefore very urgent.

Mr. President : Is it a fact that the terms of reference have already been announced ?

Sir Hari Singh Gour (Central Provinces Hindi Divisions : Non-Muhammadan) : Tentatively, provisionally.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : As regards the personnel, they promise only one seat to Indians. Indians in East Africa are several times larger than the British in East Africa. It is therefore quite urgent that we should make representation to the British Government that the Indian representation on the Commission should be adequate to the number of Indians in East Africa.

Mr. President : If Government have already made a representation to that effect, what is the urgency ?

Sir Hari Singh Gour : May I point out the urgency ? The Honourable the Leader of the House has admitted that the Government of India are in communication with the Secretary of State on the subject of India's representation on this Commission. I presume that itself is a matter of urgency to the Government of India ; and being a matter of urgency it does not lie in the mouth of the Leader of the House to say that, while it is urgent for the Government of India to make representation to the Secretary of State, it is not a matter of urgency, so far as this House is concerned, to strengthen the hands of the Government of India in any communication made by them to the Secretary of State. I am sure, Sir, that the Honourable the Leader of the House will admit that the question of urgency arises on all the three points. First, as regards the terms of reference, I have before me a newspaper cutting of a very recent date from which I gather that the terms of reference are only provisional and if the Government of India.....

Mr. President : Is the Honourable Member reading the terms of reference ?

Sir Hari Singh Gour : The terms of reference. I am reading from a recent issue of the Pioneer in which it is stated.....

Mr. President : Is it stated that the terms are provisional ?

Sir Hari Singh Gour : Yes, Sir. They have therefore authorised the Secretary of State to send to Africa a special Commission with the following terms of reference.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : May I shorten the discussion by saying that my information is that the terms of reference are final, and not provisional

Mr. K. C. Roy : May I ask whether there has been a Royal Warrant or Instrument of Instructions ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : I submit, Sir, that there is no proof of urgency from the point of view of the terms of reference or the announcement of the Commission. The only point that my Honourable friend Mr. Roy makes is that there is urgency as regards the question of the personnel. He desires that the matter may be discussed in order to press upon the Government the necessity of making representations to His Majesty's Government with reference to the personnel. I have told him that representations have been made for the protection of Indian interests by the Government.

Mr. President : Of adequate representation of Indian interests by Indians ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : Government have, I submit, done all that they can do in this matter. The notice that has been given by Mr. Roy and this discussion has, I submit, made it clear that the House desires that the Government should make this representation and there is nothing more that can be done as a result of this discussion in the House. I therefore suggest that Mr. Roy should withdraw his motion.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : May I ask, has this House no duty in the matter ?

Mr. President : I should like to know whether the Government have made a representation for the adequate representation of Indians on that Commission.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : Of Indian interests, Sir.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar (Tanjore cum Trichinopoly : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : May I say, Sir, that the urgency, so far as this House is concerned, arises, even on the Leader's own showing, on the third part of the motion of which notice has been given by my Honourable friend Mr. Roy ? The question is not whether the Indian Government made representations for the protection of Indian interests in any inquiry the Commission may make. The question is not also whether the India Office, as Mr. Amery said in the House of Commons, has been asked to nominate a representative, it may be of somebody who is in the good books of the India Office. The question is whether we, the people in India, have a right to say that an Indian representative and an adequate number of Indian representatives should be appointed to the Commission if the interests of Indians there are to be adequately protected ; and I say, this House has got the right and the duty of making this representation to the Government, and the Government, I say, Sir, is equally under a duty to forward that representation to His Majesty's Government and to support it. Therefore, Sir, I think the matter is most urgent, because I expect this Commission may be announced any day and it is necessary that the view of this House on the question of the adequacy and the representative character of Indians to be appointed to the Commission should be pressed on His Majesty's Government.

Mr. President : There are three points raised by this motion. One is the principle of the appointment of the Royal Commission. The announcement of the appointment of the Royal Commission has already been made. That question has therefore settled itself and nothing remains to be done. The second is the question of the terms of reference. It has been contended that the terms of reference that have been published are provisional. On the other hand, the Leader of the House assures me that these terms are not provisional but final. The third point raised by the motion is regarding the personnel of the Commission. There is no doubt that the personnel has not been announced. There is something in the White Paper to the effect that the Secretary of State for India will be asked or is being asked to appoint some nominee of his as a member representing the Indian interests. There is, on the other hand, the desire on the part of Mr. Roy and those who think with him that there should be adequate representation of Indians, and that is a point which is, in my opinion, really urgent. The personnel of the Commission might be announced at any moment and, if the opinion of this House must reach the British Government in time, then it is necessary that the Government of India should make a representation immediately, and this is the opportunity when this House should discuss the question. In my opinion, therefore, the only point relevant to this notice of motion is the question relating to the personnel of the Commission. If Mr. K. C. Roy is prepared to restrict his motion only to the question of the personnel of the Commission, then the Chair is prepared to consider his motion.

Mr. K. C. Roy : I shall certainly modify the motion, if you will only give me five minutes.

Mr. President : If the Honourable Member is prepared to give notice now, I am prepared to consider it at once.

Mr. K. C. Roy : I will give notice in five minutes, Sir.

Mr. President : The Honourable Member should restrict his motion only to the question of the personnel of the Commission.

(Mr. K. C. Roy then drafted and handed in to the Secretary the revised motion for adjournment.)

Mr. President : Order, order : The motion of Mr. K. C. Roy now stands thus :

"I beg to give notice of my intention to move the adjournment of the business of the Assembly on the 18th August to discuss a definite matter of urgent public importance, namely, the necessity of the Government of India taking urgent action to secure the appointment of an adequate number of Indian representatives on the Special Commission announced by His Majesty's Government to be sent to Africa to deal with the question of federation and future policy with regard to the Colonies in Eastern and Central Africa in view of the vital interests of the Indian community in these Colonies involved therein."

The notice seems to me now in order and I will ask the Assembly whether the Honourable Member (Mr. K. C. Roy) has the leave of the Assembly to move this motion.

As no Honourable Member objects to leave being granted, I announce that the leave is granted, and that the motion will be taken up at 4 P.M. or, if the business of the day is finished earlier, it might be taken up earlier with the consent of the Leader of the House.

DEATH OF MR. AMBIKA PRASAD SINHA, M.L.A.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (Muzaffarpur cum Champaran : Non-Muhammadan) : Sir, it is my melancholy duty to bring to the notice of this House the sad and untimely death of one of our colleagues, Mr. Ambika Prasad Sinha, who came from my own Province of Bihar and Orissa. The deceased gentleman was keeping bad health during the last Delhi Session, and on his return to Patna his illness developed into dropsy, to which he ultimately succumbed. Mr. Ambika Prasad Sinha had been a Member of this House almost since the inception of the reformed constitution, and during his tenure of office as a Member he was remarkable for his regular attendance—a fact which cannot be said to the credit of many Honourable Members. He was a man of amiable nature and of lovable qualities and a popular figure in the lobby and in social circles ; but he was stern and unbending in the discharge of his duties as an elected Member of this House ; and his votes were always cast on the popular side. Speaking personally, in the death of Mr. Ambika Prasad Sinha I feel as if I have lost a younger brother. I would request you, Sir, to be so pleased as to communicate to the members of the bereaved family an expression of our hearty sympathy and condolence.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett (Leader of the House) : Sir, Mr. Ambika Prasad Sinha belonged to that dwindling number of Members who have been in all the three Assemblies since 1921. He was in all the three Assemblies a universally popular Member, and deservedly so. His personality was such that it helped, if I may say so, to bridge the gap that is caused by the differences between Members in faith, in politics and in race. We shall all miss him and on behalf of the Government and I am sure on behalf of all those of his friends who sit on this side of the House I desire to associate myself with the expression of regret for his untimely death and sympathy with his relatives.

Mr. President : I am sure I shall be carrying out the unanimous wish of this House when I convey to the family of our late colleague the deep sense of regret that we all feel at his death.

RELIEF FOR SUFFERERS FROM FLOODS IN GUJRAT AND PARTS OF ORISSA AND SIND.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar (Tanjore cum Trichinopoly : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, with your permission and the permission of the Member of the Department concerned, I beg to move .

" This Assembly resolves to place on record its deep sympathy with the people of the whole of the province of Gujrat and parts of Orissa in their distress in consequence of the unprecedented floods that have caused widespread famines in the areas affected and requests the President to convey the sympathy of this House to the sufferers.

[Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar.]

This Assembly trusts that the Government as well as the Princes and the people of India will do all that lies in their power to help in alleviating the distress of the sufferers."

Sir, I do not propose to take up the time of the House by relating here all the great suffering and the havoc that was wrought by the floods and rains last month in consequence of which one of the most fertile and beautiful parts of India has been sorely devastated and a land which has been repeatedly subject to famine and distress, the province of Orissa, has been made even more miserable than it has been. Sir, it is unnecessary to give any harrowing accounts of this flood havoc that was caused, because I take it Honourable Members have followed the accounts that have appeared in the papers If Honourable Members were not the actual sufferers on the spot, they have been the sufferers in some way or the other, at least by having their train journeys stopped and by having to put up a lot of inconvenience before they could reach Simla to attend to the duties of their office. That distant effect will give them an idea of the very great injury, suffering and distress that have been caused to our fellow-countrymen in these parts and particularly in the province of Gujrat where the distress and the suffering have been wholesale. I am here, Sir, to bespeak your kind offices to convey to these sufferers the sympathy of this House. I have not the slightest doubt that that sympathy will be given in the most ungrudging measure and by every means open to us.

It is unnecessary for me, Sir, to add to the moving appeal which you, as soon as you arrived in this country, issued to the people of this country to respond and help in relieving the distress in your own province.

Your own province, Sir, according to the conventions of this House, remains unrepresented by reason of the fact that you have become the mouthpiece of the whole House, and it therefore rests doubly upon us here on this side of the House to take up the cause which you would otherwise have taken up with great application and devotion. It has pleased us not a little to find that amidst your arduous duties you have announced your decision to dedicate your services to the relief of this suffering in Gujrat under the auspices of the Congress Committee. We here are proud to own a President who has taken upon himself this great and humanitarian work. But I appeal to the House that apart from responding to the appeal of the President to the utmost extent in our power, it is also our duty to go about and find support—financial and otherwise—for this great ameliorative work that is being carried on both in Gujrat and in Orissa. Sir, it is not possible for us to estimate the extent of the damage and the distress that is involved. Accounts of extensive devastation of crops, of lands, of houses, of life and live-stock have appeared in the papers from time to time But to give an idea of the huge work of relief that is before us, I would just make a reference to a conference which was held at Nadiad under the auspices of the Finance Member of the Government of Bombay at which a number of other representatives engaged in this relief work under the guidance of your brother, Mr. Vallabhai Patel, met and discussed plans for the relief of suffering and also tried to form an estimate of the monies that would be required to do this on any adequate scale. I do not wish to tire the House by reading these things, but I find there was a proposal to build 20,000 houses for the depressed classes at a cost of Rs. 50 each ; that alone would involve Rs. 10 lakhs. I find, Sir, that even more urgent has been the building of about 70,000 buildings for people who are actually ryots and cultivators, who occupy a better status than the depressed classes and whose houses would cost at least Rs. 150 each, and the cost of that has been estimated at about a crore of rupees. Then, Sir, there are houses of the lower middle classes and the upper middle classes and even of rich men which have been completely destroyed and have all to be restored. The cost of that has not been put down here, but the woes of the middle classes have been very great indeed. Then, there are other matters, matters relating to the free distribution of seed paddy for fresh sowings ; there are cases in which we have got to make advances under the Agriculturists Loans Act or under the takavi system with a view to help them in starting agricultural operations this season. There are also cases in which pure eleemosynary aid has to be given by the distribution of food grains on a very large scale to prevent actual starvation and acute famine in many parts of Gujrat and Orissa I am sure in Orissa—I have been told by my friend Mr. Das who will inform the House of the exact position—there are thousands upon thousands of families which have been left absolutely without any means. Sir, in this state of things it is the duty of the Central Legislature to take account of the situation and come to the rescue of these distressed Provinces. I say, Sir, it is the duty of the Central Government, notwithstanding the fact that this particular Department may have been provincialised, to come forward and offer to help the provincial authorities by grants and by every other means by which they can help them. I was sorry to understand—I am sure that if my information is wrong, the Honourable the Leader of the House will correct me—that applications which have been made from Bombay for grants out of the Famine Insurance Fund or out of the Indian Peoples' Famine Trust Fund have so far not been promptly responded to ; and so far as the Bombay Government are concerned, my friend, Mr. Vallabhai Patel, long ago appealed to the Bombay Government to set apart one crore of rupees out of the sum at the credit of the Bombay Government in the Famine Insurance Fund to be made available for the purposes of relief in Gujrat. I am not sure that so far anything has been done in that matter, and I am sure that, so far as that fund is concerned, it is actually in the hands of the Government of India held at the credit of the Bombay Government, and this Government have a great deal to do with the matter. But I do not want to raise any controversy on this motion. I am sure the Honourable the Finance Member, who is also the Leader of the House to-day, will view this matter with the utmost generosity and I am sure he will respond to this appeal.

My appeal is also to those outside this House, to the various Princes and aristocrats and others who are better off than our unfortunate brethren in Gujrat, to come and help in this great and humanitarian cause. It is a cause which cannot fail to appeal to the lowest as well as to the highest of our countrymen, and I therefore desire through you, Sir, to make an appeal to every one of them to respond in unmeasured ways to this call of duty to our fellow-countrymen. I do not want to add anything more. I move my motion.

Mr. President : Will the Honourable Member pass the text of the motion on to the Chair ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : (Leader of the House) : Sir, I desire to associate myself on behalf of the Government most sincerely and sympathetically with this motion which must, I think, appeal to the feelings of all Members of the House. When a catastrophe of the sort that has happened in Gujrat occurs, we can only bow our heads in sorrow and sympathy and set to work in the most practical way to do our best to relieve those who suffer. In this matter I think there is one very bright spot. I am sure we must have all looked on with great admiration at the way in which the citizens and people of the Province of Bombay, admirably led by their Governor in example and precept, have arisen to the occasion and set to work to do all in their power to relieve the distress of the sufferers. It is not possible, in this matter, under the constitution as it stands to-day, for the Government of India directly to ask the tax-payer of the Central Government to make contributions to this deserving cause, but I am very glad of the opportunity that has been given me by the Mover to make it clear that the Government of India are doing all in their power to assist in this matter. I heard only yesterday rumours to the effect that there were some complaints that requests from the Government of Bombay for leave to use monies out of the Famine Insurance Fund were being delayed by the Government of India. I am very glad to be able to assure the House and the people of Bombay that there is no foundation for such an allegation. So far as I can make out, the Government of India have received no request from the Government of Bombay in regard to the Famine Insurance Fund, and that for the simple reason that it is within the power of the Government of Bombay to draw on that Fund for such purposes as these, which are within the ambit of the fund. I believe that it is necessary that notice should be given to the Government of India of the intention of a Provincial Government to make a large draft on their balances which may possibly come up at an inconvenient moment to the Central Government ; but I have made inquiries and I find that no such request has been made and I can assure the House that if such a request is made it will be promptly acceded to by the Government of India. There is one direction in which the Government of India hope that they may be able to help. An application has been received from the Bombay Government for assistance from the Peoples' Famine Trust Fund. That application was received about a week ago and arrangements have been made for calling a meeting of the Committee of that Fund at the earliest possible date. I cannot of course anticipate what will be the decision of the Committee of that Fund, though as I happen to be a member of the Committee I may say that I hope that it will feel itself able to make as generous a donation as the real sufferings in this case worthily demand. Sir, I gladly associate myself with this motion which I am sure must give particular satisfaction to you, coming as it does as a recognition and perhaps as a consequence of your own generous-minded action in the matter.

Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya (Allahabad and Jhansi Divisions: Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I associate myself with what Mr. Rangaswami Iyengar and the Honourable the Leader of the House have said on this painful subject. We are all in deep sympathy with our fellowmen of Gujrat and of Orissa in the calamity that has befallen them. I should like to make a proposal, with the leave of the Leader of the House, to insert Sind also in this Resolution.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : I have no objection.

Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya : The people of Sind also have suffered. In fact the Session of the Bombay Legislative Council was cut short to enable Members representing Sind to go back to their homes, because this devastation had overtaken parts of Sind also. The sufferings that the people have undergone and are still undergoing cannot be described. I hear that there are still parts of Gujrat where people are cut off from outside, and it therefore behoves us all to offer our profound sympathy to those of our fellowmen who have fallen victims of this calamity. We are grateful that Members in this Assembly have already expressed their sympathy and taken steps to organize a fund. We are also grateful to learn that the Government of India are prepared to do all that lies in their power to assist the people in this matter. I should, however, like to assure the Government on behalf of the non-official Members, with reference to the observation made by the Honourable the Finance Member that under the constitution of this House the Government of India are not able to allot any funds for help on such an occasion, that should Government find it necessary to bring forward any proposal before this House for the support of the Members to enable them to make a contribution to the fund for the relief of sufferers from floods in Gujrat, Sind or Orissa, I venture to say that every Member of this House will gladly support that proposal.

It has been said, Sir, that the people of Bombay have taken a lead in this matter and have shown a very commendable spirit in fighting this calamity, but I am glad that the Honourable the Leader of the House recognises that the Government of India also, as the Central Government, which draws support from every part of India, have a duty to perform in this matter. Gujrat and its prosperity contribute to the Government of India's Budget ; so do Sind and Orissa. And when these large tracts of country have unfortunately been smitten by this calamity, it is only right that even if they do not stand in need of pecuniary assistance, we should assure them that the Government of India are ready and prepared to offer whatever pecuniary assistance they may be in need of and which it may be in the power of the Government of India to offer. I hope, Sir, that such an assurance will be conveyed further, if it is necessary, in addition to what has already been conveyed, and that through the Governors of the two provinces our fellowmen who are suffering from this calamity will be informed and assured that every Member of this House feels keen sympathy with them in their sorrow and is ready to do whatever lies in its power to help them to get out of that suffering and be restored to their normal conditions of life. I have much pleasure, Sir, in supporting this Resolution.

Mr. President : Sir Basil Blackett and Comrades, I do not think this is a motion which calls for a large number of speeches. I, therefore, with the forbearance of this House, propose to close after making a few observations. Let me, in the first place, thank you all most sincerely for the motion which I am sure you are going to adopt very soon unanimously. In expressing your sympathy with the people of Gujrat you are also expressing your sympathy with your President. As you are aware. I am the representative from Gujrat. Gujrat is my constituency and any calamity on the people of Gujrat is a calamity on me personally. I cannot say how much I feel on the matter and the motion of my friend Mr. Rangaswami Iyengar speaks for itself. Had it not been for the fact that you have called me to this Chair, I should have been to-day with my people assisting the President of Gujrat Provincial Congress Committee in the great and noble work of relief operations which he has inaugurated. On behalf of these sufferers and on my own, I desire to express our deep sense of gratitude to His Excellency the Viceroy for the very encouraging letter which he has written to me in connection with this motion with a contribution of Rs. 500 towards the fund which I have started as a mark of his genuine sympathy for the cause. Here is the letter which I will read to you—I am sure he wants me to read it to the Assembly :

" Viceregal Lodge, 17th August, 1927.

Dear Mr. Patel,

I see that the Assembly is being invited by a Resolution to-morrow to record its sympathy with the sufferers in the recent unhappy floods. I should like, if I may, as head of the Indian Legislature to associate myself with such an expression of sympathy and I trust that the efforts that you are personally making to augment the relief funds will meet in all quarters with a ready and generous response. I am sending separately a small subscription of Rs. 500 for this purpose and only wish it was in my power to offer a very much larger contribution.

Yours Sincerely,
(Sd.) IRWIN "

I now put the question.

The question is :

" That this Assembly resolves to place on record its deep sympathy with the people of the whole of the province of Gujrat and parts of Orissa and Sind in their distress in consequence of the unprecedented floods that have caused widespread famine in the areas affected and requests the President to convey the sympathy of this House to the sufferers. This Assembly trusts that the Government as well as the Princes and the people of India will do all that lies in their power to help in alleviating the distress of the sufferers."

The motion was adopted.

Mr. President : I now declare this motion unanimously carried and direct that the terms thereof be forthwith communicated by wire to the Governors of the two Provinces concerned and also to the respective Presidents of the Provincial Congress Committees.

The three firms named were given the items for which they were lowest, with the exception of the following urgent items which were ordered from the United Steel Companies, who offered speedy delivery : 405 tyres, for which the Surahammers Bruks Aktiebolag were lowest. From experience it was anticipated that there would be delay in delivery if these were ordered from the Swedish firm; in addition, considerable time would have been taken up in sending test pieces from the firm's works to the National Physical Laboratory ; further, sailings from Gothenburg are infrequent and the vessels are delayed at Antwerp en route to India. 150 tyres, for which the Blaenavon Company was lowest. These locomotives were the first of a new type, and it was considered very desirable that the new standard details should be worked out by a firm of repute under the close supervision of the Consulting Engineers. Further, 12 locomotives of the same type had been ordered before rom the North British Locomotive Company. The lowest suitable tender was from a Continental firm which although generally suitable for this class of work under adequate supervision, was not regarded by the Consulting Engineers as being equal in the matter of workmanship to the North British Locomotive Company. Moreover, the delivery offered—30 to 38 weeks—was extremely long.

903 0 0	The indenting officer demanded Waterlow's railway ticket printing machines. Competitive tenders were invited and the lowest tenderer—Messrs. Pratchett Brothers—quoted £903 for machines of the type which had been supplied to other Indian railways for the same work as now required. Messrs. Waterlow, the next lowest tenderer, quoted £1,070-11-0. The two quotations were telegraphed to the indenting officer, who replied that Waterlow's machines should be supplied. The order was placed accordingly.
370 0 0	The indenting officer specially asked for the same brand of white lead as previously supplied to him. As the extra cost was only £15 above the lowest quotation, this request was complied with.
1,200 8 0	The indenting officer demanded Aveling and Porter's type road rollers. Competitive tenders were invited and the lowest tenderer, Messrs. Marshall Sons and Company, quoted £1,200-8-0. The next lowest tenderer Messrs. Aveling and Porter, quoted £1,243-15-0. The two quotations were telegraphed to the indenting officer, who replied that Aveling and Porter's tender should be accepted. The order was placed accordingly.
690 0 0	Accepted on the grounds of the superior quality of the goods offered which represented more than the small difference in cost.
17,708 6 8	The indentor cabled for a very early supply in view of shortage in the Factories in India. As the lowest tenderer had not submitted a sample with his tender as required by the specification and in view of the urgency, a portion of the order was placed with E. Spinner & Co., with the quality of whose goods the Department was familiar and who undertook much earlier completion of delivery, and the balance was given to the lowest tenderer.
613 0 0	The meters offered by George Kent, Limited, and by the lowest tenderer were of different types and the tenders were referred to the indenting officer, who selected those offered by George Kent, Limited.
1,767 1 11	The lint offered by Southall Brothers and Barclay, Limited, had an area approximately 2 feet per lb. larger than that of the lint offered by the lower tenderer, and was considered better value.
540 0 0	Accepted on the grounds of superior quality of the stores offered which represented more than the difference in price between the two quotations.

Lowest Tender not accepted.	Reason for acceptance.
£ s. d. 17,392 15 4	It was decided that it would be more economical to accept Messrs. Callender's Company's tenders, who offered cables which were technically superior to those proposed by the lowest tenderer.
759 0 6 (8/10 weeks after resumption of work).	Accepted on the ground of quicker delivery. The stores were required to reach India in December, 1926.
464 2 5 (Delivery 16 Weeks). 480 2 6 (Delivery 10 Weeks). 480 2 6 (Delivery 13 Weeks).	The gloves were originally ordered from Messrs. J. Bradshaw & Co., who after 4 months' delay, proved unable to supply in accordance with this Department's sealed patterns. It was therefore decided to call for fresh tenders and to cancel Messrs. Bradshaw's contract and buy against them. The three lowest tenderers could not undertake to commence delivery before 29th November and, as the gloves were urgently wanted in India, the order was placed with the fourth lowest tenderer, Messrs. Allen & Bastick, who had just completed satisfactorily a similar supply and who offered to commence delivery by 15th October and to complete by 15th November.
302 10 0	The anchors were most urgently required and a telegram was received from India requesting that the order should be placed with the firm who could undertake the earliest delivery. The lowest tender offered delivery in 5 weeks, but Messrs. Hindley & Sons, whose price was £12-10-0 higher, offered delivery in three weeks, and their tender was accordingly accepted.
1,868 0 0	The turntable was urgently required in India. The lowest suitable tenderer offered delivery in 14 weeks, where as the Patent Shaft & Axletree Co., Limited—the next lowest tenderer—offered delivery in 8/10 weeks. As their price was only £20 higher their tender was accepted.
1,380 0 0 1,514 0 0* 1,524 0 0 *Accepted for part offered from stock only.	These boilers were demanded in a telegram which asked that they should be shipped immediately. The lower tenders passed over offered delivery in 12/17 weeks after the receipt of material at works. As these offers were both long and indefinite the order was divided between Marshall & Sons, and the Cradley Boiler Co. who offered early delivery from stock.
3,205 19 0	After consultation with the indenting officer, the order was placed with Cooke, Troughton & Simms, Limited, whose workmanship was considered superior to that of the lower tenderer.
234 18 6	The indenting officer had specially recommended that the apparatus should be obtained from Watson & Sons as this firm's quotation was only £28-5-8 higher than the lowest offer, their tender was accepted.

£ s. d. 79 12 0	The indenting officer specially asked for the supply from Watson & Sons. As their price was only £1-5-7 higher than the lowest tender, their offer was accepted.
177 10 0	Technically equivalent offers at prices lower than those quoted by A. E. Dean were received, but as X-Ray Apparatus of Dean's pattern and make had been demanded, this firm's tender was accepted.
1,773 8 2 (Delivery about 12 Weeks).	These plates were required for the repair of a bridge which was reported to be in a dangerous condition. The lowest tender was for delivery in about 12 weeks. In view of the extreme urgency of the demand the order was placed with Messrs. J. Westwood & Co., who offered an earlier and definite date for delivery.
20 12 6	The sinks were stated to be required in India by about the middle of November and the lower tenderer could not guarantee delivery before the beginning of February, 1927. As Messrs. Baird & Tatlock tendered for delivery at the beginning of December their offer was accepted.
31 19 11	The tubing was required in India by December, 1926.
36 12 2	The two lower tenderers could not undertake delivery until 2—4 weeks after the termination of the coal strike. The order was accordingly placed with the next lowest tenderer who offered definite delivery in 7—14 days.
266 12 6	The trough plates were demanded in a telegram which stated that they were required immediately.
267 0 0	The lowest tenderer offered a very indefinite delivery (6 weeks from the date of the resumption of work after the coal strike) The second lowest tenderer offered delivery in 9 weeks. Although the section of the material quoted for by these firms was not considered unsuitable, yet it was not exactly in accordance with the demand. Messrs. J. B. Westwood & Co., the lowest tenderer, offered material exactly as demanded and promised delivery in 6 weeks. Their tender was accordingly accepted.
119 9 8	The order was placed with Messrs. Dronsfield Bros., Limited, as their machinery was specified by the indenting department and their tender was only about £5 higher than the lower tender.

£ s. d. 27 10 0	The indenting officer asked for supply from Down Bros. As their price was only £7-10-0 higher than the lower tenderer, their offer was accepted.
7,539 11 8	These 150,000 pairs of socks were urgently required in India. The lowest tenderer, Messrs. Bates & Co., required 4 weeks to commence and 16 weeks to complete delivery. The Department however had no recent experience of this firm's work as no order had been placed with them for many years. Therefore, in order not to be entirely dependent on them, and with a view to obtaining earlier completion of delivery, it was considered advisable to order 83,500 pairs from this firm, and to obtain the remaining 66,500 from the next lowest tenderer. The extra cost was £102-3-5.
	The forks were required in India not later than 31st December 1926, and the lowest tenderer Messrs. Geo. Butler & Co., Ltd., required 4 weeks to commence and 27 weeks to complete delivery.
598 1 9	Messrs. Walker & Hall, Ltd., the next lowest, offered to commence supply in 3 to 4 weeks and to complete in 14 weeks. In view of the urgency and of the small difference in cost it was decided to divide the order between the lowest two tenderers.
71 15 0	The lowest tenderer offered delivery in 4 weeks after resumption of work on the termination of the coal strike. As the steel strip was urgently required in India the order was placed with the next lowest tenderer who offered delivery in 2 weeks irrespective of the strike.
240 5 0	The indenting officer demanded levels manufactured by Messrs. Cooke, Troughton & Simms. Competitive tenders were invited, and an offer was received from another firm for technically equivalent instruments at £240-5-0. Messrs. Cooke, Troughton & Simms quoted £257-0-0. The quotations were telegraphed to the indenting officer who expressed his unwillingness to accept the cheaper alternative.
76 15 0	Messrs. Garrard Gears, Ltd., offered a more efficient motor, and better value for money than the lowest tenderer, and their offer was consequently accepted.
68 0 1	The spring steel was required as soon as possible. As the lowest tenderer could only offer delivery 4-5 weeks after resumption of work, following the termination of the mining dispute, the order was placed with the next lowest tenderer who offered definite delivery in 3-4 weeks.

53 0 0	The machine offered by Messrs. Beyer Peacock & Co. was considered superior in every way to the cheaper machine the design and construction of which was not considered suitable for indentor's requirements.
485 12 6	Previous supplies of this paper had been made by Messrs. Alex. Cowan & Sons. Ltd. On this occasion, however, a lower tender was received for paper which was considered to be equally suitable. The two quotations were cabled to the indenting officer, who in reply stated that he preferred Cowan's paper.
102 1 8 124 6 1	The indenting officer, specified in the Indent that the registration ink should be supplied by Messrs. H. Morrell, Ltd., and that the blue black and red inks should be supplied by Messrs. H. C. Stephens, Ltd. Competitive tenders were obtained and offers for inks considered to be of equal quality were obtained at lower prices than from the above specified firms. The matter was referred to the indenting officer, who replied that it was essential that the inks be supplied by Messrs. Morrell and Stephens, respectively.
1,401 11 6	The lowest tenderer had not executed any contracts for the London Store Department and it was doubtful whether they could supply satisfactorily. In view of the urgency of the demand, and of complaints from the military authorities in India regarding variations in the shade of this material, it was decided to place the order with Messrs. James Harper & Sons, the next lowest tenderer who had recently made satisfactory supplies under another contract.
33 10 0 34 7 4	The indenting officer demanded a polystat specifying Mr. A. E. Dean as supplier. Competitive tenders were invited, and offers of equivalent apparatus were obtained at prices lower than Dean's. The indenting officer was informed, and he replied that Dean's tender should be accepted, as this make was known to be satisfactory.
96 13 0 99 1 10 102 5 0	Wm. Beardmore & Co., Ltd., offered delivery in from 3-4 weeks after the resumption of rolling early in January. None of the firms who tendered at a lower price could make any definite offer of delivery.

	The lowest tender was from the Wittekindwerke of Westhofen near Essen. This firm had not previously supplied screw couplings for Indian Railways and it was therefore decided to place only half the requirements with them as a trial order. The remainder was ordered from the next lowest tenderer, Messrs. Krupp.
15,090 0 0 (German). 208 9 2 (French).	Accepted on the grounds of quicker delivery. Half the quantity at each item was required to reach India in November, 1926, and the balance 2 months later. The lowest tenderer could not undertake to deliver the urgent portion in less than 3 to 3½ months, whereas the next tender (which was accepted) offered to deliver in about 4 weeks. Division between the two firms would not have been worth while.
None of the tenders at the lowest rates offered the full quantity of dog-spikes. If no regard had been paid to delivery the 7,000,000 spikes could have been purchased for £23,425 0 0 approx.	These were simultaneous tenders, and in communicating decision on the tenders, the indenting officer stated that it was essential that the whole of the dog-spikes should be delivered in India by the end of June, 1927, and requested that if possible the order should be divided between two or three firms. The order was divided between the five lowest tenderers, each receiving an order for the quantity he could be relied upon to deliver within the specified time.
£4,550 0 0	Tenders were invited simultaneously in India and in London, and details of the lowest tenders were cabled to the indentor. Presumably on account of the earlier delivery offered, the indentor selected the highest quotation. It was possible, however, to secure equal or better delivery at a lower price by dividing the contract between two tenderers and orders were placed accordingly.

As, however, the Carborundum Co. and the Universal Grinding Wheel Co., were known to be manufacturers of wheels of reliable quality, these firms were invited to tender in competition with Alfred Herbert, Ltd., the Agents in this country for Norton wheels. The two first named firms both tendered at about £49-12-0 lower than Alfred Herbert, Ltd. The quotations were therefore telegraphed to the indenting officer who replied that Norton wheels should be supplied.

SUBJECTS DISCUSSED BY THE CENTRAL ADVISORY COUNCIL OF RAILWAYS.

The Honourable Sir George Rainy (Member for Commerce and Railways) : Sir, I lay on the table a statement showing :

(1) subjects discussed by the Central Advisory Council for Railways ;

(2) Conclusions arrived at by the Central Advisory Council ;

(3) action taken by Government, for which the Honourable Sir Hari Singh Gour asked in his question No. 815, dated the 9th March 1927.

1. Local Advisory Councils	The memorandum regarding "Local Advisory Councils" was discussed and the following outline was provisionally agreed to :— (1) Title.—The new bodies should be known as "Railway Advisory Committees." (2) Constitution.—A separate Main Committee to be constituted for each Administration. Branch Committees should be formed at important places but it was considered desirable that the decision in this respect should be left to Main Committee in each case who would send on their recommendations for branches to the Central Advisory Council for approval. (3) Composition.—The Committee to consist of 12 members as follows :— (a) Agent—ex-officio Chairman. (b) Two Local Government Members to be nominated by the Local Government in whose jurisdiction the headquarters of the Railway was situated. (c) Three representatives of the Legislative Council of the Local Government in whose jurisdiction the headquarters of the Railway in question was situated.	The Government of India accepted all the recommendations excepting (a) the proposal that the formation of branch committees should be referred to the Central Advisory Committee, it being decided that this should be left to the Agent who will consult the Main Committee, if necessary, and (b) a proposal that for the Main Committee on the East Indian Railway both the Government of Bengal and Bihar and Orissa should each nominate one member instead of the Government of Bengal nominating both. The memorandum was revised accordingly and circulated to all the Railways and Local Governments. Railways were requested to take measures in consultation with the local Governments for the constitution of Committees.

Subjects discussed by Central Advisory Council.	Conclusions arrived at by Central Advisory Council.	Action taken by Government.
1922—contd.	(d) One Member from the Local Municipality or Corporation at the Railway Headquarters. (e) Five members representing industries, commerce and trade. It was recommended that members of the Central Advisory Council should not be debarred from membership of the L. A. Cs. and that Agents might invite their Heads of Departments to attend but in the capacity of Technical Advisers only. (4) Remuneration.—Non-official members should be paid Rs. 32 for each meeting attended. (5) Scope of duties.—The following subjects may be discussed :— (a) Alterations in Time Tables and Passenger services. (b) Alterations of rates and fares and changes of goods classification. (c) Proposals in regard to new projects and extensions. (d) Proposals in regard to new rolling stock. (e) Any matter affecting the general public interest or convenience. Questions of personnel, discipline and appointments will not be brought before the Committee.

2. State versus Company management	Majority was in favour of State Management	The matter was later discussed in the Legislative Assembly and in accordance with its recommendations the East Indian and the Great Indian Peninsula Railways have been taken over by the State.
3. Strategic Railways	The Railway capital budget should show under distinct sub-heads the expenditure proposed for (a) Strategic Railways, (b) other lines. As a necessary preliminary, the list of lines classed as strategic should be reconsidered in the light of lines constructed and worked mainly for military as distinguished from commercial purposes. In respect of Revised budget the existing procedure of showing separate figures of earnings and expenditure of strategic Railways should be maintained.	Recommendations fully given effect to.
4. Branch Line Policy	While agreeing that the Branch Line Terms could not be revised just then the Council was of opinion that if the Government of India were satisfied that any particular feeder line was urgently required in the public interest the question of encouraging the floatation of a Branch Line Company should be considered on its merits. (See also item No. 2 under 1925 below).	The Branch Line Terms have since been abandoned with the approval of the Central Advisory Council. See item 2 of 1925 below.
5. Separation of Budgets	The Central Advisory Council adhered to the decision of the Railway Finance Committee that the separation of budgets was not then a practicable proposition and that the question should be re-examined when conditions became normal and financial equilibrium was established.	No action on the part of Government called for then.
1. Constitution of a Rates Tribunal ..	After discussion it was agreed— 1. That the Rates Tribunal should be constituted and that until sufficient experience was gained to enable the Railways Act to be amended the Tribunal should be an investigating body only to deal with the following subjects :— (1) Complaints of undue preference—Section 42(2) of the Indian Railways Act.	The recommendation was accepted by the Government of India and the matter was referred to the Secretary of State for acceptance.

1923—contd.	(2) Complaints that rates are unreasonable in themselves. (3) Complaints or disputes in respect of terminals—Section 46 of the Indian Railways Act. (4) The reasonableness or otherwise of any conditions as to packing of articles specially liable to damage in transit or liable to cause damage to other merchandise. (5) Complaints in respect of conditions as to packing attached to a rate. (6) Complaints that Railway Companies do not fulfil their obligations to provide reasonable facilities under Section 42(3) of the Indian Railways Act.
2. Amendment of Railway Act to make travelling without tickets a cognisable offence.	After discussion it was decided that it was not advisable to amend the Indian Railways Act until all other possibilities for checking the evil had been tried.	The suggestion was accepted and the Railway Administrations were asked to furnish the Railway Board with particulars of the steps which had been taken by them to improve methods of ticket checking and collection.
3. Depreciation Fund	A memorandum on the proposed establishment of a Depreciation Fund for Railways was placed before the C. A. C.	A Railway Depreciation Fund has been formed.
4. Provision for New Construction ..	In the event of there being any savings on the Capital programme of Rs. 150 crores authorised for the rehabilitation and improvement of Railways in India during the five years ending 1926-27 after the work of rehabilitation and improvement had been provided for, such savings be utilised for remunerative projects, which should be taken up as and when they could be financed.	The recommendation of the Central Advisory Council was acted upon as far as possible. It was found that the full amount of the Capital programme was not likely to be expended within the quinquennium on open line facilities and the investigation of the prospects of projected railways promising an adequate return was undertaken and expenditure on the more important ones was provided for.

. Mr. Cole's Report	An Officer should be placed on special duty to make definite recommendations for the training of each class of employee and that preliminary negotiations should then be entered into with :— (a) Government of Bombay in respect to the Sydenham College of Commerce and Economics. (b) Government of Bengal with respect to the Bengal Engineering College.	Mr. Flatt, an Officer of the G. I. P. Railway, was placed on special duty and definite recommendations were drawn up. Negotiations with the Sydenham College were carried out but it was decided that the courses in economics could be more cheaply and as effectively be given at the Chandausi School. As regards the negotiations with the Bengal Engineering College, Sibpur, the recruitment scheme for the training of special apprentices for the Mechanical Engineering and Transportation (Power) Departments provides for a two-year course in higher mechanical training at Sibpur.
1. Separation of Railway Finance from General Finances.	The Central Advisory Council recommended that the question should be discussed by a Committee of the Legislature before it was finally placed before the House for discussion.	Steps taken as recommended which eventually led to the separation of Railway Finance from General Finances.
2. North-Western Railway Contract for Sleepers.—This was discussed under four issues :—
Issue No. 1.—In calling for a five-year contract for whole or part supply in October 1922, did Railway Administration exercise ordinary business prudence.	Railway Administrations would have been well advised to watch the course of prices for some time before entering into a long term contract and that in entering into a five-year contract when it did, the Railway Administration did not exercise ordinary business prudence.	The Agent, North Western Railway, was informed that the Government of India recognise that there is room for a fair difference of opinion and are not prepared to subscribe to the view that in concluding a five-year contract, the Railway Administration did not exercise ordinary business prudence.
Issue No. 2.—Should the whole contract have been given to Messrs. Spedding and Company.	The Railway Administration should not have given a monopoly to a single firm.	The Agent, North Western Railway, was informed that the Government of India consider that tenders for part supply should have been considered on their merits.

Issue No. 2.—contd.	Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas asked— (1) whether Spedding and Company had fulfilled their contracts in full and up to time, and (2) whether prices had been revised in their favour during the currency of any of the contracts.	Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas's questions were answered in full, the following is a brief summary :— (1) The firm had never let the North Western Railway down even when circumstances were known to be against them and when the rates agreed upon with them became unfavourable. The firm were seldom and then too to a very slight extent behind hand in delivering the contractual number of sleepers in a year. (2) Prices had been revised only once in their favour. The price was raised from Rs. 4-8-0 to Rs. 5 for one year in a five-year contract when the market rate per sleeper during that year ranged from Rs. 9-6-0 to Rs. 12-8-0.
Issue No. 3.—Should the terms have been varied after the acceptance of the contract.	The terms should not have been varied after the acceptance of the contract and the Railway Administration should not have called for tenders in a form which was entirely out of date.	The Agent, North Western Railway, was informed that the Government of India agree with the Central Advisory Council that the terms should not have been varied after the acceptance of the contract. Agent asked to take in hand the revision of the tenders form.
Issue No. 4.—Are there any specific points which form a consideration of this case, the Central Advisory Council might suggest for investigation by the Officers who are enquiring into the best method of obtaining sleepers in future.	1. Proper arrangements should be made for co-ordination between the Railway Department of the Government of India and the Forest Departments of Local Governments in the different provinces in the matter of sleeper supplies.	The Chief Commissioner explained that this matter had already been taken up and that the joint report of the Chief Engineer and a Forest Officer on the subject was under the consideration of the Board.

		The present position is that a Timber Advisory Officer who is a selected Officer of the Forest Department has been lent to the Railway Board to work on behalf of the Railway Department as their adviser in the matter of sleeper purchase and to act as an intermediary between Forest Owners or Departments on the one hand and the heads of the various branches of the sleeper pool on the other.
	2. The whole question of the powers of the Agents in the matter of the placing of sleeper contracts should be brought under review.	Sir Charles Innes promised that this question would be examined and brought up before the next meeting of the Central Advisory Council.
3. Technical training	No proposals in respect of Technical training were made at this meeting. But Rai Bahadur Lala Ramsaran Das complained of the paucity of Indians in the subordinates Traffic Service of the North Western Railway. Sir Charles Innes promised to investigate the matter.	The North Western Railway was addressed on the subject.
4. New Lines	See item No. 4 in 1923 (Provision for New Construction).
5. Stores Balances	The Chairman pointed out that as a result of a more detailed examination of the position it was now expected that the total estimated amount required to write down stores to the then market value would be Rs. 120 lakhs instead of 3 crores, as originally estimated. He invited the opinion of the Central Advisory Council on Government's proposal to approach the Assembly for a grant to clear off the balance outstanding for that year. After discussing the relative merits of writing down the value of serviceable stores in one instalment or over a period of years, the Central Advisory Council finally approved of Government's proposal.
6. Purchase of Stores	The Central Advisory Council discussed the question of the purchase of flexoid leather cloth and it was decided that a letter should be written to all Railways requesting that flexoid leather cloth be given a trial.	This was done.

	Two further inquiries were made: (1) whether the Chief Controller of Stores after bringing to the notice of the indenting Railway, for future guidance, any instance in which stores indented for are available in India, held up the next indent, and (2) whether it would be practicable for the Railway Board to get periodical statements of indents, say once in six months from the Indian Stores Department, of articles indented from England which could be obtained locally.	Sir Charles Innes said he would inquire of Mr. Pitkeathly on both points and asked that the matter be brought before the Central Advisory Council again. This was done on the 25th March 1925; see English Stores Indents for the continuation of this discussion.
7 Recruitment of Assistant Traffic Superintendents.	Mr. Neogy suggested that until the permanent scheme for recruitment of Assistant Traffic Superintendents was brought into operation, future recruitment should be made by a committee consisting of the Railway Board and representatives of the Central Advisory Council. It was pointed out that it was unlikely that any further recruitment would be made before the permanent scheme was introduced; but Mr. Neogy's suggestion would be considered.	Since the proposal made by Mr. Neogy at the Council meeting of September, 1924 no selections for appointment of Assistant Traffic Superintendents have been made.
1. Railway School of Transportation, Chandausi.	The only proposals were that no racial distinctions should be made at the School as regards messing arrangements and (2) that a Press notice should issue to let the Public know what was proposed to be done at Chandausi.	Both proposals have been given effect to.
2. Financing of Branch Lines ..	The proposed revised policy of financing branch lines company was approved.	The revised policy has been adopted.

3. Locomotive Building in India ..	The Chairman pointed out that owing to the transfer between the Railways of surplus locomotives on one Railway to another on which there was a shortage, it was anticipated that very few engines would be required during the next year or so and that these would be of numerous different types. It has been decided that the Director of Mechanical Engineering with the Railway Board, who was shortly proceeding to England on leave, should study the question of locomotive manufacture in England and verify the conclusion arrived at by the Tariff Board of the number of locomotives which it would be necessary to construct in this country in any one year to make the industry a success.	At a subsequent meeting held on the 22nd August, 1925, the Council was informed that Mr. Chase, Director of Mechanical Engineering, would go into the subject while on leave in England and would submit a Report. The Tariff Board in its report on locomotives proceeded on the assumption that "the economical production of locomotives requires that the unit of production must be about 200 locomotives per annum." "After considering the report made by Mr. Chase the Railway Board came to the conclusion that the assumption made by the Tariff Board was correct."
4. Sleeper Question..	This arose out of a previous discussion regarding the North Western Railway Contract for sleepers (see Issue No. 2 in 1924, North Western Railway Contract for Sleepers) when the Council put forward two specific recommendations in regard to the future arrangements for the purchase of sleepers by Railways, viz. :— (1) that proper arrangements for coordination between the Railway Department and the Forest Department should be made, and (2) that the whole question of the powers of Agents in placing the sleeper contracts should be brought under review. Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas also wished to know why the Railway Board did not accept tenders themselves.	Action as regards (1) was taken by the appointment of a Timber Advisory Officer (see Issue No. 2 in 1924 North Western Railway Contract for Sleepers). As regards (2) H. M. promised that the suggestion put forward by Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas would be considered. This was done. The Board were not able to accept the suggestion in its entirety, but Railways were asked to submit the following returns:— 1. Name of supplier. 2. Number of sleepers and kind (sal, deodar, cast iron, etc.)

Subjects discussed by Central Advisory Council.	Conclusions arrived at by Central Advisory Council.	Action taken by Government.
1925—contd.		3. Period of contract. 4. Price. 5. Name and owner's name, of the forest from which the sleepers are to be supplied. 6. Whether the supplier is owner or lessee of the forest or a dealer buying from owners or lessees. 7. Whether the accepted tenders were the lowest received. If not the reasons for non-acceptance of the lowest tenders similar statements if and when further contracts for additional contract suppliers are executed. As regards long term contracts the Railways were informed that while the Railway Board fully recognise that these may often be advisable and are sometimes necessary they desire that their prior approval be obtained before a contract is actually placed for a period exceeding a year.
5. (1) Recruitment and (2) Railway Board's Report on the recruitment and training of Railway Officers in India.	This was discussed at two meetings—one on the 25th March at which no proposals were made but at which it was agreed that in framing the scheme certain points which arose at the discussion should be considered.	This was done.

	At the 2nd meeting the proposals of the Councils were :—
	(1) that in Annexure B of the scheme [Transportation (Traffic) and Commercial Departments] no particular degree should be specified but that the Science subjects required for study and examination be stated.	This was done.
	(2) that nominations by Provincial Committees should be on the lines of the Indian Civil Service and that 10 candidates per vacancy should be nominated.	Both these proposals have been carried out.
	(3) that the question that local Services should be entirely abolished should be considered further and be brought up again for final disposal at the next meeting.	This question remains unsettled.
	(4) that for the Mechanical Engineering and Transportation (Power) Departments the Intermediate Examination in Science and Arts should be accepted.	This has been given effect to.
6. Functions of the Rates Tribunal ..	The Secretary of State intimated that Company Railways took objection to the proposal that the Rates Tribunal should be empowered to investigate the question whether rates were unreasonable per se. After discussion the Central Advisory Council recommended that in view of the doubt whether the Rates Tribunal would really be useful if this item were excluded from its functions further consideration of the subject should be postponed pending a further reference to the Secretary of State.	The recommendation of the Central Advisory Council was accepted and the matter was referred to the Secretary of State who agreed to the original proposal which was given effect to from 1st April 1926.
7. Further tenders for the supply of wagons under bounty.	The action taken by the Railway Board as explained in their memorandum was approved.	The memorandum dealt with the placing of wagons during the year 1925-26 under the bounty permitted by the Steel Industry (Protection) Act, 1924 and the reasons which actuated the Board in apportioning the wagons among the firms as they had done.

8. English Stores Indents	The arrangement made by the Railway Board with the Chief Controller of Stores was noted.	This arrangement referred to the submission by the Chief Controller of Stores on half-yearly statements showing the cases in which the Indian Stores Department has taken up with the Railway Indenting Officers, the inclusion in their English Indents of articles obtainable in India under the revised Stores Purchase Rules. The present arrangement is as follows :— State Railway indents are scrutinised by the Chief Controller of Stores, Indian Stores Department. If, as a result of the scrutiny, the Chief Controller is of opinion that any item included in the indent could, under the Stores Rules, be purchased in India he communicates his remarks and recommendations to the indenting officer, who is required to report the action he is taking in this matter within fourteen days. The Chief Controller's remarks on State Railways' indents and the replies of the Indenting Officers are discussed by the Chief Controller with the Railway Board at a meeting held once every month, and if it is found that any further action is necessary the Railway Board takes the matter up with the Railway Administration concerned.

1. Revision of State Railway Provident Fund Rule relating to the forfeiture of bonus.	The proposed revision of the rule was approved.	The revised rule has been given effect to.
2. Proposal to amend the Indian Railways Act to make travelling without tickets or with improper tickets a congnisable offence.	In the meeting held in March, 1926, the Central Advisory Council recommended the following points being brought to the notice of Railway Administrations :—
	(ii) Employing better ticket checking staff.	The Central Advisory Council's suggestions (i), (ii) and (iii) were communicated to Railways for consideration and action.
	(iii) Ensuring that booking facilities were adequate so that travelling without tickets was not due to difficulties in the purchase of tickets.
	In the meeting held in August, 1920, it was decided to defer consideration of legislation till the next session when the results achieved by the adoption of the Crew system of ticket checking introduced on the East Indian Railway would be known.	The Central Advisory Council's recommendation to defer legislation was agreed to.
	Association of assessors with District Magistrates in accident enquiries.
3. Formation of a Railway Staff College at Dehra Dun.	The Central Advisory Council agreed :—	The Board are progressing with the establishment of the College at Dehra Dun.
	(1) unanimously that a Railway Staff College was necessary.
	(2) by a majority that the site at Dehra Dun was suitable.
4. Association of assessors with District Magistrates in accident enquiries.	In the meeting held in August, 1926, it was decided by a majority of votes that Dewan Bahadur Rangachariar's proposal should be dropped.	The Central Advisory Council's recommendation was accepted.

PURCHASE BY THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA OF AMERICAN WAGONS DESTINED FOR RUSSIA.

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons (Financial Commissioner, Railways) : Sir, I have to lay on the table the information promised by me in reply to a question asked by Diwan Chaman Lall, on the 15th February 1927, regarding the purchase by the Government of India of American Wagons destined for Russia.

(c) and (d).—(1) The estimated cost of erecting and altering 900 covered wagons was Rs. 660-4-0 per wagon ; and the actual cost was Rs. 688-14-0 per wagon which is 4½ per cent. over the estimate.

(2) The estimated cost of erecting and altering 4,100 high sided steel trucks was Rs. 1,460 per truck ; the actual cost was Rs. 2,414-13-0 per truck. The difference between the original estimated amount and the amount paid to the firm was 65 per cent. over the original estimate.

Diwan Chaman Lall's supplementary questions.—No inquiry was made by the Audit Department or any other Department as the usual Audit and other checks that were applied indicated no irregularities.

ORDERS FOR WAGONS.

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons (Financial Commissioner, Railways) : Sir, I have also to lay on the table the information promised by me in reply to questions asked by Mr. B. Das, on the 1st March 1927, regarding wagon orders.

Question No. 670—

Question No. 671—

(b) The numbers of wagons, in terms of 4-wheelers, placed on the line, by State-owned Railways, each year, on account of additions and renewals, from 1919-20, are as follows :

1920-21	7,674
1921-22	7,549
1922-23	8,138
1923-24	13,474
1924-25	6,082
1925-26	10,215
1926-27	8,024

(b) The Government of India are unable to make any estimate. The introduction of improved facilities for carrying traffic, on which the Railway Board and Railway Administrations have been engaged in recent years, will enable a similar volume of traffic to be carried by a smaller number of wagons, and the volume of purchases will therefore depend on a development of traffic, the extent of which the Government of India are unable to forecast.

(c) The Honourable Member must refer to the evidence given by Sir Clement Hindley as a whole. He pointed out that it was very difficult for him to give any reliable estimate of the probable requirements during the next five years, or in fact of any year except the year immediately ahead ; that some Railways were getting very remarkable results in the better use of wagons, automatically reducing to some extent the additions necessary year by year; and that consequently it would probably be inadvisable for him to give any figures which might hereafter be used as part of a definite policy of the Railway Board of adding so many wagons a year. He also pointed out that at the time he gave evidence the Railway Board had only admitted the necessity of purchasing 3,000 wagons, both as additions and renewals ; that the State Railways (as opposed to Company Railways) were at the time rather over-stocked ; and that the 3,000 wagons, a figure which might be increased to 4,500, were practically all required for Company-managed Railways. He further explained that the figure of 7,500 wagons mentioned by him was merely an indication or idea of what annual additions plus renewals might be after five years' time, based on the information available at the time he gave evidence. Much has of course happened to modify the position since the end of 1923.

Question No. 675—

(b) The numbers of wagons for which orders were placed by State-owned Railways on account of both renewals and additions (in terms of 4-wheelers) are as follows :

1924-25	..	9,895
1925-26	..	6,423
1926-27	..	6,075
TOTAL	..	30,790

(c) 23,046 out of these were ordered from sources outside India.

ELECTION OF A MEMBER TO THE COMMITTEE ON PUBLIC ACCOUNTS VICE MAULANA A. H. NATIQUE.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett (Finance Member) : Sir, I move :

" That the non-official Members of the Assembly do proceed to elect a member to the Committee on Public Accounts in place of Maulana A. H. Natique who has ceased to be a Member of the Legislative Assembly."

The motion was adopted.

ELECTION OF A PANEL FOR THE STANDING COMMITTEE OF THE DEPARTMENT OF INDUSTRIES AND LABOUR.

Mr. President : The House will now resume further consideration of the following motion moved by the Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra on the 21st February, 1927 :

" That this Assembly do proceed to elect, in the manner described in the rules published in the Home Department Notification No. F.-49, dated the 22nd August, 1922, as amended by the Home Department Notification No. D.-794-C., dated the 30th January, 1924, a panel consisting of 9 members from which the members of the Standing Committee to advise on subjects in the Department of Industries and Labour will be nominated."

Mr. R. K. Shanmukham Chetty (Salem and Coimbatore-cum-North Arcot : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I beg to move : " That for the original motion " the following be substituted :

" That this Assembly do proceed to elect, in such manner as may be prescribed by the Honourable the President, a Committee consisting of 7 members to advise on subjects in the Department of Industries and Labour."

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett (Finance Member) : On a point of order, Sir. I should like to ask your ruling whether this amendment is within the scope of the motion and in order. I submit that it ought to be moved, if at all, as a recommendation to the Governor General in Council to change the rules under which this motion is made, and I would draw your attention.....

Mr. President : Which is the rule ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : The motion is :

" That this Assembly do proceed to elect in the manner described in the rules published in the Home Department Notification No. ...."

It is in the manner so described in those rules, of which I have a copy here, that a panel is required, and until those rules are changed, I submit that a motion to elect a panel is not a motion that can be amended in the manner proposed. I would draw your attention to the fact that in 1925 a motion similar in character was sought to be moved by the Honourable Member from Nagpur, Sir Hari Singh Gour, and your predecessor ruled that it was out of order.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar (Tanjore-cum-Trichinopoly : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : I submit that once this motion is before the House it is perfectly open to the House to amend the motion, because the motion before the House is :

" That this Assembly do proceed to elect in the manner described in the rules published in the Home Department Notification No. ....."

That being so, I submit that it is perfectly within the province of this House to say that this House will now proceed to elect in some other manner, namely, not by a panel but directly, the people that ought to advise on the subjects relating to the Department of Industries. What we say, Sir, is this, that so far as the question is embodied in a motion before the House and we are asked to pass a motion on the basis of which only the House can proceed to the election of any members to serve on the Standing Committee, it is perfectly open to this House to state in what manner it will constitute the Committee which it is asked to set up. Therefore, I submit the mere fact that the Notification prescribes a particular method by which we are asked to elect does not preclude this House from saying that we want to elect it by a different method, and this amendment is perfectly in order.

Mr. President : The Government ask the Assembly to give them a panel and the amendment says : " No, we shall not give you a panel ". Is that not so ?

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : We want to give a Standing Committee and that is the main object of this motion.

Mr. President : You say we will give you members of the Committee direct.

Mr. R. K. Shanmukham Chetty : The proposal before the House is that the House be called upon to elect a certain number of members to serve on a definite Committee.....

Mr. President : No, the proposal is that the Assembly should elect a panel from which the Governor General shall select certain members.

Mr. R. K. Shanmukham Chetty : But the substantive portion of the motion is that the House be called upon to elect certain members who will serve on this Committee—that is the substantive portion—and the election is sought to be held in the manner prescribed in the Home Department Notification. It is perfectly open to this House to say that it will elect the Committee not in the manner prescribed in that particular rule but in some other particular way.

Mr. President : It is not within the competence of the House to say, "We will elect it in a different way." It is open to the House to say, "We will not elect in the manner proposed by the Government." You can oppose that motion and negative it altogether, but it is not within the competence of this House to say : "We shall elect in a different manner from that proposed by the Government". Either accept the manner proposed by the Government or negative it altogether.

Mr. R. K. Shanmukham Chetty : It comes to this, that the Government have brought forward a proposal to elect a Committee in a particular manner, and is it not open to this House to say that the Committee shall be elected not in that particular way but in a different manner ?

Mr. President : Are Government bound to accept the decision of the House in the event of this amendment being carried ?

Mr. R. K. Shanmukham Chetty : But the Government have made a motion and it is for this House.....

Mr. President : If the amendment is carried, it can merely be a recommendation to the Governor General in Council. They are not bound to accept the motion embodied in the amendment. That being so, it can only come by way of a Resolution recommending to the Governor General in Council to amend that particular rule which lays down the manner in which these advisory committees are to be elected. It cannot come by way of an amendment to this motion.

Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya (Allahabad and Jhansi Divisions : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : I understand that three members are to be nominated out of the panel of nine which we are asked to elect. Instead of that will it be open to this House to elect only three members who are to be appointed and leave the matter there ? We know that three members are to be nominated by the Governor General for this Standing Committee. We desire that we should exercise that right by electing the men whom we want to sit on the Committee and, therefore, without amending the rules is it in the power of this House to elect only three or are we compelled to elect a panel ? We cannot be compelled to.....

1 P.M.

Mr. President : There is no question of any compulsion. The Assembly is not bound to elect a panel. They might throw out the proposal made by the Government of India. That is the only remedy open to the Assembly. They can say : "We do not accept your proposal. We do not want to elect a panel from which the Governor General will select certain members. We want to elect the members ourselves". For that purpose the legitimate course for the Assembly is to move the Governor General in Council by way of a Resolution recommending to them that they should alter the rules which prescribe the manner of election.

*Speech not corrected by the Honourable Member.

[Mr. President.]

*Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya : I suggest then that the House should refuse to elect the panel and leave the matter there.

Mr. President : Honourable Members are perfectly within their right in opposing the motion.

Mr. K. C. Neogy (Dacca Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : There is another matter to which attention has not been drawn. As matters stand these Committees are Joint Committees of both the Houses. Just as we elect panels, the other House elects panels also, and a number of members are taken from each of these panels for the purpose of constituting the departmental Committee. Do I understand my Honourable friend, who has given notice of this amendment, to hold the view that in future there should be no Joint Committees, but that only this House should have the exclusive privilege of electing departmental Committees ? That is a point on which I have not heard my Honourable friend making any submission and that, I submit, would arise also in connection with the point of order.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : I think the amendment is clear.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : I bow to your ruling. As you have ruled this amendment out of order, I have nothing more to say.

Mr. President : Mr. Neogy has raised some point on which he wants a reply.

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra (Member for Industries and Labour) : As you have decided that the amendment is out of order, no reply is required from Government.

Mr. President : Here is a non-official Member who desires some information in connection with this motion—I think the Government ought to give it.

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : So far as the Resolution goes a panel is elected by this House and a panel is elected by the other House. As a matter of fact the other House has already elected a panel and we are awaiting the election of a panel before we can form a Committee.

*Mr. R. K. Shanmukham Chetty : So far as my amendment goes, it is equally all right. I submit that what we propose is to send seven members of this Committee and the other House is perfectly at liberty to send seven members.

Mr. President : I have already ruled that the amendment of Mr. Shanmukham Chetty is out of order. He is perfectly entitled to oppose the motion. Does he wish to speak in opposition to the motion ?

* Speech not corrected by the Honourable Member.

*Mr. Varahagiri Venkata Jogiah (Ganjam-cum-Vizagapatam : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : I rise to oppose the motion, for the simple reason that it is always desirable for this House to elect members to serve on Committees rather than to allow the Government to nominate members. I therefore oppose this motion.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Sir, before I make my submission on this Resolution, I would ask for a ruling from you as to whether we would be in order in discussing the general principles regarding the constitution of all these various Committees which are proposed to be elected, namely, Committees in connection with the Industries and Labour, Commerce, Education, Health and Lands and Publicity Departments, or whether we are to confine ourselves to the merits of the particular Committee attached to the Department of Industries and Labour.

Mr. President : The Honourable Member should confine himself to the motion before the House now.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Then, Sir, I should prefer to make my submission on a subsequent motion.

Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya : Sir, I wish to draw the attention of the House to the reason which I take it underlies the opposition to this motion, and the desire which underlies also the proposal that we should elect not a panel out of which a certain number will be nominated but the members themselves. What is this Committee, Sir ? The Committee is a Standing Committee to advise on subjects in the Department of Industries and Labour. It is a Committee merely to advise. It is not a Committee which is given any final power of decision. It is not a Committee which is invested with the power of voting funds or making grants for particular industries or for labour organisations or for the benefit of labour. Cannot the Government show the courtesy to this House of asking them to elect three men whom we consider the best to advise Government on these subjects ? Must the Government ask this House to nominate three times the number from whom the Governor General in Council will elect three men whom he also considers to be competent to advise on these subjects ? I submit, Sir, that this much courtesy ought to be shown to this House that it should be asked to elect the men who it thinks are fit to advise on these subjects. If the Government cannot show us that courtesy, without meaning any disrespect, without showing any want of co-operation with them, we should decline the invitation to hamper them by nominating 9 and so putting the Governor General in Council to the trouble of considering which of the 9 are best fitted to be honoured with an appointment on the Standing Committee to advise the Department.

Mr. N. M. Joshi (Labour Interests : Nominated) : Sir, if the amendment of my Honourable friend Mr. Chetty had been moved I would have supported it, because I feel that an elected Committee would have been much better than a Committee appointed out of a panel. Still I am not one of those who will oppose the motion for the appointment of a panel. We have been electing members for the panel now for several years, and I do not know why we should refuse to elect members for the panel now. It would have been quite within our rights and it would have been quite proper for us to have insisted upon the members being elected, but if we cannot do that I think we should do the next best thing and elect the members for the panel. I have been a member of the Standing Committee for the Department of Industries and Labour, and I can say that that Committee has met several times and from the point of view of labour it has also done some good work

Mr. K. C. Neogy Sir, I find that general observations have already been made by the Honourable Members

Mr. President I thought the Honourable Member was not going to speak on this motion

Mr. K. C. Neogy Well Sir, in view of the fact that we are having a general discussion might I have your leave to make my submissions generally ?

Mr President Mr Neogy

Mr. K. C. Neogy Sir, I am afraid I am responsible for much of the unhappiness that these Standing Committees have been causing, both to the Government and to this House For, it may not be in the recollection of this House that it was I who in the winter of 1922 moved a Resolution for the appointment of such Committees, as a result of which these Committees came into being

Sir, when the reforms were first under discussion, proposals were put forward from the non official side, as also by the authors of the reforms proposals themselves, that there should be Standing Committees attached to the different Departments of Government in order principally to allow non-official Members to have an insight into the inner working of the Government machinery At one time the Government of India were very much opposed to this idea, but later they seem to have relented, and when the Joint Parliamentary Committee made a recommendation for the appointment of such Committees I may say that they had the concurrence of the Government of India for taking that step Sir, I shall try to refresh the memory of my Honourable friend, Mr. Crerar, particularly by referring to the evidence which Lord Meston (then Sir James Meston) gave before the Joint Parliamentary Committee on the Government of India Bill, and he will find that when he appeared before that Committee for the third occasion, on the 13th October, 1919, he said :—

" that in regard to the Standing Committees with the Government of India, the Government of India would ask that if those institutions are accepted by the Joint Committee, an exception should be made in the case of two Departments, the Army Department and the Foreign and Political Department "

It was thereafter that I made inquiries in this House in 1921 as to what the intentions of Government were in regard to this recommendation of the Joint Parliamentary Committee Strangely enough, the Government of India replied that they had no intention of having any such Committees at all, and thereafter I moved the following Resolution on the 19th January 1922 :—

" This Assembly recommends to the Governor General in Council that Standing Committees elected by Members of the Legislature be associated with the different Departments of the Government of India other than the Army and the Foreign and Political Departments."

In framing that Resolution I proceeded very closely upon the position which the Government of India had taken up in giving evidence through Lord Meston before the Joint Parliamentary Committee. Sir, my Resolution was however very stoutely opposed by the then Home Member, Sir William Vincent, but the House carried my motion in spite of such opposition, after a division. Sir, on that occasion I gave all the relevant extracts from the Government despatches and the Report of the Joint Parliamentary Committee on this question. I have no intention of recapitulating all that I stated on that occasion, but I will just refer to one or two points which have a direct bearing on the present matter. Sir, so far as the question of the constitution of the Committees was concerned, the Joint Parliamentary Committee contemplated a partially elected and a partially nominated Committee. This is what they stated :—

"Our idea is that the non-official Members of the Assembly and the Council of State might elect by ballot in proportion to their respective strengths two-thirds of the Members of each Committee, while the Government nominates the remaining one-third."

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : Is the Honourable Member quoting from the Report of the Joint Parliamentary Committee ? I am afraid he is in error.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : I am sorry ; I am referring to the Montagu-Chelmsford proposals. As a matter of fact the Joint Parliamentary Committee did not make any detailed recommendations with regard to this matter.

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : They did.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Not detailed recommendations. What the Joint Parliamentary Committee said in effect was :

"We want to leave it to the Government of India."

They left it to the discretion of the Government of India to determine the Committees' composition and the duties that should be assigned to them.

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : Is it the Government of India or the Governor General ? I am sorry the Honourable Member is so unkind. If he will read a previous passage of his speech, he will find out what the Joint Parliamentary Committee had said.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : The Honourable Member is drawing a distinction which to our mind is without any difference. Whether it is the Governor General or the Governor General in Council, so far as we are concerned, we find that there is very little distinction. However, Sir, I am not concerned with these small matters of detail. What we want is that these Committees should be allowed to function in the proper way, and the only way in which they can be useful both to the Government and to the people. Sir, when I moved my Resolution, I was not at all satisfied with the procedure that was laid down either in the Joint Parliamentary Report or in the Montagu-Chelmsford Report about the constitution of these Committees. That is the reason why I asked for entirely elected Committees, but the Governor General in Council thought otherwise and in giving effect to that Resolution of mine, they came to a compromise. They allowed both the Houses to have their election of nominees and they made their own selection of the members from those panels thereafter. Sir, it was certainly a departure from the recommendations of the Montagu-Chelmsford proposals. And my Honourable friend Mr. Shanmukham Chetty has every reason for being aggrieved at the manner in which the Government of India are departing from those recommendations. We have got experience of these Committees during these few years, and it is perfectly legitimate on our part now to demand that Government should seriously consider the desirability of revising the rules in regard to the constitution of these Committees. So far with regard to the composition of the Committees, but there is another point to which I want to refer and on which I base my ground for opposition to the motion. Sir, the Government of India, I must say, did not at any time make any secret of their opposition to the idea of these Standing Committees ; but one would have expected that after they had accepted the Resolution, even though partially, they should try to give effect to the intention of Mr. Montagu and Lord Chelmsford and also of the Joint Parliamentary Committee in regard to the work to be placed before the Standing Committees. But what do we find ? Well, before I charge my Honourable friend Mr. Crerar with having dropped the Home Department Committee altogether, I want to say that in justice to the Department with which we are dealing just now, it must be said that that is perhaps the only useful Committee we have got at the present moment. But, Sir, the other Departments, notably the Home Department, have not done anything to justify the constitution of these Committees, and I find that it is not proposed at the present moment to have any Committee attached to the Home Department at all. May I in this connection remind my Honourable friend Mr. Crerar of what Sir William Vincent said while opposing my Resolution on that occasion ? He said :—

"I myself think and thought for some time that in the Home Department a Committee to examine proposals for legislation generally would be of very great value."

I draw my Honourable friend's attention to that expression of opinion with the hope that he will revise his decision and see whether a Committee could not be appointed in connection with the Home Department to discharge this as also various other functions contemplated by the Joint Parliamentary Committee and the Montagu-Chelmsford Report. Sir, if Government are not willing to place work of sufficient importance before the Committees, if that be the attitude of Government, I would have no hesitation in voting against these Resolutions as a matter of principle.

Mr. Muhammad Yamin Khan (United Provinces : Nominated Non-Official) : On this question we have heard speeches and criticisms of different types which to my mind are not at all relevant when this motion is moved. As laid down by yourself, Sir, either this motion can be adopted or it can be rejected altogether.

The speeches which have been made here to-day ought to have been made when the question of amendment was being considered. These rules and notifications have been in existence since August, 1922, and the different Assemblies have been working accordingly. It was quite open to Honourable Members during this time to bring in a motion of amendment if they were not satisfied with the present system ; but they did not choose to do so. Now at a time when the question is whether this should be considered or whether there should be an election of a panel or not, this question of amendment has been introduced. I do not think that even the total rejection of this proposal is sound, because here in the Assembly we represent different parties, different ideas and different thoughts. If we do not have a panel, we will be treading on very dangerous ground. We have the Swaraj Party, the Nationalist Party and the Independent Party, and there are other Members who do not belong to any party at all. If we were only to elect a Committee from the Assembly, probably some of the Members who do not belong to the strongest party, although they may be quite efficient and quite capable of working on the Committee, may be ignored altogether.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : How will they get on the panel ?

Mr. Muhammad Yamin Khan : These Members have not got the slightest chance in a Committee of 9 members if we decide as Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya says, to elect three members and no more. I say it is absolutely impossible because there will be 9 nominations altogether. If the motion is to elect 9 members and if there are only 9 nominations from the Assembly, then they will be considered to be elected. Each party may be able to send three Members only, but the Swarajist Members may not be satisfied with the nominations made by the Nationalist Party. Probably the Independents will send three more. It is, in my opinion, absolutely impossible and impracticable to carry out the suggestion that has been made. It is always safe to elect more Members than are required to serve on a particular Committee. Out of these, the Government may select people of different thoughts, different ideas and different interests who might give sound advice, as is expected from this Committee. This is only an Advisory Committee, and as such it must consist of members representing different political shades of thought and political interests. I think the present system is very sound and all questions relating to its amendment are absolutely irrelevant. Therefore, Sir, I support the motion.

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : Sir, I am extremely grateful to my friend, Mr. Muhammad Yamin Khan, whom the way, I should like to congratulate on his maiden speech in this Assembly, for having attempted to divert the debate on to the proper channel. You, Sir, having ruled out of order the amendment proposed by my friend Mr. Shanmukham Chetty, it is hardly neeessary for me at this stage to discuss the propriety of the arrangements which were introduced by the Governor General in 1922, and I shall only make one general remark in connection with these arrangements. I am sorry my friend Mr. Neogy did not bring out the full position when he was attacking the present system a few minutes ago. The present system, as a matter of fact, follows the recommendation of the Joint Select Committee. I have not got the Report of the Joint Select Committee and I shall therefore quote from Mr. Neogy's own speech in this House which he delivered on the 19th January 1922. There he gives this as the quotation from the Report of the Joint Select Committee :—

> " It may even greatly assist the political education of India if Standing Committees of legislative bodies are attached to certain Departments of Government ; but we only express this opinion on the understanding that the appointment of such Committees, their position and the regulations which govern their procedure, shall be matters wholly and exclusively within the discretion of the Governor General."

That was the recommendation of the Joint Select Committee, who apparently came to this conclusion in spite of a different recommendation in the Montagu-Chelmsford Report and after consideration of the constitutional aspect of the case.

[Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra.]

Having said so much I shall now confine myself to my Resolution. Sir, in accordance with the usual practice—a practice which has been in force for five years—I asked for this panel in February last so that I might be in a position to form my Advisory Committee. As I mentioned in this House a little while ago, the other House had been kind enough to give me a panel.....

Sir Hari Singh Gour : They are always very kind to you.

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : The only objection, if I may say so, which this House might have had in giving me that panel was if it had any doubts about the utility of that Committee. Mr. Joshi has already said something about the utility of that Committee. My friend, Mr. Neogy, has been kind enough to admit that probably that Committee has some utility. I do not want to waste the time of the House by reading out the various important items involving questions of policy which were referred to that Committee in the last two years. The members who formed that Committee are fully aware of these subjects. They cover in fact various branches of work with which my Department has got to deal.

Now, I would ask the House to consider whether, because they do not like the present constitution of these Committees or because they do not like the panel system on grounds of high policy, if I may use that expression, it is fair to me that they should deprive me of the services of this Committee and compel me to go without the assistance of my Honourable friends like Mr. Joshi or Mr. Chaman Lall.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (Muzaffarpur cum Champaran : Non-Muhammadan) : Why don't you nominate direct ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : That is not a matter for discussion at present. The President having ruled the amendment out of order, it is hardly necessary for me to pursue further the propriety of the present arrangements. But as my friend Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh has raised the question, I shall just say a few words on the subject. As it is, in 1925 it fell to my lot for the first time to advise His Excellency the Governor General about the formation of the Committee to be attached to my Department. Now the Assembly elected a panel and the three gentlemen who headed the list were Mr. Chaman Lall, Mr. Joshi and Sir Walter Willson. I took those three gentlemen as members of my Standing Advisory Committee In 1926, the members who headed the poll were Sir Walter Willson, Sir Darcy Lindsay, Mr. Chaman Lall and Mr. Joshi. If I were to follow what my friend Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya was advocating a little while ago, I should have taken as members of that Committee Sir Walter Willson, Sir Darcy Lindsay and Mr. Chaman Lall, leaving out Mr. Joshi. Well, that shows that this panel system is very elastic. It enables me to put into that Committee people of various opinions from whom I can get the best assistance. That year I took, as a matter of fact, Sir Walter Willson, Mr. Chaman Lall and Mr. Joshi, leaving out Sir Darcy Lindsay, so that in both years I had on my Standing Advisory Committee a European member representing capital, my friend Mr. Joshi who represents labour, and my friend Mr. Chaman Lall who, though he has I believe large capitalistic connections, takes a good deal of interest in the welfare of labour. Now, it may be argued that my Committee was defective because the representative of capital was a European. I settled that when taking members from the other place. I got a panel from the other place and from that panel a representative of Indian capital was selected, and I also selected a politician with general experience which gave my Committee, if I may say so, a comprehensive outlook. I would ask the House again to consider the whole position before they become so unkind as to vote down my Resolution, because if that is done, I shall be left without any Committee at all, and I can assure the House that there are certain important matters on which I want to consult my Standing Committee as soon as it has been formed. The House will come to know about them from various questions which I will have to answer later on.

I think, Sir, I have dealt with the various points which have been raised by my Honourable friends who have already taken part in this debate, though I did not really want to deal at all with the reasons which actuated my friend Mr. Chetty to move his amendment, as that amendment was ruled by you, Sir, to be out of order. But having explained the position as fully as I have done, I would now request the House to withdraw their opposition to my proposal and to allow me to go on on the lines that I have gone on for two years. If they want to change the present rules, as the Chair indicated, it is open to them to bring in a Resolution and have the rules changed, though, as I have already pointed out, the change in the rules may not operate to the best interests either of the Executive Government or of this House.

Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya : May I ask, Sir, if the Honourable Member will give us the assurance that he will have this matter considered by the Governor General in Council and revise the rules so as to bring them into line with the recommendation contained in the Montagu-Chelmsford Report. That Report says.....

Mr. President : I cannot allow the Honourable Member to make a speech.

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : Well, Sir, the question of altering the rules can only be taken up if the House passes a separate Resolution on that subject.

Mr. President : The question is :

"That this Assembly do proceed to elect, in the manner described in the rules published in the Home Department Notification No. F.-49, dated the 22nd August 1922, as amended by the Home Department Notification No. D.-794-C., dated the 30th January 1924, a panel consisting of 9 members from which the members of the Standing Committee to advise on subjects in the Department of Industries and Labour will be nominated."

ELECTION OF A PANEL FOR THE ADVISORY PUBLICITY COMMITTEE.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar (Home Member) : I move :

" That this Assembly do proceed to the election, in such method as may be approved by the Honourable the President, of a panel of 14 members from which 7 members of the Advisory Publicity Committee will be nominated."

Before speaking briefly on this motion, I may perhaps be permitted to say one word of a personal character. This is the first occasion on which I have had the honour of addressing this Assembly. I am aware that it is the custom of the House to extend to its newest Members a great measure of patience and indulgence, and, as it falls to me to have the very heavy responsibility of speaking for the first time from this Bench, I trust and hope that I shall have a very large measure of the forbearance of the House. I do not think it is necessary for me to say much on the motion which stands in my name. The question of the expedient of a panel for Advisory Committees has been discussed at considerable length. The particular Advisory Committee which is the subject of my motion is in material respects different from the Standing Advisory Committees attached to Departments which have been the previous subject of discussion, and I should like to observe that the practical considerations of convenience, which were so lucidly explained by my Honourable colleague Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra, apply probably in much larger measure to the Publicity Advisory Committee. The questions which come before this Committee are of a very general nature, and it is particularly desirable that the representation of different kinds of opinion and different kinds of interest should be as comprehensive as possible. The discretion allowed to Government by the panel system does give them a certain facility for securing the representative character of the Committee, and, as in matters of publicity it is extremely important that different points of view should be carefully and duly considered, the particular expedient which is adopted in this motion, as in the motion which has preceded it, is one which from a practical point of view is so convenient that I trust it will commend itself to the House. I hope the House will pass the motion which stands in my name.

The motion was adopted.

ELECTION OF A PANEL FOR THE STANDING COMMITTEE OF THE COMMERCE DEPARTMENT.

The Honourable Sir George Rainy (Member for Commerce and Railways) : Sir, I rise to move :

" That this Assembly do proceed to elect, in the manner described in the rules published in the Home Department Notification No. F.-49, dated the 22nd August, 1922, as amended by the Home Department Notification No. D.-794-C., dated the 30th January 1924, a panel consisting of 9 members from which 3 will be nominated to serve on the Standing Committee to advise on subjects in the Department of Commerce."

I do not propose, Mr. President, to say more than a word or two about this Resolution. The Honourable Mr. Crerar has mentioned that it is customary for new Members to trust a great deal to the indulgence and the kindness of the House. I certainly have the utmost confidence that the House will bear with my youth and inexperience and will not deny me the protection for which I ask. All I wish to add is that there are certain subjects, particularly those connected with merchant shipping, on which I think it is very important and very necessary that those who have to administer the Commerce Department should have the assistance of an Advisory Committee. I move the motion that stands in my name.

Mr. K. C. Neogy (Dacca Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : May I know, Sir, how often the Committee attached to the Commerce Department has been summoned in the past, and what are the subjects that were placed before it for discussion ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I am afraid, Sir, I am not in a position to give the Honourable Member the information for which he asks, but I would again plead for indulgence on the ground that I at any rate was not personally responsible for the number of times they met.

Mr. N. C. Kelkar (Bombay Central Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : I stand to oppose this motion. I wanted to speak on the very first motion just now made, but it was generally thought to be a somewhat useful Committee. At the same time of course we did vote against the motion in order to put down on record our emphatic protest against the manner in which the members of these Advisory Committees are selected. My objection to this procedure of appointing these Committees is that it is almost a double dose of distrust—double distillation of distrust, in this sense that, in the first place, they are only Advisory Committees ; and I say distrust is shown because you do not give them any definite executive authority, no authority at all. You only want these people to act as an Advisory Committee. Secondly, you do not want to give the Legislature the power to elect their own representatives even on an Advisory Committee. This particular Committee is nothing more than an Advisory Committee, and, as has been pointed out by my friend over here just now, the Committee also is very seldom convened. An Advisory Committee is like the King's advisers. The King summons them only when His Royal Majesty finds that he wants advice, and we find that His Royal Majesty is never in need of advice because he always wishes to exercise his own will. And it is the same case with the Advisory Committees here. They have no definite powers ; no rules of business are prescribed for the Committees. The Committee has no initiative because it can attend only when called. But we have accepted even this position. I want this to be marked and noted. Our objection is not mainly at this moment to the advisory nature of these Committees and their powers, but that apart from that, they are appointed from a panel and not by direct election. And that is why I call it, again, a double dose of distrust. Now you place the Legislatures in an awkward position. I really cannot see the logic of it. You appoint Select Committees by direct election from both the Legislatures, and the fate of Bills, very important Bills, sometimes hangs on these very Select Committees. They shape, they give proper form to, the Bills and in many cases, I should say mostly, Bills are passed in the Legislature as they are shaped and formed in the first instance by the Select Committee. Now you can trust the Legislature to directly elect people to sit on Select Committees for shaping the destiny of Bills, but

I wonder how you cannot trust the Legislature to elect their representatives on an Advisory Committee, which meets very rarely and can only give advice. Even supposing wrong representatives have been chosen : after all, how far does it go ? It does not go very far. They are only to give advice. Theirs is not to enforce or put into practice any executive powers of authority. Well, if they are wrongly chosen, who is responsible, who takes the consequences ? It is the Legislature. We have been told that Heads of Departments are so gracious and so wise that they are always prepared to condone the defects and the mistakes of the Legislature ; and in one instance we were told that though the Legislative Assembly elected wrongly, our friend over there very wisely made a certain selection, meaning that the result of the election was very bad, but he used his discretion and his wisdom in order that particularly good and useful people only might be taken. But I would reply to him on that point. He does not remember perhaps that the result of that particular election which he mentioned must have been in that particular fashion simply because of the panel system of election. It shows on the face of it that the Assembly, as a whole, did not take any keen interest in that particular election. If the Assembly had taken any interest in that election, I say certainly that the result would not be as he mentioned it to this House. Then again there is this point. You have got to consider it from the point of view of the Legislature. We elect here a panel of 8 or 9 people, and who ultimately decides who will be taken out of that panel ? The Governor General. Now why should there be this slur, a double slur, a slur in the first instance upon the choice we make and a slur in the second instance upon those people who have been left out ; and these people can be slurred over, they can be left out, without the Governor General giving any good or any reasons at all. You put up a list of 8 or 9 people as having been elected by the Assembly as fit for the business. The Governor General says, " I will not have this man ", and he uses his pen to strike out the name of that man. What is the guarantee that the Governor General will properly exercise his discretion ? It has been pointed out by Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra that this discretion has been given to the Governor General by the Joint Parliamentary Committee. But after the discretion was given, we can say that that discretion has not been properly used, and therefore we claim this ultimate right and this definite right for the Assembly itself for making definite and direct elections to these Advisory Committees. Either the Government wants advice or does not want advice. After all, this is a mere recommendation and Government have voluntarily taken it upon themselves to seek advice. Well, if they had not chosen to seek advice, the matter would have ended, as we cannot force the hands of Government. But if they really want to seek advice, let them do it sincerely, let them trust us to give the proper advice through properly accredited representatives. So the result is this, that we elect certain people as a panel and certain selections are ultimately made by the Governor General ; and not only those who are left out are humiliated but in a way the panel itself is humiliated by the omission.

3 P.M.

Now, it has been said that this method has worked well. It has even been stated that this is a better method than the other method of direct election. Now, if the Honourable Member sincerely and honestly believes in that statement, why should he not go further and propose that even for Select Committees for Bills to be elected by the Legislature this method should be followed and that there should everywhere be panels ? If nomination out of an elected panel is the better method, why not apply it to each and every case ? Why do you apply it to only those cases of Advisory Committees ? In my opinion, absolutely no case has been made out for selecting this method of having a panel out of an elected body. It has been said that sometimes representative men are necessary for advisory bodies. The assumption seems to be that if you give the Assembly the power to make direct elections to advisory bodies, then representative men will not come in. Here again I fail to see the reason. Why should not the Assembly be trusted to choose properly elected representatives, if it can be trusted to choose similar representatives on Select Committees for Bills ? I really fail to understand this distinction between the formation of Select Committees for Bills and the formation of Advisory Committees for giving advice. There may be some other criterion for having these Committees only as advisory bodies and for having Select Committees as bodies with some definite authority and power. That is not my point. I have already stated that I have accepted one position, though I do not agree that it is the best position. I go further and say that even these Committees which are to co-operate with the Departments and give them advice should also have certain rules of business, some powers of initiative, and at least limited executive powers in the initial stage. But that is not my position now. I am quite content at this moment to have the Committees as Advisory Committees, but my argument is that once having accepted that position, why do you force upon us the other distrust also ? Why don't you trust our Advisory Committees elected directly by ourselves ? This is an argument which applies, I suppose, to all similar motions that are now before the House, and so if I have spoken on this one, I have spoken for all.

Mr. M. S. Aney (Berar Representative) : Sir, the ground on which I want to oppose this motion is a very simple one. The principles on which this Committee is formed have been sufficiently discussed and my Honourable friend Mr. Kelkar has also shown how absurd it is to appreciate the principle of panels in the case of these Standing Committees when it is rejected as useless in the case of Select Committees and other Statutory Committees elected by this House. I do not want to touch that point. I want to emphasise the fact that, if the Government of India really want Advisory Committees, then they must be given sufficient opportunities and scope to discharge their functions during the period for which they are in existence. Last time I put a few questions with a view to elicit information regarding the functions and work performed by the various Committees appointed under these Notifications. At that time the answer given on the floor of the House was that the information was not available and it would be collected and supplied to the Member. Subsequently it was supplied to me ; unfortunately I have not got the typed copies of the reply given with me at present. But I have gone through them and I find that the one Committee that has functioned and has done some important work was the Committee for which a motion was tabled by my Honourable friend Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra and which was carried by the House shortly before. As regards other Committees, some of them never met at all. It is certainly an insult to this House to call upon it to proceed to elect a Committee and never to make use of that Committee. That being the position, there is a legitimate feeling of resentment. I think Members would be well advised in rejecting the proposal altogether as a mark of protest and indignation. Sir, I oppose the motion.

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub (Rohilkund and Kumaon Divisions : Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I do not oppose my friend the Honourable Mr. Kelkar when he says that the system of the election of these Committees is full of defects, but, I submit, that by rejecting the motion which is before the House we will not amend the system of election. What would be the result if we reject this motion ? The result would be that there will be no Committee at all. Now, Sir, is not the constitution of our Assembly full of defects and anomalies ? What sanctions have our Resolutions got ? They are not binding on the Government. There are certain other things in the constitution of this Assembly which are full of anomalies and defects, but we cannot remove those anomalies and defects by rejecting motions. The proper system of amending the rules is by moving Resolutions. If my Honourable friend Mr. Aney or any other Members consider that the present system of election of these Committees is not sound, they can move a Resolution to the effect that the rules of election should be amended, but it is not proper and desirable to reject motions like this.

As regards the working of the Advisory Committees, if any Department does not hold meetings of their Committees they are to be censured in the House. Motions ought to be moved in the House that such and such members should be censured for not calling the Committees of their Departments. There, too, Sir, by rejecting the motions for the election of the Committees, we will not be removing the defects. For these reasons I support the motion before the House, and I respectfully submit that the Honourable Members who are opposing this motion will consider the question in this light. They should move Resolutions, they should censure the members, but they should not deprive some Members of the Assembly, at any rate, from a small power of advice which they exercise by being elected to these Committees.

Diwan Chaman Lall (West Punjab : Non-Muhammadan) : Sir, I would not have risen to talk upon this subject had it not been for the speech of my Honourable friend Maulvi Muhammad Yakub. I think he was rather confused about the subject. He started off by stating that the only remedy we possess is to move Resolutions, but ended up by saying that we cannot compel the Government to listen to us because the Government is under no obligation to respect any Resolution that we might pass. The contradiction is there. But I want to assure the Honourable Member in charge of this Department that we do not wish him to carry away the idea that we are not anxious to have Standing Committees for the Departments. In fact, the legitimate development of the committee system seems to me to be this that we must have a complete right to elect our own men and not leave the choice to the Member in charge of the Government of India. What is the object of these Committees ? The object is merely to associate the Legislature with the Executive in order that both the Executive and the Legislature might benefit. What we are pressing for is a development of this system which was laid down by the Joint Committee. I have here the statement made in the Montagu-Chelmsford Report. They also say the same thing, namely, that their intention is to familiarise the elected Members of the Legislative Councils with the processes of administration. What we want is the right to nominate our own men. The Assembly should have the right and no invidious distinction should be drawn, as has been pointed out by my Honourable friend Mr. Kelkar, as to the Members who ought to be put upon these Committees at the sweet will of the Member in charge.

*Speech not corrected by the Honourable Member.

[Diwan Chaman Lall.]

Now, we may have a very good Member in charge, like my Honourable friend Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra, who might adjust all sorts of differences, but we cannot depend upon the vagaries of the Government where you are a Minister to-day and to-morrow you are gone. What we want is the right to say that these are the men whom we trust to carry out the wishes of the Assembly in regard to the various processes of administration which will be considered by the Standing Committees. It is with that object that we desire to censure the Government for not having brought in this proposal themselves. It was up to them—it is not up to us—to have brought forward such a Resolution. Our Resolutions are mere scraps of paper. It is up to the Government to amend the rules and introduce a different system for the selection of these Standing Committees, and I hope that the Honourable Member, as a result of this discussion, will move the Government of India and bring in a decent system for the selection of these Standing Committees.

Mr. H. G. Cocke (Bombay : European) : Sir, I only want to say two words. I am glad that the last speaker has spoken for this Resolution because it is certainly very essential that the Commerce Department should not go without a Committee. The Honourable Member distinctly said that he was all in favour of Committees, and therefore I do not see how he could do anything else than support this motion.

Sir, the Commerce Department, I think of all departments, is one which requires an Advisory Committee, and it would be most undesirable that that Department should be left without one. I am not quite clear whether the motion intends three members only to be nominated to the Standing Committee. I understand however from the discussion to-day that it is not necessary that the same three shall be on the Committee indefinitely. The Commerce Department deals with diverse matters, such as cotton yarn, lighthouses and insurance ; and it is obvious that we do not want the same three men dealing with these three subjects ; one man may be an expert on cotton yarn, but may not be an expert on lighthouses ; and therefore I should like to be enlightened on that point. But in any case I do trust this House will follow the good example set before lunch and vote for this Committee.

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I hope, Sir, that the members who have spoken on the other side of the House will pardon me if I reply only briefly to what they have said. After all there was a considerable amount of discussion this forenoon on the motion for the appointment of a Committee for the Department of Industries and Labour ; and in substance most of the arguments used—though not perhaps all of them—were brought forward in the course of that debate and were, I think, convincingly replied to by my Honourable friend, Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra.

Mr. Kelkar's first complaint was that these Advisory Committees had no executive authority. This point can, I think, be very briefly disposed of, for he admitted himself that he was not seriously asking that the Committee should be given executive authority at the present time. We are now at the advisory stage, when the scheme is that non-official Members of the Legislature should be associated with the Departments to put them in touch with the business going on in each Department. And indeed if it came to the stage, Mr. President, at which Committees with executive authority were elected by this House, I am inclined to think that we should have passed on to a new stage of constitutional development where the question of the exact powers of the Committees would not be of such importance as Honourable Members think at present.

Now, as regards the question whether this House should itself elect the members of the Advisory Committee or whether we should adhere to the panel system by which the Governor General selects from a larger number, a smaller number to sit on the Committee, Mr. Kelkar referred to the analogy of the Select Committees of this House which, as everybody knows, are entirely elected by this House. Another instance that might be quoted is the Standing Finance Committee. These Committees, the Select Committees and the Standing Finance Committee, are definitely committees to advise this House about the discharge of its own functions, whereas the Advisory Committees with which we are dealing are to be constituted through the action of this House to advise the Executive Government. Now, I think that at once makes a distinction between the two cases. They are not completely analogous ; and since there are two parties concerned, namely, the party who advises and the party who receives the advice, I think it can be argued very fairly that the party who receives the advice is also entitled to have a say in the selection of the advisers.

Mr. Satyendra Chandra Mitra (Chittagong and Rajshahi Divisions : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Why not nominate them all ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : " Why not nominate them ?" For the very simple reason that there are two parties to bargain and I see no reason at all why the Assembly should not participate in the selection.

Now, Sir, the only other point to which I wish to allude is the complaint that the Advisory Committee was very seldom convened. I think possibly, if that be the case, that it may have been due to the nature of the business which was principally occupying the attention of the Commerce Department at that time. I cannot speak from knowledge, because I do not know the circumstances. But I would like to repeat what I said in my opening speech that, as far as I can see, there are a good many subjects likely to come before the Commerce Department in the next year or two, particularly on the mercantile side, on which I have no doubt at all that it will be extremely useful to the Commerce Department, and I hope not altogether unprofitable to Members of the Assembly, to have an Advisory Committee

Mr. President : The question is:

" That this Assembly do proceed to elect, in the manner described in the rules published in the Home Department Notification No. F.-49, dated the 22nd August,

[Mr. President.]

1922, as amended by the Home Department Notification No. D.-794-C., dated the 30th January, 1924, a panel consisting of 9 members from which 3 will be nominated to serve on the Standing Committee to advise on subjects in the Department of Commerce."

The motion was adopted.

ELECTION OF A PANEL FOR THE STANDING COMMITTEE FOR THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, HEALTH AND LANDS.

Mr. A. R. Dalal (Secretary, Education, Health and Lands) : Sir, I move the following :

"That this Assembly do proceed to elect, in the manner prescribed in the rules published in the Home Department Notification No. F.-49, dated the 22nd August, 1922, as amended by the Home Department Notification No. D.-794-C., dated the 30th January, 1924, a panel consisting of 9 members from which the members of the Standing Advisory Committee to advise on subjects, other than Indians Overseas and Emigration, dealt with in the Department of Education, Health and Lands, will be nominated."

Sir, after what has fallen from the more senior Honourable Members on this side of the House, I do not wish to say anything further, except to mention that we have found the advice and help of our Standing Emigration Committee, which we frequently consult, of the greatest help to us. I trust, therefore, that the House will not deny us similar advice and assistance from this Committee. Sir, I move the motion that stands in my name.

The motion was adopted.

Mr. President : I may inform the Assembly that for the purpose of election of members to the Public Accounts Committee, the Standing Advisory Committee for the Department of Education, Health and Lands, and the Advisory Publicity Committee, the Assembly office will be open to receive nominations up to 3 p.m. on Friday, the 19th August, and the election, if necessary, will take place in this Chamber on Monday, the 22nd August. The nominations for the Standing Advisory Committees for the Department of Industries and Labour and the Department of Commerce will be received by the Assembly Office up to 12 noon on Monday, the 22nd August, and the election, if necessary, will take place in this Chamber on Wednesday, the 24th August. The elections will be conducted in accordance with the principle of proportional representation by means of the single transferable vote.

THE NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS (AMENDMENT) BILL.

APPOINTMENT OF MR. K. C. NEOGY TO THE SELECT COMMITTEE vice THE REVD. DR. E. M. MACPHAIL, RESIGNED.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett (Finance Member) : Sir, I move that in place of the Rev. Dr. E. M. Macphail, Mr. K. C. Neogy be appointed to the Select Committee on the Bill further to amend the Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, for a certain purpose.

We are unfortunate, and I am sure many in this House will agree with me, in that Dr. Macphail is no longer a Member of this House. It should like to take this opportunity of expressing my own gratitude for the services which he has rendered to India, both in this House and outside. Being without Dr. Macphail on this Committee, we are without a Chairman, and it is in these circumstances that I move that in place of Dr. Macphail Mr. K. C. Neogy be appointed.

The motion was adopted.

THE GOLD STANDARD AND RESERVE BANK OF INDIA BILL.

PRESENTATION OF THE REPORT OF THE JOINT COMMITTEE.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett (Finance Member) : Sir, I present the Report of the Joint Committee on the Bill to establish a gold standard currency for British India and constitute a Reserve Bank of India.

THE IMPERIAL BANK OF INDIA (AMENDMENT) BILL.

PRESENTATION OF THE REPORT OF THE JOINT COMMITTEE.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett (Finance Member) : Sir, I present the Report of the Joint Committee on the Bill further to amend the Imperial Bank of India Act, 1920, for certain purposes.

THE REPEALING BILL.

Mr. W. T. M. Wright (Secretary, Legislative Department): Sir, I beg to move for leave to introduce a Bill to repeal certain enactments. The object of this Bill, Sir, is to remove a good deal of obsolete matter from the Statute-book in order to facilitate the publication of a new edition of the General Acts. There is nothing in the Bill which calls for any particular remark at this stage, and I therefore move my motion.

The motion was adopted.

Mr. W. T. M. Wright : Sir, I introduce the Bill.

THE INDIAN TARIFF (AMENDMENT) BILL.

The Honourable Sir George Rainy (Member for Commerce and Railways) : Sir, I rise to move for leave to introduce a Bill further to amend the Indian Tariff Act, 1894.

The object of this Bill can be explained in a very few words. The Tariff Board which was appointed to inquire into the depression in the cotton textile industry put forward certain proposals for the exemption from duty of articles of machinery and mill stores. These proposals were considered by the Government of India, and in a Resolution, dated the 7th of June last, they announced their intention of asking the Legislature to remove the 2½ per cent. duty on machinery and also the duties on some, but not all, of the mill stores recommended for exemption by the Board. This Bill is intended to give effect to the decision of Government. But, in addition to the articles enumerated in the Resolution of the 7th June last, it is proposed to remove altogether first, the 2½ per cent. duty on printing machinery and materials, on the ground that its retention would lead to administrative inconvenience, and second, the duties on certain additional articles of machinery and mill stores, namely, bobbins and pirns, roller skins and roller cloth, clearer cloth and sizing flannel, the inclusion of which was strongly advocated by the Mill-owners Associations. Finally, the Bill also makes provision for another proposal which was announced during the course of the last two or three days, namely, the reduction of the duty on artificial silk yarn from 15 to 7½ per cent.

[Sir George Rainy.]

Sir, I move.

The motion was adopted.

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : Sir, I introduce the Bill.

THE INDIAN TARIFF (COTTON YARN AMENDMENT) BILL.

The Honourable Sir George Rainy (Member for Commerce and Railways) : Sir, I move for leave to introduce a Bill further to amend the Indian Tariff Act, 1894, in order to safeguard the manufacture of cotton yarn in British India.

The Textile Tariff Board, Mr. President, found that owing to the night work of women, which in British India is prohibited by law, the Japanese cotton mills were able to produce cotton yarn at a lower cost than the Indian mills. The difference amounted to 10 pies per pound for a mill spinning an average of 20*s*. and 16½ pies per pound for a mill spinning an average of 32*s*. The bulk of the cotton yarn imported into India which competes with Indian yarn is of the intermediate counts from 31*s*. to 40*s*., and the quantity of yarn imported into India of counts lower than 30*s* is quite small. At present all imported cotton yarn is subject to an ad valorem duty of 5 per cent. What is proposed in the Bill is that up to the 31st March, 1930, the duty should be fixed at 5 per cent. ad valorem, or one and-a-half annas a pound, whichever is the higher, and that this duty should be applicable to yarn imported from all countries. The effect will be that yarn, the value of which does not exceed Rs. 1-14-0 a pound, will pay duty at one and-a-half annas a pound, but if the value exceeds that limit, i.e., Rs. 1-14-0 a pound, it will be collected at 5 per cent. ad valorem as at present. Approximately, the one and-a-half annas duty will be about 10 per cent. ad valorem at the present price of yarn of the counts of 31*s* to 40*s*.

There is one other point which perhaps I had better explain. It is expected that the new law making the night work of women illegal in Japanese cotton mills will come into force from the 1st of July, 1929. By the end of that year all yarn produced during the period that women were allowed to work at night should be off the market. For this reason it is proposed that the one and-a-half annas duty should remain in force only up to the 31st of March, 1930.

I do not propose to-day, Sir, to say anything further. There will be other opportunities, and I believe it to be in accordance with the practice of this House, that at the stage of introduction, a brief statement, sufficient to indicate exactly what is proposed, is all that is expected from the Mover.

The motion was adopted.

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : Sir, I introduce the Bill.

THE BAMBOO PAPER INDUSTRY (PROTECTION) BILL.

The Honourable Sir George Rainy (Member for Commerce and Railways) : Sir, I move for leave to introduce a Bill to amend the law relating to the fostering and development of the bamboo paper industry in British India.

This Bill, Mr. President, proposes to do three things. In the first place, it is necessary to remedy a serious defect in the present law. The Bamboo Paper Industry (Protection) Act, 1925, imposed a protective duty of one anna a pound on printing paper but exempted newsprint which was defined as paper containing not less than 65 per cent. of mechanical wood pulp. The intention was that all paper which contained less than 65 per cent. of mechanical wood pulp, or contained no mechanical pulp at all, should pay the protective duty. It has been held, however, that as the Act is worded, paper containing no mechanical pulp was not subject to the protective duty but only to the 15 per cent. revenue duty. It is proposed in this Bill to amend the Act so as to carry out the original intention, and also to make certain provision for the retrospective collection of the protective duty on printing paper which has been imported on payment only of the lower duty at any time since the Bamboo Paper Industry (Protection) Act came into force. This amendment of the law is absolutely necessary because, unless it is made, the protection for paper breaks down altogether and becomes of no effect.

In the second place, a doubt has arisen whether the proportion of 65 per cent. mentioned in the Act should be applied to the whole weight of the paper including the loading or only to the fibre content. This question was referred to the Tariff Board who have recommended that it should apply to the fibre content only. It is proposed in this Bill to give effect to that recommendation.

In the third place, it has been found in the case of certain classes of writing paper that the protective duty is frequently less than the 15 per cent. revenue duty would be. There is no reason why the revenue that might have been collected at the revenue rate should be loss to Government, and it is therefore proposed that for the future writing paper should pay a duty of one anna a pound or 15 per cent. ad valorem, whichever is higher.

The motion was adopted.

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I introduce the Bill.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar (Home Member) : Sir, I have been given to understand that it would be more conducive to the convenience of Honourable Members opposite if the motion* which stands in my name as item No. 12 were put down for a later date, and I, therefore, do not propose at this stage to move it.

*"That the Bill to make provision to enable volunteer police forces to be constituted temporarily and employed locally for the purpose of preserving the public peace and protecting persons and property, and to define the powers and duties of such police, be referred to a Select Committee consisting of Maulvi Muhammad Yakub, Mr. J. M. Dunnett, Mr. M. Keane, Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar, Mr. M. R. Jayakar, Dr. A. Suhrawardy, Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru, Mr. Abdul Haye and the Mover, and that the number of members whose presence shall be necessary to constitute a meeting of the Committee shall be five."

THE INDIAN BAR COUNCILS (AMENDMENT) BILL.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar (Home Member) : I move that the Bill to amend the Indian Bar Councils Act, 1926, for certain purposes, be taken into consideration.

It will be within the recollection of the House that when the Bill, which is the Indian Bar Councils Act, was first introduced into this House it contained provisions to regulate the seniority and rights of pre-audience of members of the Bar. The discussion on those provisions revealed a considerable amount of difference of opinion. It was therefore decided that they should be excluded from the Bill, which was passed without them, that they should be circulated for opinion and that, in the light of the opinions received, a measure, amended if necessary, should be introduced to give effect to that part of the Bill. The provisions which were in the original Bill, on circulation did evoke a very considerable amount of dissent in various quarters and it appeared that on the whole there was a preponderance of opinion in favour of adopting in substance the proposals on this point of the Indian Bar Committee Report. The purpose of the Bill which I now ask the House to take into consideration is to give effect substantially to the recommendations of the Bar Committee. I do not think that I need go through these provisions in detail as they are adequately explained in the Statement of Objects and Reasons.

Briefly, the effect of clause 2 of the Bill will be to enact that the existing state of affairs with regard to seniority and rights of pre-audience will not be disturbed ; that is to say, the members of the Bar who now have a certain seniority will not, by reason of any provision of this Bill, be deprived of that seniority. In respect of gentlemen who may hereafter be admitted under the terms of the Bar Councils Act to practise at the Bar, their seniority will be determined by the date on which they were so admitted or, if they have been called to the Bar, by the date on which they have been called to the Bar, if that is earlier. There is one slight amendment to the Act which is contained in clause 3 of the Bill which has been inserted in order to give effect to a criticism on a point of drafting which was raised by an Honourable and learned gentleman from Madras. I do not think I would usefully detain the House by dealing at greater length with what is after all a very simple Bill and one which in its present form will, I hope, commend itself to the House. I move that the Bill be taken into consideration.

The motion was adopted.

Clauses 3 and 2 were added to the Bill.

Clause 1 was added to the Bill.

The Title and Preamble were added to the Bill.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I move that the Bill be passed. In making this motion I want to make only one observation and that is that in the event of this Bill being passed by this House and by the Council of State in due course and receiving assent, it is the intention of Government to bring the Act into operation at as early a date as practicable.

The motion was adopted.

Mr. A. R. Dalal (Secretary, Education, Health and Lands) : Sir, I beg to move that the Bill further to amend the Indian Merchant Shipping Act, 1923, as reported by the Select Committee be taken into consideration.

The genesis of the measure was explained by Mr. Bhore at the last Session, when he moved that the Bill be referred to a Select Committee. The Report of the Select Committee is happily unanimous. They have not made any very important changes in principle and the few minor changes that they have made they have explained so clearly in the Report that I do not think I need take up much of the time of the House in explaining them. They have considered the question whether, when a steamer company has reported to the Pilgrim Officer the price of a ticket, it should or should not be allowed to reduce the price, and I think they have rightly decided that the companies, if they so wish, may be allowed to reduce the price of the tickets and I do not see any reason why the poor pilgrims should not get the benefit of the reduction in the price of the tickets whenever the companies deem fit to do so. The second change that the Select Committee has made is to add a proviso to section 209 (c) to provide that when certain pilgrims have got compensation for delay at a particular port they should not receive compensation more than once for a consequential delay of the same period at other ports at which the ships touch. They have added a new clause 209 (d) in order to enable the steamship company to substitute a vessel of the same class and of the same carrying capacity instead of any particular vessel which may have been delayed through any cause.

I now come to the question of the exclusion of the port of Calcutta from the proposed measure, which was touched upon by Sir Walter Willson at the last Session. At that time Mr. Bhore informed this House that there would be another opportunity to test the suitability of the port of Calcutta as a pilgrim port, namely, during the present Haj season. I have collected figures of the number of pilgrims and ships that sailed from the port of Calcutta both during the season of 1926 and during the present season. I find that during 1926 only 882 pilgrims embarked from the port of Calcutta as against 8,042 pilgrims belonging to Bengal and Bihar and Orissa who embarked in that year from the port of Bombay. This year 2,117 pilgrims embarked from the port of Calcutta as against 12,000 from Karachi and 21,000 from Bombay. On the return journey no ships touched the port of Calcutta at all because all the Hajis prefer to disembark at Karachi or at Bombay rather than undergo the hardship of the longer journey to Calcutta. The object of the measure is to relieve the hardship on the poor pilgrims who are performing their religious duties which is caused by these delays at the various ports, and I submit, therefore, that it will be merely perpetuating the hardship if we exclude the port of Calcutta from the restrictions imposed by this measure. I therefore trust that the House will agree with the Select Committee that it will be better to run the risk that the port of Calcutta may go out altogether and that the opening of it may become inoperative owing to the unwillingness of the companies to run ships, rather than the certainty that the poor pilgrims will be subjected to hardship owing to delay. With these remarks I commend the Bill for the favourable consideration of the House.

Maulvi Mohammad Shafee (Tirhut Division : Muhammadan) : Sir, my object is not to raise any difficulty in the passage of this Bill to-day, which has at last been pushed to this stage. But there is one point which I want to bring most prominently to the notice of the Honourable Member in charge of the Bill. It is in regard to the length of time before which ship owners shall have to advertise the proposed date of sailing from any port. The Bill as framed does not prescribe any time within which ships will have to sail after being advertised. It leaves this important item to be determined by the rules framed by the Government under the Act. The point therefore remains to be decided later on and to be decided by authorities who have so far shown very little concern for the extreme inconvenience to which pilgrims to the Hedjaz are put for reasons which can very easily be remedied by a little attention on their part. That has been my trouble. With a sympathetic man at the head of affairs this and many other points could be left to take their own course. But in my opinion it is in the interests of both the ship owners and the intending pilgrims that the fact should be widely known to the people in the interior of India that there is a statutory provision for the advertisement of the date of sailing, say a month before the actual date of sailing, and that there is a statutory obligation on the ship owners to keep to that date. I pressed this point before the Select Committee and the predecessor of the Honourable Member in charge of the Bill, whom I must thank for his interests in the subject matter of the Bill which has been pushed so far, gave me a verbal assurance that the decisions of the Government of India in framing the rules would not be swayed by any consideration of the interests of the ship owners only, who being organized will be strongly represented at the time of the decision of the point but will be guided by the just and equitable considerations of the inconvenience of both the ship owners undertaking the job and the intending pilgrims to the Hedjaz. Since then I have been trying to gauge public opinion on that point, and I have been consulting gentlemen concerned and bodies interested in this matter. I have not found anyone who does not agree with me. The general desire is that the minimum length of time should have been disclosed in the Bill itself. But I have been told that the Government have been able to bring forward this Bill after such a long time because of the great difficulties they had to overcome in persuading the shipping companies to assent to the principle involved in the Bill. It is really a step in advance and I do appreciate it. This aspect of the question cannot be ignored. There are no doubt two parties concerned in the affair, and the interests of both ought to be considered. The ship owners of course do not want to be tied down to a statutory provision in this respect : they want it to be left to the rules. I think, therefore, I should wait and see the working of the rules in this respect, and be content at this stage by reminding the Honourable Member in charge of the Bill to see that the rules are framed not in the interests of the ship owners but in the interests of both parties concerned.

Mr. President : The question is :

"That the Bill further to amend the Indian Merchant Shipping Act, 1923, as reported by the Select Committee, be taken into consideration."

The motion was adopted.

Clauses 2, 3 and 4 were added to the Bill.

Clause 1 was added to the Bill.

The Title and Preamble were added to the Bill.

Mr. A. R. Dalal : Sir, I beg to move that the Bill, as amended, be passed.

The motion was adopted.

STATEMENT OF BUSINESS.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett (Leader of the House) : Sir, with your permission, I desire to make a statement regarding the Government business for next week. On Monday, the 22nd of August, after the elections fixed for that date, motions will be made to refer to a Select Committee of the House the Bill further to amend the Indian Tariff Act, 1894, in order to safeguard the manufacture of cotton yarn in British India, the Bill to amend the Indian Tariff Act, 1894, in order to remove or reduce the customs duties on certain machinery and materials of industries, and the Bill to amend the law relating to the fostering and development of the bamboo paper industry in British India. On Wednesday, the 24th, after the conclusion of any business outstanding from Monday, the 22nd, it is proposed to make a motion to take into consideration, and, if that motion is carried, to pass, the Indian Divorce (Amendment) Bill which was introduced in this House in Delhi. Motions will thereafter be made to refer to a Select Committee the Code of Civil Procedure (Second Appeals) Bill and to circulate for the purpose of eliciting public opinion thereon the Bill to amend section 96 of the Code of Civil Procedure. A further motion will, if time permits, be made to take into consideration, and, if that motion is carried, to pass, the Repealing Bill which has been introduced to-day. As Honourable Members are already aware, Tuesday, the 23rd, has been allotted for non-official Bills and Thursday, the 25th, for non-official Resolutions.

MOTION FOR ADJOURNMENT.

REPRESENTATION OF INDIANS ON THE ROYAL COMMISSION TO CONSIDER THE FEDERATION OF KENYA AND OTHER EAST AND CENTRAL AFRICAN COLONIES.

Mr. K. C. Roy (Bengal : Nominated Non-Official) : Sir, I beg to move an adjournment of the business of the House for the purpose of discussing a definite matter of urgent public importance, namely, " the necessity of the Government of India taking urgent action to secure the appointment of an adequate number of Indian representatives on the Special Commission announced by His Majesty's Government to be sent to Africa to deal with the question of federation and future policy with regard to the Colonies in Eastern and Central Africa, in view of the vital interests of the Indian community in these Colonies involved therein."

Sir, I beg to thank the Members of the House for giving me permission to move this very important motion. Although the motion is restricted to a very narrow issue, in order to enable the House to appreciate the full implications of the motion, you will forgive me if I make a brief retrospect of the position of Indians in East Africa.

Mr. President : The Honourable Member must remember that he has got only 15 minutes.

Mr. K. C. Roy : In 1923 a similar motion was discussed in this House and two prominent European Members had their say about the position of Indians in Kenya. I am not going to give my own views. But I shall quote an authoritative verdict from the findings of the Sanderson Commission. The Sanderson Commission in 1910 wrote :

"Emigration to the coast of the Protectorate from Arabia and India has existed for several hundreds of years. It took place even before the Portuguese occupation at the close of the 15th century."

The House will now know that we were there in the 15th century ; we were there as settlers and traders. Then, Sir, I shall read another extract from the same report, showing the part which India played in making Kenya and East Africa an integral part of the British Empire.

This is what the Report says :

"It may be safely affirmed that the presence of a considerable number of Indian inhabitants has been and continues to be of material advantage to the British administration of the Protectorate."

Sir John Kirk expressed his opinion that but for the Indians we should not be there now. He added that it was entirely through the Indian merchants that they were enabled to build up the influence that eventually resulted in their position. This, Sir, is the most authentic verdict and should dispose of, once for all, the cock and bull story which was related to this House by two European Members, Sir Reginald Spence and Sir Frank Carter. Now, Sir, what was the Indian position in 1910 ? This is what the Sanderson Commission wrote :

"The total Asiatic population is now estimated at 25,000 against 2,000 of Europeans and Eurasians."

This does not include Goanese.

What was the position in 1924 when I was a Member of the Committee which was sent to London to examine the position ? The European population had gone up from 2,000 to 12,000 and the Indian population had gone down by a couple of thousands. I have mentioned this point only with a view to obtain an explanation and I look to my friend Mr. Dalal to satisfy me. My own inference is that it is entirely due to the apathy and negligence of the Indian Government to put forward our case, and the hostility of the settlers to our ambition in East Africa. Now, Sir, this was the position before 1910.

Shortly after 1910, what was the position ? There came the Great War and, what was the part that India played in the Great War ? It is a matter of recent history and I need not weary the House with the details. We played a very important part in East Africa in keeping that part of the country free from enemy war operations. We also played a very important part in Tanganyika. And what was the result ? We got the White Paper of 1923 as our reward. You know the fight that took place. You know the humiliation to which my esteemed countryman Mr. Sastri was subjected even at the India Office. The Government of India was very careful ; we had a masterful Viceroy. But what did he do ? Lord Reading told His Majesty's Government that he accepted the underlying principle of the White Paper that the interests of the natives should be paramount and the abandonment of the policy of segregation but reserved further consideration of all other matters. I want to know what the Government of India have done in respect of the White Paper of 1927. Have they accepted or rejected it ?

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru (Agra Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : We cannot hear the Honourable Member on this side.

Mr. K. C. Roy: I am sorry ; my voice is very small.

Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya (Allahabad and Jhansi Divisions : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Address the non-official Benches.

Mr. K. C. Roy : I want to find out what the Government of India have done in respect of the White Paper of 1927 and I expect an answer from the official Benches.

Then, Sir, what happened in 1921 ? The Kenya Government produced a Bill—The Kenya Immigrants Regulation and Employment Ordinance. This was to restrict the immigration generally and of Asiatics in particular. What was the so-called object ? Because, it was in the interests of the native population, and the British Imperial Government was the trustee ! The Committee went over to London. Luckily for us, Mr. Thomas had become the Secretary of State for the Colonies. We placed our case before him and he gave us a very patient hearing, and we have not heard of the Bill ever since. About that time the question of the federation came up. It was brought by the head of the East African Association whose name is familiar to most of the Parliamentarians. He is a brilliant man. His name is Sir Sydney Henn. He moved his motion in the House of Commons in April 1924. But we were there and our first duty was to examine the possibility of that federation. We submitted our report both to the Secretary of State as well as to the Government of India. I hope some day the Government of India will place these reports on the table of this House. Sir Sydney Henn, whatever else he is, is a very clever Parliamentarian. He never thought of pushing the federation scheme so long as the Labour Party was in power, because Mr. Thomas made a definite declaration, while speaking on that motion, that he was in favour of largely introducing the West African system of administration into East Africa and that he was opposed to South Africanise East Africa. I am quoting from memory and I have not got the Hansard before me. All that we were able to achieve in 1924 was not due so much to our own efforts as it was to the personality and political insight of Mr. Thomas, and to whom I, from my place in this House, desire to publicly acknowledge the debt which India owes to him. Then what happened ? The short-lived Labour Ministry went out of office and then came the Baldwin Ministry. The Baldwin Ministry has one characteristic—it is absolutely Imperial ; it has no use for coloured races. Look at their policy in China, in Persia and also in East Africa. What have they done ? At least the first Ministry of Mr. Baldwin decided that the trusteeship for the natives should be entirely in the hands of the Agents of His Majesty's Government. Now, the position is that the trusteeship is to be held by the agents of His Majesty's Government as the immigrant communities include Indians. In the Legislative Council of Kenya there is a majority of Europeans and minority of Indians, quite disproportionate to the population. We have also the threat of an Emigration Restriction Bill. Possibly, as a matter of policy, we may be asked to accept a part of the trusteeship. And how have the prospective trustees behaved ? What have they done all these years ? I will read an extract from the evidence given by a very distinguished civilian of the Kenya Government, whose name is Mr. W. McGreror Ross :

"The largest single grant to an individual was about 100,000 acres (155 square miles) to Lord Delamere in 1903. This was a leasehold land paying a rent of ½d. an acre a year on a 99 years' lease. In 1915 the Crown Land Ordinance grants the right to convert this term to a 999 years' lease. The largest grant to a syndicate was 500 square miles."

Lord Delamere and others who profess to be the trustees of the native population there had no hesitation in alienating these lands from the poor natives for their own plantations. This is the way they are carrying out their trust and to talk of trusteeship to my mind on the part of the Baldwin Government is mere hypocrisy. Then again, so long as there are these two fundamental laws in East Africa, one under which 75 per cent. of the native population are registered as labourers, and another, the Ordinance governing the conduct of masters and servants with a big leaning towards the master himself for a Government who have countenanced all this sort of legislation for so many years, to go out and talk to the world of trusteeship is a thing which will never go down with the Members of this House. We are there as middlemen ; we have done our duty by the British Government ; we have done our duty by the natives. We were there long before the Englishmen came there and we will remain there as long as the Indian Government back us up. Now, this is the trusteeship. And if I were advising the Government of India I should certainly advise them to refuse this trusteeship with thanks.

4 P.M.

Now, Sir, I come to another matter. I come to this federation. What is this federation ? It is a federation of Governments as well as the federation of the white colonists, and a federation of white races means the dominance of Kenya by whites ; and nowhere in East Africa or over the greater part of Central Africa is racial hatred, jealousy and animosity so dominant as in Kenya. It is the Kenya whites who rule the roost. Is the Government of India prepared to accept that position ?

Then again, Sir, the federation includes the mandated territory of Tanganyika. We Indians are signatories to the original covenant of the League of Nations. We have equal rights in Tanganyika, but there is already racial discrimination both in legislation and in administration in Kenya ; the same will be introduced in no time in Tanganyika. Is my Honourable friend, Mr. Dalal, prepared to accept this position ?

These, Sir, are some of the reasons which have induced me to move this motion for adjournment.

I wish, Sir, now to say a few words about the position of Indians in East Africa. We are the largest immigrant community in the whole of East Africa. Of course it is very difficult to get accurate statistics, because the Colonial Office has a very nice way of compiling statistics—"Asiatics so many, Europeans so many." But we can rely to some extent upon the statistics for the territory of Tanganyika where the Indians are put down definitely as being 10,000. I know that we are more than 22,000 in East Africa. I need not go into the population figures of Zanzibar where the Indians predominate ; and in Uganda we have a very large Indian population, but no statistics are available. In Nyasaland we have about 600 Indians. In East Africa, to the best of my recollection, we have a large volume of trade. We could not get any figures, however, though we tried to get some in 1924. In respect of East Africa what do we find ? In 1922, 19 per cent. of the total trade imports into Kenya and Uganda came from India. The Colony affords in particular an important market for Indian cotton piece-goods and for Indian bags and sacks. India also took no less than 70 per cent. of the total domestic exports of cotton. This is only a very small fraction of the trade which we carry on in East Africa and in Central Africa. Thus, on historical, on political as well as on commercial grounds, we hold a unique position both in East Africa and in Central Africa.

I think, therefore, Sir, that it is incumbent on the Government of India to make their position clear in respect of the new policy. We want to know exactly what they are going to do—accept it or reject it. As I have told the House, Lord Reading was particularly careful ; he accepted the underlying policy of the declaration of 1923 ; the result is a federation. And that underlying policy was that the interest of the East African natives should be paramount. I am, therefore, anxious to find out from the Government Benches as much information as possible on the subject. I am also equally anxious, considering our position and our enormous stake over there, that the Government of India should make a representation to His Majesty's Government that India should be adequately represented by representatives of the people on the forthcoming Commission, and that they must try and get the terms of reference considerably altered. No terms of reference would be acceptable to us unless they conform to the declaration of the citizenship of Indians made by the Imperial Conference.

I now formally move the motion that the House do now adjourn.

Mr. President : Motion moved :

" That the House do now adjourn."

Mr. A. R. Dalal (Secretary, Education, Health and Lands) : Sir, in spite of, I have no doubt, the very well meant efforts of my Honourable friend to drag me into the limelight within a few hours of my taking the oath in this Assembly, I refuse to be drawn. There is nothing in the motion as it is now worded to which the Government of India need take exception. The Government of India would agree to convey the substance of this debate to the Secretary of State.....

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar (Tanjore cum Trichinopoly : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Would they back it ?

Mr. A. R. Dalal : As for the various points on which the Honourable the Mover has challenged me, it will be supererogatory on my part to give him any reply or to make a general statement when the Honourable Member, who is in charge of this Department, is on the floor of the House, and I would leave it to him to make a general statement.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Sir, we have been told on the authority of His Majesty's Government that there are many problems of a similar character in the East and the Central African territories which ought to be considered by a Commission. There are, we are told, questions relating to the development of transport and communications, customs tariff and scientific research which ought to be treated on the same lines and thought out by the same authority. For this purpose they have appointed a Commission with rather wide terms of reference. Now, one might ask, what is there in this fact to disturb India ? What is there to indicate in this appointment of a Commission that the rights solemnly promised to Indians by the White Paper of 1923 would in any case be jeopardised ? Now, in dealing with this question I shall refrain, as far as possible, from giving my own views and rely on the opinions of British statesmen themselves. Indeed, I would rely on the language used in the White Paper itself and on the opinions expressed by the Colonial Secretary in the debate on the Colonial Estimates. Now, one of the terms of reference to this Commission is to find out how " to associate more closely in the responsibilities and trusteeship of Government the immigrant communities domiciled in the country ". It is thus seen that the question is not one simply of the federation of the East and the Central African Colonies, for these Colonies might be federated and yet there might be no question of increasing the share of the European community settled in any of those Colonies in their government. It is this question, namely, whether the immigrant communities should be given a larger share in the administration of the Colonies where they are settled, that is at the root of the feeling that has been aroused throughout India by the appointment of the Commission under discussion. Now it may be said that His Majesty's Government have deliberately included in their terms of reference the question of giving a share in future government not to any one community but to all the immigrant communities and it might be thought therefore that in any arrangement that might be proposed in future, Indians would have their due share. On this point I would appeal not to the opinion or statement of an Indian, for that might be thought to be prejudiced, but to the opinion of Mr. Thomas who was Colonial Secretary when the Labour Government was in power in 1924. After saying that he felt that the settlement arrived at in 1923 " has been deliberately upset by the changed policy which has been introduced," he added :

" I do not hesitate to say that, if ever the question arises as to what part in Government the native or the Indian can play, there will be no more enthusiastic supporters than my friends on these benches. But that is not what the people who are responsible for the agitation mean. No one knows that better than the right hon. Gentleman (that is the Colonial Secretary) because, when I turn for some definition of what all this means and is intended to mean by those responsible for the agitation, I find in the East African Standard of the 1st January that the situation is dealt with in this way.

' Only by grappling the mandated territories to the other British territories by political and economic co-ordination and by the provision of adequate transport links between north and south will there be any proper safeguard against the dangers that Tanganyika, despite the declarations of the present Privy Council, may once more be cut out from the group of territories, which by all natural considerations, will eventually form a great East African Dominion or Federation of States. In the formation of that political and economic entity of the future, white settlement in Kenya must play a major part. We have in this country the only developed centre of Western civilisation in the territories, and, if the benefits of European civilisation are to be extended to East Africa as a whole, the centre of the group, the main control of policy, and all the external influences upon European and native policy must radiate from Kenya, where the principles of development of the subject races through contact with Western ideals have long been established and tested '."

And after giving this quotation, he went on to say :

" We can only conclude that it is this kind of speech and this agitation which are responsible for the changes that are made."

Another Member, Sir Robert Hamilton, taking part in the debate showed that the fears entertained by Mr. Thomas were perfectly true. Speaking of the White Paper under discussion and contrasting it with the White Paper of 1923, he said :

" It envisages the association with us of people of our race who are living in East Africa."

And these and the fears given expression to by this belief is further strengthened by the opinions expressed by Mr. Amery himself. Speaking of the question of federation he said that it was desirable that when it was considered, it should be thought out not as an isolated question but in relation to the future development of constitutional government in the African territories. He then dwelt on the characteristics of East Africa and said that while it was not possible that the whole of it should become a white man's land, it was certain in view of the climatic conditions prevailing in certain parts of that territory that Europeans would settle down permanently in those parts. To quote his own language, he said :

" But over considerable tracts of land the white man will stay for a number of years where he can settle and bring up his family, and thus acquire a real patriotism for his country, and in course of time become responsible for the conduct of affairs."

Speaking further in the same strain he said that it was undesirable that Europeans should be prevented from taking a share in the government of the African territories, for there was a fear that if they were not associated with the responsibilities of government and trusteeship, then when the time came for handing over the Government to them, they might be quite unprepared to consider administrative questions from the point of view not of the white community but of the entire population of the African territories. But, he went on to say :

" If, on the other hand, you bring that community, a community of a very fine type of men inspired by British ambitions, earlier into a share of responsibility ; if you make them see something of the work of government and the responsibility of government from the inside you will breed a race of men to whom in the fulness of time this House may be able to hand over its trusteeship without any fear that it will be dishonoured."

I could give further quotations to show that the people referred to as those on whom fuller responsibility might hereafter be conferred are no other than men of the British race. We are aware, Sir, that it has been repeatedly said that His Majesty's Government adhere to the policy outlined in the White Paper of 1923 and that the rights then promised to Indians would not be taken away from them. Now, in view of the quotations that I have given, and even more, of the trend of affairs both in this country and outside, it is not possible to take such declarations at their face value. But even if it were possible to believe in the sincerity of these declarations, we must ask not that we should be allowed to remain where we were in 1923 but that if the constitutional position of the East and Central African territories is going to be improved, Indians must be given the same economic and political opportunities as men of a different race who have settled down in those territories. If this is not done, it would be idle to pretend that the position of Indians would remain the same as in 1923. As the night follows the day, if we were left where we are and more power were placed in the hands of Europeans, our position would deteriorate and deteriorate considerably, and in the very near future, we should have to face all those questions which we thought had been settled for an appreciable time in 1923, for instance, questions with regard to the possession of land, of residential and commercial segregation, and even the emigration of Indians to East Africa. It is for these reasons that we ask that Indians should be represented and adequately represented on the Commission that has been appointed by His Majesty's Government. In Kenya itself which is regarded as the dynamic centre, if I may say so, of East Africa, the Indian population is more than twice as much as the European population, and if His Majesty's Government sincerely believe in the policy which they preach to the self-governing Dominions and the policy embodied in the resolution passed by the Imperial Conference of 1921 with their concurrence and support, then they ought to see that the Indian representation is no less than the European representation, for that is the only guarantee that questions affecting Indians would be considered from an Indian point of view. Now, we know that the Secretary of State for India would be represented on the Commission by one member. We do not know what the strength and composition of the Commission will be, but in any case I venture to think that one representative of the Secretary of State or the Government of India is utterly inadequate. In the second place, I am sure that Honourable Members at least on this side of the House will agree with me in thinking that the representatives chosen by Government ought to be Indians, preferably those who take part in public affairs. My meaning is that the Indians who are chosen to represent Indian interests on the Commission should be Indian public men. I have no desire to speak against the service men, for I know very well the services rendered to the Indian community by the Honourable Member who headed the Indian Delegation to South Africa. (Cheers.) But the South African question was a question in which we had the entire sympathies of the Government of India on our side, while here we have a question in which, no matter what words the British Government might use, their innermost sympathies would be against us and on the side of the white settlers. It is necessary therefore that we should be represented on the Commission by men who will not be restrained by any official rules or etiquette from giving full expression to their views and who would be able fearlessly to state the Indian point of view however unpalatable it might be either to the British authorities or to the Indian Government.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : If I rise to say a few words on this motion, it is only to draw attention to the fact that by reason of your ruling its scope has been narrowed.....

Mr. President : It does not look like it.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : We are not in a position to say all that we feel on this most vital question affecting our fellow-countrymen in Eastern and Central Africa. Sir, the real crux of the whole situation seems to me to be this. In 1923, His Majesty's Government, mainly because of the difficulty of arranging what may be called responsible government, in which the whites only can have a major share, decided not to grant responsible government and laid down a policy in regard to the native races which they say holds the field even to-day. In 1923, His Majesty's Government said that they were not going to give responsible government to East Africa for the reason that the bulk of the country is in the hands of native races for whom they are holding the position of an exceptional trustee. In all Colonial constitutions, before federations were established, there have always been clauses which reserved expressly to the Imperial Government the right to deal with native affairs. That was a fundamental part of every Colonial constitution, which is self-governing and therefore in respect of a constitution which had been becoming self-governing, the Government took special care to say that, so far as native affairs especially in East Africa are concerned, they cannot delegate the trusteeship which is in their hands into the hands of the white population. That implies a definite proposition and a proposition which has been accepted and acted upon in all Colonies, namely, that the Colonial whites have throughout been considered by the Imperial Government as people who cannot be safely entrusted with the duty of looking after the native whom they have gone out to exploit. So, the Imperial Government have always recognised that moral duty. Now, Sir, the position that has been reached is this. These East African whites as well as the whites in the other Colonies having had to accept the position that, in so far as native races are concerned, the trusteeship solely vests in the Imperial Government until the natives themselves according to the Imperial Government's declared policy become able to take part in the self-Government of those territories, it was not safe for them to leave it to the Colonial whites there to look after native affairs. The trusteeship cannot be shared. That was the proposition which, I take it, was laid down in 1923. Now, Sir, barely four years have elapsed and the Government White Paper has been at extraordinary pains to make out a case for reopening a question which was definitely closed in 1923. They say that among other things that have happened there have been conferences of Colonial Governors, there is research to be done, there are different customs duties, there are various other matters, and therefore, this federation question has to be reopened, because there has again been recently a conference of Colonial Governors, there has been a European Commission and all of them now want to say to the Imperial Government " You shall not have the sole trusteeship. We are equally whites with you, so let us share it." Therefore this dual system, as they call it, must be expanded so as to give power to the whites to share in the trusteeship. What does this mean ? It means that the whites in all these Colonies, if they share this trusteeship with the Imperial Government, could squeeze out the very much larger number of equally responsible Indians who, as my friend Mr. Roy pointed out, have been there for centuries. Every declaration made by every Colonial white, by every Colonial Governor and by every Colonial writer has been to the effect that Indians will not be allowed to share in this trusteeship. Now, I want to ask the Government of India whether they have taken care to obtain a definite statement from the Imperial Government that if it is question of sharing in the trusteeship whether Indians will have, according to their status, population and strength and stake in the country, equal rights to share this trusteeship The trusteeship will then be real. As we all know, it is the Indians who are the friends of the whites and who have enabled the Europeans to trade with the natives. It is the Indian middleman who has enabled the Europeans to exploit and develop that land and to make profits for them. And what is the policy now pursued ? The Indians are nowhere. They have been segregated. And so far as representation is concerned, although they are five times more numerous than the Europeans, they have been given only one-fifth of the representation in the local East Africa Council. Therefore, Sir, I want to put it clearly to the Government of India and to ask them whether they propose to acquiesce in just any kind of representation for India, such as a representative of the India Office on the Commission ; or if there is going to be a federation, whether they are going to allow a constitution to be built up in such a way that the Indian position will become absolutely untenable. Because, Sir, as Mr. Roy's figures show, once there is a federation and that federation is given what is euphemistically called a trusteeship, namely, the right to exploit the land in Central Africa and the natives, together with assignments of land such as those which he has referred to—Lord Delamere has been given 100,000 acres at half a penny an acre first for 99 years and then for 999 years, and the East African Development Syndicate has been given 320 acres on the same terms—then I want to ask if that is the way in which the whites are going to be given the trusteeship and if the Indians are going to be given only a few hundred acres, then what is the trusteeship in which we are going to share ? That is the point on which I want the Government of India to give the clearest indication of what they propose to do in regard to the representation of Indian interests. Our rights are superior from every point of view. We have colonised long before the Europeans. We have enabled them to develop this Colony and to enrich themselves. As to culture and civilization we can certainly boast of a superior and more ancient civilization. Therefore I say that on this question of the trusteeship, the Government of India must be in no doubt. They must make it clear that this trusteeship does not mean that while the Europeans are going to exploit the land the Indians are going to be segregated, as they have tried to do and have succeeded in doing in South Africa. Here they will be establishing a federation which will be the means of definitely extinguishing the Indian element in Central Africa. We cannot accept that position. If East Africa is going to be developed, I say we have a far greater right to go and settle there. We are far better able to live and to get on with the natives there. But for us the Europeans would not have been able to get on with the natives. Our right to take part in the development of the country is superior to that of any whites that may be there. Therefore the Indian Government has the largest stake in any proposition which seeks to settle the future position of Central Africa. I therefore demand that the Indian Government should press on the Home Government the demand that India should have a predominant representation on this Commission, because the rights of the Indians there are superior to those of any other community in East and Central Africa. I therefore support the motion.

Sir Hari Singh Gour (Central Provinces Hindi Divisions : Non-Muhammadan) : I should like to read three passages from this White Paper in the hope that the Honourable Members on the Treasury Benches will be able to enlighten the House as to what is the policy of the Government of India and of the Secretary of State in regard to that matter. If

I understand this paper aright, Sir, the position taken up by the British Government in 1923 was to the following effect :

" We do not want that there should be any measure of self-government in Kenya. It is a Colony which must be managed by the British Government in trust for the native races of Kenya and Kenya alone."

And so far as the Europeans, Indians or Arabs were concerned, their rights were simply to safeguard it. In case I should have misread this paper, I wish to read only two lines therefrom. It is said :—

" Obviously the interests of the other communities, European, Indian or Arab, must severally be safeguarded. But in the administration of Kenya His Majesty's Government regard themselves as exercising a trust on behalf of the African population, and they are unable to delegate or share this trust."

The position, therefore, was that the Europeans and the Indians in 1923 had co-equal rights. Now this paper tells us that four years have elapsed and we must now give a measure of self-government to Kenya and other mandated territories of Tanganyika by way of a federation. This is made abundantly clear in the terms of reference itself. It is stated therein, that ' one of the objects of the Commission would be (point No. 3) to make recommendations in regard to the possible changes in the powers and composition of the various Legislative Councils of the several territories.' Now, Sir, in making recommendations for the enlarged powers and composition of the various local Councils of the territories mentioned in the White Paper, what is to be the share of the Indians ? Now the point that concerns me here is this. The Honourable Member, if he turns to page 5, will find, reading it as I do, that the rights of the Europeans are to be advanced, increased, but so far as the Indians are concerned, they are merely to be relegated to the position in which they were along with their European confreres in 1923. In other words, while the Indians and the Arabs were to get no share whatever in the trusteeship or the government of the country, that was to be given to the Europeans and Europeans only. If I am mistaken, I should be most happy, Sir, but is this language susceptible of any other interpretation ? Let me read to you, Sir, what this White Paper says :

" The growth of Europeans and other settlements in the East African dependencies raises the problem of the part which these communities must play in the political as well as the economic life of the several territories. Their claim "

—the claim of the Europeans I presume—

" to share progressively in the responsibility of government can not be ignored."

We have no objection whatever, Sir, to the claims of the Europeans to participate in the government of the country, but what we do ask the Government of India, as the trustees of India itself and the trustees of the various communities that inhabit this country, is as to how far in this federation which is proposed and the enlarged powers which the Commission will recommend for the newly constituted Councils the Indians will have a voice and a share. If they are to be merely safeguarded their rights of 1923, they stand to lose and lose heavily, because, while the European communities are forging ahead and are to participate in a measure of self-government of the country, the Indians are to be merely safeguarded in the possession of the rights which were given to them in 1923. That is a point, Sir, upon which the Government of India must make a strong representation to the Secretary of State, and so far as this House is concerned, it will not tolerate a position in which the people of this country, who have been the pioneers of Kenya and the other adjacent territories, are to be relegated to a status of subordination to the European communities who are to participate in the trusteeship of these territories. That is a point, Sir, upon which this side of the House feels strongly and it is this point, I submit, which cannot be too strongly emphasised by the Government of India when they make representations to the British Government through the Secretary of State that Indians and Indian interests must be so sufficiently safeguarded ; that they must not merely safeguard the rights as they stood in 1923 but must also share in the progressive political development of the country to the extent that the Europeans are going to participate and share ; and, due regard being had to their population, their economic value and importance, the same rights must be conferred upon Indians as are to be conferred upon the white settlers. That is a point upon which I would ask the Honourable Member in charge of the Department to enlighten the House.

Pandit Nilakantha Das (Orissa Division : Non-Muhammadan) : Sir, I should only make one point. I am afraid there was a time when white people were pressing for having certain rights of trusteeship over the black people and they did not like Indians. Now, I think everything hinges on what is known by the name of the Tanganyika muddle. Tanganyika is to be kept and therefore this measure is going to be precipitated ; so it is suspected. There is no demand on the part of the white settlers, there is no compulsion, there is nothing which compels the British Government to give more powers to the white settlers. Now, if we command confidence and we are treated equally with the white people, if the British Government want to take Indians into confidence and give them equal power, equal privileges, with the white people of East Africa, this is the opportunity ; and the Indian Government should press this point that Indians ought to be treated equally when a federation is going to be formed, because all those territories are going to be formed into a federated territory of self-governing lands, so that the Tanganyika muddle may be avoided. Here there is no compulsion from the white people of East Africa, and here the British Government may show their love and equal treatment of the Indian people. With these words, I support the motion.

Diwan Chaman Lall (West Punjab : Non-Muhammadan) : Sir, we have often heard of British Imperialism and I do not want it to be said that in the speeches that we have heard this afternoon we have seen the rise of what I may call Indian Imperialism. I do not think Honourable Members who have spoken on this side of the House desire to emphasise the point that they are equally anxious with the British population of East and Central Africa to claim rights which are unequal rights as compared with the rights of the natives of those territories. We would be quite content—and I am certain I have the sense of this side of the House with me when I say this—we would be quite content if the rights that are given to us in East and Central Africa are of a similar nature to the rights that should be given to the native population of those territories. I take it that there are something like 12 million Negroes who inhabit those territories. There is not one Indian in political life in India to-day who would be willing to rob those natives of their rights for the benefit of the Indian population of those territories. Now, the question that arises in this My friend Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru extolled the White paper of 1923, but I think he forgot that what the White Paper of 1923 did was to restrict the rights of Indians in Kenya. It robbed the Indians of rights which were their birthright. Indians are in a very large majority as compared with the Europeans in that territory. Let me quote a sentence from an article which appeared recently :

" We regret to note that His Majesty's Government do not seem to appreciate the gravity of the proposal in all its bearings. Their assurance, regarding Kenya, that they adhere to the underlying principles of the White Paper of 1923 both in regard to the political status and other rights of British Indian residents is more insulting than assuaging. For what the notorious document did was to reduce the Indian community from a position of equality with the whites in every respect to one gallingly inferior in material particulars. The whites, a mere handful compared with the number of Indians, were given eleven seats on the Council as against the five allotted to Indians ; a communal franchise was imposed on them ; vexatious restrictions were sought to be placed on the immigration of Indians ; the best lands in the country were earmarked for the whites ; and in numerous other ways, the White Paper marked out the Indians for a despicable destiny. The Government of India at first made a show of emphatic protest, but on His Majesty's Government assuming a stern countenance, their enthusiasm for the Indian cause cooled ; and, with the timid reservation that they would re open the question when a suitable opportunity offered, they accepted the White Paper settlement."

That was the White Paper settlement of 1923. At that time it was definitely declared that, as in the Uganda Protectorate, so in the Kenya Colony " the principle of trusteeship for the native no less than in the mandated territories is unassailable. This paramount duty of trusteeship will continue as in the past to be carried out not by the white settlers of those territories but carried out under the Secretary of State for the Colonies by the agents of the Imperial Government and by them alone." This was said in 1923. In 1927 what has been said is this :

" That the claim of the Whites, their claim to share progressively in the responsibilities of government, cannot be ignored. These responsibilities, however, cannot be limited to the representation of their own community interests ; and if "

—this is the most important sentence—

" clashes between these interests and those of the vast native populations are to be avoided their share."

—the share of the white settlers in the trusteeship—

" in the trusteeship for the progress and welfare of the natives must be developed."

So within the period of 4 years from 1923 to 1927 we have seen this development, namely, that whereas in 1923 the British Government never contemplated the delegation of their authority to the white settlers in regard to native affairs, in 1927 they are being dragooned into the delegation of that authority to the white settlers of Tanganyika and of Uganda. Why is this being done ? My learned friend Mr. Roy pointed out that there was a period when the Labour Government was in office when such things were not contemplated. I hold in my hand, Sir, a very important document which was prepared at the express instigation of the Secretary of State for the Colonies, Mr. Thomas, and was placed before the Cabinet in regard to this very matter. It was prepared by a gentleman whose name is very well known, the late Mr. E. D. Morel, and he laid down certain principles which he said would guide the British Government and the Labour Cabinet in settling the policy in regard to these territories.

[Diwan Chaman Lall.]

One of the principles was, firstly, a numerous and contented native population, secondly, security, absolute security, of land tenure, thirdly, freedom for native labour, meaning thereby that if there be an external demand for native labour, the natives shall be perfectly free to accede to that demand and, fourthly, the progressive, economic and political development of the native population. All these principles, I take it, were more or less strictly adhered to by the Labour Government ; but when the Conservative Government came into power they have gone in for not only the reversal of that policy which was adumbrated during the period of the Labour Government's existence but also a reversal of the 1923 policy. The result is that no protection is now available either to the native population or to the Indian population as it should under the natural system be available to them. We have the example cited already here before us where the British capitalists have gone out to those territories and have been granted tremendous concessions for a song. A half-penny an acre was, I believe, the figure quoted. They have been granted these concessions. Why ? In pursuance of this policy of trusteeship. Whose trustees are they ? Of those people whose lands they have taken away forcibly ? Of those people who have been dispossessed of the territories which belonged to them ? Not a bit of it. They are trustees merely of the British exploiters who go out to these countries. They are the trustees of the British capitalists who go out to these lands to exploit the country because there is cheap labour, as there is in this country, and cheap raw material to be found there. Now, Sir, I am told that the principle of trusteeship is going to be affirmed once again. In 1925 at Geneva—my friend Mr. Joshi will bear me out—we raised this matter and we definitely charged the Government of Kenya with forcing native labour to go into the British plantations when that native labour was not willing to go there. This was done by means of the poll-tax which compelled the native worker there, the peasant, to leave his own little bit of land because he was not able to pay to the Government the poll-tax which was demanded by the Government from him ; and therefore it was necessary for him to go into the British plantations and work there to earn his living and become a slave of the British exploiter. This is the manner in which the trusteeship of these lands is being carried out by the British exploiters of that territory. But we are not concerned with that aspect of the question to-day. What we are concerned with is this : that this policy that is now being pursued by the British Government, namely, the creation of a Central Government binding all the three Governments into one federal whole, is in pursuance of a desire to rob not only the native population but also to rob the Indian population of their rights. What has happened in Kenya under this system yesterday will be repeated in the territories of Uganda and Tanganyika to-morrow and that is the fear that we have ; that is the fear that has prompted my learned friend Mr. Roy to bring forward this motion for adjournment, and I hope that the Government of India will take due note of the feeling in this country. They are generally in matters of this kind mere lotus eaters dreaming away sweet dreams ; but I hope that they will take action themselves and that they will need no prompting from us in regard to this matter. Their own reputation and their prestige are as much at stake in regard to this matter as the reputation and prestige of the people of India, and I hope they will fight as one of their Viceroys in days gone by did fight for Indians settled abroad. They must realise that there is nothing that nauseates the average Indian so much as this attitude of hypocrisy—to say that one is a trustee of a man's land and then to go and rob that man of his land. Mandates in my opinion, wherever the British Government is concerned, should read "bandits" and not mandates.

My last remark will be not merely an appeal for more representation on this Commission of inquiry that is going out to these countries but an appeal that the Indian Government should place before the British Government a detailed scheme as to what it desires in regard to the welfare of the Indian population in these territories. They must press this matter to the last limit and they must use every influence and every power that they have. Because they may rest assured that the people of India as well as the leaders in political life will back them up every time provided they take up an honest attitude and stand by the rights of Indians in the territories of East and Central Africa.

Mr. Rafi Ahmad Kidwai (Lucknow and Fyzabad Divisions : Muhammadan Rural) : I move, Sir, that the question be now put.

The Honourable Khan Bahadur Sir Muhammad Habibullah Sahib Bahadur (Education, Health and Lands Member) : Sir, I have no intention whatsoever of traversing the long array of arguments which have been put forth by the various Honourable Members who have preceded me. My task at the present moment is merely to satisfy the House as to whether there exist any circumstances which need create any undue pessimism or alarm in their minds and whether in the light of the documentary evidence that we possess it is justifiable for them to hold such views. I wish, before I begin to deal with the White Paper which has been issued by His Majesty's Government recently, to reiterate what the Honourable Mr. Dalal has already said on behalf of the Government of India.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : He said nothing.

The Honourable Khan Bahadur Sir Muhammad Habibullah Sahib Bahadur : Further, I may say that I have listened with the greatest interest to the discussion which has taken place in this House, and, agreeing with Mr. Dalal, I can promise that this discussion will be communicated to the proper quarter as expeditiously as possible.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : Backed up with your own recommendation or without ?

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : What are the Government of India going to do ? That is what we want to know.

The Honourable Khan Bahadur Sir Muhammad Habibullah Sahib Bahadur : I may also assure the Honourable Member who appealed for sympathy of the Government of India that there shall be no lack of that virtue at all. If the past record of the Government of India in regard to their work in South Africa and elsewhere could be taken as a criterion of the interest which they have evinced, are evincing and will continue to evince for the future on behalf of the Indians overseas, I hope Honourable Members will give me credit for claiming that sympathy.

Then, Sir, some Honourable Members who have made reference to the White Paper have not—they will pardon me if I say so—put correct interpretations on the passages which they have picked up from that White Paper here and there. My complaint largely is against the Honourable Dr. Gour. He has drawn our attention to a particular paragraph and insists on reading into that paragraph his own meaning. On the other hand, Sir, with the knowledge of English that I possess,—and I admit that I do not possess it to the same degree which the Honourable Doctor does—I am unable to agree with him that the particular paragraph which he has quoted, with probably a great deal of confidence in his own mind as disclosing the weakness of the document, does not represent the position of affairs as depicted by him. I shall read that paragraph to the House. What does it say ?

"The growth of European and other settlements in the East African dependencies raises the problem of the part which these communities must play in the political as well as the economic life of the several territories."

Does it, Sir, convey the interpretation that this particular sentence has any special significance to the European community only ? If I understand this paragraph aright, here the words are "the European and other communities", and therefore, I have no hesitation in interpreting those words as conveying the meaning that not merely the European but all other communities who have settled in that country are included. And then, Sir, to make the meaning still further clear, the document proceeds to say "their claim to share progressively in the responsibilities of Government cannot be ignored". Now, whose claim is it, Sir ? The claim of "the European and other settlements in the Colony". Here again it is a direct recognition of the rights of the Indian community as well. There are numberless references in this document which clearly connote the interpretation which I have ventured to attach, for my Honourable friend would have noticed that in this document there are three other places where the words "immigrant communities" have been employed. In another place it is queried :

"whether it is possible to provide for increasing association of the immigrant communities in the responsibilities of Government and at the same time for the creation of more effective machinery for native representation."

This particular paragraph I have quoted not merely to confirm the view which I expressed that throughout this document the Indians have not been excluded from consideration in that they have obviously been included under the term of "immigrant communities", but also that there need be no misgiving whatsoever as regards the interests of the natives as well.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : Will the Honourable Member explain what is the meaning of the last paragraph at page 7 ? Are those not words of imitation, namely, that the rights of Indian natives will be safeguarded as they were safeguarded in 1923. I should like to reconcile that interpretation with the last paragraph which occurs on page 7.

5 P.M.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Sir, since the Honourable Member is indulgent enough to allow an interruption, may I ask if he has read the debate on East Africa which took place in the House of Commons ?

The Honourable Khan Bahadur Sir Muhammad Habibullah Sahib Bahadur : I have read the debate in newspapers, but I am not going to utilise it inasmuch as I have not got the Hansard in my hands and I don't think I can quote from newspapers.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : I can lend the Honourable Member a copy of Hansard.

The Honourable Khan Bahadur Sir Muhammad Habibullah Sahib Bahadur : Then Sir Hari Singh Gour has confronted me with a question as to how I am going to reconcile the last paragraph in the White Paper with the quotations which I have previously made. Well, my only contention is that the former has been definitely and specifically put in as an additional guarantee that no rights of the Indians which have already been secured to them by the White Paper of 1923 will be interfered with, but that does not in my opinion mean that any recommendations which the Commission which is about to be set up may make for the further advancement of that community will not be either accepted or even considered. Of course, His Majesty's Government were quite right in adding that rider, for, if this White Paper had appeared without that rider, I am afraid the apprehensions entertained in India in regard to the existing rights of Indians may have been more serious than they are to-day. Then again, what do we find in this document as regards the trusteeship ? His Majesty's Government make it sufficiently clear :

"In any such changes it will be essential to maintain the principle that the administration of the East and Central African territories is based on the exercise by His Majesty's Government of a trust on behalf of the African population and that, while they may now be prepared to associate with themselves in that trust the members of the resident immigrant communities"

—I emphasise those words again—

"they are still under an obligation to ensure that the principles of this trusteeship will be observed."

And then one more quotation from this document and I shall not quote more. In the White Paper again, His Majesty's Government says :

"At the same time it will be a fatal error if any decisive step is taken before we have satisfied ourselves that such a step will be received with goodwill by those whose co-operation will be necessary for its success."

Now, therefore, Sir, with such distinct, clear unequivocal language which has been used in the White Paper to indicate that the interests of the Indians will be duly safeguarded, that the interests of Indians did not escape the attention of His Majesty's Government, I do not think there is any need for any alarm.

And then, after all, it is only the first stage that has now been reached—I mean the decision to appoint a Commission. There are two other stages yet before us, the investigation and the recommendations of that Commission and the final orders on those recommendations by His Majesty's Government. I recognise that a certain degree of watchfulness is necessary on the part of the Government of India when these proceedings are taking place. I also recognise that there is a serious responsibility cast on the shoulders of the Government of India to see to it that the interests of the Indians are not prejudicially affected by any recommendations which the Commission might make, and on that matter, I can assure the House that we will not shrink from our responsibility at all. So far as things have gone at present I cannot allow myself to be swayed by any considerations of pessimism. If my reading of the situation is correct—and I hope it is—then I do not expect that the recommendations of the Commission will in any way be to the detriment of the Indian interests in the Colony. Should any occasion arise and it becomes necessary for the Government of India to make proper, timely and adequate representations, I can assure the House that we shall leave no stone unturned. We have already, as the Honourable the Leader of the House told you this morning, registered necessary representations, and if it became imperative for us to make further representations, we would certainly do so. For the present, I shall merely forward these proceedings to the proper quarter so that an idea may be formed as regards the strength of feeling in this House, which I know is indicative of the strength of feeling in the country, and I hope this will satisfy my Honourable friend Mr. K. C Roy.

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub (Rohilkund and Kumaon Divisions : Muhammadan Rural) : Will the Honourable Member enlighten the House as to who will be the representatives of India on this Commission ? The Honourable Member has said nothing in his speech on this point.

The Honourable Khan Bahadur Sir Muhammad Habibullah Sahib Bahadur : I am sorry I can make no such announcement on a matter which His Majesty's Government have not announced as yet.

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : Will the Honourable Member convey the sense of this House to His Majesty's Government that India should be represented by Indians ? Will he give an assurance on the floor of the House that he will convey this ?

The Honourable Khan Bahadur Sir Muhammad Habibullah Sahib Bahadur : The motion itself is to that effect.

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : What about the action of the Government of India ? Will the Government of India convey the sense of this House to His Majesty's Government ?

The Honourable Khan Bahadur Sir Muhammad Habibullah Sahib Bahadur : I thought I said that already.

Mr. K. C. Roy : Sir, I am grateful to my friends who have supported me and I am grateful to Mr. Dalal for accepting my motion. But, Sir, that by itself does not carry me very far. My disappointment has been very great with the speech of the Honourable Member in charge of the Department of Emigration. For him I have the greatest respect. For his services I have nothing but admiration. But he has not enlightened us much on this subject to-day. He has not told us whether the Government of India, as a subordinate branch of His Majesty's Government, has accepted the White Paper of 1927.

But his able advocacy of that paper convinces me that the Government of India has accepted it. If they have done so I extend to him my cold sympathy. The doctrine of trusteeship is an invention of that Florentine whose name is well-known all over the world. He is no other than Machiavelli and if we have accepted the Machiavellian doctrine for the administration of East Africa and Central Africa I extend to him my cold sympathy. As regards the assurance of the Government of India that they are going to be very watchful, I will only give him a quotation. They have been watchful ever since 1908, and what has been the result of that watchfulness ? The situation has gone down and down till we have touched the bottom: I will read the despatch of the Government of India to the Secretary of State, Lord Salisbury.

"Indian settlers lived and traded in British East Africa long before the days of British rule, and their status in the country and their claims to political recognition are such that they cannot be overlooked. We believe, however, that these claims are not regarded with favour by the white colonists, that the Indians as a whole are disliked by them, and that certain areas are being reserved entirely for white colonization; and it is within our knowledge that fears have already been expressed lest, when the country is eventually given self-government, the antagonism of the white colonists and the Indian traders and settlers may result in similar problems to those which have had such deplorable results in South Africa."

We know the condition since 1908, and yet my Honourable friend, Sir Muhammad Habibullah counsels us to be patient. Of course, what else can we do but practise patience, and rely on the "subordinate branch of His Majesty's Government"! (Applause.)

Mr. President: The question is:

"That the House do now adjourn".

The motion was adopted.

The Assembly then adjourned till Eleven of the Clock on Monday, the 22nd August, 1927.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

COMPLAINT REGARDING THE THIRD CLASS BOOKING OFFICE AT SEALDAH.

48. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Has the attention of the Government been drawn to a signed letter, published in the Amrita Bazar Patrika, dated the 22nd May 1927, in which a complaint is made that the third class booking office at Sealdah Station (Eastern Bengal Railway) was not open even one hour before the arrival of a particular train on the 15th May last ?

(b) Is not the Sealdah booking office required to be kept open for 24 hours under the rules ; and has any notice indicating the opening hours of the booking office been put up before it ? If not, why not ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Yes.

(b) Under rule the Sealdah booking office is kept open day and night for the issue of tickets to passengers of all classes. The Agent of the Eastern Bengal Railway intimated to the Railway Board last September that he had no objection to the opening hours of booking offices being notified on posters in vernacular in front of third class booking offices, and he has been asked to see that, if not already done, this is done at Sealdah.

INCREASE IN THE NUMBER OF THIRD CLASS BOOKING CLERKS AT MUTTRA JUNCTION.

49. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Are Government aware that Muttra is an important place of pilgrimage, and that the number of visitors and pilgrims there is very large all the year round ?

(b) Is it a fact that Muttra Junction is the station at which tickets for the Great Indian Peninsula Railway, East Indian Railway, Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway (N. M. Railway, and R. M. Railway) are issued, but that there is no enquiry office ?

(c) Is it a fact that only one booking clerk has to issue third class tickets for the Great Indian Peninsula Railway, and the East Indian Railway ; and another booking clerk has to issue third class tickets for the N. M. Railway, and the R. M. Railway, and that third class passengers are put to great inconvenience and delay in purchasing their tickets ?

(d) Do Government propose to consider the question of increasing the number of third class booking clerks at Muttra Junction, so that the third class booking office may in practice be open for 24 hours for the issue of tickets ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Government are aware that Muttra is an important place of pilgrimage.

(c) It is a fact that only one booking clerk ordinarily issues third class tickets for the Great Indian Peninsula Railway and the East Indian Railway and another for the N. M. Railway and R. M. Railway, but this staff is increased during melas and arrangements have been made for extra staff to be detailed to assist in the issue of tickets at the time of the East Indian Railway Howrah Express No. 8 Down and the Great Indian Peninsula Railway Passenger No. 13 Down. I understand that it is at these times that complaints of delay have been made.

FEES CHARGED BY THE LADY IRWIN SCHOOL FOR GIRLS IN SIMLA.

50. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Is it a fact that an Indian Girls' School has been opened in Simla, which is in receipt of a Government grant ? If so, what is the average proceeds of the fees, and the amount of the Government grant ?

(b) Is it a fact that a rule has been made, or is about to be made, whereby each child of a non-official servant will have to pay one rupee more than the child of a Government servant ? If so, why this invidious differentiation ?

Mr. A. R. Dalal : (a) Yes. The fee income of the school amounted to over Rs. 1,500 up to the end of June, 1927. The Government of India have sanctioned a grant-in-aid to the school to the extent of Rs. 7,700 in 1927-28 and of Rs. 5,700 in subsequent years. It is subject to reconsideration after three years.

(b) One of the conditions of the Government grant is that pupils who are children of, or under the guardianship of, employees of the Government of India should be charged fees which are less by 33⅓ per cent. than those charged to other pupils. The reason for this concession is that the school is intended primarily for the benefit of the female children of the Government of India's employees. It is not the intention of the Government of India to assist in the maintenance of a school which is mainly attended by girls whose education is the concern of the Local Government.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Is not the school in receipt of a grant-in-aid from the Government of India, from the general tax-payers' purse, I mean ?

Mr. A. R. Dalal : The grant-in-aid is mentioned above as Rs. 5,700 recurring for three years.

PREVENTION OF SERIOUS CRIMES IN NEW DELHI.

51. *Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Is it a fact that a serious armed dacoity was committed in April last in Raisina, New Delhi, in the house of Mr. G. Kaula, Accountant-General, Central Revenues, in the course of which his nephew was seriously injured by the dacoits, and property of the value of over Rs. 4,000 was taken ?

(b) Is it not a fact that cases of theft and dacoity have been on the increase in New Delhi for some months past, and will the Government be pleased to place on the table a full statement of such cases during the last 12 months, giving their dates and other details, together with the result ?

(c) Will the Government give the total strength of the police force in New Delhi, and the reasons of their apparent inability in checking such crimes ?

(d) What steps have been taken, or are about to be taken, to prevent the commission of such crimes in future ?

(e) Are Government prepared to allow respectable house owners in Delhi to retain fire-arms for defensive purposes ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a) Yes.

(b) The number of thefts, burglaries and dacoities during the 12 months ending the 31st May 1927 was 136 as compared with 98 in the corresponding period ending the 31st May 1926. The statement asked for by the Honourable Member has been compiled. It is a very long one, and, if the Honourable Member desires, I shall be glad to let him have a copy.

(c) The sanctioned strength of the New Delhi Police Station is 1 Inspector, 2 Sub-Inspectors, 14 Head-Constables, 5 Lance-Head-Constables and 174 Constables. It has not been possible hitherto to maintain this force at its full strength, but an increase in the Delhi Police was sanctioned last cold weather, and the station will be kept at its full strength from the autumn of this year.

(d) The patrolling system has been carefully overhauled and the situation should be improved by the increase of staff above referred to.

(e) Licences are, and will continue to be, granted to persons of approved character in accordance with established principles.

FOREWORD TO THE INDIAN SANDHURST COMMITTEE REPORT.

52. *Mr. K. C. Roy : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state whether the ' foreword ' appended to the Indian Sandhurst Committee Report by the Government of India represents their views arrived at after due consideration of the recommendations of the Committee, or whether it is merely a preface without adequate consideration of the fundamental issues raised in the Report ?

(b) What are the ' certain factors ' stated in the ' foreword ' which were not within the province of the Committee to undertake a complete survey of its field ?

(c) What are the " alternative methods which did not fall within the Committee's terms of reference " and what are the reasons for their exclusion from the Committee's purview ?

(d) Was the "foreword" submitted to, and approved of, by the Secretary of State before its publication with the Report ?

(e) Why was this unusual practice of writing a "foreword" to a Committee's Report adopted in this case ?

(f) Do the Government of India intend to publish the full evidence recorded by the Committee, and, if not, will Government state the reasons for that decision ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) Yes, Sir, the " Foreword " was issued after due consideration by the Government of India and represents their views.

(c) Government had no particular alternatives in mind either at the time of appointing the Committee or at the time of publishing the " Foreword ". They merely on the latter occasion stated that they must leave themselves free to consider whether alternative methods might not profitably be explored.

(e) In view of the wide issues raised by the Committee's Report the Government of India, as stated in the " Foreword ", considered it necessary to emphasise that neither they nor His Majesty's Government had at that time formed their conclusions on it, but that it would be used as a starting point for discussions upon these issues.

(f) Government do not intend to publish the evidence recorded by the Committee, as a considerable portion of the evidence recorded in India was confidential and the evidence given by official representatives to the Sub-Committee which visited England was also confidential.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Is it a fact that the Sub-Committee which visited England submitted its report to the main Committee and that the main Committee passed it for publication along with the main report ?

Mr. G. M. Young : I did not quite catch the last sentence.

Mr. President : Will the Honourable Member repeat his question ?

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Is it a fact that the main Committee asked the Government of India to publish the report of the Sub-Committee which visited England ?

Mr. G. M. Young : The main Committee said nothing whatever about the publication of the Sub-Committee's report in its report. I did receive as a matter of fact a communication from one Member of the Committee to the effect that the Committee desired the Sub-Committee's report to be published, if possible.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Did the Government of India themselves inquire from the Committee whether it wanted that the whole report should be published.

Mr. G. M. Young : No, Sir, the Committee had by that time dispersed.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Did the main Committee indicate that the report of the Sub-Committee was confidential and should not be published ?

Mr. G. M. Young : I think my Honourable friend is under some misapprehension about the Sub-Committee's report. It is not within the discretion of the Government of India to decide how much of the proceedings of the Sub-Committee in England could be published or not. The Sub-Committee had no official status in England. The Government of India, when the Sub-Committee went home, sent a recommendation that the Sub-Committee should be given every facility and that all the information they wanted should be laid before them. I think every member of the Sub-Committee would agree that that was done and that they were treated with the utmost courtesy in that respect. But a great part of the material laid before the Committee was laid before them by official representatives of His Majesty's Government, and it is entirely for the Home Government to make or not to make the stipulation that that material should not be published. They have as a matter of fact made a stipulation that it should not be published.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Am I to understand that it was the British Government that stood in the way of the publication of the report of the Sub-Committee.

Mr. G. M. Young : There is no question of anybody standing in the way of the report being published. The Home Government laid the material before the Sub-Committee and stipulated that it should not be published.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Is it not a fact that last Session, with regard to the same subject, Government gave us to understand that they would publish it as early as possible ?

Mr. G. M. Young : No, Sir. Not the Sub-Committee's report.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Did not Sir Alexander Muddiman say something about it ? My Honourable friend Mr. Muhammad Ali Jinnah, who was a member of that Committee, put a question, whether it would be published as early as possible.

Mr. R. K. Shanmukham Chetty : The Honourable Member told us that the evidence placed before the Sub-Committee was of a confidential nature and therefore it was not published, but may we know why the report of the Sub-Committee itself was not published ?

Mr. G. M. Young : That does not really arise out of this question. There are questions on the paper about the publication of the report ; but I have already explained that the report of the Sub-Committee was not published for the reason that much of the material placed before it was placed before it on the stipulation that it should not be published. It would be impossible to publish the report piece-meal.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Sir, a supplementary question is a question which arises out of the question ; and this is certainly a supplementary question which arises out of the question. Under the Standing Orders and Rules of this Assembly the Honourable Member is bound to answer that question.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : May we know definitely whether the Home Government prohibited the publication of the report of the Sub-Committee ?

Mr. G. M. Young : There was no question of prohibition.

ADOPTION OF THE 8-UNIT SCHEME FOR INDIANISATION OF THE ARMY IN INDIA.

53. *Mr. K. C. Roy : Will the Government be pleased to lay on the table of the House the correspondence leading to their decision regarding the adoption of the 8-unit scheme for Indianisation of the Army in India ?

Mr. G. M. Young : Government are not prepared to lay the correspondence on the table.

COLOUR BAR AGAINST INDIANS IN EDINBURGH.

54. *Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Is it a fact that several public restaurants and places of amusements in Edinburgh have recently issued orders prohibiting the admission of Indians or Asiatics into these institutions, merely on grounds of race or colour ?

(b) Is it a fact that this colour prejudice has affected the Edinburgh University as well, and that the Edinburgh Physiological Society has excluded Indian student members from the Society's annual social function, although, as members, they had every right to participate in it ?

(c) Is it a fact that Indian students are not admitted into the Edinburgh Royal Medical Society, although it is nominally open to all medical students ?

(d) Is it a fact that Indian students are not admitted into the University swimming baths at Drumsheugh Gardens, the University physical training activity, and the University boarding houses ?

(e) Is it a fact that Dr. Drummond, at a Conference of General Assemblies of the Church of Scotland, and the United Free Church of Edinburgh, said : " Those responsible for it were guilty of the grossest treachery to the British nation, and were doing something to undermine the stability of the Empire " ?

(f) Has any communication on this subject been received from the High Commissioner, and, if so, are Government prepared to lay it on the table ? What steps, if any, have been taken, or proposed to be taken, in the matter ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a) Yes.

(b), (c) & (d). There has never been discrimination of any kind against Indian students in any institution officially connected with the Edinburgh University.

(f) Government have received a report from the High Commissioner, who had special enquiries made. They do not propose to lay it on the table. The orders prohibiting the admission of Asiatics to certain places of public entertainment were withdrawn by all the establishments concerned on the 20th June as the result of action taken by the city authorities.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : May I know if the orders were unconditionally withdrawn ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : To the best of my knowledge the orders were unconditionally withdrawn.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Is it a fact that this infection at one time spread to Dundee, Aberdeen and Glasgow ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I have no information that the infection spread to those other towns.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Has the attention of the Honourable Member been drawn to the discussion on this subject which took place on the 31st May in the House of Commons in which this statement finds a place ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I do not think that that actually arises out of the question. The question relates solely to particular orders which were in force in the city of Edinburgh. My inquiries have naturally been restricted to the city of Edinburgh.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Will the Honourable Member kindly make inquiries in the matter ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I shall certainly make further inquiries in the direction suggested by the Honourable Member.

POLICY OF SEGREGATION BETWEEN THE EUROPEANS AND ASIATICS IN KENYA.

55. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Are Government aware that the policy of segregation between the Europeans and Asiatics in Kenya was definitely abandoned by the White Paper of July 1923, issued by the British Cabinet, a clause of which says :

" It is now the view of competent medical authorities that as a sanitary measure, the segregation of Europeans and Asiatics is not absolutely essential to the preservation of the health of the community ; a rigid enforcement of sanitary police and building regulations without any racial discrimination by Colonial and Municipal authorities will suffice.....They (His Majesty's Government) have therefore decided that the policy of segregation between Europeans and Asiatics in townships must be abandoned " ?

(b) Are Government aware that on the 17th February 1927, the Earl of Clarendon, speaking in the House of Lords said :

" The only statement which I can make at this moment on behalf of His Majesty's Government is that they adhere to the principles as laid down in the Kenya White Paper of 1923 " ?

(c) Is it a fact that all the Asiatics residing in houses situated in Cliffe avenue area in Mombassa were notified by the Land Officer to vacate their premises before the end of March 1927, and similarly the Indian Landholders who had their houses rented to other Asiatics, were also notified to ask their tenants to vacate the premises forthwith, failing which the Government threatened to forfeit their leases, and that as a consequence they had no option but to comply with the requirement of the Government ?

(d) What steps have been taken, or are proposed to be taken, to enforce compliance with the non-segregation clause of the Kenya White Paper referred to in (a) above ; and to compensate those Indians who had to suffer loss ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : (a) and (b). Yes.

(c) Government have no information, but have made inquiries.

(d) I have nothing to add to the answers given to part (b) of the Honourable Member's Question No. 65 and Question No. 474 by Mr. Bhore last Session. The Government of India are still in communication with His Majesty's Secretary of State for India on the subject.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Will the result of the inquiry suggested in part (c) of the question be available to this House ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : That will be decided, Sir, when the correspondence is complete.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : May I draw the attention of the Honourable Member to the proceedings in the House of Commons, dated 17th July 1926, 29th July 1926 and 28th September 1926, in which he will find a reference to a matter allied to the subject-matter of question (c) ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : I have already, Sir, studied the proceedings to which the Honourable Member has referred, but that does not dispose of the fact that the Government of India are still in correspondence with His Majesty's Secretary of State with a view to seeing if possible that the principle involved in the residential restrictions to which Asiatics in Mombassa are to be subjected will not be given effect to.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : May I know if the inquiry to which the Honourable Member refers was instituted after I sent in notice of the question ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : No, Sir, the inquiry was instituted before the Honourable Member sent in notice of his question.

GRIEVANCES OF DECK PASSENGERS ON STEAMERS OF THE BRITISH INDIA STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY.

56. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to an article published in the African Comrade (Dar-es-Salaam), dated the 4th May 1927, regarding the horrible condition of deck passengers in the British India Steam Navigation Company steamers ?

(b) Will Government kindly state if they have enquired into the complaints, and how far they are true ; and what steps have been taken to remedy them ?

(c) What have Government done on the Report of the Deck Passengers' Committee ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : (a) Government have seen the article.

(b) and (c). The question of improving the existing conditions of deck passenger traffic was investigated by the Deck Passengers' Committee. Draft amendments to the rules dealing with the more important recommendations of the Committee were published in June and July 1925, and the opinions received thereon are now under consideration. The question of accommodation, however, which is closely connected with the provision of adequate life-saving appliances, is complex and technical, and the Government of India have found it difficult to come to a conclusion without expert advice. As the Honourable Member is no doubt aware, the Government of India have decided to transfer the administration of the Merchant Shipping Acts from Local Governments to the direct control of the Commerce Department of the Government of India, which will be advised by an adequate technical staff. As some time must still elapse before the necessary legislation can be passed, the Government of India are considering the desirability of obtaining the services of a qualified Ship Surveyor, as a temporary measure during the forthcoming cold weather, specially to examine the technical questions connected with deck passenger accommodation and life-saving appliances, in order that the Government of India may arrive at a conclusion without further delay.

PAUCITY OF RECRUITS FOR THE ARMY FROM BIHAR AND ORISSA.

57. *Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) With reference to the statement furnished by Government, in reply to starred question No. 25 of 27th January 1927, will the Government kindly give reasons for the paucity of recruits for the Army from Bihar and Orissa ?

(b) Will Government kindly lay on the table a copy of the latest instructions for recruitment from Bihar and Orissa ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) Recruitment has been discontinued in the Province of Bihar and Orissa owing to the reductions in the strength of the Indian Army since the War.

(b) There are no special recruiting regulations for the Province of Bihar and Orissa. A copy of the Recruiting Regulations for the Indian Army will be found in the Library.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Has recruiting been discontinued in any other province ?

Mr. G. M. Young : I must ask for notice of that question.

Mr. Ram Narayan Singh : Are the Government prepared to say that they are not going to resume recruitment from Bihar again and have postponed it once for all ?

Mr. G. M. Young : They have postponed it for the present, Sir. They have no further intentions in the matter at present.

Mr. Ram Narayan Singh : Are Government considering the question whether they will resume recruitment from Bihar again ?

Mr. G. M. Young : They are not considering resuming it now.

Mr. Ram Narayan Singh : Have they postponed it once for all ?

SAFETY OF THE ROOF OF THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY CHAMBER IN NEW DELHI.

58. *Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Will the Government kindly state what steps have been taken, or are going to be taken, in connection with the roof of the Legislative Assembly building in New Delhi, from which a brick fell down while the Assembly was sitting ?

(b) Has the building been examined by experts, and found to be quite safe ? Who are the experts who examined the building ?

(c) What alterations, if any, have been made therein ; and at what cost ? Is there any proposal of putting another storey on the building ; and if so, why ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) The ceiling of the Assembly Chamber has been carefully examined and tested by the engineers in charge of the building. Although this examination has revealed the presence of no more loose tiles, it is considered desirable to keep the ceiling under observation for some time. It is proposed accordingly to fix, and retain during this observation period, fine wire netting below the ceiling.

(b) Yes, by Mr. Rouse, Chief Engineer, Delhi, and by Mr. Brebner, Superintending Engineer, Simla. Both are of opinion that the building will be quite safe once the wire netting referred to above has been placed in position.

(c) No alterations have been made. It is proposed to add, when required, an additional storey which forms part of the original complete design of the building.

Mr. R. K. Shanmukham Chetty : May I know, Sir, what offices will be located in that storey when it is completed ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : No final conclusions on that subject have yet been arrived at.

Mr. R. K. Shanmukham Chetty : Is there any proposal, Sir, to locate any offices which are not connected either with the Legislative Department or with the Indian Legislature in that storey ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : As I have already said, no conclusions have yet been arrived at.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : May I know what is the object of adding another storey when the Government have no idea of the use they are going to make of it ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : I have already given the information in my answer. I will read from my answer again as the Honourable Member was apparently not listening. " It is proposed to add, when required, an additional storey which forms part of the original complete design of the building." That third storey was part of the original design, but Government does not propose to put it up until they are satisfied that it is required.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : Does that imply that there is no immediate prospect of the additional storey being added to the building ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : I am not in a position to supplement in any way the full answer which I claim I have already given to the House.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : May I beg to inquire if the addition of the third storey would depend upon the development of cracks ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : I can assure my Honourable friend that the addition of a third storey has nothing to do with the cracks.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : Is the Honourable Member quite sure that it will not operate upon the cracks already existing ?

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : May I know why the idea of a third storey was included in the original plan when Government had no idea of the use to which they could put the third storey ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : I have already made the position as clear as it was possible for me to do. It is the architects who provided the third storey in their design. Government cannot arrive at any final decision about putting up the third storey until they have come to a definite conclusion that that storey is required.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : May I ask if the intention of adding a third storey is to obscure the dome which is already only partially visible ?

LOCATION OF TROOPS IN MUZAFFARPUR.

59. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) With reference to my starred question No. 60 of the 23rd January 1925, regarding the location of troops in Muzaffarpur, will Government be pleased to enumerate the " local disturbances ", and " threats of local disturbances ", referred to in the reply of the Government, together with the dates on which, as well as the places where, such disturbances actually took place, or were threatened ?

(b) What is the evidence in possession of Government to show that the " local police by themselves could not adequately cope with " such disturbances or threats ?

(c) Is there anything on record to show that the local police made any application for troops ? If not, how did the Government come to know that the local police " could not adequately cope with " such disturbances or threats ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) My Honourable friend will find a full answer to his question in Chapter VII of the publication entitled " Bihar and Orissa in 1921 ", a copy of which I shall be happy to lend him.

(b) and (c) The Government of India have no detailed information on these points. As my predecessor repeatedly explained on previous occasions, troops were posted to Muzaffarpur solely at the request of the Local Government This request would not have been made if the local police by themselves had been able to cope with the situation.

LOCATION OF TROOPS IN MUZAFFARPUR.

60. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Is it the case of the Government that the burning of the Chantarwa Factory in the District of Champaran, and the incident at Chauri Chaura in the United Provinces are responsible for the decision to locate troops permanently in Muzaffarpur ?

Mr. G. M. Young : The attention of the Honourable Member is invited to the answer given on the 23rd January 1925 to his question No. 60.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Will Government kindly repeat that answer ? Is it before the Honourable Member ?

LOCATION OF TROOPS IN MUZAFFARPUR.

61. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Is it not a fact that the decision to retain troops permanently in Muzaffarpur was arrived at before the 24th January 1922, as is evident from the following reply given by the Government of Bihar and Orissa in the local Legislative Council, on the above date :

" One Company of British troops has been sent to Muzaffarpur. They have been sent with the knowledge and approval of Government. Government are not aware that any panic has been caused by the presence of the troops ; and they do not propose to withdraw them " ?

(b) If so, will the Government kindly explain how they have now come to state in reply to my question No. 62 of the 23rd January 1925 that " the formal decision of the Government of India to retain troops permanently at Muzaffarpur, was dated the 4th April 1922, on which date His Excellency Sir Henry Wheeler was Governor of Bihar and Orissa "?

(c) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to an official publication, entitled " Bihar and Orissa " (First Decennial Review, 1912—22), at page 111, where it is stated that His Excellency Sir Henry Wheeler assumed charge of the Governorship of Bihar and Orissa on the 12th April 1922 ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) The reply given in the Bihar and Orissa Legislative Council correctly stated the attitude of the Local Government at the time that the reply was given.

(b) and (c) The reply given to question No 62, dated the 23rd January 1925, stated the date of the subsequent formal decision of the Government of India to retain the troops permanently at Muzaffarpur. This reply also was correct. The statement that Sir Henry Wheeler was Governor of Bihar and Orissa was not quite correct. Sir Henry Wheeler did not actually take over charge from Sir Havilland Le Mesurier until the 12th April, as my Honourable friend observes.

LOCATION OF TROOPS IN MUZAFFARPUR.

62. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Is it not a fact that in March 1922 the Government of Bihar and Orissa addressed a communication to the Government of India, in connection with the troops in Muzaffarpur ; and will the Government be pleased to lay a copy of this on the table ?

Mr. G. M. Young : The answer to the first part of the question is in the affirmative. As regards laying the correspondence on the table, the Honourable Member is referred to the statement which I made on the 15th March last when speaking on his motion on the same subject.

TRAINING OF APPRENTICES IN STEEL SMELTING IN THE JAMALPUR WORKSHOPS.

63. Mr. Ganganand Sinha : Will the Government be pleased to state the number of Indians, Europeans and Anglo-Indians separately who have been taught steel smelting in the Jamalpur Workshops year by year during the last 5 years ? How many apprentices of each of these communities are learning the subject just now ? Why are not a larger number of Indians taught the subject ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Government understand that no apprentices have been taught steel smelting in the Jamalpur Workshops during the last 5 years nor are any learning the subject at present.

The steel foundry at Jamalpur is too small to provide a really thorough training for apprentice steel smelters.

CASE OF MR. TARAGATI BANERJEE, LATE AN APPRENTICE IN THE JAMALPUR WORKSHOPS.

64. Mr. Ganganand Sinha: (a) Is it not a fact that one Mr. Taragati Banerjee was an apprentice in the Jamalpur Workshops, and got a State scholarship for further studies in Europe ?

(b) Is it not a fact that he was refused an appointment on his return to this country after having duly qualified as an engineer ?

(c) If the answer to (b) is in the affirmative, will the Government be pleased to state reasons for the same ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a), (b) and (c). Mr. Taragati Banerjee was employed as an apprentice in the Jamalpur Workshops but severed his connection with the Railway in 1923 and proceeded for further training to the United Kingdom on a Government of India scholarship. On his return to India in 1926 he applied for a post in the Railway Department, but there was no vacancy. The Railway Department had given no undertaking to him to employ him on his return from England.

TRAINING OF INDIANS IN DRAWING IN THE JAMALPUR WORKSHOPS.

65. *Mr. Ganganand Sinha : (a) Is it not a fact that Indian apprentices in the Jamalpur Workshops do not get the same facilities for learning drawing in the drawing office as European or Anglo-Indian apprentices ?

(b) Is it not a fact that students of the Mechanical and Technical Engineering course have much to depend on their drawing ?

(c) If the answers to (a) be in the affirmative, will the Government be pleased to state the reasons for the same ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) No.

(c) Does not arise.

PROVISION OF QUARTERS FOR INDIAN APPRENTICES OF THE JAMALPUR WORKSHOPS.

66. Mr. Ganganand Sinha : (a) Is it a fact that a European and Anglo-Indian employee in the Jamalpur Workshops is invariably provided with quarters and Indians are generally denied the facility ?

(b) Is it not a fact that at present almost all European employees at the Jamalpur Workshops standing in need of quarters are provided with them, whereas only one Indian is allotted a quarter ?

(c) If the answers to (a) and (b) are in the affirmative, will the Government be pleased to state reasons for the same ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Quarters are provided in Jamalpur for European and Anglo-Indian employees with the exception of local men, since otherwise there will be no suitable accommodation for them. It is not a fact that Indians who are similarly situated in the workshops are generally denied the same facility or that only one Indian is at present allotted a quarter. In fact 17 Indians are at present residing in quarters originally built for the occupation of European and Anglo-Indian staff.

DIFFERENTIAL TREATMENT OF INDIAN APPRENTICES IN THE JAMALPUR WORKSHOPS.

67. Mr. Ganganand Sinha : Have Government made any inquiry to ascertain whether Indian apprentices in the Jamalpur Workshops are treated differently to European and Anglo-Indian apprentices in several ways ? If so, when and with what results ? If not, why ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The Government of India enquired into this matter both in 1926 and 1927 in response to a series of questions which were put in the Council of State on the 26th February 1926, the 1st March 1926, and the 22nd February 1927. If the Honourable Member wishes, I will send him the latest detailed information ; but the result of the investigation has been that there is now no difference in the treatment of Indian, European, and Anglo-Indian apprentices in the Jamalpur Workshops.

Kumar Ganganand Sinha : I should like to have the Report.

RELATION OF THE GOVERNMENT TO THE ASSAM BENGAL RAILWAY.

68. Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim : Will the Government in the Department of Railways be pleased to state what is the relation of the Government to the Assam Bengal Railway ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The relations of the Secretary of State to the Assam Bengal Railway are governed by the terms of the various contracts with the Assam Bengal Railway Company, copies of which are in the Library.

WORKING CAPITAL OF THE ASSAM BENGAL RAILWAY, ETC.

69. Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim : Will the Government be pleased to state what is the working capital of the Assam Bengal Railway Company, what is the total number of staff, under the head " Administration " for whom 31,50,000 rupees have been voted in the years 1927 and 1928 ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The capital provided by the Assam Bengal Railway Company, which is, I think, what the Honourable Member wishes to know, is £1,500,000. The number of superior appointments, whose cost is charged to the head Administration, is shown in Statement D in the Pink Book of the Assam Bengal Railway. Government are not aware of the exact number of subordinate appointments charged to this head, but it is about 1,600.

MUSSALMAN EMPLOYEES OF THE ASSAM BENGAL RAILWAY.

70. Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim : Will the Government be pleased to state what is the total number of Mussalman employees under the Assam Bengal Railway who get their wages and salaries from the Statement A, in page 6 of the A. B. Railway Budget ? (Pink Book.)

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I would refer the Honourable Member to Appendix F in Volume I and Appendix C in Volume II of the Railway Board's Report on Indian Railways for 1925-26, which gives the only statistics of communal representation that are collected. I may add that the form in which these statistics are collected was settled with the advice and concurrence of the Central Advisory Council for Railways.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Are Government aware that since the statement made by His Excellency the Viceroy, Lord Reading, in the month of December in the year 1924 or 1925, the Government are sitting tight on the matter ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : No, Sir.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Do I understand the Honourable Member by the word ' No ' to mean that he did not look at the statement made by Lord Reading in 1924 or 1925, or do I understand that Government have not given effect to that statement ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I meant that Government are not sitting tight.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Is it not a fact that the Government are not only sitting tight but that they are charged, on account of the exceptionally slow manner in which they carry out the affairs of the Government, with insufficient intelligence to carry out the policy, and they disqualify themselves thereby ?

APPOINTMENT OF MUSSALMANS ON THE ASSAM BENGAL RAILWAY.

71. Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim : Will the Government be pleased to state whether they have any circular, or rule with regard to the appointment of Mussalmans in the Assam Bengal Railway ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The Government of India have issued no special instructions on this subject to the Assam Bengal Railway Administration, but their policy of preventing the preponderance of any one class or community in the services under their control has been communicated to all Company-managed Railways as well as to State-managed Railways.

REDUCTIONS ON THE ASSAM BENGAL RAILWAY.

72. Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim : (a) Will the Member in charge of the Department of Railways be pleased to state whether the reduction of the Assam Bengal Railway Budget is solely to be distributed amongst the Indian employees of the said Railway Company ?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to state whether the Assam Bengal Railway would inform this Assembly of the procedure they adopted in meeting that reduction of Rs. 50,000 ?

(c) Who are these people that have come under this reduction—their length of service, age, and religion ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) No.

(b) and (c). I am sending the Honourable Member a copy of the letter which we have sent to Railway Administrations about the desirability of securing economy in administrative charges. He will see from it that no specific appointments have been suggested for reduction. It has been left to Agents to investigate what improvements in administrative machinery and consequent alterations in administrative staff can be carried out.

POWERS OF CONTROL OF THE AGENT, ASSAM BENGAL RAILWAY.

73. Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim : Will the Government be pleased to state what power, if any, the Agent exercises over the other Departments of the Assam Bengal Railway Administration ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The Agent exercises full control either directly or through his principal officers over all Departments of the Railway.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Is it not a fact, Sir, that in this Assembly the same Honourable Mr. Parsons has given an answer that the Member should go and ask for a reply from the Agent, who has not to face the Members of this Assembly here, and thus the Members get nothing from them, and that the Government have been debarring the Members of this Assembly, without any rhyme or reason, and without any justification whatever, from the protection of the Rules and Standing Orders of this Assembly ? Do Government now propose to answer these questions or, in the alternative, bring the Agents to this Assembly to meet the Members here ? Is not the Honourable Member responsible in the name of the Government for any question that is put to him, and is it not the case that he must give an answer and not the Agent who, he says, has got the controlling power ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I think my Honourable friend has not read the question which I have just been asked. I was asked whether the Agent had control or what control he had over the Departments of his Railway, and I gave the reply that he exercised full control.

Mr. K. Ahmed : My supplementary question arises out of that. Is it not a fact that Mr. Parsons gave a reply that we should look for the reply to the Agent and not to the Honourable Member or the Government here ? Is this not contrary to the Standing Rules and Orders of this Assembly that the Government are not giving answers to the Members of this Assembly ?

QUALIFICATIONS OF OFFICERS OF THE ASSAM BENGAL RAILWAY.

74. Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim : What are the qualifications of the officers of the Assam Bengal Railway whose salaries are described in page 9 of the Assam Bengal Railway Budget for 1927-28. (Pink Book) ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : It is quite impossible to enumerate the qualifications of forty-nine officers within the limits of a reply to a question, but the Honourable Member may rest assured that the Board of Directors of the Assam Bengal Railway Company, with whom appointments to these posts lie, satisfy themselves, before appointing any person to their service, that he will be competent to perform the duties likely to be entrusted to him.

ALLEGED NEPOTISM ON THE ASSAM BENGAL RAILWAY.

75. Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim : How old is Babu J. R. Guha the Assistant Auditor, now acting as Deputy Auditor ? How many relations of his have been provided for by him during the time he has been acting in the Audit Department ? For how long has he been President of the Dacca Hindu Sabha ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Government understand that Rai Sahib J. R. Guha is 54 years of age. They have no information with regard to the latter parts of the question.

CHIEF OR HEAD CLERKS EMPLOYED ON THE ASSAM BENGAL RAILWAY.

76. Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim : How many Chief or Head Clerks are there in various Departments of the Assam Bengal Railway, and how many of them are Hindus, Anglo-Indians and Mussalmans ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Government have no information as to the representation of the various communities in individual posts, but, as showing how communal representation stands on the Assam Bengal Railway as a whole, I would refer the Honourable Member to Appendix F in Volume I and Appendix C in Volume II of the Railway Boards Report on Indian Railways for 1925-26.

ALLEGATIONS AGAINST CHIEF OR HEAD CLERKS EMPLOYED ON THE ASSAM BENGAL RAILWAY.

77. *Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim : Will the Government be pleased to state whether it is not a fact that a subordinate employee of the Assam Bengal Railway cannot approach the Head of the Department concerned, without first courting the favour of the Chief or Head Clerks, who are mostly Hindus ? How many Chief or Head Clerks are there at the General Offices at Pahartali and Chittagong, and what revenue district do they belong to ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The reply to the first part of the question is in the negative.

As regards the second part, Government have no information.

EMPLOYMENT OF MUSSALMANS ON THE ASSAM BENGAL RAILWAY.

78. *Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim : Will the Government be pleased to state whether it is the intention of the Assam Bengal Railway authorities to debar Mussalmans from employment in future ? How many vacancies have been filled up during the last three years, under the head " Administration " and how many of them have been offered to Mussalmans ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The reply to the first part of the question is in the negative.

The number of vacancies filled during the last three years and the number filled by Mussalmans are as follows :

	Appointments made.	Filled by Mussalmans.
1924-25	2	Nil.
1925-26	7	Nil.
1926-27	12	2

Mr. K. Ahmed : Are Government aware that their intention of not giving employment to Muslims is in contravention of the terms of the statement made by His Excellency the Viceroy in the month of December 1924 or 1925 ? Government have just stated that their intention is not to appoint a sufficient number of Muhammadans in future, and is the Honourable Mr. Parsons representing the Railway Department aware that it is in contravention of the terms stated by His Excellency the Viceroy in reply to the address given to him in the month of December 1924 or 1925 at Belvedere ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I made no statement whatsoever to the effect that it is not the intention of Government to appoint Muhammadans.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Is not the answer given in the negative, that Government's intention is not to appoint a sufficient number of Muhammadans ? Does the Honourable Member understand the text of his reply ? (Laughter.)

APPOINTMENT OF TRAVELLING TICKET EXAMINERS AND TRAVELLING INSPECTORS OF ACCOUNTS ON THE ASSAM BENGAL RAILWAY.

79. *Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim : Will the Government be pleased to state how many Travelling Ticket Examiners and Travelling Inspectors of Accounts have been appointed by the Assam Bengal Railway during the year ending 31st May 1927 ? What are their qualifications, and how many of them are Moslems and how many are Dacca people, and how many are relations of Babu J. R. Guha and the Chief Clerk ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : 17 Travelling Ticket Examiners were appointed, of whom 3 were Moslems.

4 Travelling Inspectors of Accounts were appointed, of whom none were Moslems.

Government have no information as regards the other parts of the question.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Who has got the information ? Is it the Agent who is not here ? The Honourable Member is supposed to get information to justify his seat in this House, that he occupies on behalf of the Government, and to serve the country as well.

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Government are not prepared ordinarily to obtain information in answer to questions which contain insinuations unsupported by evidence on the character of one of their officers

Mr. K. Ahmed : If Government do not know whether there are insinuations against the character of their officers, it may be for the preservation and protection of the character of the Government officials to get information. If they do not take steps to know about the affair, how can they justify themselves in answering that this is the position, and how are we to know about it ?

PROVISION OF QUARTERS FOR THEIR EMPLOYEES BY THE ASSAM BENGAL RAILWAY.

80. *Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim : Will the Government be pleased to state whether the Assam Bengal Railway Company is bound to find pucca bungalows on the hill tops for all kinds of their employees ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : No.

RAISING OF THE PORT OF CHITTAGONG TO A MAJOR PORT, ETC.

81. *Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state whether they have any proposal pending decision, with regard to raising Chittagong Port to a major port ?

(b) What relation, if any, exists between the Assam Bengal Railway and the Port authorities at Chittagong ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : (a) The Honourable Member has doubtless seen the statement recently made by His Excellency the Governor of Bengal at Chittagong which has been reported in the Press. The Government of India are prepared to declare Chittagong a major port as soon as the necessary legislation can be undertaken so as to transfer the statutory authority from the Local Government to the Governor General in Council.

UNNECESSARY EXPENDITURE ON MASONRY BUILDINGS BY THE ASSAM BENGAL RAILWAY.

82. Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state what sum of money has been spent by the Assam Bengal Railway in making masonry buildings, and with what outturn during the last five years ?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to state whether they have any hand in controlling the unnecessary expenditure of this Railway ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Rs. 10½ lakhs. Quarters are also under construction to the value of Rs. 5¾ lakhs. A large proportion is for staff who are allowed rent-free quarters. The return on the rent-paying completed quarters is Rs. 20,300 per annum.

ASSAM BENGAL RAILWAY BUILDINGS IN CHITTAGONG.

83. Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim : Will the Government be pleased to state whether or not the Assam Bengal Railway buildings in Chittagong are within the municipal limits, and are contained in one holding ? If so, will the railway authorities let this Assembly know what amount they spend every year in repairs to their lanes, and in lighting them ? Do they receive a proportionate reduction in their bill for making these arrangements ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The buildings in question are situated within the municipal limits and are contained in one holding. The expenditure incurred annually by the railway administration on repairs to, and lighting the lanes in, the area amounts to Rs. 8,000 approximately. The Railway administration is not allowed any reduction in municipal taxation for making these arrangements.

THE ASSAM BENGAL RAILWAY COTTAGE HOSPITAL AT CHITTAGONG.

84. Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim : Will the Government be pleased to state what is the institution called " The Cottage Hospital " within the Railway holdings in the town of Chittagong ? At what annual expenditure is that institution run by the Railway Company and for whose benefit ? What are the number of patients treated annually and the staff therefor ? How many beds are there for in-door patients ? Is this institution open to all the employees of the Assam Bengal Railway Company living in and near about the town of Chittagong ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The Cottage Hospital at Chittagong is a small hospital, costing about Rs. 11,000 annually, run by the Assam Bengal Railway Company for the benefit of railway employees and their families. It has a staff of eleven, and treats about 135 patients annually. Out-door treatment is given to all employees of the Assam Bengal Railway Company. The eight beds for in-door patients are reserved for officers of all communities and their families, and for European or Anglo-Indian subordinates and their families.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Are Government aware that the number of in-door patients treated there at the expense of the State is greater for the community than for Indians, considering their ratio and proportion in the service ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I am not aware of that fact, Sir.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I ask why a distinction is made between European and Anglo-Indian subordinates and Indian subordinates ? The answer showed that Indian subordinates are not allowed to be in-door patients in the hospital.

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I expect the reason is, Sir, that there is other hospital accommodation in Chittagong for them, and, since there are only eight beds in the Railway Hospital, these are not probably enough for all communities. But I am prepared to bring to the notice of the Assam Bengal Railway what I understand to be my Honourable friend's suggestion, namely, that there should be no distinction between communities in the matter.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Do Government propose to change the reply ? The Honourable Member now admits that he made an incorrect statement in the beginning.

ADVERTISING OF VACANCIES ON THE ASSAM BENGAL RAILWAY.

85. Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state whether vacancies are advertised by the Assam Bengal Railway Company and what is the percentage of their employees in the Chittagong offices who belong to the revenue district of Chittagong ?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to state whether they are prepared to pass some such orders by which qualified outsiders too (not relations of the Bara Babu) will have a chance of serving the Company on the policy of justice and fair play ?

(c) Will the Government be pleased to state whether any educational test is required by the Assam Bengal Railway Company in taking recruits into their employ ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) As regards the first part of the question, the Departments maintain lists of applicants and as in most cases candidates are on the waiting lists when vacancies arise, it is not considered necessary to advertise as a general rule. As regards the second part, Government have no information.

(b) There is no reason to believe that the allegation made in the Honourable Member's question has any substance and Government are not prepared to address the Assam Bengal Railway on the subject.

(c) No. But applicants are interviewed by the officers and they are not appointed unless they are found fit for the posts.

QUALIFICATIONS OF AUDITORS, DEPUTY AUDITORS AND ASSISTANT AUDITORS ON THE ASSAM BENGAL RAILWAY.

86. Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state how many of the Auditors, Deputy Auditors, and Assistant Auditors in the Assam Bengal Railway Head Office at Chittagong, are chartered accountants, or have passed any other recognised examinations ?

(b) What tests do the Government of India apply in making similar appointments under their disposal ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) One Assistant Auditor is a chartered accountant and another before his appointment to the Assam Bengal Railway was an Assistant Audit Officer in the Finance Department and has passed all the necessary qualifying examinations prescribed by Government for that appointment.

(b) Competitive examinations are held by the Finance Department for the Indian Audit and Accounts Service.

TRAVELLING AND HALTING ALLOWANCES OF OFFICERS ON THE ASSAM BENGAL RAILWAY PROVIDED WITH SALOONS.

87. Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim : Will the Government be pleased to state whether the officers in the employ of the Assam Bengal Railway, who are provided with saloons, are entitled to travelling allowances and halting allowances as well ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : They are entitled to a night allowance when absent from headquarters at mid-night, but not to travelling allowance.

LEAVE RULES OF THE ASSAM BENGAL RAILWAY.

88. Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim : Will the Government be pleased to state what facilities the Assam Bengal Railway allow their employees in the matter of leave ? Do they follow the C. S. R., or have they got any other code of their own ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The Assam Bengal Railway have their own leave rules.

NUMBER OF STATIONS WITH RAISED PLATFORMS ON THE ASSAM BENGAL RAILWAY.

89. Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim : (a) How many stations of the Assam Bengal Railway have got raised platforms ?

(b) What facilities, if any do they afford to female and invalid passengers in getting into the trains, where they have no platform coming up to the steps of the train ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) The Assam Bengal Railway have raised platforms at seven stations.

BUNGALOW AT DHOOM STATION ON THE ASSAM BENGAL RAILWAY.

90. Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim : Will the Government be pleased to state with what object in view a bungalow has been built at Dhoom station on the Assam Bengal Railway and at what cost ? Who does the catering in that bungalow ? For how long do the trains stop there ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The bungalow was built as a refreshment room at a cost of Rs. 4,741, including outhouses and furniture.

The catering is done by Messrs. Framjee and Co.

Trains are booked to stop from 4 to 12 minutes, but if meals are required they are detained. The refreshment room was opened in September 1926, but the time-table has not been altered to allow full time for meals pending further experience of the trains for which meals are in demand.

Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim : Will the Honourable Member in charge of Railways please tell us if any of the trains reach Dhoom station at any meal time ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I am afraid I must ask for notice of that question. I have not got the time table here.

APPEALS AGAINST DISMISSALS OF EMPLOYEES OF THE ASSAM BENGAL RAILWAY.

91. *Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim : What procedure, if any, do they follow on the Assam Bengal Railway in dismissing a man from their employ ? Who is the final court of appeal against orders of such dismissals ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : If the Honourable Member will let me know the class of employees to whom he refers, I will see if I can obtain the information for him.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Have not the Government of India already answered in the last Session that they will not interfere with the dismissal of an officer who sends a petition or memorial to the Government of India or to the Secretary of State unless it comes through the Agent, who has already disposed of the matter ? The Members of the Assembly who are here to criticise the action of the Agent and compel the Government of India to give suitable answers are debarred from doing so. Is there no practice or procedure followed in other countries indicating how they uplifted the condition of the employees and does it not show that the Government of India are not working the Reforms and are interfering with them ?

Mr. President : Order, order. I have considerable sympathy with the Honourable Member's point of view, but this is not the occasion to raise a debate on that question. The Honourable Member can legitimately do so by a Resolution.

LOCAL ADVISORY COMMITTEE OF THE ASSAM BENGAL RAILWAY AT CHITTAGONG.

92. *Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim : Will the Government be pleased to state in what matters the Assam Bengal Railway consults the Local Advisory Committee at Chittagong ? Are the recommendations of these advisors considered by the Agent and his subordinates ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : For the type of questions on which the Agent may consult his Local Advisory Committee, I would refer the Honourable Member to the reply given to Mr. Kamat's question No. 376 on the 19th February 1923. From a perusal of the summaries of Proceedings of the Committee (copies of which are in the Library) I find that he has in the past year actually consulted the Committee on such diverse subjects as :

Train timings.

Additional trains.

Through carriages.

Dining cars.

Waiting accommodation.

Sidings.

Branch lines.

Goods sheds.

Delays in transit.

Return tickets.

Platform tickets.

Rates.

Conditions of booking and delivery of consignments.

That is not an exhaustive list.

I am sure he pays much attention to the advice he receives from his Committee.

EMPLOYMENT OF A MUSSALMAN OR CHRISTIAN STATION MASTER AT SITAKUND ON THE ASSAM BENGAL RAILWAY.

93. *Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim : Will the Government be pleased to state what objection there is, legal or otherwise, to placing a Mussalman or Christian station master at Sitakund on the Assam Bengal Railway in the Chittagong District ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : There can be no legal objection to placing a Mussalman or Christian station master in charge of Sitakund station on the Assam Bengal Railway ; but as Sitakund is a most important shrine to the Hindus, as evidenced by the mela held there and the number of people coming to these melas by rail, it is generally considered good policy to place a Hindu station master in charge of this station.

MOSLEM CLERKS AND MENIALS EMPLOYED ON THE ASSAM BENGAL RAILWAY.

94. *Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim : Will the Government be pleased to state how many clerks and menials there are in the whole of the Assam Bengal Railway system ? And what is the percentage of the Moslems therein ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I would refer the Honourable Member to Appendix C in Volume II of the Railway Board's Report on Indian Railways for 1925-26 which gives all the information in the possession of Government.

REMEDIES FOR THE DEFECTS AND WASTE IN THE ADMINISTRATION OF THE ASSAM BENGAL RAILWAY AND OTHER RAILWAYS.

95. *Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim : Will the Government be pleased to state whether the members of the Central Advisory Board for Railways have any power, by virtue of their office, to inquire into and suggest remedies for the defects and waste in the administration of the Assam Bengal Railway and other railway systems in India ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The reply is in the negative.

TRIAL FOR SEDITION OF CERTAIN INDIAN RESIDENTS OF SHANGHAI.

96. *Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Are Government aware that action for sedition has recently been brought against a few Indian residents of Shanghai, who are members of the Indian Nationalist Committee, and that several of them have been arrested ?

(b) Will Government be pleased to make a statement on the subject, giving the number of Indians arrested, the summary of the charges brought against them, the facilities given to them for defence, and the result of the trial ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Government are aware that certain Indians were arrested recently in Shanghai on charges of seditious activity. So far as is known, twelve men were arrested, of whom five were committed for trial before the Supreme Court. Three of these men pleaded guilty to charges of possessing seditious literature with intent to distribute it and of conspiring to excite disaffection among the subjects of the King. They have been sentenced to one year's imprisonment to be followed by deportation. There is no definite information regarding the remaining two, but it seems probable that they were acquitted. Government are not acquainted with the details of the procedure of the Shanghai Supreme Court, but facilities for the defence of accused persons are no doubt similar to those given in British Courts elsewhere.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : Will the Government call for detailed information on this matter ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I have asked for further information on the subject. I have not yet received it.

Diwan Chaman Lall : May I ask the Honourable Member where these three Indians are going to be deported to ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I have no information on that point.

HEALTH OF SRIJUT JYOTISH CHANDRA GHOSH, A BENGAL DETENU.

97. *Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Is it a fact that Srijut Jyotish Chandra Ghosh, a Bengal detenu, is in a serious state of health, and that he has been suffering from nervous prostration, insomnia, heart trouble, and dyspepsia ?

(c) Will the Government be pleased to place on the table a copy of the latest medical report about his health ; and also indicate what action, if any, they want to take in this matter ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a), (b) & (c). The latest medical report, dated the 27th July is to the effect that the state of Jyotish Chandra Ghosh's health is not serious. He complains of insomnia and dyspepsia, but is not suffering from nervous prostration or heart disease. His weight when first arrested was 173 lbs. : it is now 171 lbs. In view of this report, it is not proposed to take any action.

Mr. Satyendra Chandra Mitra : Is the Honourable Member aware that Major Finlay, Superintendent of Insien Jail, reported that Professor Jyotish Chandra Ghosh is suffering from nervous prostration and he removed him to the jail hospital, and further that there is a standing rule that detenus are to be ordinarily treated in their cells and unless they are very seriously ill should not be removed to the jail hospital ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I am afraid I am not in a position to add anything to the reply I have just given which, as the Honourable Member will have observed, is based upon a medical report so recent as the 27th July.

Mr. Satyendra Chandra Mitra : Is the Honourable Member further aware that when he was removed to Mandalay Jail, the Superintendent of Mandalay jail, Major Smith, thought fit to consult the Civil Surgeon of Mandalay about the seriousness of Professor Jyotish Chandra Ghosh's illness ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I have no information to that effect. I have no doubt that the Honourable Member's information is quite correct.

EXCLUSION OF " FORWARD " FROM BURMA.

98. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state if there passed any communication between them and the Government of Burma, or the Government of Bengal, regarding the exclusion of the " Forward " newspaper from Burma ?

(b) What are the grounds for the order of exclusion ; and will the Government be pleased to place all correspondence on this subject on the table ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a) The facts of the matter have been reported to the Government of India.

(b) The order was passed in view of the publication in Forward of certain false and mischievous statements attributing to the Government an aggressive policy on the China-Burman Frontier and the expressed intention of the editor of the paper to repeat these false statements should occasion arise in spite of the Burma Government's intimation that they were totally unfounded. I do not propose to place any correspondence on the table. The order is no longer in force.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Had those observations made by the " Forward " any special reference to the Government of Burma ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : They referred generally to the action taken by Government as established by law.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : May I know, Sir, whether the Government of India were consulted before action against the paper was taken ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : No, Sir ; the Government of India were not consulted before the Government of Burma took this action.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : May I know, Sir, under what provision of law this action was taken by the Burma Government ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Under section 26 of the Post Office Act.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : Are the Government satisfied that it is a fair use made of the Post Office Act ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I think that the substance of the reply which I have already given answers adequately the Honourable Member's question.

Diwan Chaman Lall : May I ask, Sir, whether the Government of Burma is more sensitive than the other Governments ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I am not aware that this is a fact.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : May I know, Sir, why criminal proceedings were not instituted against the paper ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Because the Government of Burma considered that the action they actually did take was likely to be the most effective and expedient in the circumstances.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Then, why have they withdrawn that order ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : They withdrew their order because they considered it no longer necessary to keep in force.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : May I know, Sir, if the Government of India ever thought of putting into motion the Indian Post Office Act against the Forward in respect of these articles ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : No, Sir ; the Government of India had not as a matter of fact contemplated taking action suo motu.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : May I know, Sir, what new elements arose between the issuing of the order and its cancellation ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Lapse of time.

PROPOSED DEMOLITION OF THE HISTORIC HOUSE OF THE LATE POET BANKIM CHANDRA CHATTERJEE, AT KANTHALPARA, NAIHATI, EASTERN BENGAL RAILWAY.

99. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Are Government aware that the historic house of the late poet Bankim Chandra Chatterjee, author of the poem " Bande Mataram ", at Kanthalpara, Naihati, Eastern Bengal Railway, is going to be demolished for the extension of the Naihati station, and that preliminary notices have already been issued by the Collector upon the heirs of the late poet ?

(b) Are Government aware that the proposed demolition of this historic residence has been strongly objected to ; and do Government propose to take steps to save this house from vandalism ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Government understand that in order to improve the entrance into the Naihati Goods Yard at the north end, the Agent of the Eastern Bengal Railway caused enquiries to be made whether the present owner of the late Bankim Chandra Chatterjee's house were willing to part with a strip 20 ft. wide and 185 ft. long along the western side of the property. This strip includes an outhouse, a portion of the court-yard about 8 ft. wide and a portion of two living rooms one of which is not a part of the late author's portion of the joint house. The greater portion of the property is stated to be a mass of ruins, the only parts in a fair state of repairs being the outer buildings on two sides. It was ascertained that the owner would agree to the acquisition of the complete property but not a portion of it, and the Land Acquisition Officer was thereupon instructed to prepare an estimate of the cost of acquiring the whole property. It is understood that no notice of acquisition has yet been issued by the Collector upon the heirs of the late poet.

(b) Government are aware that rumours of a possible acquisition of the building which, as I say, is in ruins, have evoked public opposition in Bengal and propose to instruct the Agent of the Railway to reconsider the design of the yard with a view to avoiding the necessity of encroaching upon a part of the late author's house.

RETIREMENT OF EUROPEAN GOVERNMENT OFFICIALS ON PROPORTIONATE PENSIONS.

100. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Is it a fact that Government have asked European Government officials in India to indicate before the sitting of the Statutory Commission, whether they have any intention of resigning their services on proportionate pensions ? If so, has any reply been received ?

(b) Will Government kindly state how many European officials have already retired on proportionate pension, since the introduction of the Reforms ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a) No.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Are Government aware if any such enquiry has been instituted either at the instance of an individual or at the instance of a body of officials ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I have no information on that point, Sir.

Mr. Arthur Moore : Is it not a fact that a certain class of officers for whom no special provision has been made were informed that, until the appointment of the Statutory Commission, individual applications to retire would receive the consideration of the Secretary of State ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I am not quite clear as to the precise purport of the Honourable Member's question. No enquiry of the nature suggested in the original question was issued by Government nor, so far as they are aware, by any official authority.

Mr. Arthur Moore : Arising out of that question, Sir, is it not a fact that a certain class of officers for whom no special provision has been made were informed by circular that individual applications for permission to retire would receive the consideration of the Secretary of State until the appointment of the Statutory Commission ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : It is the case that in dealing with a matter which hardly I think arises on this question,—in dealing with the general conditions relating to retirement on proportionate pension, there was a certain number of cases which did not come precisely within the ambit of the rules, but the Secretary of State intimated that he was prepared to consider individual cases which, though not coming within the precise terms of these rules, might merit special consideration. It is not within my recollection that any reference was made in that connection to the appointment of the Statutory Commission.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Are Government prepared to lay a copy of the Secretary of State's communication on the table ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I will enquire into that point, Sir. It is not precisely within my recollection in what context the statement was made but I have a pretty clear recollection that it was made.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Is it a fact, Sir, with reference to clause (b), that some officials secured very lucrative appointments outside Government employ before putting in their applications for retirement on proportionate pensions ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : The rules, Sir, prohibit any officer obtaining lucrative appointments while still in Government service.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : May I know, Sir, whether these cases of retirement on proportionate pension are cases of retirement on political grounds ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : They are cases of retirement in accordance with the provisions set out in the rules relating to retirement on proportionate pension, which I suggest the Honourable and learned gentleman might consult.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : May I know whether there are any special causes for retirement ? There is one cause of retirement stated and which was in the Lee Commission's Report, that is, in consequence of the constitutional changes in this country. Were these cases such cases ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : The 364 cases to which I referred ?

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : Yes.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : They were cases of retirement on proportionate pension in accordance with the conditions prescribed in the rules.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : I want to know again specifically whether these 364 cases are cases in which people wanted to retire on account of the fact that the constitution of the Government of this country and the constitution of the Services have been altered or are undergoing alteration ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : The general condition laid down in the rules is that an applicant retiring on proportionate pension makes a statement to the effect that he wishes to retire because of the changes which have been made in the conditions of his service.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : And there are 364 cases, Sir ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : There are 364 cases.

SPEECH DELIVERED BY EARL WINTERTON IN THE HOUSE OF COMMONS REGARDING THE BENGAL DETENUS.

101. *Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : With reference to the recent speech delivered by Earl Winterton, in the House of Commons, regarding the Bengal detenus, has the attention of the Government been drawn to the statement made by Mr. Subhas Chandra Bose (vide Amrita Bazar Patrika, dated the 7th June 1927), in which he says :

" The noble Earl is reported to have said that ' the prisoners were tried before a Judge, and Mr. Subhas Chandra Bose, before two Judges '. None of the detenus has, so far as I am aware, ever been tried before a Judge or Judges. There has not even been a mock trial. I was never produced before any Magistrate, or Judge ; nor was I ever told by whom the papers in connection with my case which had been prepared or fabricated, had been examined, either prior to my arrest, or would be examined subsequent to it '' ?

(b) Is the above a substantially correct statement of fact ? And if so, do Government propose to ask Earl Winterton to withdraw the unfounded statement made by him in the House of Commons ?

(c) Are Government aware that in course of the said statement referred to in (a) above, Mr. Subhas Chandra Bose says :

'' My predicament was the result of personal malice against me on the part of a high police official '' ?

In view of the nature of this charge, do Government propose to call upon Mr. Subhas Chandra Bose either to prove the charge, or to withdraw it ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a) & (b). I have seen the statement made by Mr. Subash Chandra Bose to which the Honourable Member invites attention. The report of Lord Winterton's remark which he quotes is not entirely accurate, and since then a further statement on the subject has been made in the House of Commons, which prevents any possibility of misunderstanding.

(c) No.

Diwan Chaman Lall : Will the Honourable Member give us the remarks made by Lord Winterton ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : They will be found in the report of the speech in Hansard, a copy of which can be seen in the Library.

Diwan Chaman Lall : Wherein does the Honourable Member consider those remarks to be inaccurate ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I think, Sir, if the Honourable Member will be good enough to read the version of the statement contained in the question and compare it closely with that which appears in the official report he will see that the reproduction is not entirely accurate.

Mr. T. C. Goswami : Is it not a fact that the subsequent statement of the Earl of Winterton was in the nature of white-washing his previous statement ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I do not think that can be fairly suggested. It appears to me that there was some inaccuracy in the Noble Lord's first statement and that he then quite honestly and candidly corrected it in his second statement.

Mr. T. C. Goswami : Has the Honourable Member any doubt that the Noble Earl made an inaccurate statement on the subject of the so-called trial of these detenus ? Has the Honourable Member any doubt that whatever statement the Noble Earl made was inaccurate ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I am very far from being prepared to say that whatever statement the Noble Lord made was inaccurate !

Mr. K. Ahmed : In view of the fact that Lord Winterton, the Under Secretary of State for India, has committed a gross blunder.....

Mr. President : Order, order !

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Sir, I have a question to ask. Is it not a fact that in making such statements on important subjects in the House of Commons, the Under Secretary of State or the Secretary of State generally depends upon what information is supplied by the Government of India.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : If the Honourable gentleman suggests that any inaccuracy that might have been in the Noble Lord's statement was based on some statement communicated by the Government of India, I am in a position to assure him that that is not the case.

Mr. T. C. Goswami : May I point out to the Honourable the Home Member that the inaccuracy in the speech of the Under Secretary of State is a very serious one, and that it almost appears as if the Noble Earl was deliberately misleading the House of Commons.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : No, Sir. I think, the House will generally agree that if the Noble Lord took the earliest possible opportunity of correcting an admitted inaccuracy on one point, the matter should be allowed to go at that.

Mr. T. C. Goswami : After the debate was over ; and then when he had to.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : May I know, Sir, what was the communication which was supplied by the Government of India on which the statement of Earl Winterton is based ?

12 NOON.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I never committed myself to the statement that any such communication was supplied.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh . Do I take it that no communication was supplied at all ?

102. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Will the Government kindly furnish a statement, indicating the Resolutions together with the dates, passed by the Legislative Assembly, and the Council of State, during the last Delhi Session, and the action taken on them ?

RETENTION BY THE PROVINCIAL MUSEUM AT PATNA OF THE VALUABLE RELICS FOUND AT PATALIPUTRA AND NALANDA IN BIHAR.

103. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Are Government aware that valuable relics have been found out of the excavations at Pataliputra and Nalanda in Bihar ; and that there is a proposal at the instance of the Director General of Archæology to remove a portion to the Imperial Museum at Calcutta ?

(b) Have Government considered the claims of the Provincial Museum at Patna to retain a substantial portion of the valuable finds ?

Mr. A. R. Dalal : (a) Yes.

(b) Yes ; the Director General of Archæology is now in correspondence with the Bihar and Orissa Government on the subject.

LONDON " DAILY NEWS " COAL MISSION REPORT.

104. Diwan Chaman Lall : (a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to the London Daily News Coal Mission Report ? (23rd May 1927) ?

(b) Have Government examined the possibility of applying the recommendations of that report to conditions prevailing in Indian coal mines ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) No.

Diwan Chaman Lall : Will the Honourable Member take the earliest opportunity of consulting that Report, Sir ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : I shall be obliged if the Honourable Member would send me the Report in case he has already got it, because I have not been able to get a copy of it.

Diwan Chaman Lall : Is the Honourable Member aware that I enclosed a cutting along with my question giving a summary of this Report ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : I do not remember to have seen the cutting. It may have got mislaid in the passage of the question to me.

DIVIDENDS PAID BY INDIAN COTTON MILLS IN BOMBAY FROM 1905 TO 1926.

105. Diwan Chaman Lall : (a) Will Government be pleased to state the dividends paid per annum from 1905 to 1926 inclusive by Indian cotton mills operating in Bombay and the proportion per annum of such dividends to the capital invested in such mills ?

(b) Have Government any information as to the reasons for a drop in dividends paid by such mills in Bombay since 1923 ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : (a) The Honourable Member is referred to page 20 of the Report of the Tariff Board (Cotton Textile Industry Enquiry) which gives the figures from 1917 to 1925. With regard to the other years, I am afraid the only source of information I can suggest to the Honourable Member is the commercial and financial newspapers which publish information regarding dividends from time to time.

Mr. B. Das : Is it not a fact, Sir, that the low dividends for the last three years are mainly due to the over-capitalisation of the cotton mills in Bombay ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I think the House will agree that this is perhaps too large a question to be dealt with by way of a question and answer.

ARREST OF ONE FAZL ELAHI IN BOMBAY AND HIS TRIAL IN THE NORTH-WEST FRONTIER PROVINCE.

106. Diwan Chaman Lall : Will Government state whether recently a young Indian was arrested in Bombay and taken to the North-West Frontier Province, and charged there ? Will Government state his name, age, reason for arrest, charges on which he was tried and sentence awarded, and whether proper facilities were given for his defence ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : The Honourable Member apparently has in mind the case of Fazl Elahi. He was arrested in Bombay, as he was believed to have committed an offence under the Passport Rules. Subsequently a complaint was made against him of conspiracy to wage war against the King, and as the evidence related mostly to the North-West Frontier Province, the case was transferred for the convenience of witnesses to the Court of the District Magistrate, Peshawar. Fazl Elahi, whose age is 25, has been sentenced under section 121-A of the Indian Penal Code to five years' rigorous imprisonment. He was defended by a pleader.

Diwan Chaman Lall : May I ask the Honourable Member whether he is aware that of the witnesses who appeared in this case one came from Bombay, one came from Kashmir, one came from Calcutta, one came from Lahore and one came from Ludhiana, while only two police witnesses came from Peshawar, and therefore it could not have been for the convenience of the witnesses that the case was transferred from Bombay to Peshawar ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I am not, as a matter of fact, aware that the Honourable Member's facts are correct, but I am not prepared to question them. But in view of all the circumstances of the case, and not solely with regard to the convenience of witnesses, I think there was every reason for the better trial of the case that it should be tried in the North-West Frontier Province.

Diwan Chaman Lall : Was not the real reason the convenience of obtaining a conviction ?

Mr. K. Ahmed : In view of the fact that proper facilities were not given to the accused for his defence, do Government propose to remit the sentence under section 121 of the Indian Penal Code or in the alternative order a re-trial of the case and engage a counsel to defend the accused and give him all the facilities which he is entitled to get ?

TELEGRAMS RELATING TO THE FLOODS IN GUJARAT AND SIND AND ORISSA.

Secretary of the Assembly : Sir, in reply to the meassage of sympathy conveyed in the Resolution regarding the distress caused by the floods, which was passed by the Assembly on the 18th instant, the following communications have been received :

" Telegram from Mr. Vallabhai Patel, President, Gujarat Provincial Congress Committee, Ahmedabad.

On behalf of afflicted people of Gujarat I express sincere gratitude for the kind message of sympathy from Legislative Assembly which will be highly appreciated and will greatly console people in their distress. Please convey my sincere thanks to President and Members of Assembly."

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : Is there no message from the Government of Bihar and Orissa ?

Mr. President : All the telegrams that have been received so far have been already read out by the Secretary.

ELECTION OF MR. S. C. MITRA TO THE COMMITTEE ON PUBLIC ACCOUNTS.

Mr. President : With regard to the election of Members to the Committee on Public Accounts, there were only two candidates for election to that Committee, namely, Raja Ghazanfar Ali Khan and Mr. S. C. Mitra. As Raja Ghazanfar Ali Khan has now withdrawn his candidature, I declare Mr. S. C. Mitra to be duly elected. (Applause.)

Mr. President : I have to inform the Assembly that the number of candidates nominated for election to the panel for the Standing Committee to advise on subjects in the Department of Education, Health and Lands is equal to the number required and, therefore, I announce that the following members are declared to be duly elected :

Mian Muhammad Shah Nawaz.
Colonel J. D. Crawford.
Mr. M. Ruthnaswamy.
Mr. Muhammad Yamin Khan.

Raja Ghazanfar Ali Khan.

Mr. Abdul Latif Sahib Farookhi.

EXTENSION OF THE TIME FOR RECEIVING NOMINATIONS FOR ELECTION TO THE PANEL FOR THE ADVISORY PUBLICITY COMMITTEE

Mr. President : I may inform the Assembly that up to 3 o'clock on Friday, the 19th August, the time fixed for receiving nominations, only 8 nominations were received for election to the panel for the Advisory Publicity Committee. As the number of candidates required is 14, I extend the period for receiving further nominations up to 12 Noon on Thursday, the 25th August. The election cannot therefore take place to-day but will, if necessary, take place in this Chamber on Monday, the 29th August.

Mr. Varahagiri Venkata Jogiah (Ganjam cum Vizagapatam : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : How could the consent of Colonel Crawford to be on the panel be obtained when he is in England ? It is said that Colonel Crawford is now in England.

Mr. President : All that is necessary is that the proposer must satisfy himself that his nominee is willing to act, if elected, and I have no reason to believe that he has not so satisfied himself. Has the Honourable Member any information to the contrary ?

THE INDIAN TARIFF (COTTON YARN AMENDMENT) BILL.

The Honourable Sir George Rainy (Member for Commerce and Railways) : Sir, I rise to move that the Bill further to amend the Indian Tariff Act, 1894, in order to safeguard the manufacture of cotton yarn in British India be referred to a Select Committee consisting of Mr. Muhammad Yakub, Mr. Shanmukham Chetty, Sir Victor Sassoon, Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas, Mr. Lamb, Dr. Suhrawardy, Diwan Chaman Lall, Mr. Joshi, Raja Ghazanfar Ali Khan, Mr. Duraiswamy Aiyangar, Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta, Mr. S. C Mitra, Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru, Munshi Iswar Saran and Mr. Jayakar, and that the number of members whose presence shall be necessary to constitute a meeting shall be five and that the Committee be instructed to report on or as soon as possible after the 29th August, 1927.

Mr. President : Is not the Honourable Member himself on the list ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I was under the impression that under the rules the Member in charge of the Department concerned was automatically on the list, but if I am in error, then I would move that my own name be added.

Mr. President : The Honourable Member has handed in the list to the Chair with his name in it.

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : This Bill, Mr. President, is limited in its scope. It is not a Bill proposing the grant of protection for the manufacture of cotton yarn in a general way. Its sole object is to safeguard its manufacture in India against unfair competition. Its origin is to be sought in the Report of the Tariff Board which was appointed to inquire into the depression in the cotton industry, but though it is based on the findings of the Board, it does not give effect to the recommendations either of the majority or the minority of that body. The responsibility for the proposal actually put forward rests on the Government of India and on the Government of India alone.

I should like at the outset to clear up one point about which there is a good deal of misconception I have said that the object of the Bill is to safeguard the manufacture of yarn in India against unfair competition, and it is important to understand exactly what that means. The finding of the Tariff Board is that the industrial conditions in Japan are such that the Japanese mills are able to produce yarn at a lower cost than the Indian mills. Now the first question obviously that comes up is what are these conditions. I think the only one which it is necessary for us to take into account is the fact that in Japan night work by women is allowed in the cotton mills, whereas in India it is prohibited by law. In the Japanese spinning mills more than three-quarters of the operatives are women, and the fact that they are allowed to work at night makes it possible to work the mill in two shifts instead of in one shift, which is the usual practice in India. I say, Mr. President, that night work by women in the Japanese spinning mills is the only fact which we need take into account at present. It is true that the legal hours of work for various classes of operatives in Japan are longer than they are in India, and the Tariff Board has stated in detail what the differences are. But since July 1926 " the maximum hours for which it is permissible to work in double shift mills is 10 hours per shift ", and amongst the spinning mills double shift working is almost universal. For this reason the Tariff Board say :

> " All those concerns whose output of yarn competes with that of the Indian mills are working two shifts of 10 hours each."

It is clear, therefore, that the hours of work per shift are not longer in Japan than they are in India, and the only factor that influences costs is the double shift working.

How, it may be asked, does the working of double shifts reduce the cost of production ? It does so, because the standing and overhead charges can be spread over double the production. It would not be correct, of course, to say that this had the effect of halving the spinning and overhead charges, because when a mill works double shifts, some of the items, such as the depreciation of plant and machinery, will be higher than they would be in a mill that was working one shift only. Nevertheless, double shift working means a substantial reduction in cost. The Board have worked out in detail what that reduction in cost probably amounts to, and they took as typical first a mill spinning an average of 20s. and then a mill spinning an average of 32s. For reasons which will be apparent later, I will confine myself to the latter mill, that is a mill which is assumed to be spinning an average of 32s. The Tariff Board found that the saving in the actual cost of manufacture was 6.3 pies per pound, but that if a reasonable reduction on the capital invested in the business was taken into account, the figure would be raised to 16½ pies per pound. That, they thought, was the extent of the advantage that the Japanese spinning mills derived from working double shifts and this advantage they held constituted unfair competition. Now, this brings me to the point I wanted to clear up. Why is this competition called unfair ? I think I am right in saying that the kind of competition originally stigmatised by this name was competition in which bounties are involved or, again, what we commonly describe as dumping. Now it can be argued that in this case the term " unfair competition " has a certain appropriateness. It might be said for example that if the Government of one country pays bounties in order to stimulate the sale of its merchandise in foreign markets, that is unfair. That, as a matter of fact, is the complaint that was made in the United States of America by certain manufacturers not so long ago with reference to the bounties on steel in India which they alleged made it possible to sell pig-iron more cheaply in America Then again, it might be said that it is unfair that a manufacturer should sell at a very low price in a foreign market at a price which is lower than the price he expects in his own country, and which may be actually unremunerative. In cases like that, I can understand why the term " unfair " is used, although my personal view is that it is much better avoided, because it is a term which always carries with it a suggestion that there is something unfair in the action either of the foreign manufacturer or of the foreign Government and that suggestion may be quite unreasonable. But in the case we are considering to-day, the case of the competition in cotton yarn, the unfairness, if unfairness there be, does not arise from any action taken by the Japanese Government or the Japanese Legislature, but from the action of the Government of India and the Indian Legislature. The Indian cotton manufacturer is quite entitled to come to the Indian Legislature and say : " If I am to be subjected to a restriction, such as the prohibition of night work by women, from which my rivals in other countries are free, then I ought to be compensated in some way because these restrictions raise my cost of production. It is unfair that I should be put in that position. " That is a perfectly tenable line of argument. But the point I wish to emphasise is that his complaint lies not against the foreign Government, Legislature or manufacturer, but against the Government and Legislature of his own country. I have thought it necessary to emphasise this point, Mr. President, because it has frequently been said that the Government of Japan ought to have ratified the Washington Convention which prohibits night work by women. In answer to that, I think perhaps it is sufficient to say that, when at an International Labour Conference, the representatives of any country sign an international convention, no obligation to ratify is thereby imposed on the Government of that country. It may be very desirable—I think it is—that as many countries as possible should simultaneously ratify these Conventions, because otherwise the improvement in labour conditions which is most necessary must almost inevitably be retarded. But the fact remains that the question whether a Convention should be ratified or not is a matter for decision by the Government of each country concerned, and failure to ratify by one country is not a legitimate ground of complaint by the Government of any other country.

I hope I have made it plain, Mr. President, that when I use the term " unfair competition "—and I shall use it as little as I can—I am giving to it what is really a technical sense. "Unfair competition" is competition against which industries can ordinarily claim to be safeguarded whether that arises from the action of the foreign Governments or manufacturers or, as in this case, from the restrictions imposed by the law of the country itself. Well, Mr. President, to pass from that point. Perhaps I had better try and pick up the threads of the argument from the point from which I diverged. The finding of the Tariff Board was that owing to night work of women in Japan it was possible to work in double shifts instead of in single shifts, that the double shift working meant a reduction in the selling price which would give a fair return on the capital invested of 16½ pies a pound, and that figure at the date the Board reported amounted to 10 per cent. of the value of the imported yarn. They found also that the competition was unfair in the sense in which I have tried to explain to the House. The Government of India accept all these findings. They accept the finding that it is the night work of women that makes double shift working possible. They accept the finding that the reduction in the fair selling price resulting from double shift working is 16½ pies a pound in the case of yarn of 32s. counts, and they accept the finding that the competition is unfair in the sense I have tried to explain. It still remained for the Tariff Board to establish one more point before their case was complete and I think that perhaps on this question I cannot do better than read from what the Board themselves actually said. The passage will be found on page 39 of the Report. What they say is this :

"Japanese yarn of 32s. counts superior in quality to the comparable Indian product is thus being sold at a price which is practically equal to the cost of manufacture alone of yarn of this count in India without any allowance for profit or depreciation. In view of the fact that there is a definite relative value between the prices of the various counts of yarn sold, and that a fall in the price of yarn of counts of 30s. or 40s. therefore affects the price of all other counts in a varying degree, it must, we think, be held that the competition of Japanese yarn exercises a depressing effect on the price of Indian yarn and that this in a large measure must be held to account for the fact that the spinning mills, with one or two striking exceptions due to special circumstances, are in a worse position than mills which have both spinning and weaving departments."

What the Board say comes therefore to this, that nearly all the mills in India with spinning departments only are doing badly, that Japanese yarn of the counts of 30s. to 40s. is selling at a price which is little higher than the Indian cost of manufacture and that the low price of the Japanese yarn is keeping down the price not only of Indian yarn of the same counts but of all counts and especially counts below 30s. That is the finding that completes the case which the Board endeavoured to establish as regards cotton yarn.

There is one point here to which I should like to direct attention. It is to be noted that the price of Indian yarn of the lower counts, that is, counts below 30s. is affected by Japanese competition not directly but indirectly. The Board make this quite clear. This is what they say. In quoting this passage I shall omit a few words not relevant for my present purpose. It begins at the foot of page 38 :

"The figures of imports we have given above show that it can no longer be the price of Japanese yarn of counts below 30s. which determines the price of Indian yarn of similar counts though we received evidence that it has done so in the past.... Such influence as is now exercised on the price of Indian yarn (of counts below 30s.) must therefore be exercised by Japanese yarn of counts above 30s.''

It is their clear recognition of this fact I think which dictated the very careful and guarded wording of the Board's finding. They abstain from saying that the price of Japanese yarn between 30s. and 40s. is the sole cause which keeps down the price of Indian yarn, and they content themselves with saying that it exercises a depressing effect on the price of yarn generally. So far as the medium counts between 30s. and 40s. are concerned, there can be no doubt at all I think, that the price of Japanese yarn is the sole factor we need consider, for here the competition is direct. But when we come to the counts below 30s. the position is very different. I find from an examination of the figures for the year 1926-27 that the quantity of yarn available for sale to the handloom weavers, after the needs of the mills had been met, amounted to about 318 million pounds. During the same year the production and imports of yarn of counts higher than 30s. was about 85 million pounds. Even if we assume that the whole of this quantity had been taken by the handloom weavers and none of it consumed in the mills or exported the total quantity of yarn of counts below 30s. on sale in India available for the handloom weavers would still have amounted to over 230 million pounds. Now, in these circumstances, it appears probable that internal competition must have a good deal to do with the price of counts below 30s. and here there are two things which have to be remembered. In the first place, the fact that the imports of Japanese yarn of counts below 30s. have fallen to a very low level indicates that it can no longer be sold profitably in India, and if so, the price of these counts is not according to the ideas of the Japanese manufacturer, in its correct relation to the price of medium counts (i.e., 31s. to 40s.). If in his opinion the prices were in their correct relation, then he would sell yarn of one count as readily as he sells yarn of another. In the second place, and I attach some importance to this, it is quite possible when trade is depressed and prices are low that there is more than one depressing factor at work and that prices may not rise unless all these factors are removed. I have thought it necessary to dwell on this question of the price of the lower counts of yarn at some length, because it is very doubtful whether the imposition of even a prohibitive duty on imported yarn would raise the price of the lower counts of yarn materially. But subject to this one qualification, the Government of India accept the findings of the Tariff Board. They agree that the price of the medium counts from 31s. to 40s. is governed by the price of Japanese yarn of similar counts, and if so, the imposition of an additional duty would be at once reflected in an increase of the price probably to the full extent of the duty. They agree also that the low price of the medium counts keeps down, or prevents from rising, the price of the counts below 30s. but consider that internal competition also plays a considerable part in keeping the price down. If, however, the price of the medium counts were raised by an increase in the import duty, the probable result would be to transfer an appreciable proportion of the Indian spindleage to the production of the medium counts with a consequent diminution of the internal competition in the production of the lower counts. In that way some increase in the price of lower counts might follow, but the total imports of the medium counts do not much exceed 25 million pounds a year, and this quantity is less than 10 per cent. of the Indian yarn available for sale after the requirements of the mills have been met.

[Sir George Rainy.]

There is one point to which perhaps I ought to have drawn attention earlier. The Tariff Board were unanimous in their finding except on one point, namely, as to the extent of the disadvantage under which the Indian mills suffered. The majority of the Board considered that a reasonable return on capital should be taken into account in calculating this disadvantage, whereas the President of the Board, Mr. Noyce, took the view that only the actual cost of manufacture should be considered. His finding, therefore, was that the extent of the disadvantage was 4 per cent. of the selling price of the Indian mills, whereas the majority of the Board found that it was 10 per cent. I need not, I think, dwell on this difference of opinion and it will suffice to say that on this point the Government of India have accepted the opinion of the majority of the Board that a fair return on capital should be taken into account.

I will pass on, therefore, to the question of the recommendations made by the Tariff Board to safeguard the Indian industry against unfair competition. The Tariff Board differed not only as to the extent of the disadvantage under which the Indian mills suffered but also as to the measures to be taken to correct that disadvantage. The majority of the Board proposed to leave the duty on yarn unchanged, but put forward a scheme for the payment of bounties to encourage the spinning of the finer counts. Mr. Noyce, on the other hand, was unable to support the bounty scheme, but proposed that an additional differential duty of 4 per cent. ad valorem should be imposed on yarn imported from Japan. It will be convenient perhaps if I deal first with Mr. Noyce's recommendation, and I will do so very briefly. The adoption of his proposal would involve the denunciation of the trade agreement between India and Japan under which the merchandise of either country is entitled to most-favoured nation treatment from the other. Now, a step of that kind is always a very grave and serious step and one not lightly to be taken. It might easily prove to be the first step in a trade war, and when a Government commences a trade war the economic and political consequences are very difficult to foresee and cannot always be controlled. The view which the Government of India take is this. Discrimination against imports from a particular country is a measure which can be justified only by very exceptional circumstances, and when a proposal of this kind is made, it is necessary to weigh fully the possible advantages on the one side and the possible disadvantages on the other. In their view, action of this kind ought not to be taken unless it is clear that the advantages likely to be obtained are permanent and substantial and that they outweigh any disadvantages which might result, as, for example, from retaliatory measures to the part of the other country. In this case the Government of India were not satisfied that the necessary conditions were fulfilled, for the differential duty would remain in force only up to the 31st March 1930 and the extent of the benefit which the Indian cotton spinning industry would derive from the duty before that date was quite uncertain. In those circumstances they came clearly to the conclusion that it was not advisable to impose a differential duty on Japanese yarn.

The proposal of the majority of the Board for payment of a bounty to encourage the spinning of finer counts demands somewhat fuller discussion. It was considered with great care, but in the end the Government of India found it impossible to assent to it. On some of the minor criticisms made by Mr. Noyce in his minute of dissent I will not dwell and it will suffice merely to note them in passing. He pointed out that the proposed bounty would deprive the mill-owner who had already embarked on the spinning of the finer counts of much of the advantage which he had derived or might derive from so doing, that the effect of the subsidy would be very unequal as between different centres, that it would accentuate the tendency on the part of some Indian mills to spin higher counts of yarn than the quality of cotton they used warranted, and that it would lead to inefficient working. I need not dwell on these points, because some of them, though I think not all, might possibly have been removed by suitable modifications in the scheme. The fundamental objections are of a different kind and go deeper. In substance, the bounty scheme is this, that a bounty of one anna a pound should be paid on the production of yarn of 32s. and higher counts based on the production of 15 per cent. of the total working spindleage in a mill. Now, in order to ascertain the benefit which a mill might expect to derive from this bounty scheme, I took the case of a mill which was spinning an average of 34s. and did not spin any yarn below 32s., that is to say, the whole of the yarn it produced would be yarn of the kind which would qualify for the payment of the bounty. I do not know whether in fact there is any mill in India which actually is in this position, but I have taken this case purely for illustrative purposes. The utmost that it can receive under the bounty scheme would be one anna per pound on 15 per cent. of its output. Spread over the whole output, the amount received would be only $1\frac{4}{5}$ pies per pound, and it will be seen at once that, since the advantage of the Japanese mill has been found to be $16\frac{1}{2}$ pies per pound, the assistance which the mill will obtain from the bounty scheme is inadequate to put matters right. The additional amount received would be a little more than the advantage to be derived from an increase in the import duty from 5 to 6 per cent. Yet, this mill which at the moment I have taken as typical is assumed to be producing counts of yarn in respect of which the Japanese competition is most direct and most severe. For a second illustration I will take the case of a mill in which half the spindles are producing an average of 34s. and the other half an average of 20s. Taking the production figures adopted by the Board on page 64 of their Report when they calculated the disadvantage of the Indian mills, the output of the spindles producing 20s. would be double the output of the spindles spinning 34s. In this case the bounty would be payable only on 10 per cent. of the output, and the amount of the bounties spread over the whole output would be $1\frac{1}{5}$ pies per pound. To put it briefly, if the average count spun in a mill is as high as 34s., the amount received by way of bounty would never exceed $1\frac{4}{5}$ pies per pound spread over the whole output, and the lower the average count spun, the smaller is the bounty per pound spread over the whole output. This is the first serious objection to the scheme, namely, that in so far as it is to be considered as a safeguarding measure it is ineffective. In order that the mills in India with spinning departments only might be safeguarded from Japanese competition by means of a bounty. It would be necessary either to raise the amount of the bounty to a much higher figure than one anna a pound, or else to expand the spindleage limit materially. That would at once create a whole series of fresh difficulties, and would raise the cost of the scheme to a prohibitive figure.

[Sir George Rainy.]

The second objection to the scheme, Mr. President, is one of principle. It is evident from the Report that the majority of the Board view their scheme not only as a safeguarding measure but also, and perhaps primarily, as a means of bringing about a desirable development in the cotton spinning industry. They proposed that the bounty should be payable in the first instance for a period of four years, and they estimated that the cost during that period will be Rs. 240 lakhs. Now, when it is proposed to subsidise an industry to this extent, there is one test which I suggest should always be applied, namely, whether the development, if it comes about, would serve a national purpose as distinct from the interests and the advantage of the industry itself. When I say this I am not considering bounties which are granted solely as a measure of protection, as for example, the steel bounties. I am speaking just now of bounties and subsidies which are regarded not as measures of protection but as a stimulus to development, and in such cases the view of the Government of India is that the expenditure, especially when the sum involved is high, cannot be justified unless it is incurred on national grounds, and they were not satisfied that the scheme put forward by the majority of the Board satisfied this test. They hold in fact, as Mr. Noyce put it, that a long-established industry, as the cotton textile industry, should need no stimulus at the expense of the tax-payer to a development which is in its own interest. That is the second serious objection. The third objection is to be found in the administrative difficulties connected with the working of the scheme. Mr. Noyce, whose knowledge and experience entitle him to speak with some authority on this question was of opinion that these difficulties were insuperable. I do not propose to discuss this point at any length for it would lead me into details which could not but be tedious to the House. Suffice it to say that the Government of India were satisfied after examining the question that the scheme could not be administered satisfactorily by the peripatetic staff of inspectors proposed by the majority and that a very much larger and more expensive staff would be required. I know that this view is not accepted by most of the mill-owners with whom I have discussed the question and I quite frankly recognise that in a matter of this kind they must obviously know more about it than I do. Nevertheless, after giving the question the best consideration I can, I remain of opinion that the administrative difficulties would be very great and the administrative expenses very high. It is to be remembered, Sir, that in this matter the point of view of the Government of India which is the trustee of the tax-payer who is going to pay the bounty, and the point of view of the mill-owner who hopes to receive the bounty are perhaps not identical and therefore the difference of opinion as to the extent of the precautions which would be necessary in the event of a bounty scheme being sanctioned is not a matter which need arouse any particular surprise. For the reasons which I have given the Government of India found it impossible to accept either the recommendation of the majority of the Tariff Board or the recommendation of the minority. It was accordingly announced in the Resolution which was published on the 7th June last that the duty on cotton yarn would be left unaltered. It was recognized that the existing revenue duty, being only 5 per cent., did not fully cover the advantage that would be derived by the Japanese mills from working double shifts, which amounted to 10 per cent. It was held, however, that an additional duty on yarn only would affect prejudicially the handloom industry, and that for that reason it should not be imposed. Since this was the decision of the Government of India in June last the House will naturally expect to hear how the question came to be re-opened. It will be within the recollection, I think, of most Members that, after the publication of the decisions of the Government of India, the claims of the cotton mills were brought before the Government of India on two separate occasions : first in Bombay when I met the Committee of the Bombay Mill-owners' Association at a meeting at which representatives from other centres were also present, and subsequently when a deputation of mill-owners was received by His Excellency the Viceroy at Simla. On both occasions it was promised that all that had been urged would be fully considered by the Government of India, and this Bill is the concrete result of the reconsideration which has been given to the question. It was strongly urged by the mill-owners in Bombay that if the Government of India found it impossible to accept either the majority or the minority recommendation, then it was incumbent on them to examine the case from every point of view before finally coming to the conclusion that there was nothing to be done. Now, when after these meetings the Government of India again took up the consideration of the question the following were, I think, the four points which emerged distinctly. In the first place the objections to the bounty scheme remained as strong as ever. The Government of India were unable to see how these difficulties were to be overcome or how they could assent to a scheme of that kind. That is the first point. In the second place, the position was not satisfactory as regards the competition with Japan. Admittedly the existing duty is only a 5 per cent. duty and the disadvantage of the Indian mills at present prices amounted to something like 10 per cent. ; that is to say, the industry was not fully safeguarded against competition which had been found to be unfair. In the third place, it was necessary to consider whether, if a differential duty could not be agreed to, there were the same objections to a duty which would not differentiate or discriminate but would be applicable to imports from all countries. And in the fourth place—and this was obviously the point the Government of India had to consider closely—was the objection that an increase in the duty would affect prejudicially the handloom industry really conclusive. These were the four points which I think determined the decision of the Government of India which is now embodied in the Bill. And first, let me deal with the question whether, if a differential duty was impossible, a duty applicable to imports from all countries was open to the same objection. Now, one obvious objection—and it was one I think which had material weight in preventing the Government of India from taking up this particular question at an earlier date—was the fact that both the majority and minority of the Board were against the imposition of a duty on imports of yarn from all countries, that is, a general increase in the duty on yarn. On the other hand there was a precedent on the other side to be found in the British safeguarding procedure. In the United Kingdom, when it was considered that unfair competition is established, no attention is paid to the particular country or countries which may be responsible, but the safeguarding duty imposed is made applicable to imports from all countries outside the Empire. Therefore, it seemed that the objection to a general increase of the duty might not be insuperable. As for the other point, namely, whether the effect on the handloom industry might not supply an insuperable objection, it was felt that a good deal might depend upon the precise method adopted of imposing the duty, and that the objections might be less serious with one method than they would be with another. After fully reviewing the whole matter the Government of India came to the conclusion that the plan embodied in the Bill was the one which best met the requirements of the case and was likely to work most easily and most equitably.

As the House are aware, I have had a good deal to do in one way or another in considering protective duties and the precise method by which they ought to be applied, and the conclusion which I reached quite early during the time I was on the Tariff Board was that for protective purposes an ad valorem duty is nearly always objectionable, and the reason is simply this. When prices are high, the duties are very high and the protection is very high,—and that is just the period when the industry probably needs protection least. When prices are low, the duty is low, and the protection is low, and that is the very time when the industry needs protection most. For this reason, when it is possible, and it is not always possible, but if possible, a protective duty ought to be a specific duty. Well, now, in this case it was necessary to consider, if there was to be a specific duty, what the amount of the duty ought to be. One thing at any rate was perfectly clear in the Tariff Board's Report ; it was in respect of the counts of yarn between 30s. and 40s. that the safeguarding was necessary, and the duty must be adequate to safeguard the industry at that point. The Tariff Board had found that 16¼ pies per pound was the disadvantage under which the Indian mills suffered. That was based on their prices at 32s. If the safeguarding was to be adequate for the average value of the counts between 31s. and 40s., the duty would have to be a little higher, and it was for this reason that in the Bill it is proposed to fix the duty at 1½ annas a pound. Now it is quite true that on the counts of yarn below 30s. or on part of the imports of this kind, this means a fairly high duty, although as far as I have been able to discover from any figures I could obtain, it is seldom likely to amount to much more than 10 per cent., the reason being that most of the yarn which is imported of these very counts is imported for some special purposes, and it probably has a value distinctly above the average value of yarn of these counts. Still, the 1½ annas duty is fairly high. On the other hand there were administrative reasons why it was undesirable to differentiate if that could be avoided, and on the whole it was thought that if the specific duty were made uniform for all counts, no particular harm would be done. The House will remember that in an earlier part of what I said I dwelt at some length on the question whether the imposition of an additional duty would increase the price of the lower counts and, if so, to what extent. It was in view of this particular point which I am discussing now that I did enlarge to some extent at an earlier stage. The conclusion which I endeavoured to put before the House was that in all probability the increase in the price of the lower counts which might result from the imposition of the duty would not be very large, because the price of these counts was determined to a very large extent by internal competition.

I come now to the question of how this proposed duty of one and a half annas a pound might affect the interests of the handloom industry. Now, the first point that I would like to make is this, that as regards the higher counts it is not likely that the handloom industry will be at all seriously prejudiced. There are two reasons. In the first place, when you get to the really high counts of yarn the price will be more than Rs. 1-14-0 a pound and in that case the yarn will be subject as before to the 5 per cent. ad valorem duty and not to the specific duty, that is to say, there will be no increase in the cost of the yarn at all. As regards the counts a little bit lower down the scale but higher than 40s., it is quite possible that the specific duty may be a little higher than the 5 per cent. duty, but probably not very much. In that case, since the kind of piece-goods which are spun from the higher counts of yarn are something in the nature of a luxury product, it is quite possible that the handloom weaver will be able to pass on the increasing cost to the consumer. Then, let us take the lower counts, counts below 30s. Here again the conclusion I have already tried to place before the House is relevant. It is very doubtful whether the price of these lower counts will be increased materially by the duty, and if I am right in suggesting that, then the effect on the handloom industry cannot be serious.

Finally, we are left with the medium counts, from 31s. to 40s. Now, as I have already said, it seems probable that, in respect of these counts, the increase in price will be practically equivalent to the increase in the duty, and here unquestionably the handloom weaver will have to pay a higher price for the yarn he buys ; but if we assume—I have no accurate data as regards this—if we assume that out of the 50 million pounds of yarn of medium counts which is either imported into India or produced in India, half of it is taken by the handloom weavers, then that quantity, about 25 million pounds, would only amount to about 10 per cent. of their total consumption. That is the only part of the burden which, so far as I can judge, is likely to be at all serious.

Finally, before concluding I must refer very briefly to one other proposal which does not find a place in this Bill, but is in the other Bill which contains all those proposals which the Government of India have adopted for the removal or reduction of duties. This proposal is the reduction of the duty on artificial silk yarn from 15 to 7½ per cent. which, it is believed, will be distinctly in the interests both of the handloom weavers and of the cotton mill-owners. Artificial silk yarn is a material which is coming more and more into use in recent years and the imports of it into India have grown at a very remarkable rate. If either the handloom weavers or the mills are to manufacture a class of goods for which there is a growing demand, then any step that is taken to reduce the cost of materials they have to use ought to benefit them considerably.

1 P.M.

I do not know, Mr. President, that there is much more that I need add. I must thank the House for the patience with which they have listened to what, I fear, must have been a somewhat tedious exposition of one of these economic questions which, however interesting they may be to some of us, do not always make a popular appeal. The decision of the Government of India that it was desirable to safeguard the manufacture in India of cotton yarn was only arrived at after prolonged consideration and after all that could be said on either side had been as carefully weighed as possible. They believe that the change proposed in the Bill ought to be made out of fairness to the interests of the cotton mill industry. They also believe that any prejudicial effect that it may have on the handloom industry will not be serious. In these circumstances, they consider it their duty to bring it before the House.

[Sir George Rainy.]

Sir, I move the motion that stands in my name. (Applause.)

Mr. President : Before I propose the motion for the consideration of the House I should like to know exactly what the Government mean when they say "that the Select Committee be instructed to report on or as soon as possible after the 29th August 1927". Under this instruction it will be open to the Select Committee to delay its Report for any length of time. They will not be bound to make their Report during this Session. I do not know what the object of the Government is in giving such instruction to the Select Committee.

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : Perhaps I might explain that it was hoped that it would be possible to submit the Report by the 29th August, but it was felt that owing to the number of Committees that have to sit that might not be possible. It was for this reason that the 29th August was put in rather as a pious aspiration than an absolutely fixed date. I respectfully recognise that what is in the motion is not very satisfactory and, if the House will permit me, I should be quite willing to propose that the Report be submitted by the 31st August.

Mr. President : On or before the 31st August.

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : Yes, Sir.

Mr. President : Motion moved :

"That the Bill further to amend the Indian Tariff Act, 1894, in order to safeguard the manufacture of cotton yarn in British India be referred to a Select Committee consisting of Maulvi Muhammad Yakub, Mr. R. K. Shanmukham Chetty, Sir Victor Sassoon, Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas, Mr. W. Stenhouse Lamb, Dr. A. Suhrawardy, Diwan Chaman Lall, Mr. N. M. Joshi, Raja Ghazanfar Ali Khan, Mr. Duraiswamy Aiyangar, Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta, Mr. S. C. Mitra, Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru, Munshi Iswar Saran, Mr. M. R. Jayakar and the Mover, and that the number of members whose presence shall be necessary to constitute a meeting of the Committee be five, and that the Committee be instructed to report on or before the 31st August, 1927."

Sir Victor Sassoon (Bombay Millowners' Association : Indian Commerce) : Sir, I rise to support the motion. I submit that this House should deal with this motion in the same manner as was done with the Steel Protection Bill last Session, that is, that if the motion for reference to a Select Committee is agreed upon, this House will only have agreed to the principle that the textile trade needs to be and shall be safeguarded, leaving it to the Select Committee to put before this House subsequently the methods by which this end may be achieved. (Hear, hear.) It may be that one or more alternative schemes may be suggested.

Mr. President : You will perhaps have to change the Government of India Act before the Assembly can do so without the sanction of Government.

Sir Victor Sassoon : I am merely suggesting that the same procedure shall take place as took place in the Steel Protection Bill. If I remember aright, there was some altetrnative scheme. I am not suggesting that we should do any thing that was not done there. I propose, therefore, to confine my remarks to the principle that the industry is deserving of assistance.

The problem resolves itself into two parts. Firstly, whether the industry needs help and, secondly, whether it is to the advantage of the nation as a whole that such help should be given.

To my mind the first proposition is so self-evident that to defend it is like being called on to defend the thesis that the sun shines during the day and the moon at night. I do not propose to make a technical speech on the subject to-day. I will content myself with pointing out that the industry all over India is so depressed that it cannot even pay its depreciation charges and is so living on its capital, that a large number of mills have had to stop working ; I think it is four in Bombay, 12 in Ahmedabad, and others in the mofussil, and that half the industry, the half which is situated in Bombay and the province of Bombay, if I may use the words of the Tariff Board, a body which no one can affirm has shown itself partial in any way to the textile industry, is in a critical position. Further on they say :

"In view of the dangers financial and industrial which are inherent in the continuance of the present conditions, the case for as effective a measure of State aid as possible does not appear to us to require elaboration."

That is the opinion of an official body of gentlemen who, as I have already said, have by no means shown partiality to the industry. There is in fact no question as to the needs of the industry. The real question which, I feel, concerns some of us more than others, but all of us to a great degree is whether the State aid offered will be sufficient when added to the efforts within the power of the industry to effect to save it without a change in the world conditions. If there is any doubt as to the question of the needs of the industry, I can elaborate the point for hours, but I will spare the House on this occasion.

Let me turn to what this House must consider as a dominant factor of the question. Admitting that the industry is in a critical situation, is the nation justified in making sacrifices to keep it alive ? Is its existence of importance to the country as a whole and the agriculturist in particular ? There is the perfectly sound argument that, though the consumer will benefit by the sale of bankrupt stocks during the death of the industry—eventually, the absence of internal competition will be taken advantage of by textile industries abroad and the consumer will have to pay as much in the end as if a protective duty had been put on and the local industry saved ; but I wish to approach the problem from a different angle.

We are told that the fertile lands of this country are not sufficient to carry the present-day agricultural population, that fragmentation due to surplus agriculturists stands in the way of efficient farming, that the new tracts brought in by irrigation are barely sufficient to satisfy the needs of the provinces in which those tracts are situated. We know that India is a prolific nation ; further, that sanitation, Baby Weeks and so on are all working for the reduction of the death-rate in the infantile and child population, which means, in other words, that the adult population in an already overcrowded land is going to increase at a faster rate than it is even doing to-day.

Now, what are you going to do with that increase in your population ? Your production of foodstuffs and produce is not increasing, so that your exportable surplus will be decreasing. Surely the only thing to do is to industrialise the country so that your surplus population will produce the manufactured articles which you need to buy in exchange for the foodstuffs and produce it now consumes, and which you used to export.

That seems to be a self-evident fact and so it follows that as it is always sounder and cheaper to keep an old-established industry using indigenous produce as its raw material going in bad times than to start new ones, you are justified in giving protection to an industry which employs a number of agriculturists and doing anything you can to encourage that industry to expand because that will be all to the good and your surplus population will then earn higher wages than it could at home by producing a commodity necessary to their food-producing brethren.

So far I do not think I have said anything which can be controverted. What I have said in effect is that the existence of a prosperous textile industry is essential to the well being of India in general, and that the protection of the industry justifies a sacrifice on the part of the consumer. But there is, I admit, one argument, one criticism, for which there is something to be said and which may be in the minds of Government, though it has never been publicly stated, and it is this. Is the country entitled, in seeking to protect an industry—is it entitled, in order to do that, to penalise the poorest class of consumer by putting an additional import duty, when the wage of the agriculturist is so much less than that of the mill hand ? Is it fair to ask the man who may be earning as little as,—I think Rs. 4|8 was quoted as the lowest wage that an agriculturist has been known to work for.....

Mr. B. Das (Orissa Division : Non-Muhammadan) : Do you agree to that ?

Sir Victor Sassoon : I do not approve of that but I am informed that it is so and is the reason why some of them go to plantations at Rs. 6 and others serve on the railways at Rs. 8 a month. I am merely saying, is it fair to ask a man who is earning as little as this to pay even an anna more for his dhoti, because, if the proposed tax on yarn is passed on to the poor consumer (which I do not admit), because the lowest class does not use dhoties made of imported cloth, it would be an anna; I think the price is from ¾ to 1½ annas according to the width of the particular garment he does wear.

The point is : is it fair, however little the increase is, to ask him to pay it when the minimum wage, at any rate in the Bombay part of the mill industry, is Rs. 18 a month and the average wage is Rs. 30 a month. I will only say that there is admittedly something to be said for such an argument. I am not asking the House to agree to this argument. I am asking them to reject it and to reject it for two reasons. In the first place, if they are going to uphold this argument, why did they not uphold it when they passed the Bill for the protection of the steel industry. There was the same position there. And there is even a stronger defence. If the mill industry goes to the wall, a number of men earning an average wage of Rs. 30 a month will have to go back to the country, go back to their people up-country and work on the land and thus compete with the already badly-paid agriculturist. Whereas if the industry prospers, more surplus agriculturists will be enabled to come into the industry and earn higher wages and at the same time relieve the congestion on the land and therefore perhaps make it impossible for anybody to have to try and exist on Rs. 4-8 a month. We, in the textile industry, do not want to reduce the standard of living of the mill hand. On the contrary, we want to raise it and lower the costs of production by increased efficiency. But we must face the fact that, though I firmly believe this can be done, though I firmly believe it will come to pass, increased efficiency is not an easy task and it will take some time to carry out. And it is during this intermediate period that I suggest that, whatever is necessary to save the industry from extinction should be done. And, therefore, Sir, it is with some confidence that I ask the House to pass this motion to refer the Bill to a Select Committee on the clear understanding that it is only committing itself to the principle that the industry as a whole should be afforded sufficient protection to enable it not to make large profits but merely to continue existing without loss and to allow it to cover this depreciation.

Mr. B. Das : Sir, I congratulate the Honourable the Commerce Member on the very able defence of a very poor case. I don't know if the Honourable Sir George Rainy as the President of the Tariff Board would have brought forward similar arguments while arguing the case of the protection of the steel industry. But that we will have to discuss later on. Sir, it is known to all the Members of this House that I am a protectionist. And if I raise my voice against the present motion it is because of the fact that there is the scare-mongering news that the Bombay millowners had brought pressure to bear on the Government Benches and Government had brought forward hasty Bills for consideration before this House. There was no necessity of two Bills before this House. One Bill and the latter Bill was enough. But still it always happens, Sir, whenever these millionaires and multi-millionaires known as mill-owners in India bring forward anything in great agitation for consideration, the Treasury Benches, although they sit on the top of the Simla hills, bow their heads and bring forward measures which may not be compatible with the interests of the millions and millions of India. Sir, you belong to a part of the country and I belong to a part of the country that are in the greatest distress owing to the floods. We have appealed for help. We have had the sympathy of the Honourable the Leader of the House ; but has Simla been upset over it ? Have the Government come forward with any measures on their initiative to help the people of Gujarat ?

Mr. President : Order, order. We are not discussing the floods.

Mr. B Das : Sir, I bow to your ruling, but I was making a statement bearing on the fact that the agitation of a few capitalists appealed to the Honourable Members on the Treasury Benches more than the appeal of the crores of afflicted agriculturists in India. But, Sir, why this scare-mongering ? Why this panic on the part of the Government to bring this measure before this House ? The millowners are doing very well. They did so well that they over-capitalised their firms. Firms with 10 lakhs were over-capitalised into 50 lakhs, so as to get more profits by the system of managing agencies that is prevalent in India, and they deprived the shareholders and my friend Mr. Joshi's labourers of certain portions of their shares. I know the millowners have suffered recently, but that is partly their fault, and we have here such a panic that we are asked to legislate so that they will get a certain measure of relief for one or two years. Take the Convention that was introduced by the League of Nations. Well, the Government of India as the original member of the League of Nations can protest against it. There is no necessity for us to protect the millowners while millions and millions of people have suffered intensely. Sir, I have already observed that millowners would not have experienced these monetary losses which they are going through, had they not over-capitalised their industries. But that does not mean that the nation should come forward to-day to help them to raise a tariff wall against foreign countries. I appreciate very much my Honourable friend Sir Victor Sassoon's remarks about the agriculturist population in India. He may know that 20 to 25 crores of people in India are engaged in agriculture, and while I appreciate the concern of Sir Victor Sassoon, it is not the concern of one individual member which will bring relief to the agricultural class. I am happy to say that Lord Irwin is taking some interest in the agricultural classes and is endeavouring to bring relief to them. But you want to tear away the agricultural labourers from the open air, from the villages and the country, and bring them to the towns and make them sweat and live in the slums of Bombay. There are 10 or 15 millions of labourers employed in agriculture. It has been suggested by various public leaders who have agitated for this before that the tax on textile machinery should be removed. This delayed piece of justice to the Indian industry I appreciate and I thank the Government for it. But I do not appreciate the panic-mongering to put a tariff wall against cotton yarn. I personally do not want this Bill to be referred to a Select Committee. Why this hurry ? Have the Government of India consulted the Provincial Governments ? Industries is a transferred subject in the Provincial Governments. Has the Honourable the Commerce Member got their opinion there ? Has he consulted the many lakhs of weavers that work as independent millowners like my friend Sir Victor Sassoon and my friend Seth Kasturbhai Lalbhai ? They are also independent millowners. Have you consulted these industries as to how they will be affected by this measure ? Why do you bring this measure so soon ? There is no necessity for it. I understand the millowners waited in deputation on His Excellency the Viceroy and therefore the whole Government communique was changed and another communique was issued, and instead of a measure which Government in their first communique announced that they will abolish, and rightly abolish,—the duties on imported mill machinery—they are now bringing in another piece of legislation. I do not see the meaning of it.

Sir, I do not like again to go into the question of floods, but because my Honourable friend evinces so much interest in the teeming millions of agriculturists I refer to it. Millions are suffering owing to the floods. I have seen a statement in the Bombay papers how the millowners have subscribed to the flood relief. I have not seen one.....

(At this stage some Honourable Members behind Mr. B. Das were talking among themselves.)

Mr. President : I must call the Honourable Members to order.

Mr. B. Das : Sir, I have a serious charge to make against these millowners of India. They have done very little for the development of Indian industries, particularly the industries allied to the textile industry. The engineering industries in India have not thriven very much through the help of the millowners. Each managing agent in Bombay and Ahmedabad is also agent for mill-stores. He imports the things from England and Germany and supplies them to his own mills and sells them also in the bazaar. But they have done nothing for the engineering industries and the allied industries. My second charge, and a very serious charge, against the millowners is that they have done nothing to foster Indian insurance in India. Sir, to develop Indian industries you want insurance and banking. I find that every millowner in Bombay—almost every millowner, I am subject to correction—is an insurance agent of a foreign insurance company. He not only insures his own mill in that insurance company, but he canvasses orders from other Indian industries. Thereby the Indian insurance companies have suffered. If the industrialists have neglected allied industries such as applied engineering industries and insurance companies in India, how is it that they come forward to-day on the floor of this House to ask for the sympathy of the Members of this House and of the millions of people outside this House ?

Mr. President : Order, order. The House stands adjourned till Half Past Two of the Clock.

The Assembly then adjourned for Lunch till Half Past Two of the Clock.

The Assembly re-assembled after Lunch at Half Past Two of the Clock, Mr. President in the Chair.

Mr. N. M. Joshi (Nominated · Labour Interests) : It is a matter of great satisfaction to me that the Tariff Board have made an inquiry into the condition of the textile industry in this country. In the year 1925, when there was a strike in Bombay, I was pressing upon the Government to make an inquiry into the condition of the mill industry. At that time the millowners were not anxious to have that inquiry. I am glad that the stern facts of the situation compelled them to ask for an inquiry and an inquiry has been made. Sir, the textile industry in this country is a very important industry. Not only has a large amount of capital been sunk in this industry, but the livelihood of more than 367,000 people depends upon this industry. Not only that, but the capital invested in this industry, unlike several other industries, is Indian, as well as most of the supervision and direction is also Indian. Sir, the Report of the Tariff Board has made it quite clear that the textile industry in this country is at present passing through a period of depression. The majority of the factories in Bombay are not working at a profit but are working at a loss. Unfortunately, exact information as to the whole country is not available. We have got facts about the profits and the losses of the Bombay industry but not for the whole of the industry in this country. But it is also clear that in spite of this depression some factories, which are being prudently managed, are still making profits. There was one statement made by my Honourable friend Sir Victor Sassoon that some four factories were closed in Bombay. But, Sir, although it is true that these factories are closed, still the Tariff Board has made it quite clear that no factory which has been properly managed has so far gone into liquidation on account of the depression. This is what the Tariff Board says :

" We are satisfied that no mill in India which could be regarded as run with fair efficiency and economy has been forced into liquidation as the result of the depression."

[Mr. N. M. Joshi.]

Sir, in order to understand the present position of the mill industry it is better to take stock of what the position of the industry was only a few years ago. The Tariff Board has shown that as far as Bombay mills are concerned from the year 1917-1922 they made a profit of 33.8 crores.

Out of these 33.8 crores 21.63 crores were distributed as dividends ; while the capital sunk in this industry in the year 1917 was only 7 crores, in the year 1922 it was 17 crores. Sir, it is quite clear that the industry made large profits and those profits have been imprudently distributed as dividends. If those profits had been conserved in order to consolidate the position of the industry, I am quite sure the millowners would have been able to pass through the present crisis more easily. Apart from that, there is another feature of the figures which I have now placed before the House, and that is the over-capitalisation of the industry. If you take the industry in the country as a whole you will find that the capital has been raised from 20 to 40 crores during the years 1917-1922. But although the capital has been increased, there is not a proportionate increase either in the number of spindles or in the number of looms. The increase in the total spindleage in all the Indian mills between 1918 and 1922 was from 65 lakhs to 72 lakhs ; while the increase in the capital, as stated above, was 96 per cent. the increase in the total spindleage was only 10.7 per cent. Now, if we take the figures in Bombay alone, the increase in the capital is much greater. The figures for 13 Bombay mills show an increase of capital amounting to 196 per cent. while the increase in the number of spindles was only 36.8 per cent. and in looms of 61.9 per cent. This shows, Sir, how the industry has been over-capitalised during the years 1917 to 1922. Now this over-capitalisation has a greater effect upon the cost of production, inasmuch as on account of it the mills have to pay higher insurance charges and a larger amount for depreciation charges. I estimate that the mills in India have to pay about 70 lakhs of rupees more for overhead charges on these two items.

Sir Victor Sassoon : Overhead ? Depreciation is not overhead.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : I call these overhead. Now, Sir, I do not wish to deal with this question at greater length. The Tariff Board has gone into the causes of the depression. They say that the causes of the depression are among other things, the reduction in purchasing power which is not confined to India but is common to all the world. The Tariff Board also suggests that the depression is due to the trade cycle which is inherent in a capitalist system, and unless we control the capitalist system we cannot get rid of trade cycles. The other cause for the depression which the Tariff Board has suggested is the competition of Japan, especially in yarn. The Tariff Board says that as far as competition in coarser cloth is concerned, Japan finds it difficult to compete with Indian cloth, and the chief factor which enables Japan to compete with Indian yarn is the worse labour conditions in Japan. The Honourable Member in charge of this Bill has explained the position of the factory law in India. I will not therefore go over that question. But, Sir, I am as anxious to see the labour conditions in Japan improve as any other Member ; and I had taken an opportunity of speaking on this question in the International Labour Conference in the year 1925. But I think it is better that we should be fair to Japan in this matter. I agree that Japan had an advantage over India in the matter of nightwork. But the Japanese labour conditions as a whole are not certainly worse than the labour conditions in India. As far as the wages are concerned, the Japanese wages are higher than the wages in India. In the spinning department of Japanese textile mills the men get daily Rs. 1-12-1 and the women get Rs. 1-6-1. Not even men in Bombay get as much as women get in Japan in the spinning department. Then there is also another thing in which Japan has made an advance over us. Japan has got a sickness insurance law, and that Act is now being put into force. We have got no such law. After all, sickness insurance does cost something to the industry. Japan has got a law by which they have established public employment exchanges. I do not say that the establishment of the public employment exchanges cost very much, but still Japan is progressing in the matter of labour legislation.

Sir Victor Sassoon : Who pays ?

Mr. N. M. Joshi : For the exchanges, Government, and for the sickness insurance, the industry.

Sir Victor Sassoon : And Government.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : Therefore, Sir, although we must all wish that the Japanese labour conditions should improve, it is better that we should not exaggerate the inferiority of Japanese labour conditions very much.

Then, Sir, the Tariff Board has suggested that the lack of attention to markets is also one of the causes of the depression. It also suggests another important cause of the depression of the Bombay Mills, namely, competition with up country mills. As regards this competition the Tariff Board says that although up country mills have certain advantages over Bombay mills, the Bombay mills have also certain advantages over them. But the chief factor in which Bombay differs from up country is, in the opinion of the Tariff Board, the cost of labour, and it is on this point, Sir, that I wish to deal at some length. The Tariff Board suggests that although the higher labour costs in Bombay are not the cause of the depression in the industry, still the labour costs in Bombay, being in the opinion of the Tariff Board higher, have accentuated the depression. Now, Sir, when the Tariff Board says that the labour costs in Bombay are higher, we must understand what they actually mean. If the labour costs are higher, they are higher than what, or they are higher compared to what ? Sir, the Tariff Board has not made any comparison between the labour costs in Bombay and the labour costs in Lancashire or the labour costs in Japan or the labour costs in any other country. I think in considering the matter of tariffs, it was the duty of the Tariff Board to compare the labour costs of this country with the labour costs of those countries with which our industry is competing. Unfortunately, the Tariff Board has not done that, and that being so, it would have been much better if the Tariff Board had not expressed any opinion on the labour costs in India also. That was done very wisely by the Tariff Board in the United States. The Tariff Board there found that they had no figures about the cost of production in other countries, and therefore they wisely refrained from making any recommendation as regards tariffs. This is what the United States Tariff Board said :

" The Commission has as yet made no investigation of the difference in costs of production of cotton cloths here and abroad and if such an investigation were to be made it could hardly be completed within less than a year. It is the general opinion as stated by authorities in the industry, that domestic and foreign, particularly British, selling prices are to-day very close to actual costs of production, but in the absence of verified domestic and foreign costs of production required by section 315 of the Tariff Act of 1922, the Commission does not feel warranted in suggesting readjustments in the duties on cotton cloths."

Sir, our Tariff Board also, in the absence of information on this point, would have been wise if they had not made any criticism about the labour costs in Bombay. As a matter of fact, from the information which I have got, the labour costs in India are at least lower than the labour costs in Lancashire. The millowners themselves say that the labour costs in Bombay are 40 per cent. of the cost of production ; but I find that the labour costs in England are 57 per cent. of the cost of production. As a percentage of selling price, the labour costs in Britain are approximately 18 per cent. ; in Bombay labour costs are approximately 16 per cent. If the Tariff Board had made an enquiry, they would have found that the labour in Bombay is not so inefficient in relation to wages as the Tariff Board has suggested. Neither do the Tariff Board give any figures as regards the labour costs in Japan. Then, Sir, the wages in Bombay may be said to be higher as compared to the cost of living index. The millowners claim that the wages in Bombay during the years 1917 to 1922 have risen 70 per cent. in the case of those who receive fixed wages for the day and have gone up to 80 per cent. in the case of those who receive wages on piece work. Now, Sir, taking these figures as correct and taking it that the cost of living index is to-day at 156, we find that the real increase in the wages in Bombay is between 15 and 20 per cent., and this increase has taken place during the last 12 years, if not more; so that the yearly betterment of the condition of the workers in Bombay is between 1 per cent. and 2 per cent. If for the sake of argument we take it that the betterment in the condition of workers is taking place at the highest figure of 2 per cent. yearly, certainly that progress is not very fast. Supposing that at the present standard the workmen in Bombay are getting one-room tenements and if they are progressing at the rate of 2 per cent. every year, they will take 50 years to be in a position to occupy two rooms. If the standard of life of the workers in our country is going to progress so slowly, certainly there is not much hope for the people in our country. I wish, Sir, therefore, that the Tariff Board had not made any suggestion that the labour costs in Bombay are higher. As a matter of fact, the real wages are going up so slightly that they hardly give any benefit to the workmen ; and although it is true that the wages have not been reduced by the millowners as a whole, still individual mills are gradually reducing wages by various indirect methods. They can certainly reduce wages by asking them to make finer yarn or giving them finer yarn to weave cloth. Now, Sir, in this way the wages in Bombay are being reduced.

Now, Sir, there is another kind of comparison which may be made as regards the wages and that is, that the wages in Bombay may be considered higher than the wages in other occupations as the millowners claim them to be. But the verdict of the Tariff Board in this matter is quite clear. They say :

"The wages in other occupations have risen by a higher percentage than the wages in the textile industry in Bombay."

Then, Sir, there is a comparison of the higher costs of production between Bombay and up country. Now, in this matter, the House will agree with me that there is no wonder if the wages in Bombay are higher than the wages in Sholahpur or in any other mufassil centre. The cost of living in Bombay is higher. Even Government recognises this fact and the Government employees in Bombay are paid higher than those in other mufassil towns. So there is no wonder if the textile workers in Bombay are paid higher than the textile workers in other centres. I can assure this House that the workers in Bombay, in spite of the higher wages which they get than the wages paid up country, are not happier than the people who are working in the mufassil or up country centres. Now, Sir, this disadvantage which Bombay has as regards the labour costs being higher than the labour costs in the up country centres is a permanent disadvantage unless the mills in Bombay choose to go out of that city. If the mills have to remain in Bombay, then certainly they have to find out some other method of competing with the mills up country. Then, Sir, the millowners also claim that the labour costs are increasing in proportion. They say that in 1914 the labour costs formed 37.81 of the cost of production and in 1924 they formed 40 per cent. Sir, the increase of the labour costs is found not only in Bombay, not only in India, but all over the world. Even in America the cost of production per pound of the cloth during the years 1911 and 1925 has gone up by 100 per cent. The cost of production per spindle has gone up similarly. Therefore, the labour costs in America have gone up compared to the other costs. Similarly, the labour costs in India have gone up as compared to the other costs. But in this matter it is not only the labour costs that have gone up compared to the cost of production, but the costs of the office charges and the supervision charges have also gone up much higher. The millowners themselves say that the labour costs are now higher by 211 per cent. than in the year 1914, but the office and supervision charges are higher by 215 per cent. and the interest charges by 216 per cent. So, the increase is not only in the labour costs but there is an increase in the office and the supervision charges and in the interest charge also. Sir, the fact is that the Tariff Board has very little material with it to make a proper comparison as regards the labour costs. The Tariff Board tried to get information on the cost of production in India but, whereas they sent out 70 forms, they got only 22 forms filled in, while the majority of forms were not returned to them. It is no wonder, therefore, that the Tariff Board was unable to make a proper comparison as regards the labour costs to the total cost of production.

These are some of the causes of the depression as given by the Tariff Board. The Tariff Board has suggested certain remedial measures. They have suggested certain internal economies. When I gave evidence on behalf of the Bombay Textile Labour Union before the Tariff Board, I suggested that it is quite possible to make some economies if the millowners will co-operate with each other in purchasing their raw material, fuel and stores.

But unfortunately the Tariff Board did not consider that much economy could be secured by this method. Sir, I still hold to my view that if the millowners, instead of competing among themselves, will co-operate with one another in purchasing raw materials and in purchasing their stores, they will certainly have an advantage when in competition with the capitalists of other countries. Sir, as regards the stores, my Honourable friend Mr. Das has already referred to the fact that if the millowners had cared, they could have built up in India a good mill stores industry, but they did not do that.

I shall now come to the suggestion of the Tariff Board as regards labour. The Tariff Board does not suggest, although it says that the labour costs are righ, that the wages of the workers in Bombay should be reduced. The Tariff Board had seen something of the conditions of the Bombay millworkers and they could not suggest any reduction in their wages. I was also glad to hear that my Honourable friend Sir Victor Sassoon does not suggest such a reduction. I hope, Sir, that other millowners in Bombay will give great weight to what Sir Victor Sassoon has said this morning here. Sir, the Tariff Board suggests that the productivity of the workers in Bombay should be increased by asking the millworkers in Bombay to manage more spindles and more looms. This question is a very important question from the point of view of the interests of the workers engaged in this industry. I am not one of those people who would unconditionally oppose the increasing of productivity on the part of labour. If Indian labour is to compete with labour in other countries, I feel that Indian labour will have to produce as much as the workers in other countries produce. But, Sir, the problem is not quite simple. When you ask the workers to produce more or to manage more spindles and more looms, if you do not give them proper conditions, you will be sweating them, you will be speeding them up and there is always danger to the health of the workers when you begin to speed them up. There is also the danger of accidents increasing when you begin to speed up workers. But, if proper conditions are given, I am one of those people who feel that any proposals for increasing the productivity of workers in our country should be examined on their merits. The conditions, which I would suggest, should be fulfilled, before workers are asked to manage more spindles and more looms may be stated as follows. In the first place the factory conditions require to be altered if the workers are to manage either more spindles or more looms. In some cases, at least in Bombay, I have found that the workers have been asked to manage more spindles and more looms without making any alterations in the factory conditions. Then, Sir, it is quite necessary that if the workers are to manage more spindles and more looms that this change should be introduced gradually. When you introduce these changes, certainly there is danger of a large number of workers being thrown out on the streets as unemployed. If we are to avoid this calamity of people being thrown out of employment, then this change must be introduced very gradually. If a workman goes out, his place need not be filled up.

3 P.M.

But it will be wrong on the part of the millowners in Bombay or in any other place in our country to discharge men if they find that there is no work for them on account of the workers being asked to manage a larger number of spindles and looms. I therefore think that if the change is introduced gradually the danger of unemployment will be minimised and perhaps even may be avoided.

Then, Sir, there is one other important point. The millowners in Bombay, as well as outside, generally feel that it is beneath their dignity to hold consultations with their workers.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett (Leader of the House) : On a point of order, Sir. I would ask you to say whether the Honourable Member in travelling so widely over the subject is not out of order.

Mr. President : It is very difficult for the Chair in connection with this motion to decide what is really within the bounds of order. If the Honourable the Mover had confined himself in his opening remarks strictly to the principle of the Bill and not travelled beyond it by referring to all the recommendations of the Tariff Board, probably the Chair could have considered the point of order raised by the Leader of the House. The Honourable the Mover gave his reasons at some length why the Government of India rejected certain recommendations of the Tariff Board and this introduced matters which were outside the scope of the Bill, though not outside the scope of the Report on which the Bill is based. I must, therefore, give a certain amount of latitude to other Honourable Members. I hope, however, they will not abuse the indulgence given to them.

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : On a point of order, Sir. May I submit with great respect that I endeavoured to confine myself in my speech only to those recommendations which were directly connected with the safeguarding of the manufacture of yarn.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : I assure you, Sir, I do not propose to deal with this subject at a much greater length, but I hope you will show me the indulgence of enabling me to complete this part of my speech. I was saying, Sir, that if the millowners will hold consultations with their employees, it is quite possible that the employees will understand their motives.

Mr. President : Let me make it quite clear to Honourable Members that while I allow them to discuss the whole Report of the Tariff Board on this motion, I expect them not to follow the same course in connection with the next motion on the paper.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : I assure you, Sir, I will not make another speech on the subject in connection with the next Bill.

Sir, if the millowners will hold consultations with their employees, I am quite sure they will understand the millowners' object and they will also understand that it is to their interest that they should increase their productivity. Then, Sir, there is the question of the rates. If the workers manage a larger number of spindles and looms, the millowners expect that the benefit of the increased productivity should be shared by themselves with their workers. The workers naturally feel that they should get the whole benefit of their increased productivity. Now, Sir, I do not think there is anything unreasonable in the workers' demand in this respect. Even if the millowners do not get any benefit by way of reduction of rates, the millowners will certainly get some advantage by way of savings in overhead costs. The supervision charges will be reduced and the millowners in my judgment should be content with these savings. But, Sir, if the millowners feel that it is necessary that they should have some share in the increased productivity, I shall be quite ready to examine also this question with them.

There is one point, Sir, on which I wish to make one remark. In the whole of the Tariff Board's Report and in the representation of the millowners, there is a clear suggestion that the workers of India are less efficient than the workers in other parts of the world. I do not agree with this view. I believe that given the same conditions or at least similar conditions, the workers of India will be as efficient as the workers in any other part of the world.

If you to-day see that the workers in India do not produce as much as the workers in other parts of the world, it is because the conditions under which they work are dissimilar. In order that the Tariff Board should not make any damaging remarks about labour, I had suggested to them to recommend to the Government of India a very useful experiment. I said that if the millowners or the Tariff Board feel that the workers in India are less efficient than the workers in other parts of the world, let them make an experiment. Let them send 50 spinners and 50 weavers from Bombay, chosen by the Government, to Lancashire, and let these men work in the Lancashire mills for three months. If at the end of the third month it is found that the Indian workers produce less than the Lancashire workers, then I would readily admit that the Indian workers are less efficient than the Lancashire workers. But as long as you do not give them the same or even similar conditions, it is unfair to say that the workers in India are less efficient than the workers in other parts of the world. I hope, Sir, that the Government of India will be good enough to carry out my suggestion.

Then, Sir, there is one point to which I wish to draw the attention of the Honourable Member in charge of the Department of Industries and Labour, and it is the recommendation of the Tariff Board to him and to the Government of India that they should make an inquiry into the labour conditions in our country. The Tariff Board says that the examination made by them call for a comprehensive inquiry into the labour conditions which they themselves could not make on account of the restricted terms of reference. I hope, Sir, the Honourable Member in charge of the Department of Industries and Labour will carry out this important recommendation of the Tariff Board.

Sir, I do not wish to spend any more time on these labour matters. I know there are some people in this House who do not like to hear much about the labour conditions. I shall therefore now deal with another matter.....

Mr. President : The Honourable Member has taken more than 35 minutes. I hope he will now bring his remarks to a close.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : I hope you will now give me a few minutes more to deal with the other aspects of the Report of the Tariff Board. The majority of the Tariff Board besides making these recommendations have recommended a certain increase in the import duty on cloth, and they have also recommended a certain bounty to be given for the production of finer counts of yarn. Sir, I am very glad to find that the Tariff Board have suggested the grant of a bounty by way of protection. I had always held that the method of protecting an industry by means of a bounty is much better than the method of protecting the industry by means of an import duty. But, Sir, it would have been much better if the majority of the Tariff Board had recommended that the amount required for the bounty should be collected from that class of people which is able to bear the burden of this tax. Unfortunately, the majority of the Tariff Board has suggested that the amount should be obtained by increasing the duty on cloth. Sir, although I do not approve of the method of protecting an industry by means of an import duty, still under the present circumstances I thought that, as the Government of India are bound by the recommendations of the Tariff Board, they would accept the recommendations made by that body. I was surprised therefore to find that the Government of India discarded the recommendation of the Tariff Board. Sir, on this point I do not wish to speak now any further as I have already taken more time than I ought to have done.

But, Sir, there is one point on which I must speak before I close, and it is this. Personally I am anxious that this industry should be protected. If it can be protected according to the methods which I approve, well and good. But if my methods are not generally accepted, I am quite willing on the occasion to accept the methods suggested by the Tariff Board. But, Sir, there is one condition which I would lay down and it is this, that the millowners in Bombay must recognise that when the industry is protected it is not only the capitalists or the shareholders who ought to be protected but that protection must also be extended to the workers engaged in that industry. I hope, Sir, when the industry gets some protection, the millowners will allow a part of that protection to pass over to the workers engaged in that industry. Sir, I thank you very much for the indulgence which you have shown in giving me such a long time.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta (Bombay City : Non-Muhammadan Urban) : Sir, I associate myself with Sir Victor Sassoon in hoping that, as this Bill is based on the Report of the Tariff Board, which was appointed to investigate whether or not the cotton textile industry required any protection, it will be possible to consider in the Select Committee all methods of protection that are relevant under the Board's Report ; there is more than one precedent in this respect. As Sir Victor Sassoon observed, when the Steel Protection Bill was under consideration, we were permitted to go into the alternative question of bounty as against duty although the Tariff Board had turned down protection by bounty. Similar circumstances exist in this case and I hope that the observation which you, Sir, permitted yourself to make when Sir Victor Sassoon was speaking, was not the final ruling in this behalf.

Turning to the question before us, Sir, this Bill is in some respects a very remarkable and amazing piece of legislation. It is before this House as a result of the inquiry held by the Tariff Board and yet, its provisions fly in the face of almost every recommendation that the Tariff Board made ; what is more, it turns down Government's own decision on the Board's Report. The Tariff Board recommended protection both for yarn and cloth. It recommended several other things. Government in their Resolution of the 7th June 1927 said as regards one of these latter, i.e., the scheme of the combined dyeing, bleaching and printing works in Bombay partly subsidised by Government, that the said question could not be decided without reference first to the Bombay Government. When we turn to the recommendation that the spinning of the higher counts of yarn should be stimulated by a bounty, we find that the Government do not accept it. They say that although the advantage to Japan in yarn is not covered by the existing duty of 5 per cent. an additional duty on yarn would prejudicially affect the handloom industry ; therefore there can be no further duty on imported yarn. As regards additional duty on imported piece-goods they state, though incorrectly,

"On the facts found by the Board no case was made out for an increase in duty as a measure of protection."

The only thing that they accept under their Resolution of June 1927 is the removal of some duty on the machinery and stores connected with the industry and then generally. Then there was the conference with millowners. We find from the Resolution of the Government of India dated the 15th August 1927, that on re-examining the situation they still remain adamant on the question of any import duty on piece-goods. But although they first thought that any duty on yarn would prejudicially affect the handloom industry, they have now completely recanted that opinion and have come forward with a proposal to impose a specific minimum duty on yarn, and they have persuaded themselves that the handloom industry would not be affected thereby. Sir, this Bill is thus a remarkable measure. It turns down practically all the important recommendations of the Tariff Board and after declaring in June that a duty on yarn will prejudicially affect the handloom industry. Government within a little more than two months come out with a proposal to impose a duty on yarn. As the Bill is going to a Select Committee I do not propose to make any detailed observations on the amazing policy which the Government have adopted towards the Report of the Tariff Board, and therefore, towards the condition of the mill industry.

Sir, India is eminently fitted for the development of the textile industry ; given the necessary protection and help from the State, we should have long ago been able to clothe ourselves completely with the output of the indigenous mills and handlooms. But under the present Government we find that since 1883 up till to-day, in a period of 44 years, with every favourable circumstance in this country—cheap labour and material at hand and enterprising capitalists—we find that India does not yet supply all her requirements in the matter of clothes except to the extent of 42 per cent. only. I say, Sir, that if we had a real national Government we should long ago have been able to supply all our requirements in the matter of piece-goods from the output of our own mill industry. Sir, the manufacture of piece-goods is the second most important industry in the country, second only to the supply of food-stuffs. Yet we find that from the very beginning right up to the present moment the treatment of this industry by Government has been anything but sympathetic. Between 1883 to 1893 the mill industry began to show signs of prosperity ; but in 1893 the Mints were closed to the free coinage of silver, and as a result you find the trade of India with China in yarn slowly disappearing. In 1898, as the Tariff Board shows, the export of yarn to China, or the export of yarn from this country was 47.4 and within less than 30 years it has now been reduced to 4.7. It has approached the vanishing point in less than 30 years, not because the millowners were not willing to continue their trade with China, but because of the ill-fated policy of exchange and the notorious 3½ per cent. duty ; the mill industry in India has ever since been handicapped in its competition with other countries. Even now the Government attitude remains the same. Having appointed the Tariff Board, which, as my Honourable friend, Sir Victor Sassoon rightly observed, has shown not the slightest partiality for the mill-owners, Government turn down the proposals of that Board for the protection of the industry whose claim to that protection is established beyond reasonable doubt. We will discuss this subject in the Select Committee, but I cannot help pointing out and protesting against their desperate endeavour to find an excuse for not accepting the Tariff Board's recommendation. I say that the Government have, in their desperate endeavour to find an excuse for not taxing imported piece-goods, shown a readiness wholly to misunderstand and wilfully to distort the statements of the Tariff Board and even to do violence to the English language. The Tariff Board have, amongst other things, said that they want to stimulate the production of yarn and also to protect cloth, and they propose a duty on piece-goods from the proceeds of which they recommend the payment of bounty on yarn. The Government interpret the recommendation of the Tariff Board for a bounty on yarn as the primary reason and of the import duty on piece-goods and the protection of the Indian piece-goods as secondary. I say, Sir, this interpretation of the Board's recommendation is a misrepresentation of their meaning and a violence on language. I shall now point out why I say so.

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : On a point of order, Sir. The point with which the Honourable Member is now dealing does not appear to have any connection with the proposal in the Bill to increase the duty on yarn, but it is entirely connected, I think, with the duty on piece-goods, which the Tariff Board proposes, and I submit, therefore, that it is out of order.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : I thought that the whole Report of the Tariff Board was under consideration, and I am taking one point only. In their letter to the Mill-owners' Association, dated the 15th August, the Government say :

" It seems to Government that only one inference can fairly be drawn from this passage that with the majority of the Board the stimulus to the spinning of finer counts ranked first and they regarded the safeguarding of the manufacture of piece-goods as secondary."

That the inference sought to be drawn by Government is wholly unfounded will be clear from the following passage where the Board say why they propose a duty on imported piece-goods. On page 299 the Board say :

" The imposition of such a duty has a double advantage. It will not only assist the industry against unfair competition from Japan and afford relief against the maladjustment between costs of production and falling prices but will also provide the funds required to give a definite stimulus to the development of the industry on the lines we consider desirable."

Here, Sir, they give the first place not to the stimulus to yarn but to the protection to cloth. The Government's object is to show that the Tariff Board regarded the stimulus to yarn as the first ; but in the passage quoted above the Tariff Board say that the stimulus to yarn is the secondary object. The fact is, as the Board have said, they had a two-fold object, namely, the protection of cloth and yarn and this is further made clear by the following passage at page 200 :

"We propose that the additional duty should be fixed at 4 per cent. We have adopted this figure for two reasons. In the first place it is the most suitable rate with reference to the cost of our proposals. The proceeds of such a duty if levied for three years will bring in revenue which is more than sufficient to cover this. In the second place it exactly offsets the actual advantage though not the advantage if a reasonable return on capital is also included in cost of manufacture which we have estimated that the Japanese industry derives from double shift working."

Now they mention cloth first, now yarn first ; that is all ; they mean to protect both equally. Here also the Tariff Board point out the two objects they have in view. Then, finally, on the same page the Tariff Board say :

"We cannot too strongly emphasise that the primary purpose of the duty we propose is to provide the funds required to stimulate the production of higher counts of yarn and to protect the protection from unfair competition."……

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : Not to protect "the protection" but to protect "that production".

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta :

"To protect that production from unfair competition in the manner which in our view best avoids inflicting injury on other interests ; that is the outstanding argument for a bounty as against an additional duty on yarn."

Thus if we collectively read the statements of the Board their object of giving protection and stimulus not only to yarn but also to piece-goods will become quite clear ; practically in all the passages I have quoted the Board have mentioned these two things, the protection of piece-goods and the protection of yarn as the primary objects ; the primary and the secondary object are mentioned together on page 177 :

"Such a duty has in our view four advantages. In the first place it gives protection against unfair competition. In the second it avoids complications arising from discrimination against particular countries. In the third it enables funds to be found to give definite stimulus to the development of the industry on the lines we have considered desirable, and lastly, it obviates the necessity for certificates of origin which would be necessary to ensure that goods of foreign origin were not passed off as goods from any part of the Empire."

The House will thus see that there is no foundation for the Government saying that stimulus to yarn is the only object which the Tariff Board had in view ; the whole case in the Government letter to the mill-owners, dated the 15th August, saying that the Tariff Board recommended the bounty on yarn as the primary thing and protection to cloth as secondary absolutely falls to the ground. I hope, Sir, when the time comes for discussing this Bill in the Select Committee, the Commerce Member will realise that we ought to discuss the whole subject covered by the Report of the Tariff Board and not the single issue of protection to yarn. I support the motion for reference to the Select Committee on this ground.

Mr. M. S. Sesha Ayyangar (Madura and Ramnad cum Tinnevelly : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, whether or not the mill-owners deserve the protection that they ask for now, in the face of what is attributed to them in the pages of the Tariff Board Report or what is attributable to them by Bengal,—I see that no Honourable Member from Bengal has stood up and spoken on this motion as to how the mill-owners treated Bengal during the time of the War—I frankly admit that at this stage the Bombay mill-owners need protection because the Tariff Board has definitely found that the industry has sustained losses during the last three or four years and that some kind of protection is necessary. Speaking for myself I am not quite conscious of the extent to which the Bill before us will alleviate the depression in which the mills happen to be placed at present. I am concerned only with one phase of the Bill which has not been touched upon by any speaker so far. I would invite the attention of Honourable Members of the Select Committee to the important bearing which the provisions of the Bill proposed will have upon the handloom industry. Now, the Tariff Board in their majority report did distinctly find that any imposition of an additional duty on yarn would be undesirable because it would adversely affect the handloom industry. Another finding of the Tariff Board is this In proposing their scheme of a bounty they say it is decidedly advantageous because the position of the handloom industry will not be much affected. I would invite the attention of the Members to this aspect of the matter when they discuss the provisions of this Bill in the Select Committee. The Honourable Mover of the Bill in discussing why it was that the Government chose to differ from the minority report put it on the ground that any question of a differential protective duty would be a first step in an economic war. I quite concede that position. But the Honourable Member in charge of the Bill was not quite convincing when he dealt with the Government's reasons for brushing aside the majority report. The Honourable Mover said that the bounty proposed by the majority report was inadequate and ineffective. If that is so, it would be very reasonable for me to ask the Government through their spokesman, the Honourable Member in charge of the Bill, to find out some better method of giving a bounty which might be more effective and adequate. That ground, therefore, I submit is not a good one for rejecting the scheme of bounty propounded by the majority in their report. Then it was next said that a long-standing industry like the textile industry of India does not deserve to be given protection, especially at the cost of the consumer. In this connection I would submit to the House that my conviction is rather deep-rooted that whenever a Committee or Commission is appointed by Government, they invariably so manage things—I will not use stronger language—that their settled convictions are eventually endorsed by the Committee's Report. I would refer the House to page 1 of the Report of the Tariff Board. In the reference made by the Government in the appointment of this Board I would refer you to sub-clause (4) of paragraph 2 of the Report, page 1 :

"This Board to report whether, having regard to the fact that the industry has long been firmly established in India, and to the interests of the consumer and to all other interests affected."

Now that fairly gave out what their intention was as to the attitude which must eventually be taken by the Tariff Board after examining the question. And the answer to that expectation is practically got through the mouth of Mr. Noyce, the Chairman. In the Minute of Dissent, paragraph 2, page 1—although the paragraphs are not numbered it is paragraph 2—Mr. Noyce observed :

"I hold that a long-established industry like the textile industry in Bombay should need no stimulus at the expense of the general tax-payer to a development which is in its own interests."

[Mr. M. S. Sesha Ayyangar.]

And now the same opinion is endorsed by the Honourable Mover of the Bill to-day. The identical sentiment was expressed by him. Now political economists know that even in the case of long-established industries they are liable to suffer in times of depression, because periods of depression invariably follow periods of boom. We have seen that in all Governments, including the British Government and the countries in the British Commonwealth, State aid was given after the War with a view to protection of industries suffering from depression, though the industries were long-standing. I submit, therefore, that that argument is unavailing. Lastly, it was said by the Honourable the Mover of the Bill that he has chosen to give the industry the benefit of the reduction of the import duty on artificial silk yarn. Now I have closely studied the Tariff Board Report and I do not know where in this long Tariff Board Report the Commissioners say anything about this artificial silk yarn, and I ask the Honourable Member to kindly give us the reason why he has made this proposal. I have been following his speech closely, and I found that he went on to suggest that the Indian handloom industry is badly in need of yarn of that kind, and that therefore it is that the Government propose to make that industry pay less duty. Now instead of answering the question myself, I would respectfully request the Honourable the Mover to tell us in his reply where he expects this artificial silk yarn to come from. If, as I daresay, he proposes to answer this question of mine, I submit we can understand the genesis of the introduction of artificial silk yarn into the list of less duty articles in this Bill. It was also conceded practically that the introduction of this artificial silk yarn in the list of articles on which less duty is being imposed now would also adversely affect the handloom industry, though, as he considers, it would not be serious ; but I am fairly convinced that it would very seriously affect the handloom industry in this way. Once this duty on yarns is imposed, it will necessarily raise the cost of yarn. If that is raised, the handloom weavers would necessarily turn their attention to places from which they can get cheaper material. They would necessarily indent upon cheaper artificial silk yarn from whatever place that might be had. In that way they would prefer the imported article to the indigenous yarn produced in the country itself. That would certainly affect the handloom industry to that extent ; and here is an instance where the counterfeit is placed in a more advantageous position, i.e, artificial silk, in preference to genuine silk. I submit that these points should be taken into consideration by the Select Committee.

Mr. K. C. Neogy (Dacca Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I very much hope that no one in this House would question the genuineness of interest that I have always taken in industrial matters. And I trust that whatever I may say on this occasion, no uncharitable interpretation will be put upon it by my Honourable friends who may not agree with my views. Sir, the Honourable Mover, as also the Honourable Member representing the interests of the mill-owners of Bombay, in their very able speeches have omitted to mention one particularly important feature of the question now before us. It has been sought to be assumed that we are considering the question of protecting the industry of cotton textiles. I desire to point out that it is nothing of the kind. The Tariff Board has made it quite clear that the difficulties that the Bombay mill-owners find themselves faced with are not difficulties which are being experienced to that same extent even in Ahmedabad, and as for the rest of India, as far as can be judged, the cotton mills are in a quite flourishing condition. In judging therefore of the merits of the question before us, we should remember that we are not discussing the interests of the cotton textile industry as a whole but only of a part of it. Sir, I find from certain statistics given by the Tariff Board that the number of mills in Bombay work out to a percentage of 28.8 to the number of mills in all India, and taking the number of spindles, the percentage works out at 41.7 to all India. Taking the production per year, the percentage stands at 38.2, and in respect of cloth the percentage is 43 to the whole of India. I therefore say, Sir, that it is not quite right that when we approach this question we must give it that weight which is necessary in the consideration of the position of the entire textile industry of India. My Honourable friend Mr. Jamnadas Mehta has already pointed out the inconsistencies of the Government case. He has particularly shown that although in their first Resolution they refused to raise the duty on yarn on the ground that the additional duty would affect prejudicially the handloom industry, they have in their subsequent Resolution gone back upon this position ; and my Honourable friend Mr. Das in the earlier part of the debate very pertinently raised the question as to whether the Government of India had consulted the Local Governments as to what the effect of this change was likely to be on the handloom industry in the various provinces. On going through the evidence volume of the Tariff Board's Report I find that the Director of Industries, Bengal, was questioned on this particular point by the Tariff Board and he said as follows :

" Increase of import duty on yarn will not be desirable in the interests of the handloom industry unless there is a pro rata increase of duty on imported cloth. To be on the safe side it will be desirable to have more than a proportionate increase in the duty on cloth."

Similar observations have also been made by other Directors of Industries from other provinces. I find that the Director of Industries, Madras, holds the view that any increase in import duty on yarn would be prejudicial to the handloom industry of that province. He would, on the other hand, like to see the present 5 per cent. duty altogether removed. Furthermore, he made the observation that so far as the province of Madras was concerned, the handloom weaver was hardly making a profit at this time. Sir, when we come to the Director of Industries, Bombay—and he is an Indian—we find he holds the contrary view. He thinks the general effect of a higher duty on yarn would be to increase the price of cloth, but he thinks that people will come forward to support their own industry by paying about half an anna or one anna per yard, and he adds " in the boom time the price was higher and yet nobody complained ". Sir, I have too vivid a recollection of what the position was in Bengal during what is described as the boom time by the Director of Industries of Bombay. This was the period which coincided with the period of maximum profit which the Bombay mill-owners derived from their business and it was a period when the people of Bengal, most of them, had not sufficient capacity to buy their wearing cloth. People, as my Honourable friends from Bengal will bear me out, went about in rags and tatters. The condition of the lower middle classes was even much worse. They had to conform to a standard of civilisation, a certain standard of conduct, and yet their pecuniary position was absolutely hopeless ; and instances are on record in which heads of families—not one, I remember there have been at least two or three cases—heads of families who, having failed even to procure rags and tatters for the members of their family, committed suicide in order to escape humiliation and shame. Sir, that is the period to which this Director of Industries refers as the boom period when the price was higher and yet nobody complained. Sir, the Bombay mill-owner was driving in his Rolls Royce in those days, and but for the fact that the people in this country have got a traditional habit of putting up with their misfortunes without making any complaint, the mill-owners of Bombay would not have found it possible to drive their Rolls Royces in those days. Sir, my Honourable friend Sir Victor Sassoon refers to the national interests involved in this question. He refers more particularly to the desirability of establishing this industry on a firm footing. He refers to the desirability of industrialization of this country. Sir, so far as it lay within the limited power of my province we gave the mill-owners of Bombay a very good opportunity to do all this during the days of the Swadeshi agitation at great cost to ourselves, and what did they do? They frittered away their soaring profits in dividends. They did not lay by any share of those extraordinary dividends to meet the extraordinary circumstances with which they are faced to-day. Sir, if I have made these observations, it is more in sorrow than in anger. I would at once make it quite clear that I am not going to oppose this motion, but I do certainly think that the Government would be doing a very great wrong to the consumers if they were to accede to any requests for any higher protection in the Select Committee. I think the suggestions that have been made by my Honourable friends Sir Victor Sassoon and Mr. Jamnadas Mehta amount to this that, although it may not be quite within the competence of this House, having regard to the rules which govern our procedure, to increase the measure of protection which this Bill seeks to give, it may be permissible in the informal atmosphere of the Committee to suggest some such increase. Sir, I give a warning to Government beforehand that, if they accede to any such request in the Select Committee in disregard of the interests of the consumer, they may not have the support of myself and some of my friends on this side.

Sir, there is another small point to which reference has already been made by Mr. Sesha Ayyangar, and that is with regard to artificial silk. My Honourable friend Sir George Rainy claims great credit for having reduced the duty on the importation of artificial silk. I come from a province, Sir, which at one time was very well known for its silk industry, and I very much regret to say that the position of the silk industry in Bengal is not quite as good as it was at one time. I should like my Honourable friend, Sir George Rainy, to examine very carefully as to what the effect of this reduction in the import duty of artificial silk is likely to be on the future of the silk industry of Bengal. Sir, in such matters I earnestly request the Government to consult the Local Governments and also the local public opinion before they embark on any tariff reform of this character.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru (Agra Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, the House having accepted the principle of protection cannot certainly be opposed to the basis of the Bill before us. Now, one need not be a capitalist or an apologist of the mill-owners to welcome the Bill as it has been introduced, although I do not think it will be sufficient to enable the textile industry to tide over its difficulties. The Report of the Tariff Board, it seems to me, is a very impartial document. It does not propose additional protection blindly. It points out that there are certain world factors that are responsible for the present condition of the textile industry in Bombay. It also castigates the mill-owners and asks them to set their house in order.

But in order to enable them to help themselves and to carry out the suggestions made by the Board it recommends that the industry should be granted a limited protection for a certain period of time, both on the production of yarn and the manufacture of cloth. Now the first recommendation has been accepted by Government after a great deal of agitation on the part of the mill-owners. But so far as the second recommendation, namely, that with regard to the protection of manufactured cloth, Government have been unable to see eye to eye with the majority of the Board. Indeed they seem to me, in their Resolution, to accept the line of argument followed by the President of the Board in his dissenting minute. Now the main objection of Government to the acceptance of the recommendations of the Board with regard to the protection of cloth is that even accepting that Japan, because of the employment of female labour has a certain advantage over the textile industry of this country, the existing import duty is more than enough to cover it. Now, may I ask Government to consider on this point the opinion of the President of the Board, whose opinions they seem to have accepted in other respects.

"We are agreed," says Mr. Noyce, "that an industry may legitimately ask for protection against unfair foreign competition beyond what is accorded to it by any existing revenue duty."

Besides when the Tariff Board considered this question, it was aware of the fact that there was an import duty both on foreign yarn and cloth, and it is to be presumed that if it made certain recommendations it made them after a full knowledge of this fact and because it thought that the existing protection was not adequate. The report of the majority has laid stress on the fact that the textile industry is suffering, at any rate for the time being, from the effects of the rise in exchange. I do not wish, Sir, to revive the bitter controversy over exchange which we went through during the last Delhi Session, but if ordinary economic laws have any effect at all, I think it will be admitted even by the Honourable the Finance Member himself that a rise in exchange from 1*s.* 4*d.* to 1*s.* 6*d.* would destroy the protective effect of the import duties. In fact, if I am not mistaken, in the course of certain remarks which he made at a meeting held at the Delhi University on the subject, he expressly said in reply to those who objected to a rise in exchange that the existing import duties were not to be supposed to be protective and that it was therefore no argument against a rise in exchange that it would do away with the incidentally protective effect of import duties which were imposed primarily for revenue purposes. If the effect of the import duties has been destroyed by the rise in exchange, as I hold it has been, it is obvious that the argument of Government that the advantage which Japan enjoys over the Indian textile industry is fully covered by the existing import duty, cannot hold water. That effect of the duty on imported cloth, whatever it was, was temporary and has ceased to exist, and the question of the competition of the Indian textile industry with the Japanese textile industry should therefore be taken up on the same basis as that of protection to the spinning industry of India.

[Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru.]

I think, Sir, reading the Report of the Tariff Board, that if it had been possible for Government to propose a duty merely on cloth made from counts between 32 and 40, they would have come forward as willingly to protect the cloth industry as they have come forward to protect the yarn industry. But, in view of the difficulty of finding out whether a certain cloth has been produced from yarn of a certain quality or not, and the fact that a general duty if imposed would hurt Lancashire also, they have refrained from proposing that protection to the textile industry which they have given to the yarn industry. I may be doing some injustice to the Honourable Member in charge of the Bill, but, considering the fact that the arguments for the protection of yarn and cloth are substantially the same, one can only think that, when confronted with the difficulty of protecting cloth made from yarn of certain counts only, Government did not take their courage in both hands and propose a general duty which would have fallen not merely only on cloth imported from Japan but also on cloth imported from England. I remember, Sir, a few weeks ago when Mr. Gandhi made the statement that Government were unwilling to impose a duty for the protection of cloth mainly in the interests of Lancashire, a European edited paper completely lost its balance and accused Mr. Gandhi of criminally and wilfully distorting facts, and in support of this accusation it came forward with the contention that the Lancashire industry in India had to compete as much with the Japanese industry as the Indian industry itself ; but it is obvious to anybody who reads the Report of the Commission that the 4 per cent. duty on imported cloth proposed by the Tariff Board would, if of a general character, have fallen not only on Japanese cloth but also on cloth of British origin. In view of this, it seems to me hard to controvert Mr. Gandhi's statement that if protection has not been given to the cloth industry it is primarily with a view to protecting British interests.

We would certainly all be in favour of giving that protection to the textile industry in Bombay which is proposed by Government, but we hope that the question will be discussed in all its bearings in the Select Committee. Whatever protection Government are willing to give will be welcomed by the textile industry for that would enable it to place itself in a better condition than that in which it is situated to-day. But frankly, Sir, even those of us who are on the Select Committee which will consider this Bill are bound to say that the measure, as it has been placed before the House, is not sufficient to enable the textile industry to become self-supporting.

Just one more point, Sir, before I sit down. Government, in considering the Report of the Tariff Board, seem to have taken up the position that they were not bound to propose additional protection for cloth unless it was shown, by an exhaustive comparison of conditions permanently prevailing in India and Japan, that the conditions in India were temporarily so unfavourable as to require additional protection. If they are of that view, it was open to them to appoint a Committee or a Board with wider terms of reference. Instead of asking the Board to confine itself merely to a consideration of the competition with Japan and other countries in certain respects they could have asked it to go into the whole question thoroughly and examine the very foundations of the Indian textile industry,

4 P.M. and then to report whether the industry could be self-supporting, and if so, what help should be given to it and for what period of time. But not having done that, they cannot now come and say that, as they are not fully conversant with all the facts, it is not possible for them to grant to the cloth industry the protection recommended by the Tariff Board. It is still open to them to appoint a Board with wider terms of reference, but in the meanwhile they must protect the textile industry here, so that if it is found, and I am sure it will be found, that it can become self-supporting, the country may not be put to greater expenditure than it would be put to if it is granted a limited measure of protection for three or four years.

Mr. M. R. Jayakar (Bombay City : Non-Muhammadan Urban) : Sir, I wish to occupy the attention of the House only for a few minutes, and I wish to associate myself with the suggestion made by my Honourable friend Sir Victor Sassoon, that in the Select Committee the whole question ought to be open for reconsideration, the question being whether the textile industry requires protection, and if so, to what extent and in what manner. The House has before it a precedent in this connection. When the Steel Protection Bill was referred to the Select Committee, a similar interpretation was put upon the preamble and scope of the draft Bill, and the whole question was referred to the Select Committee for their consideration. If that was necessary in the case of the Steel Protection Bill, Sir, I think it is far more necessary in the case of this Bill, and Honourable Members will be able to appreciate this if they follow very briefly my outline of the circumstances in which this Bill has come before the House. Now, what are the facts ? A few years ago the mill industry in Western India especially, as my Honourable friend Mr. Neogy rightly stated, was so prosperous that its promoters were riding in Rolls Royce cars. A few Members have spoken like my Honourable friend Mr. Neogy pointing out that Sir Victor Sassoon and his colleagues of the mill industry are now paying for their past sins, and I do hope that my friend Sir Victor and his colleagues of the mill industry will bear in mind the gentle castigation which has been given to them by Mr. Neogy and Mr. Das. But that is not the question before the House at the present moment, unless it intends, by a sort of ad hominem argument to penalise the mill industry for the sins of its promoters six years ago. The question at present before the House is a very broad and general one, whether a languishing national industry has to receive protection ; if so to what extent and in what manner. The mill-owners put their case time after time before the Government of India. They wanted an ad hoc committee of inquiry to go into the question how far, in view of unfair Japanese competition due to double shift and many other advantages which they enjoy in their own country, the textile industry should be protected against unfair competition which reduced their cost of production. The Government said that they would not give the mill-owners an ad hoc inquiry, and that they must go before a semi-judicial tribunal which had been established in the country, namely, the Tariff Board. The mill-owners, I understand, were extremely unwilling to open out all their secrets before this tribunal, but they ultimately consented to the Government proposal and laid before this body an amount of information which they have a right to complain exposes many of their professional and technical secrets to their competitors outside India. On that inquiry the Tariff Board has submitted a report. It cannot be said to be in any way a partial report or a report unduly favourable to the mill-owners. I have read that Report, Sir, with such knowledge as a layman like me can bring to bear on its reading, and I do hold—and I am sure my Honourable friends who have taken the trouble to read this Report will agree with me—that this Report considers the whole question in a very judicial manner without showing any partiality to the mill-owners. The question before the Tariff Board is stated briefly at page 1. It is inter alia to report whether the textile industry is in need of protection ; if so, in what form and for what period the protection should be given and to make other recommendations. Briefly stated, the recommendations of that Report were that the majority agreed that both yarn and cloth should be given protection, yarn in the way of bounties and cloth in the way of protective duties ; while the minority, consisting only of its President, Mr. Noyce, agreed that both yarn and cloth required protection, but he varied his verdict by confining the protection only to competition with Japan. But it is common ground between the majority and the minority that both yarn and cloth require protection. When that came before the Government of India, the Government in two communiqués explained their position, and I am bound to say, Sir, in perfect fairness and without being in any way partial to the mill-owners that, speaking for myself, I found some difficulty in following the logic which Government pursued in their communications. One such flaw in their logic has already been pointed out to the House by my Honourable friend Mr. Jamnadas Mehta. The Government in their communication have said that the Tariff Board have not made it clear whether the percentage of duty which is recommended by the Tariff Board is in addition to the duty of 11 per cent. which is the revenue duty or whether it is included in that. Personally, Sir, I find some difficulty in following this reasoning of Government, because I have found in the Report time after time sentences which make it perfectly clear that both the majority and the minority intended the protection to be given in addition to the 11 per cent. protective duty which existed on cloth and 5 per cent. on yarn.

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : If I might intervene for one moment, I think the Honourable Member is under some misapprehension. There was no doubt in the mind of Government that what the Board recommended was that the duty should be additional to the existing duties. That point was never in doubt.

Mr. M. R. Jayakar : I am very glad to hear that. Then the question is only this, and the Honourable the Commerce Member has very frankly stated in his opening speech this morning that, if it can be established that any indigenous industry is suffering from unfair foreign competition in this sense that a foreign industry of a similar character owing to its inferior cost of production due to advantages it enjoys in its own country is able to undersell the commodity in India, then certainly that commodity is entitled to the protection of the Government of India. If that is the principle on which the Government of India want to proceed, may I ask the Honourable the Commerce Member to look at a passage on page 50 of the Tariff Board's Report, where they clearly state in one paragraph that cloths coming from Japan, especially in some of the well-known qualities of shirtings, long cloth, etc., are underselling Indian fabrics in India. The Tariff Board have clearly stated it as their conclusion that :

> "Japanese manufacturers are supplying long cloth and shirtings which are only slightly inferior to Lancashire goods at prices which are distinctly lower than those of the latter and differ very little from the cost of manufacture of Indian goods to which their quality is distinctly superior."

Paraphrased into plain English what the Tariff Board state as the basis of their recommendation which involved both cloth and yarn is that Japanese people are able to undersell in India cloth of indigenous manufacture. That cannot be denied. The Board further state that this underselling is made possible by unfair competition. If that is so, according to the principles stated by the Honourable the Commerce Member this morning, and which are the right ones to adopt, one fails to understand on what ground yarn alone is going to be protected and cloth is excluded from protection. Speaking of yarn, Sir, I met a technical expert in Bombay and I shall state his opinion on the present suggestions of Government which are embodied in the draft Bill. That opinion has been foreshadowed in an excellent note which the Evening News of Bombay published on the 16th of August 1927. There it is shown by calculation—a very careful one in figures—that speaking of the 1½ annas duty which the draft Bill provides for, and applying that duty to yarn which is at the present moment sold at 20 annas per pound, which I understand becomes nearest the 42*s*. count, the percentage of duty works out as 2.5 per cent. which is really no protection. On yarn which sells at present at 10 annas the proposed duty works out at 10 per cent. The figures are given in greater detail there in a table to which I shall invite the attention of the Commerce Member and it leads to the conclusion that as the price per pound of yarn goes up nearer thirty annas, the percentage of protection grows less and less, until when it reaches Rs. 1-14-0, it becomes 5 per cent. which is no more than the present rate. In other words, for higher priced yarn, yarn of higher counts, the revised proposal of Government affords little protection. Now take that, Sir, with the suggestion made by the Tariff Board. They say that it is these 42*s*. and higher counts which require special protection and the Tariff Board in their desire to give it went the length of perpetrating what may be called an economic heresy, quoting the opinion of the same body in their Report on Steel Protection, where they described "bounties" as an economic heresy. In the present case, however, they perpetrated such a heresy, because they thought that the needs of the occasion required it. Yet what does this Bill do? It gives those very counts of yarn very little protection. Therefore, I find, Sir, in Western India there is a strong feeling that the present Bill is unable to afford the mill industry that protection which it requires, and I submit, Sir, that as we have got a fairly large Committee on which there are members representing different schools of thought, the whole question ought to be kept open and we ought to have liberty to consider the entire question which the Tariff Board stated briefly, namely, whether the textile industry requires protection; if so to what extent, in what manner and for what period. I submit, Sir, that this would be a far more effective way of finding out the proper remedy for the disease which has now been admitted than to ask the Select Committee to consider a narrow cut-and-dry proposal embodied in the measure before us. I submit, therefore, that the Government should accept the suggestion of my Honourable friend Sir Victor Sassoon.

The Honourable Sir George Rainy: I should like, Sir, at the outset to say that, if in my speech in moving the motion which is before the House at this moment, I strayed beyond the bounds of what was strictly within the limit of the Bill I regret it very much, and if I have in any way rendered more difficult your task, Mr. President, of controlling the debate, that would be a subject of very deep regret to me. I hope I may be allowed to say that that was no part of my intention. But what I felt was this. In the Bill we are proposing to take a certain course of action to carry out part of the object which the Tariff Board proposed to itself, and I thought I should be lacking in respect to this House if I did not state in some detail the reasons why the Government of India were unable to accept the recommendations of either the majority or the minority. I think I am right in saying that these were the only recommendations of the Tariff Board to which I referred, namely the recommendation for the bounty on the spinning of the finer counts of yarn and the proposed differential duty on yarn imported from Japan. The others I left untouched altogether. Usually, Sir, when the Mover is replying to the debate, he has to answer a series of arguments directed to showing that the House ought not to assent to the motion which he has placed before them. But during the course of the debate to-day, while I have heard a great many criticisms of Government—it is perhaps the common experience on such occasions—most of them, I think I am right in saying, were not advanced as reasons why the House should reject the motion to refer the Bill to a Select Committee. On the other hand, a good many of them were arguments for referring the Bill to a Select Committee on the understanding that it would then be open to the Select Committee to take the course of action they like. I shall come to them presently, but there are one or two other smaller points which I should like to dispose of first, and if I do not reply to-day to all the requests for information or all the arguments which have been addressed to me by Members in various quarters of the House, perhaps they will understand that I am anxious that I should not on a second occasion stray beyond the scope of the Bill Some of the questions for example,—and here I was certainly to blame because I referred in my opening speech to the duty on artificial silk, and of course, anything said about that will come more properly into the discussion about the other Bill.

Mr. Jayakar attributed to me a statement of opinion in my speech to-day which I certainly did not intend to give. I hope I am repeating correctly what he said. I understood that he believes that I said that, if it could be proved that the cost of production was lower in some foreign country, that of itself was a sufficient reason for imposing a protective duty. May I ask if that is the opinion he was attributing to me ?

Mr. M. R. Jayakar : I may not have properly heard the Honourable Member, but I was under the impression in the course of his speech, when he came to the middle of it, the Honourable the Commerce Member did say that if a case could be established by an indigenous industry that owing to unfair foreign competition leading to reduction of the cost of production, it was being undersold in this country, that would be a good ground for a claim to protection, not necessarily by a protective duty.

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I am not quite sure to what passage of my speech the Honourable Member refers. I have been endeavouring to find from my notes what may have been in his mind. It is possible this sentence :

" Unfair competition is competition against which industries can ordinarily claim to be safeguarded, whether that arises from the action of foreign Governments or manufacturers, or, as in this case, from the restrictions imposed by the law of the country itself."

I do not know whether that was the passage. However, that may be, if I did make so very unguarded a statement as the Honourable Member attributes to me, I must at once take this opportunity of correcting it. I do not think I actually did make the statement attributed to me, but if I did, it is obvious that it required to be limited by the qualification that the foreign competition must be due to some special cause in the case of what is called safeguarding duties. When we talk about unfair competition there is always some special ground alleged, such as dumping or bounties, or, as in this case, a difference of industrial conditions, when the industry in one country is subject to a restriction from which the industry in the other country is free. But I certainly never meant to commit myself to any general statement such as the Honourable Member thinks that I gave utterance to. The Honourable Mr. Jayakar also asked why, " since the conditions as to foreign competition are precisely similar in respect of cloth and of yarn, do we propose a higher duty in the case of yarn and not in the case of cloth ". Well, I find it difficult to believe that the Honourable Member does not understand the Government view on that question, though I quite realise that he does not approve of it or agree with it. The whole distinction is merely this. If the unfair advantage at present prices is 10 per cent. the existing duty on yarn is only 5 per cent., and therefore unless it is increased it does not safeguard the industry against unfair competition, but as the duty on piece-goods is 11 per cent. it a little more than safeguards the industry. After all that is not a particularly obscure point.

Then I will turn to something that was said by Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru. He attibuted to the Government of India a somewhat docile adherence to the dicta of Mr. Noyce, the President of the Tariff Board. I can only say, if he was right in attributing this curious docility to the Government of India, there would have been no Bill before the House to-day, because Mr. Noyce's finding was that the disadvantage to the Indian mills was only 4 per cent. which is already covered by the 5 per cent. duty, and in these circumstances it is absurd, if I may say so, to say that in all matters we have been following Mr. Noyce, because in this rather important matter the opinion of the Government of India was not with him but with the majority.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : May I remind the Honourable Member that the disadvantage was 4 per cent. without taking into account the return on capital.

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : Exactly. He said that the return on capital ought not to be taken into account.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : He said it could not be accurately calculated.

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : The Government of India said that it ought to be taken into account. I think it is sufficiently obvious that the Government of India cannot fairly be charged with taking all their opinions from Mr. Noyce.

I come now to the point that was raised by Sir Victor Sassoon and which was referred to again and again by several of the subsequent speakers. Perhaps my Honourable friend Mr. Jayakar put it most clearly. He said that he intended to vote for the motion to refer the Bill to the Select Committee in the hope that it would be open to the Select Committee to examine the whole question as to what extent and in what manner the cotton textile industry should be protected. Well, I find it difficult to see how the particular motion which I have moved can possibly be construed in such a very wide sense. I know that an appeal is made to the precedent of what took place at the time the Steel Industry (Protection) Bill was before this Assembly in Delhi. On that occasion Sir Charles Innes in winding up his speech when he moved the reference to a Select Committee said :

" All I ask the House to-day is to accept the principle that further protection is required, everything else to be left to the Select Committee."

The Bill, which Sir Charles Innes was dealing with on that occasion, was a Bill " to provide for the continuance of protection to the steel industry in British India ", that is to say, it was a Bill with a pretty wide scope. Now, when I moved my motion this morning I drew attention at the very outset to the fact that the scope of this Bill was limited, and that it had a single object, namely, the safeguarding of the manufacture of yarn in British India. I expressly said that it was not a Bill for the grant of protection in the general sense even to the manufacturer of yarn. Therefore, I should find the greatest difficulty in agreeing to what was suggested by Sir Victor Sassoon and was supported by other speakers. I cannot see how a motion to refer this Bill to a Select Committee can be construed as authority to investigate all the questions which arise in connection with the Tariff Board's Report. To come a little more closely to the point, Mr. President, the first submission I would make is this, that the Bill is a Bill to safeguard the manufacture of cotton yarn. Well, it seems to me quite clear that that limits the scope of the Bill to yarn only, and questions connected with piece-goods are beyond its scope. In the second place, the object of the Bill, as it is put in the Preamble, is to safeguard the cotton textile industry in British India against competition in cotton yarn produced under industrial conditions which enable such yarn to be produced at a cost below that at which it can be produced in British India. That is to say, it is quite a definite reference to safeguarding as opposed to the rather wider term " protection ". And in the third place, the Bill is a Bill to amend the Indian Tariff Act and does not purport to have any wider object. Now in the case of the original Steel Bill there was a provision for the grant of bounties. But the section empowering the Government of India to grant these bounties was not proposed to be inserted as an amendment in the Indian Tariff Act. The Indian Tariff Act is itself limited to provisions dealing with the levy of duties of customs on goods imported or exported by sea, and to provide for the levy of duties on goods imported into or exported from British India by land. Hitherto there has been no question of including in the Tariff Act any bounties or subsidies, and therefore, in view of the fact that this Bill is a Bill to amend the Indian Tariff Act, I would submit, Mr. President, that any question of a bounty scheme is outside the scope of the Bill. Apart from that, and to put it on broader grounds, I am asking the House to affirm, in voting for the Select Committee, that it is expedient to safeguard the cotton textile industry in British India against competition in cotton yarn produced under certain industrial conditions. I am limiting my request to that. I therefore propose to put it in this way, that the principle I ask the House to affirm is that the manufacture of cotton yarn should be safeguarded and that it should be safeguarded by means of a duty. That follows at once from the fact that the Bill is a Bill to amend the Indian Tariff Act. I regret, therefore, that I am quite unable to accept the suggestion which was made by the Honourable Sir Victor Sassoon that the whole question of protection to the Indian textile industry should be regarded as open before the Select Committee.

(At this stage Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya rose in his place.)

Mr. President : The Honourable Member is not entitled to make any speech at this stage.

Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya (Allahabad and Jhansi Divisions : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : I submit, Sir, that.....

Mr. President : Order, order. The Honourable Member in charge of the Bill has replied and, therefore, the debate on the motion is concluded.

Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya : Would you, Sir, allow me to make one point. I submit, Sir, that on an occasion like this, when the Government Member replies to a specific request put forward by several Members of the House negativing the request, Members of this House should be permitted to have an opportunity of answering.....

Mr. President : Order, order. The Standing Orders and the Rules are against the contention of the Honourable Member.

The question is :

"That the Bill further to amend the Indian Tariff Act, 1894, in order to safeguard the manufacture of cotton yarn in British India be referred to a Select Committee consisting of Maulvi Muhammad Yakub, Mr. R. K. Shanmukham Chetty, Sir Victor Sassoon, Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas, Mr. W. S. Lamb, Dr. A. Suhrawardy, Diwan Chaman Lall, Mr. N. M. Joshi, Raja Ghazanfar Ali Khan, Mr. Duraiswami Aiyangar, Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta, Mr. S. C. Mitra, Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru, Munshi Iswar Saran, Mr. M. R. Jayakar and the Mover, and that the number of Members whose presence shall be necessary to constitute a meeting of the Committee be five and that the Committee be instructed to report on or before the 31st August 1927."

The motion was adopted.

The Assembly then adjourned till Eleven of the Clock on Tuesday, the 23rd August, 1927.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

Tuesday, 23rd August, 1927.

The Assembly met in the Assembly Chamber at Eleven of the Clock, Mr. President in the Chair.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

THE SOUTH AFRICAN AGREEMENT.

107. Diwan Chaman Lall : Will Government make a statement as to the actual position to-day in regard to the South African agreement ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : With your permission, Sir, I shall state briefly the developments regarding the South African agreement that have occurred since Mr. Bhore made his statement on the subject to the Assembly on the 21st February, 1927. In May last, the Government of India appointed the Right Honourable V. S Srinivasa Sastri as their first agent in the Union. Mr. Sastri arrived at Pretoria on 27th June, 1927, and after a brief halt there, proceeded on a short tour of Natal where, as Honourable Members are no doubt aware, the Indian element in South Africa is most numerous. Mr. Sastri has gone to Natal to familiarise himself with local conditions and to work for carrying out the programme of upliftment, especially in regard to education, which is part of the agreement. Honourable Members will be gratified to hear that so far Mr. Sastri's reception in South Africa by all sections of the community has been very cordial. (Applause.)

In order to assist Mr. Sastri, the Union Government have appointed one of their senior officials Mr. Venn, formerly Under Secretary in the Department of the Interior, to be Commissioner of Asiatic affairs. Mr. Venn is working in close and friendly co-operation with Mr. Sastri.

In accordance with the terms of the agreement, the bonus for Indians returning to India has been increased from £10 to £20 for each adult and from £5 to £10 for each minor. Up to the middle of July, 1,319 Indians had returned from South Africa to India. A special staff has been appointed in Madras with effect from the 1st August to meet Indians returning to that Presidency, and to help them to bank their savings and find occupation suited to their capacity and resources.

The legislation introduced in the Union Parliament to implement the agreement roused some apprehension among Indians in the Transvaal on the ground that one of its provisions, which authorised cancellation of certificates of registration, obtained by fraudulent means, would have retroactive effect. Their misgivings should have been set at rest by the assurance given in the Union Assembly by the Honourable the Minister of the Interior that retrospective effect will not be given to this provision, provided that the Transvaal Indians co-operate with the Government of the Union in carrying out the Cape Town agreement.

The Bill itself has now become the Immigration and Indian Relief (Further Provision) Act. The Government of India feel sure that the House will receive with satisfaction the assurance that the relations between them and the Government of the Union continue to be most friendly.

In conclusion, Sir, I would like to pay a tribute to Mr. Andrews for the great services rendered by him to the Indian cause in South Africa (Applause), especially during the interval that elapsed between the termination of the conference at Cape Town and the arrival of Mr. Sastri in the Union.

RECOMMENDATIONS OF THE DELHI CONFERENCE REGARDING JOINT ELECTORATES.

108. *Diwan Chaman Lall : (a) Have Government seen the recommendations of the Delhi Conference regarding joint electorates ?

(b) Have Government decided to accept those recommendations, agreed to by the All-India Congress Committee, for future guidance in revising the constitution ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a) Yes.

(b) As far as Government are aware the proposals of the Delhi Conference have not yet been accepted by all the parties concerned.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Are Government aware that the conveners of the Delhi Conference and their supporters wanted simply to advertise their names in the newspapers so that the people might see that.....

Mr. President : Diwan Chaman Lall.

Diwan Chaman Lall : May I ask the Honourable Member whether it is the policy of the Government that any recommendations unanimously accepted by all parties should receive their consideration ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : No, Sir. We have not received any assurance that these recommendations have received even a partial acceptance among some of the most important interests concerned.

Diwan Chaman Lall : Is the Honourable Member aware that the recommendations have received the support of a large number of people in this country ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Judging from the references to these recommendations in the press, it would appear that a considerable number of persons have endorsed the recommendations.

Diwan Chaman Lall : May I ask whether the Government is not desirous of introducing joint electorates in view of the condition of the country ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : That, Sir, is a matter which I think would be more appropriate for debate than for question and answer.

Diwan Chaman Lall : Have Government not made up their minds in regard to this question at all ?

Mr. K. Ahmed : Are Government aware that the Delhi Conference was neither constitutional nor formal and that the Muhammadans in all the major provinces, as well as other provinces, such as the Punjab, Bengal, Madras, Bombay and the North West Frontier Province I believe, if I am not mistaken, have stated that they do not want joint electorates, and the conveners of these meetings and their supporters have said so in order to circulate their names in the sphere of politics and they are not really for the interests of their country and the community ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : In reply to that question, I have merely to say that I find it extremely inconvenient to be the channel for a controversy carried on between the Honourable gentlemen opposite and the Honourable gentlemen behind me.

Mr. R. K. Shanmukham Chetty : Do Government intend to convene a Conference of the leaders of various communities to settle the communal question ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : That again, I suggest, is a matter more appropriate for debate.

THE SKEEN COMMITTEE'S REPORT.

109. *Diwan Chaman Lall : Will Government state what immediate action they intend to take in regard to the Skeen Committee's Report ?

Mr. G. M. Young : I am afraid the Honourable Member's question cannot be answered until final decisions have been reached on the recommendations of the Indian Sandhurst Committee.

Diwan Chaman Lall : May I ask how long it is likely to take before a final decision is reached ?

Mr. G. M. Young : I am afraid I cannot give any idea.

Diwan Chaman Lall : May I ask what the delay is due to ?

Mr. G. M. Young : I should not admit that there was any delay. Final decisions will not be reached until this House has been fully consulted. His Majesty's Government have also to reach their conclusions.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : May I know exactly in what stage this matter is now ?

Mr. G. M. Young : If my Honourable friend will wait till the day after to-morrow, he will be informed in the course of the debate on this question.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : Is there any particular harm in giving the information just now ? Are any interests of the State involved ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : I would suggest that it would be for the convenience of the House and of the Government if this matter were left to come up in debate in the ordinary course the day after to-morrow.

Diwan Chaman Lall : With your permission, I do not intend to ask the next question, No. 110.

† 110.*

RECOMMENDATIONS OF THE INTERNATIONAL LABOUR CONFERENCE REGARDING SOCIAL INSURANCE.

111. Diwan Chaman Lall : Will Government state what action they intend to take in regard to the recommendations of the International Labour Conference in connection with social insurance ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : I am unable to say. Government have not yet received either the report of their Delegates to the Conference or the authentic copies of the Draft Conventions and Recommendations. When these are received the question will be examined.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Was not there any representative representing the Government of India and the people of this country in the Conference ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : I am sorry, Sir, I did not catch the Honourable Member's question.

Mr. K. Ahmed : It is very simple, Sir. Was not there any representative from India and on behalf of the Government—the Government of my Honourable friend—sent there, who must have been familiar with these questions, and must have informed the Honourable Member's Department about it ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : If the Honourable Member had kindly listened to what I said in reply to my Honourable friend Mr. Chaman Lall, he would have got the answer to that question.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Then what is the difficulty now, Sir, for the Honourable Member to answer the question ?

RATIO OF MILITARY EXPENDITURE TO CENTRAL REVENUES.

112. Diwan Chaman Lall : Will Government state (a) whether the answer given by Lord Winterton in the House of Commons when asked to give the ratio of military expenditure to revenue included the total of Provincial as well as Central Revenues ? (b) the exact ratio of military expenditure to Central Revenues ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : The answer to part (a) is in affirmative. As regards part (b) the ratio of net military expenditure to gross Central revenues in 1925-26 was 27 per cent. Complete figures are not yet available for 1926-27.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : Does that include the revenue of the Railways and the other developmental revenues ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : The ratio of military expenditure to the gross Central revenues is the figure that I gave.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : Does that include the Railway revenue ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : Yes, the Central Revenues include Railway revenues.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : Will the Honourable Member kindly tell us what proportion the military expenditure bears to the actual taxation revenues of the Central Government.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : I would suggest that the Honourable Member should work it out for himself.

Diwan Chaman Lall : Is it not a fact that the figure that the Honourable Member wants my friend Mr. Rangaswami Iyengar to work out is somewhere near 47 to 48 per cent. ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : I once said that I could produce a figure of over 100 per cent. if I were asked.

Diwan Chaman Lall : Is that the method in which the finances of the Government are conducted ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : No, Sir. The method is as stated in my answer.

Diwan Chaman Lall : Will the Honourable Member give the ratio of military expenditure to net revenue in Great Britain ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : If the Honourable Member will put the question down, I shall consider whether I will answer it.

PLACING OF RAILWAY CONTRACTS WITH MEMBERS OF RAILWAY ADVISORY COMMITTEES.

113. Diwan Chaman Lall : Will Government state whether any members of Railway Advisory Committees have been given railway contracts ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Government have no information. But if the Honourable Member wishes to know whether appointment to a Railway Advisory Committee constitutes a bar to a member receiving a railway contract, the answer is in the negative. Nominations to these Committees are, as the Honourable Member is, I think, aware, made by various legislative and commercial bodies.

ACTION TAKEN AGAINST INDIANS BY THE RESTAURANT PROPRIETORS OF EDINBURGH.

114. Diwan Chaman Lall : Has the attention of the Government been drawn to the action taken against Indians by the restaurant proprietors of Edinburgh ? If so, what protest, if any, has been made by the Government of India ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I invite the Honourable Member's attention to the answer I gave on the 22nd August 1927, to a similar question by Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh. The restrictions were withdrawn as a result of the action taken by the city authorities.

STATEMENT ISSUED BY MR. SUBASH CHANDRA BOSE IN REPLY TO LORD WINTERTON'S CHARGE.

115. Diwan Chaman Lall : (a) Have Government seen the statement issued by Mr. Subash Chandra Bose in reply to Lord Winterton's charge ?

(b) If so, is it a fact that many of the detenus are being detained in spite of there being no charge against them of complicity in any revolutionary crimes ?

(c) Will Government inform this House of the evidence alleged to have been examined by two Judges in the case of Mr. Subash Chandra Bose ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Government have seen the statement. The answers to the remaining parts of the question are in the negative

Mr. Satyendra Chandra Mitra : Is not the Honourable the Home Member aware that Government have recently styled these charges not as charges but as mere allegations when it was pointed out to them that these charges lack all the three essentials of a valid charge, namely, the definiteness as to time, the nature of the crime and the place of occurrence.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I missed the Honourable Member's point. Will he put his point a little more precisely ?

Mr. Satyendra Chandra Mitra : Is not the Honourable the Home Member aware that the Government no longer style these charges as charges but as mere allegations when it was pointed out to them that these wild allegations really lack all the three essentials of a valid charge, namely, the definiteness as to time, place of occurrence or the nature of the crime ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : No, Sir. I cannot agree with the Honourable Member that Government regard the charges as mere allegations.

Mr. Satyendra Chandra Mitra : Is it not a fact that now the detenus are not asked to answer the charges but are merely asked to explain the allegations against them ? Formerly they were asked to answer to the charges but now Government have accepted them as mere allegations and not as charges.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : That is a point of detailed procedure of which I have not such means of direct acquaintance as the Honourable gentleman. Nevertheless, I do not think that the use of the word " allegation " in substitution for the word " charge " means or implies any difference in the attitude of the Government.

Diwan Chaman Lall : May I ask, Sir, whether the Honourable Member is aware of the definition of " charge " as given in the Criminal Procedure Code ? What is the definition of " charge "? Does it not mean that in any criminal proceedings against a particular accused a definite statement should be made of the offence committed by him and the approximate time of the offence ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : The Honourable and learned Member raises this as a point of law. I feel that it is rather superfluous for him, a lawyer, to apply to me, a layman.

Diwan Chaman Lall : May I ask the Honourable Member whether he is not aware that certain charges have been levelled against these detenus and that Lord Winterton said in the House of Commons that there is no specific allegation in regard to any criminal charge against these people and that therefore it is necessary for the Government to explain what " charges " have been levelled against these people ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : The substance of the Honourable Member's question appears to me to be this : whether, when the word " charge " has been used in the particular sense arising out of the question, it has been used in the precise legal and formal sense of the Criminal Procedure Code ? That, of course, is not the case.

Diwan Chaman Lall : Is it not a fact that these detenus are arrested under due process of law whatever is might be—it might be a lawless law ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : They are certainly arrested under the process of law.

Diwan Chaman Lall : Therefore am I not right in asking the Honourable Member that he ought to reply to my question in regard to the " charge " ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I have already replied to the Honourable Member's question.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : May I ask the Honourable Member whether the Government in dealing with these matters make absolutely no distinction between what are the allegations and what are the charges ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : There is nothing in what I have said which would justify the Honourable and learned gentleman in making this suggestion.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : May I know, Sir, whether the Government have not definitely made this alteration in regard to inquiring from the detenus as to mere allegations where formerly they were stated to be charges ? I want a specific answer to my question.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I have already replied to that question and my reply was to the effect that I am not personally aware whether, when the question was actually put to the detenus, the word used was " allegation " or " charge ". My point was that there is no essential distinction between the two words in that context.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : Really !

APPOINTMENT OF LORD RONALDSHAY AS CHAIRMAN AND SIR MALCOLM HAILEY, AS A MEMBER OF THE STATUTORY COMMISSION ON REFORMS.

116. Diwan Chaman Lall : (a) Is it a fact that Lord Ronaldshay has been offered the chairmanship of the Statutory Reforms Commission ?

(b) Is it a fact that His Excellency Sir Malcolm Hailey has been offered a seat on that Commission ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a) and (b). Government have no information.

PRESIDENTS OF CANTONMENT BOARDS.

117. Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava : (a) Are Government aware that an Officer Commanding a station begins to discharge the duties of the President of the Cantonment Board of that station immediately or his assumption of the command ?

(b) Are Government aware that under section 18 of the Cantonment Act no member of the Cantonment Board can take his seat as such member unless he has taken the oath prescribed in that section ?

(c) Is it a fact that the oath in question is to be taken at a meeting of the Cantonment Board, and that in many Cantonments in the past, the Officer Commanding the station has commenced working as the President of the Cantonment Board without taking the oath in question ?

(d) Are Government prepared to consider the question of issuing instructions that the Vice-President of the Cantonment Board may discharge the functions of the President till the Officer Commanding the station has taken the oath at a meeting of the Board ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) and (b). Yes, Sir.

(c) Yes. Under the Act the President is bound to take the oath before he can preside at a meeting, but he can enter upon any of his other duties as soon as he becomes President.

GRANT OF DEFINITE POWERS TO THE NON-OFFICIAL VICE-PRESIDENTS OF CANTONMENT BOARDS.

118. Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava : (a) Are Government aware that as far back as July 1926, His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief gave a definite assurance to a deputation of the All-India Cantonments Association that early steps will be taken to give some definite powers to the non-official Vice-President of the Cantonment Board ?

(b) Is it a fact that in spite of the above assurance no step has been taken by the Government so far in the direction indicated above ?

(c) Are Government aware that the All-India Cantonments Association has since repeatedly pressed this point on the attention of the Secretary, Army Department, Government of India, who has informed the Association that he will soon bring the amending Bill to the Cantonment Act before the Legislature, to make a statutory provision for the powers of the non-official Vice-President ?

(d) Are Government aware that the people of the Cantonments are anxiously waiting for this much-needed reform ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) and(c). The facts are substantially as stated by the Honourable Member.

AGENDA OF BUSINESS OF CANTONMENT BOARDS.

119. Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava : (a) Are Government aware that in Ambala Cantonment and also in some other cantonments, the Executive Officer discusses the agenda of a meeting of the Cantonment Board with the President before the date of the meeting ?

(b) Is it a fact that as a result of this discussion, resolutions are framed about each item of the agenda and brought in the meeting in a cut and dried form for the acceptance of the Board ?

(c) Is it a fact that the President and the Executive Officer being invariably in possession of official votes, use these votes for getting these resolutions either accepted by the non-official members or passed by the official majority ?

(d) Are Government aware that the result of this procedure has been to throttle free discussion of the agenda in the meeting and to render the non-official voice absolutely ineffective ?

(e) Are Government prepared to stop this practice and direct that discussions about the items of the agenda of a meeting should be arrived at after the same have been discussed in the meeting of the Cantonment Board ?

Mr. G. M. Young : With your permission, Sir, I will answer this question as a whole. Government have no precise information, but it is clearly desirable that the Executive Officer who prepares the agenda should submit it for scrutiny and discussion, if necessary to the President, and if the latter chooses to prepare draft resolutions before the meeting, there is no objection to his doing so. Government are aware that there is an official majority on elective Cantonment Boards.

REST-HOUSE AT MANDAPAM ON THE SOUTH INDIAN RAILWAY.

120. Mr. M. S. Sesha Ayyangar : (a) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to a letter regarding the Mandapam rest-house on the South Indian Railway, that appeared in the Hindu dated 28th May 1927 by Mr. Watrap S. Subramanya Iyer, High Court, Vakil, Madras, under the heading " Indian visitors and Mandapam rest-house " ?

RESERVATION OF THE REST-HOUSE AT MANDAPAM ON THE SOUTH INDIAN RAILWAY FOR EUROPEANS AND AMERICANS.

121. Mr. M. S. Sesha Ayyangar : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state if it is a fact that the rest-house at Mandapam (South Indian Railway), a health resort, is exclusively intended for Europeans and Americans ?

(c) If not, are Government prepared to direct the South Indian Railway to delete Rule No. 71 from the current Time-table and Guide ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I propose, with your permission, Sir, to answer questions Nos. 120 and 121 together.

The Honourable Member's question first drew the attention of Government to this complaint, and they have made enquiries on the subject from the Agent of the South Indian Railway. According to rule 71 of the South Indian Time Table and Guide the use of the rest house accommodation at Mandapam was restricted to Europeans and Americans, but a separate rest-house with similar accommodation has now been provided at Mandapam for Indians, and rule 71 of the South Indian Railway Time Table and Guide is being amended.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : May I ask, Sir, whether the rest-house that has been separately provided for Indians is of the same standard as the rest-house provided for Europeans and Americans ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I understand so. The information I have given has been supplied by the South Indian Railway, and I think the words that I used namely, " similar accommodation " were taken from their letter.

INCOME OF THE IMPERIAL X-RAY INSTITUTE AT DEHRA DUN FOR THE YEARS 1920 TO 1926.

122. Mr. Mukhtar Singh : (a) Will the Government be pleased to inform the Assembly, how much was the income derived by the Government from the Imperial X-Ray Institute, Dehra Dun, during the years 1920, 1921, 1922, 1923, 1924, 1925 and 1926 ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : (a) Information is being collected.

EXPENDITURE ON THE IMPERIAL X-RAY INSTITUTE AT DEHRA DUN FOR THE YEARS 1920 TO 1926.

123. Mr. Mukhtar Singh : Will the Government be pleased to state the amount of recurring expenditure per annum on the X-Ray Institute, Dehra Dun, from the year 1920 to 1926, both years inclusive ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : A statement giving the information required has been placed in the library.

PRIVATE PRACTICE ALLOWED TO OFFICERS OF THE IMPERIAL X-RAY INSTITUTE AT DEHRA DUN.

124. Mr. Mukhtar Singh : Is it a fact that officers employed in the X-Ray, Dehra Dun Institute are allowed private practice ? If the answer be in the affirmative, will the Government be pleased to state the salaries of the officers who are allowed private practice ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : The medical members of the staff are allowed private practice in X-Ray work, subject to the condition that half the fees recovered from private patients treated with the aid of Government apparatus, material or staff, are credited to Government. The salaries of the medical staff are :

Superintendent	.. Rs. 1,350 plus £30	Overseas pay, per mensem.
Assistant Surgeon	.. Rs. 575 per mensem.
Sub-Assistant Surgeon	.. Rs. 175 per mensem.

USE BY OFFICERS OF THE IMPERIAL X-RAY INSTITUTE OF GOVERNMENT APPARATUS AND MACHINERY IN THEIR PRIVATE PRACTICE.

125. Mr. Mukhtar Singh : (a) Have Government permitted the officers employed in the X-Ray Institute, Dehra Dun, to make use of the Government apparatus and X-Ray machinery for private practice ?

(b) If the answer be in the affirmative, will the Government be pleased to state how the above practice affects the income derived from the Institute ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : (a) The Honourable Member's attention is invited to the answer given to the first part of his last question. Government apparatus can be used for such practice at the institute provided that half the fees are credited to Government.

(b) Government get one half of the fees and the medical staff divide the rest among themselves. A statement showing the income derived by Government from this source for the years 1922-1926 has been placed in the Library of the House.

LEAVE ALLOWED TO MEMBERS OF THE INDIAN STAFF OF THE IMPERIAL X-RAY INSTITUTE AT DEHRA DUN.

126. Mr. Mukhtar Singh : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state the number of days for which members of the Indian staff of the X-Ray Institute, Dehra Dun, were allowed to take leave during the year ?

(b) Will the Government also state the number of holidays that are allowed to the servants and staff of the Institute ?

(c) Is it a fact that holidays are not allowed in the Institute to the Indian staff and servants even on gazetted holidays ?

(d) Are Government aware that the Indian staff is put to considerable hardship on account of the above stated fact ?

(e) Will the Government be pleased to state the number of days for which holidays used to be allowed to the Indian staff during the years 1923, 1924, 1925 and 1926 ?

(f) What is the number of days for which casual and privilege leave are allowed to the staff during the last four years ?

(g) Has it come to the knowledge of the Government that at the present time no privilege leave or casual leave is allowed to the staff even on medical certificate, thus entailing a great hardship on the Indian staff ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : (a) The Honourable Member has not specified the year, but a statement giving the information asked for the years 1926 and 1927 has been placed in the Library of the House.

(b) The staff are usually allowed the provincial and local gazetted holidays, a list of which has been placed in the Library.

(c) No. When pressure of work has made it necessary, Hindu members of the staff have been asked to work on Muhammadan holidays and vice versa ; but such occasions have been few.

(f) Up to 1925 casual leave as required and privilege leave, averaging about one month per person, were allowed to each person. In 1926 the practice of giving privilege leave was stopped owing to the number of holidays enjoyed by the staff. Orders have been issued directing the Superintendent to grant privilege leave or leave on average pay as it is called, in accordance with the ordinary rules.

(g) Government understand that casual or privilege leave to sick-members of the staff has not been refused, except in one case, in which it was considered that the person who had applied for sick leave was not really sick.

Mr. Mukhtar Singh : Are the European members also not allowed the gazetted holidays ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : They are allowed gazetted holidays and so are the Indian members.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : The point is whether the European staff has been asked to work on gazetted holidays just as the Indian servants have been asked to work.

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : The Indian staff could not possibly have been asked to work at the Institute during the gazetted holidays if the European had not been there, because the Superintendent happens to be a European.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : The question is whether the European staff was asked to do work when the Indian staff was required to be on duty.

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : I shall invite the Honourable Member's attention to the actual composition of the staff which is given in the answer which I am going to give to the next question. The Superintendent and the Electrician are the only European members of the staff. There are no other Europeans on the staff.

NUMBER OF EMPLOYEES OF THE X-RAY INSTITUTE AT DEHRA DUN DRAWING MORE THAN RS. 200 A MONTH.

127. Mr. Mukhtar Singh : Will the Government be pleased to state (a) the number of employees drawing more than Rs. 200 a month in the Dehra X-Ray Institute ? (b) How many of them are Hindus, Muhammadans, Anglo-Indians and Europeans and how much salary each of them draws ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : A statement giving the information required has been placed in the Library of the House.

TRAINING OF INDIANS IN THE USE OF X-RAY MACHINERY.

128. Mr. Mukhtar Singh : (a) Are there any facilities provided for Indians to learn the use of X-Ray machinery ? If so, will the Government be pleased to state the arrangement made for such instruction and how many Indians undergo the training provided in the Institute ?

(b) Are the medical students in the Medical College, Lucknow, taught the use of the apparatus and machinery provided at the X-Ray Institute, Dehra Dun, and are they qualified to work as officers in the said Institute ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : (a) Yes. Two courses of instruction lasting two months each are given every year. To each course 40 candidates are admitted. 22 of these are military medical officers. The remaining seats are primarily reserved for civilian officers nominated by Local Governments. If these latter are not filled, private medical practitioners, holding medical qualifications registrable in India, are admitted on payment by each student of a fee of Rs. 150 for a course. The class held from 15th September to 15th November 1926 was attended by 21 Indians ; the class held early this year by 24.

(b) The exact meaning of the Honourable Member's question is not quite clear. But if he wishes to know whether medical students of the Lucknow Medical College receive X-Ray instruction at the Institute as part of their course, the answer is in the negative. Nor are such students employed on the staff of the Institute qua students. As to whether they would be eligible to serve on the staff would depend on their qualifications.

DIVISION OF THE STAFF OF THE X-RAY INSTITUTE AT DEHRA DUN INTO INDIAN AND NON-INDIAN.

129. *Mr. Mukhtar Singh : Are the officers in the X-Ray Institute divided into Indian and non-Indian staff ? If so, will the Government be pleased to state the reason for such distinction ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : The reply is in the negative.

SCALE OF FEES CHARGED AT THE X-RAY INSTITUTE AT DEHRA DUN.

130. *Mr. Mukhtar Singh : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state the scale of fee prescribed to be charged from the patients who want to make use of the apparatus and machinery provided at the X-Ray Institute, Dehra Dun ?

(b) What facilities are provided to treat poor patients at this Institute and how is the poverty ascertained ?

(c) How many patients have been treated in the institute free of charge besides those who might have been officially sent there for treatment ?

(d) Is the record of every patient for whom the apparatus or machinery is used kept at the Institute ? If so, is an entry made about the patients who are under private treatment of the officials employed at the Institute ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : (a) Non-entitled patients who are treated in the Institute are charged fees according to the nature and extent of the X-Ray or Electro-therapeutic work required.

(b) Poor patients attending at the Institute are treated free of charge. The question of poverty is in each case investigated by the senior members of the staff.

(c) No record is kept of such patients.

(d) Records of all entitled patients only are kept in the Institute. A separate account of fees received from private patients is maintained.

REGULATION OF THE STORAGE AND HANDLING OF EXPLOSIVES ON THE SURFACE.

131. *Mr. N. M. Joshi : (a) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to a statement on page 15 of the report of the Chief Inspector of Mines for 1925, that, at present, there are no rules under the Indian Mines Act regulating the storage and handling of explosives on the surface ?

(b) Will the Government of India be pleased to state why such rules are not yet made and when they will be made ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) Yes.

(b) Provision has been made in Chapter IX of the Indian Coal Mines Regulations, 1926, for the handling and storage of explosives on the surface.

ACCIDENT IN A MINE DUE TO NON-FENCING OF THE SURFACE.

132 Mr. N. M. Joshi : With reference to an accident mentioned on page 16 of the report of the Chief Inspector of Mines for 1925, due to non-fencing of the surface, will Government be pleased to state whether the person who had violated the Local Government rule was punished, and, if so, how ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : There was not sufficient evidence to prove that before the accident occurred there was any reason to anticipate a subsidence of the surface : hence no one could be prosecuted for violating the Local Government's rules.

PREVENTION AND CONTROL OF UNDERGROUND FIRES IN COAL MINES.

133. Mr. N. M. Joshi : (a) Has the attention of the Government of India been drawn to the paragraph on page 9 of the report of the Chief Inspector of Mines for 1925, regarding underground fires due to spontaneous combustion and showing the urgency of tackling the problem of preventing these fires ?

(b) Will the Government of India be pleased to state what steps they have taken to solve this problem ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) Yes.

(b) The Indian Coal Mines Regulations, 1926, require provision to be made to the satisfaction of the Mines Inspectors to prevent an outbreak of fire in a mine or the spread of fire to a mine from an adjacent mine. The Regulations also prevent a mine from being worked within a distance of 25 or 50 feet from the boundary of an adjacent mine. As stated by the Chief Inspector of Mines in his report fires may be prevented by hydraulic stowing, but under present conditions the universal adoption of hydraulic stowing is not economically possible, and Government would not be justified in endeavouring to enforce the adoption of measures of this kind.

PREVENTION OF ACCIDENTS IN MINES.

134. Mr. N. M. Joshi : (a) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to the statements on page 15 of the Report of the Chief Inspector of Mines for 1925, that 9 accidents resulting in ten deaths due to falls of ground and five accidents resulting in 8 deaths caused by the collapse of the sides had taken place during the period of the report and that practically all of these accidents could have been avoided ?

(c) Will the Government of India be pleased to state whether those owners of mines who were responsible for the accidents were prosecuted and if not, why not ?

(d) Will Government be pleased to state what punishments were awarded to those who were guilty ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) Yes.

(b) Steps are taken to prevent accidents as far as possible but the prevention of accidents requires the co-operation of miners and others and about fifty per cent. of the total avoidable accidents in 1925 were attributed to the fault of the deceased.

(c) and (d) Prosecutions were instituted wherever possible and convictions obtained. The punishments varied from a fine of Rs. 20 to Rs. 500.

Diwan Chaman Lall : May I ask, Sir, whether the evidence of the deceased was taken after the occurrence ? (Laughter.)

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : The answer is obviously in the negative.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I ask the Honourable Member whether the punishment meted out is not inadequate ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : No, Sir ; so far as we are aware the punishments were mostly adequate.

Diwan Chaman Lall : May I ask the Honourable Member what is the usual punishment for murder ?

Mr. N. M. Joshi. : May I ask, Sir, whether the Government of India have considered the question of punishment inasmuch as a fine of Rs. 20 to Rs. 500 cannot be held to be sufficient punishment for a crime which involves the death of several persons ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : Sir, that is a hypothetical question and involves an element of opinion.

Diwan Chaman Lall : May I ask the Honourable Member whether he considers that the life of an Indian miner is worth about Rs. 500 ?

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I tell the Honourable Member, Sir, that my question is not a hypothetical question ? I ask Government whether they consider the punishment adequate in view of the fact that the punishment consisted only of fines varying from Rs. 20 to Rs. 500 for accidents in which the lives of several persons were involved.

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : The punishments are given under an Act of the Legislature and by people who are authorised to administer the Act. I am sorry, Sir, I am unable here to admit the correctness of my Honourable friend's allegation that these punishments are not adequate.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Are not the Government supposed to safeguard the interests of labourers and miners ? Have Government no liability whatever in the matter to the people of this country ?

USE OF SAFETY LAMPS IN MINES.

135. *Mr. N. M. Joshi: (a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to a statement on page 15 of the Report of the Chief Inspector of Mines for 1925, that an explosion causing the death of one person had taken place in a mine due to an ignition of fire-damp caused by an open light?

(b) Will the Government of India be pleased to state whether they provide by rules under the Indian Mines Act that only safety lamps should be used in such mines? If not, why not?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra: (a) Yes.

(b) The Indian Coal Mines Regulations, 1926, require the use of locked safety lamps in a mine where inflammable gas is found or is likely to be found or where gas was found during the previous twelve months. In the mine in which the accident in question occurred gas had not previously been found.

PROHIBITION OF THE USE OF OTHER THAN "PERMITTED EXPLOSIVES" IN COAL MINES.

136. *Mr. N. M. Joshi: (a) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to a statement on page 10 of the report of the Chief Inspector of Mines for 1925, that the use of "permitted explosives" is safer?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to state whether they will take steps to prohibit the use of other explosives in coal mines in securing greater safety to human life?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra: (a) Yes.

(b) Under the Indian Coal Mines Regulations of 1926 "permitted explosives" must be used in mines in which inflammable gas has, within the previous twelve months, been reported to be present.

PREVENTION AND CONTROL OF UNDERGROUND FIRES IN COAL MINES.

137. *Mr. N. M. Joshi: (a) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to the following sentence in the report of the Chief Inspector of Mines for 1925, page 9:

"There is no doubt but that the problem of the prevention and control of underground fires in coal mines is one of the most pressing of the technical difficulties facing colliery owners."

(b) Will the Government be pleased to state what steps they have taken to prevent and control underground fires in coal mines?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra: This question seems to be substantially a repetition of question No. 133 which I have already answered.

EMPLOYMENT OF APPROVED TYPES OF COAL-CUTTING MACHINES IN MINES.

138. *Mr. N. M. Joshi: (a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to a sentence in the report of the Chief Inspector of Mines for 1925, page 10, referring to one type of a coal-cutting machine having been found defective?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to state what steps they have taken to get the types of machines to be used first approved by the Chief Inspector of Mines ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) Yes.

(b) Owing to the large number of designs of coal-cutting machines in use it is not considered desirable to require that every type of machine shall be approved by the Chief Inspector of Mines before it is employed in mines. The designs of the machines in use in India are in general satisfactory, and defects brought to the notice of managers by the Mine Inspectors are speedily remedied. Bye-laws are being made under section 32 of the Indian Mines Act for the guidance of operators of coal-cutting machinery and there were no fatal accidents due to coal-cutting machinery in 1926.

FIRING BY CERTAIN EUROPEAN AND ANGLO-INDIAN EMPLOYEES OF THE BURMA OIL COMPANY ON INDIAN WORKERS IN MADRAS IN MAY 1927.

139. Mr. N. M. Joshi : Will the Government of India be pleased to state :

(a) the circumstances under which certain European and Anglo-Indian employees of the Burma Oil Company had fired on the Indian workers at Madras in May 1927 ?

(b) whether any enquiry by a Government officer was made into these circumstances and what is the result of the enquiry ?

(c) under what law these Europeans and Anglo-Indians were permitted to shoot at Indian workers ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a) and (b). The Chief Presidency Magistrate, Madras, held an enquiry into the matter and directed the prosecution of certain employees of the Burma Oil Company, who were alleged to have taken part in the firing. The Magistrate's order, which was read out in Court and has been reproduced in the Press, gave an account of the circumstances of the case. Government understand that the case against those who were alleged to have fired as well as the case against the strikers has been withdrawn on the initiative of the Oil Men's Union in consequence of the harmonious relations subsequently established between the employers and the employees.

(c) Presumably the defence would have been based on the provisions in the Indian Penal Code relating to the right of private defence. These provisions, as the Honourable Member is doubtless aware, apply to all communities alike.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I ask whether Government are justified in withdrawing a prosecution for a serious offence on the ground of the harmonious relations between the employers and the employees ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : The precise ground, I understand, on which the prosecutions were withdrawn was that the Oil Men's Union themselves desired it and that view was concurred in by the employers.

Mr. T. C. Goswami : Was any pressure put on the Union ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : There has been no suggestion of that nature.

Diwan Chaman Lall : May I take it to be the policy of Government that when a political murder is committed, provided the political murderers show willingness on their part, the Government will be quite willing to withdraw the prosecution ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I do not think that question arises.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : I want to know whether Government are justified in withdrawing the prosecution in a serious offence like this ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : There is considerable substance in what the Honourable Member suggests and the Government of Madras took that point into careful consideration ; but in view of the desirability of not interfering once more with the relations of harmony which had been re-established they decided to permit the withdrawal of prosecutions on both sides.

NUMBER OF INDIANS EMPLOYED AS WIRELESS OPERATORS.

140. Mr. N. M. Joshi : (a) With reference to the answer given to my supplementary question arising out of the reply given to my question No. 719 on the 4th March 1927, will Government be pleased to state what steps they have taken to increase the number of Indians (excluding Anglo-Indians) as wireless operators ?

(b) Will Government be pleased to state whether the number of Indians (excluding Anglo-Indians) working as wireless operators has been increased from one as stated in reply to my question No. 719 given on 4th March 1927 ?

(c) If so, what is the present number of Indians (excluding Anglo-Indians) working as wireless operators ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) The matter is still under consideration.

(b) The Honourable Member has misunderstood the reply which I gave to his question on the 4th March. The figure " one " related to the increase in the number of Indian operators and not to their total number. Since that date one Indian wireless operator has been promoted and one has been reverted to traffic. From July 1st, 1927, 13 additional Indians have been under training as wireless operators, in connection with an experimental scheme for working Wheatstone between Madras and Rangoon.

(c) 11, excluding the 13 under training.

NUMBER OF STUDENTS RECEIVING TRAINING FOR GENERAL SERVICE AND STATION SERVICE IN GOVERNMENT TELEGRAPH TRAINING CLASSES.

141. Mr. N. M. Joshi : Will Government be pleased to state the number of Government Telegraph Training Classes with the number of students receiving training for General Service and for Station Service, and stating the number of Anglo-Indian students studying for General Service and Station Service ?

Mr. H. A. Sams : There are no Government Telegraph Training Classes in which probationers for General Service and for Station Service are now receiving training.

TERMINATION OF AGREEMENTS WITH ANGLO-INDIAN SCHOOLS FOR CONDUCTING TELEGRAPH TRAINING CLASSES.

142. *Mr N. M. Joshi : (a) Will Government be pleased to give the names of Anglo-Indian Schools with which Government is, at present, in agreement for conducting Telegraph Training Classes ?

Mr. H. A. Sams : (a) (1) St. Fidelis' High School, Mussooree.

(2) Bernes High School, Devlali.

(3) Lawrence Memorial High School, Lovedale.

(4) St. Joseph's College, Coonoor.

(b) The question of terminating the agreement is now under the consideration of the Government of India.

PROVIDENT FUND FOR GOVERNMENT EMPLOYEES.

143. *Mr. N. M. Joshi : Will the Government of India be pleased to state whether the consideration of the question of establishing a Provident Fund for their employees has now been any further advanced than on 3rd February 1927 when a question on the subject was replied to by Government, and if it has advanced, to what extent ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : The question is being further considered in consultation with the Government Actuary but no final decision has yet been reached.

REVISION OF THE PENSION AND LEAVE RULES OF INFERIOR SERVANTS OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

144. *Mr. N. M. Joshi : (a) Will the Government of India be pleased to state whether they have finished the consideration of the question of revising the pension and leave rules for inferior servants of the Government of India ?

(b) If they have finished the consideration, will they be pleased to state the decision ?

(c) If they have not finished the consideration, will they be pleased to state whether it will be finished before the end of the year ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : The question is still under consideration. The Government of India are unable at present to say when the final decision will be reached.

SELECTION OF STUDENTS FOR THE GOVERNMENT TRAINING CLASS FOR WIRELESS OPERATORS IN CALCUTTA.

145. *Mr. N. M. Joshi : (a) Will the Government of India be pleased to state what is the method by which students for the Government Training Class for wireless operators at Calcutta are selected ?

Mr. H. A. Sams : (a) and (b). The training classes in wireless at Calcutta are primarily arranged to train officials of the Department of Posts and Telegraphs in wireless to meet departmental requirements. Volunteers are obtained from suitable grades in the Department all over India and Burma and the most suitable candidates are then selected with due regard to efficiency and economy. In addition instruction is arranged on behalf of Local Governments and other bodies on payment of certain prescribed fees when departmental requirements permit. Permission has also been granted for the admission of a very limited number of private students at reduced fees but departmental requirements have not hitherto permitted the formation of special classes for this purpose.

AMOUNT OF CASUAL LEAVE GRANTED TO TELEGRAPHISTS IN BOMBAY CITY.

146. Mr. N. M. Joshi : Will Government be pleased to state :

(a) the maximum number of days for which casual leave is allowed in a year to a telegraphist in the Government Telegraph Department ;

Mr. H. A. Sams : (a) Twenty days.

(b) The average number of days of casual leave granted to each telegraphist in the Bombay City in the last official year is 16.

CASUAL LEAVE OF TELEGRAPHISTS.

147. Mr. N. M. Joshi : Will Government be pleased to state :

(a) whether it is a fact that telegraphists in the Government Telegraph Department find it very difficult to secure casual leave ?

(b) If so, will they be pleased to explain why it is so ?

Mr. H. A. Sams : (a) No.

RETRENCHMENT IN RAILWAY WORKSHOPS AND CLOSING OF COTTON TEXTILE FACTORIES AND MINES.

148. Mr N. M. Joshi : Will Government be pleased to state :

(a) How many employees of the various railway workshops were deprived of their employment on account of retrenchment during 1923, 1924, 1925 and 1926 ?

(b) How many cotton textile factories were closed during the years 1925 and 1926 and the number of employees of these factories ?

(c) How many mines in India have ceased to work during 1923, 1924, 1925 and 1926 and the total number of their employees ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) As a measure of retrenchment 782 men were discharged from the Bengal-Nagpur Railway workshops in 1923 and 367 from the Assam Bengal Railway workshops in 1923, 68 in 1924 and 41 in 1925. It is possible, though not very likely, that retrenchment was also the cause of the discharge of 69 men from the South Indian Railway workshops and 20 men from the Eastern Bengal Railway workshops in 1923, but I will obtain the exact facts if the Honourable Member desires. Other discharges in the years mentioned by the Honourable Member on these and the remaining State-owned Railways, except the Madras and Southern Mahratta Railway, were not due to a policy of retrenchment but to other causes, chiefly the re-organisation of the workshops or the fact that there was not sufficient work offering. The Madras and Southern Mahratta Railway have not yet supplied information on this point but it will be communicated to the Honourable Member as soon as it is received.

(b) The Government of India understand that six cotton textile factories were closed during 1925 and 11 during 1926 in the Bombay Presidency. The number of employees affected was 3,622 and 7,100, respectively. These figures include one mill which was burnt down.

The Government of India are not in possession of similar statistics for the rest of India.

(c) I lay on the table a statement giving the number of mines governed by the Indian Mines Act which were opened and closed annually in the period 1923—1926.

Information of the number of employees who were engaged in the mines which were closed is not available. But the total number of persons employed in coal mines fell by about 12,000 between 1923 and 1926 and the total number of persons employed in other mines rose by about 37,000 in the same period.

FURNISHING OF STATISTICS ABOUT UNEMPLOYMENT IN INDIA TO THE INTERNATIONAL LABOUR OFFICE, ETC.

149. *Mr. N. M. Joshi : (a) Are Government aware that on account of their having ratified a Convention regarding unemployment passed at the International Labour Conference at Washington they have undertaken the responsibility of furnishing the statistics about unemployment in the country to the International Labour Office and to establish Public Employment Agencies ?

(b) If so, will they be pleased to state how they have discharged their responsibility in this matter ?

(c) Are Government aware that a Committee appointed by the Governing Body of the International Labour Office has made comments on the conduct of the Government of India in this matter ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) Yes.

(b) In the manner explained to the Legislative Assembly by Sir Thomas Holland during the discussion of this Convention on 19th February 1921.

(c) and (d). The Committee commented on the position of India in respect of this Convention. It would take too long to read the whole of the Committee's observations, but I am sending a copy to the Honourable Member. After referring to the action taken in India the Committee added :

"The Committee notes that the Government of India appears to have interpreted the Convention as only involving an obligation to create employment exchanges to the extent to which circumstances may render them necessary. Nevertheless the Office might be instructed to enquire whether the development of industry in India in the last few years may not have modified somewhat the situation which led the Government of India to decide the question of the creation of employment exchanges negatively."

I may add that the Conference was informed that the Government of India would have no objection to an enquiry on the lines suggested.

HOURS OF WORK AND WEEKLY REST DAY OF RAILWAY EMPLOYEES.

150. Mr. N. M. Joshi : (a) Are Government of India aware that in ratifying the Conventions regarding the hours of work and weekly rest day, in industrial undertakings they have undertaken the responsibility of applying the regulations in the Conventions to such branches of the railway work as shall be specified for this purpose by the competent authority ?

(b) Will Government be pleased to state which branches of the railway work are specified for this purpose ?

(c) What steps they have taken for the enforcement of the regulations ?

(d) Have the Government of India enquired from the International Labour Office or from their own legal advisers whether their responsibility can be entirely fulfilled without passing legislation on the subject ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : (a) Yes.

(b) and (c). For the purposes of the Convention relating to hours of work, the Government of India have specified, first, work performed by workshop staff except running and maintenance staff of power houses, maintenance staff in shops who can be classed as millwrights, and maintenance staff on outside work who are required to work on maintenance of electric installations, distribution mains, etc., and, secondly, work performed by station staff not employed in connection with the working of trains. Orders to this effect have been issued to railway administrations.

For the purpose of the Convention relating to the weekly rest day, no branches of railway work have as yet been specified. I should explain that the whole subject is now under consideration and with a view to reducing to a minimum the classes of staff to be excluded from the provisions of these Conventions, the Railway Board have referred the matter to the Indian Railway Conference Association both with regard to the hours of work and with regard to the weekly rest day.

REGULATION BY LEGISLATION OF THE HOURS OF WORK OF RAILWAY EMPLOYEES.

151. *Mr. N. M. Joshi : (a) Are the Government of India aware that in Great Britain under the Regulation of the Railways Act, 1889, section 4, the Railway Companies are bound to submit statements to the Board of Trade regarding the persons in the employment of the Company whose duty involves the safety of trains or passengers and who are employed for more than such number of hours as may be from time to time fixed by the Board ?

(b) Are the Government of India also aware that under Railway Regulation Act, 1893, section 1, the Board of Trade has a right to regulate the hours of work of railway employees ?

(c) Are the Government of India prepared to consider the desirability and practicability of regulating by legislation the hours of work of railway employees both in the interest of the travelling public and of the employees themselves ? If not, why not ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : (a) Yes.

(c) I do not think Government can at present contemplate legislation beyond what may be found necessary to carry out any obligation involved by the ratification of certain international Conventions.

(1) MINIMUM AGE OF EMPLOYMENT AS STOKERS AND TRIMMERS, ETC.

(2) COMPULSORY MEDICAL EXAMINATION OF CHILDREN EMPLOYED AT SEA.

152. *Mr. N. M. Joshi : (a) Are the Government of India aware that they have ratified Conventions of the International Labour Conference fixing the minimum age of employment as trimmers and stokers and for the compulsory medical examination of children employed at sea ?

(b) Will they be pleased to state what steps they have taken to enforce the regulations of the Convention and when they propose to introduce legislation for the purpose ?

(c) Will the Government of India be pleased to state when these Conventions were passed and when they were ratified and why there is delay in giving legislative effect to the regulations ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : (a) Yes.

(b) Executive instructions have been issued by Local Governments to give effect to the provisions of both of these Conventions pending legislation in the matter which will be taken up when the Indian Merchant Shipping Act is next amended.

(c) These Conventions were adopted by the Third International Labour Conference convened in October 1921 and the ratifications of the Government of India were registered with the Secretariat of the League of Nations on November 20th, 1922. As already stated the necessary legislation will be undertaken when the Indian Merchant Shipping Act is next amended.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I ask, Sir, when the Indian Merchant Shipping Act is going to be amended ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I cannot give an absolute pledge, Mr. President, but there are certain amendments which we should like to put through in the cold weather Session, and, if we find it possible to do so, then the amendments referred to in the answer to this question will also be made.

RULES REGARDING RECRUITMENT TO THE INDIAN POSTAL AND TELEGRAPH DEPARTMENT.

153. Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim : Will the Government be pleased to state when the rules regarding recruitment to the Post and Telegraph Department as promised by the Member in charge of that Department during the last Delhi Session are likely to be out ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : The matter is under the consideration of Government.

INADEQUATE REPRESENTATION OF MUSSALMANS IN THE INDIAN POSTAL AND TELEGRAPH DEPARTMENT.

154. Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim : (a) Are the Government aware of the fact that Mussalmans are very ill represented in the Post and Telegraph Department ? If so, what steps if any are the Government contemplating to take in the matter ?

(b) Do the Government propose to issue orders to make recruitment according to the numerical strength of each community in each Postal Division ?

(c) Do the Government propose to issue orders to reserve the first few vacancies in each Division for the Mussalmans so that the community may get a part of its due share in the Department ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) The number of Mussalmans employed in the Indian Posts and Telegraphs Department represents about 20 per cent. of the staff.

(c) No. The Director General has, however, been instructed to issue general orders in accordance with the policy adopted by the Government of India on the subject of the representation of minority communities in the various services.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Is it not a fact that the Honourable Member has repeatedly promised in this House since 1924 and 1925, and when he came into the Assembly, that he is going to give effect to the statement in the declaration of Lord Reading and that he has not satisfied the Assembly hitherto that he has given appointments to Muhammadans up to the percentage mentioned in that declaration ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : I do not understand the Honourable Member's question. I cannot find anything in the reply which I have already read out that Government are not acting up to the declarations of policy which they have made.

Mr. K. Ahmed : In view of the fact that the Honourable Member himself, reading an answer written out by his assistants probably in the Department, besides what he had promised previously, now says that only 19 per cent. of the appointments have been given to Muhammadans and not the adequate percentage mentioned in Lord Reading's declaration.....

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : I regret, Sir, that it is not possible for me to instil intelligence into my Honourable friend over there. What I said was this : The number of Mussalmans employed in the Posts and Telegraphs Department represents about 20 per cent. of the staff. That does not mean that the recruitment of Mussalmans in the last two or three years has amounted to 20 per cent. of the vacancies. Moreover, the Honourable Member forgets that the 33 per cent. refers to all minority communities and not to Mussalmans only.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : Sir, I rise to a point of order. Is the Honourable Member in order in stating that he is not in a position to instil intelligence into an Honourable Member ?

Mr. President : That was merely by way of retort to the Honourable Member's own insinuation that the Honourable Member was reading the notes made by his clerk.

INFORMATION RELATING TO THE SILCHAR HEAD POST OFFICE AND THE SILCHAR HEAD RECORD OFFICE.

155. Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim : 1. Will the Government be pleased to lay on the table the following information regarding (i) Silchar Head Post Office and (ii) Silchar Head Record Office, separately ?

(b) What is the monthly average cash handled at Silchar Head Office and Silchar Head Record Office, separately ?

(c) How many direct subordinates are under the Postmasters, Silchar, and Head Record Clerk, Silchar ?

(d) What are the monthly average amounts of receipt and payment of the cash account of the Silchar Head Office and Silchar Head Record Office for which the Postmaster and Head Record Clerk are responsible ?

(e) What are the number and insured value of insured articles dealt with in the Silchar Head Office during 1926-27 ?

(f) What are the number and value of V. P. articles dealt with at the Silchar Head Office during 1926-27 ?

(g) Does the Head Record Office deal with any valuable except the work papers ?

2. What is the reason for fixing the pay of the Head Record Clerk at a higher figure than that of the Head Postmaster, Silchar ? Do Government propose to consider the question of removing this difference ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (1) A statement containing the information asked for under heads (a) to (h) of the Honourable Member's question is laid on the table.

(2) A Head Record Clerk of the Railway Mail Service has heavy responsibilities other than those of a monetary nature. The reply on the second point is in the negative.

* With effect from the 1st September 1927, the existing grades of Rs. 145—5—170 and Rs. 175—10—225 for non-gazetted Postmasters and other officials in post offices will be replaced by a single grade of Rs. 160—10—250, which will also be substituted for the existing grade of Rs. 145—5—175—10—225 for Head Record clerks, Head Sorters, Accountants, etc., in the R. M. S. and for the existing grade of Rs. 100—5—175 for Inspectors of Post Offices and of the R. M. S. It is, however, under contemplation to have a grade of Rs. 250—20—350 for Head Record clerks (of whom there are 19 in all), as there is already for non-gazetted Postmasters, etc.

GRIEVANCES OF POSTMASTERS.

156. Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim : (a) Would the Government lay on the table the result of the examination of the grievances of Postmasters in detail as represented by Sjt. Chandradhar Barooah, late Honourable Member of the Council of State, in September, 1925 ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) and (b) A detailed statement containing the desired information is being furnished to the Honourable Member.

PAY OF POSTMASTERS.

157. *Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim : Are the Government aware of the fact that the responsibility of Postmasters in respect of money, valuables dealing with the public and accounts is unique in the Department ? If so, on what ground has their scale been fixed lower than the Head Record Clerks and equal to the Inspectors of Post Offices ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : Government are aware that Postmasters have considerable monetary responsibilities and due allowance was made for this fact in fixing their pay. Monetary responsibilities are not, however, the only criterion for fixing an official's pay. The responsibilities of all kinds of a Postmaster in charge of one of the smaller head offices are not considered on the whole to be greater than those of an Inspector of Post Offices and are definitely less than those of a Head Record Clerk in the Railway Mail Service. With effect from the 1st September, 1927, no Head Postmaster will be on a lower scale of pay than Rs. 160—10—250 which will also be the scale of pay sanctioned for Inspectors of Post Offices.

PROMOTION OF POSTMASTERS AND INSPECTORS TO THE 2ND SELECTION GRADE.

158. *Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim : How do the Government propose to regularise the promotion of Postmasters and Inspectors to the 2nd selection grade ?

Mr. H. A. Sams : Promotion is at present regulated according to the method prescribed in the Director-General's letter No. A.X.-127, dated the 2nd December, 1922, a copy of which is laid on the table.

Copy of a letter No. A.X-127, dated the 2nd December, 1922, from the Director-General of Posts and Telegraphs, to all Postmasters-General, and the Deputy Postmaster-General, Sind and Baluchistan.

PROMOTION OF INSPECTORS AND HEAD CLERKS TO SUPERINTENDENTS OF POST OFFICES TO THE SELECTION GRADES.

* With reference to your reply to this office letter No. A.X.-127, dated the 21st April, 1922.

I am directed to say that the Director-General considers that a definite method should be prescribed on the subject of promotion of Inspectors of post offices and Head Clerks to Superintendents of post offices in the time-scale of Rs. 100—5—175 to the selection grades. He has accordingly decided that with effect from the 1st December, 1922, the following revised orders should be acted upon in supersession of all previous orders issued on the subject :

(i) In the event of an Inspector or Head Clerk to a Superintendent being reverted or voluntarily reverting to the general line, he will be given the position in that cadre that he would have held if he had never been appointed to the rank of Inspector. For this purpose Postmasters-General should keep a note of the proper position of each Inspector in the general line. It will not be necessary to publish this information in Circle gradation lists.

---

* To all except P. M. G., By. and D. P. M. G., S. B.

(ii) Inspectors and Head Clerks to Superintendents are eligible for promotion to the second selection grade of Rs. 175—10—225 along with officials in the general line according to their seniority to be determined in the following manner :

(a) Inspectors and Head Clerks to Superintendents who attained this position before the introduction of the revised scales of pay will be ranked with the officials in the general line according to the dates of entry into their respective grades of Rs. 100—5—175 and Rs. 145—5—170. If the dates happen to be the same, seniority should be reckoned by the position held prior to the entry into these grades.

(b) Inspectors and Head Clerks to Superintendents who attained this position after the introduction of the revised scales of pay will be ranked with the officials in the general line according to the date on which they reach the Rs. 145 stage of pay in their own respective cadres.

* 2. This also disposes of your letter No. A.T.-2060, dated the 30th October, 1922.

PURCHASE OF STORES BY THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.

159. Mr. K. C. Neogy : (a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to a letter published in the Forward of Calcutta dated June 25 (Town edition), under the heading of " Government and Railway Supplies ", in which Mr. Baijnath Bhotika of 63, Bartola Street, Calcutta, gives specific instances in which higher tenders of European firms for paint have been accepted by the authorities of the East Indian Railway in preference to Indian firms who quoted 50 to 75 per cent. less ?

(c) Is there any truth in the observation made in the said letter that " Indian manufacturers get very few contracts from the East Indian Railway for the supply of goods and materials, even in the face of cheaper competitive prices " ?

(d) To what extent does the East Indian Railway make use of the Indian Stores Department in the matter of its purchases ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Yes.

(b) I have obtained particulars of the cases mentioned by Mr. Baijnath Bhotika in his letter. The Tender Committee of the East Indian Railway rejected the lowest tender for lamp black, Prussian blue, ultra-marine blue, Venetian red and bath enamel green, because the firm tendering was not on the list of the Indian Stores Department as a supplier of paints, and in accordance with the recognised procedure their tender was in consequence not considered. The tenders of another firm, which were lower than those accepted, were also rejected because it had been recently found necessary to reject supplies from this firm. The lowest tender for white lead was also rejected because the firm was not known to the East Indian Railway Administration or to the Controller of Purchase of the Indian Stores Department.

(c) No. A very large number of contracts for almost all classes of supplies are placed by the East Indian Railway Administration with Indian firms. The East Indian Railway Administration is in no way interested in the nationality of the tendering firms, but merely in the prices quoted and in the suitability and reliability, as regards quality, of supplies offered

* To P. M. G. only.

(d) The East Indian Railway entrust the Indian Stores Department with practically the whole of their purchases of cement, clothing, textiles such as paulins, cotton waste, cop bottoms and a large portion of their oil requirements. These purchases represent in the aggregate very large sums—over Rs. 34 lakhs in 1926-27.

INDIA'S ANNUAL CONTRIBUTION TOWARDS THE COST OF THE IMPERIAL NAVY.

161. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to the following Reuter's cable, dated London, 14th March, and published in the Amrita Bazar Patrika, dated the 17th March 1927 :

"Earl Winterton said that the question of revising the Government of India's annual contribution of £100,000 towards the cost of the Imperial Navy would arise when the Indian Navy was in a position to perform an appreciable portion of the services in respect of which it paid the cost. The cost of the Indian Navy would be borne by the Indian revenues, but the total cost was not estimated to exceed the present cost of the Royal Indian Marine by more than relatively a small amount" ?

(b) Are Indians eligible for appointment in the Imperial Navy ; and, if so, how many Indians are so employed ? If not, will the Government give reasons for giving a contribution out of Indian revenues ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) Government have seen the message.

(b) Indians are not eligible for appointment to the commissioned ranks of the Royal Navy. They are, however, eligible for employment on the East Indies stations as domestic and clerical ratings ; the Government of India are not aware of the number of Indians so employed. The annual contribution of £100,000 is made in consideration of the general and effective defence of Indian shores and the protection of Indian trade by the Royal Navy.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : May I know, Sir, why Indians are not eligible for appointment in the commissioned ranks of the Royal Navy ?

Mr. G. M. Young : The Royal Navy, Sir, is a British force. Indians are not eligible for appointment to commissioned ranks in the Royal Navy any more than in the Royal Air Force or the British Army.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : May I know, Sir, the reason why India is made to contribute towards the Royal Navy when her children are excluded from its commissioned ranks ?

Mr. G. M. Young : That question has been answered.

ENHANCED CUSTOMS DUTIES LEVIED ON INDIAN GOODS IN TURKEY.

162. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : With reference to the reply of Government to my starred question No. 1065 of the 8th March, 1926, have Government enquired as to whether Indian goods exported to Turkey have now to pay highly enhanced customs duties ? If so, will the Government be pleased to make a statement on the subject, and also indicate how far it is in agreement with the commercial convention with Turkey ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : The Government of India made the enquiry and as a result of representations made by them Indian goods are now accorded the benefits of the Turkish Commercial Convention.

IMPOSITION ON AMERICANS, RESIDENT IN INDIA, OF DISABILITIES SIMILAR TO THOSE IMPOSED UPON INDIANS IN THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.

163. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) With reference to my starred question No. 1100 of the 8th March, 1926, regarding the imposition upon Americans, resident in India, of disabilities similar to those imposed upon Indians in the United States of America, will the Government kindly state if the examination of this question has been finished, and if so, what decision has been arrived at ?

(b) How many Indians are there in the United States of America, who have been affected adversely by the Supreme Court decision, and how many Americans are resident in India ?

Sir Denys Bray : As far as the Government of India are aware, the number of Indians who have so far been actually affected adversely by the Supreme Court decision is about 30. As these are only a small proportion of the total number, and as a process in the Courts now appears to be required in each separate case before a certificate of naturalization can be withdrawn or cancelled—a procedure which in the natural course and in the absence of any outside stimulus seems likely to check further cancellations—the Government of India do not consider it politic to proceed further with the suggestion in (a), at any rate for the present.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : May I know what is the national status of those Indians who have lost their citizenship in the United States of America ?

Sir Denys Bray : I believe that that point has not been finally decided by any court of law, but His Majesty's Government have acted executively on the supposition that they return to British citizenship.

DEFECTIVE CONDITION OF THE ROOF OF THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY CHAMBER BUILDING IN NEW DELHI.

164. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Is it a fact that the roof of the Legislative Assembly Chamber in New Delhi, from which a brick fell down while the Assembly was sitting, is under repairs ? What exactly is the defect in the roof, and what is the precise nature of the repair that is being done to it ?

(b) Is it true that even photographs of the work in progress are not permitted ? Will the Government be pleased to lay on the table the report of Mr. Brebner and other experts who examined the roof ?

(c) What is the total estimated cost of the repairs, and who is responsible for the defect ?

(d) Are Government aware that cracks have been discovered in some of the walls of the Assembly building in New Delhi ? Has the entire building been carefully examined, and what is the report of the experts on it ? Is the building reported to be absolutely safe ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) The ceiling in the Assembly Chamber is not under repairs. A scaffolding has been erected in the Chamber to enable the ceiling to be carefully examined by the engineers in charge of the building. This examination has revealed the fact that there is no serious defect in the ceiling, but, as I have already explained, in reply to another question put by the Honourable Member, it is proposed to keep the ceiling under observation for some time and temporarily to fix under it wire netting.

(b) Government are not aware that the taking of photographs has been prohibited. They are not at present prepared to lay on the table the reports of the experts who have examined the building.

(c) Exact figures are not available, but the cost will be quite small.

(d) Government are aware that cracks exist in some of the walls of the Assembly building. These have been examined and reported on by experts, who assure Government that such cracks are to be expected and do not mean that the building is in any way unsafe.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : May I know, Sir, what is the reason for Government refusing to lay a copy of the reports of those experts on the table ? What questions of high policy are involved in this ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : There are no questions of high policy involved, but the reports are being examined by Government.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Is there any means of recovering the cost of the repairs due to the defect in the roof from the builders or contractors ? Can Government find any ways and means to recoup the loss to the Indian revenue sustained on account of this roof not being properly built by the contractors ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : Sir, my Honourable friend's question presupposes that it is the contractor who is responsible for that accident.

Mr. K. Ahmed : We do not want to be addressed like a schoolmaster teaching his pupils. We all understand what the question is. What we want is an answer, if there is any.

Appointment of Mr. Tyson, I.C.S., as Secretary to the Right Honourable Srinivasa Sastri.

165. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Will the Government kindly state if Mr. Tyson, I.C.S., was appointed Secretary to the Right Honourable Srinivasa Sastri with the latter's previous consultation and approval ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : As Mr. Sastri had left it to Government to secure a suitable Secretary for him, the names of a number of officers were considered and Mr. Tyson, who appeared to be the most suitable, was invited to Simla to meet Mr. Sastri. Mr. Sastri saw Mr. Tyson in Simla and approved of the selection. Since reaching South Africa Mr. Sastri has written about Mr. Tyson in the highest possible terms.

NUMBER OF PERSONS DETAINED UNDER REGULATION III OF 1818.

166. *Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Will the Government kindly lay on the table a statement showing, Province by Province, the number of persons detained under Regulation III of 1818 ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I have laid on the table a statement showing the number of persons detained in the jails of each Province under Regulation III of 1818.

ACCUSATION MADE BY RESPONSIBLE OFFICIALS IN INDIA AGAINST MR. S. C. BOSE.

167. *Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to the allegation made in the House of Commons by Mr. Pilcher, on the debate on the India Office Estimates, that :

" Mr. S. C. Bose was the centre of the ganglion, which formed this conspiracy. The one object of the conspiracy was to assassinate the Governor of Bengal " and to the report that, when challenged by Mr. Saklatvala, Mr. Pilcher replied that :

" this had been said in public in India, many times, not contradicted, by responsible officials " ?

(b) Will Government kindly state what responsible officials in India have made this accusation in public against Mr. S. C. Bose, or any other detenu ?

(c) What steps do Government propose to take to counteract this accusation ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I have seen the official report of Mr. Pilcher's speech, and find that it does not altogether correspond with the version given by the Honourable Member. The fact that Mr. Bose and the other detenus were placed under restraint on the ground of their participation in revolutionary conspiracy has been officially stated on several occasions. My predecessor, in February last, speaking in this Assembly on the general question of the repeal of Regulation III of 1818, mentioned that one revolutionary plot had been aimed at the life of the Governor of Bengal. I know of no public statement either here or in the Bengal Council to the effect that Mr. Bose was the centre of the conspiracy. The Government do not consider that the matter calls for any action on their part.

Mr. Satyendra Chandra Mitra : Is the Honourable Member aware that Mr. Moberly on the 24th February, 1927, in the Bengal Council said that these detentions in jail were merely preventive and that it was not for any commission of crime ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I have not seen the passage in Mr. Moberly's speech to which the Honourable Member refers.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Is the Honourable Member aware that Mr. Pilcher, a Member of the House of Commons now, is the same Mr. Pilcher who represented the European community in the Legislative Assembly here and stated things which were not acceptable to this House ?

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : May I know what is the correct version of Mr. Pilcher's speech ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : If the Honourable Member will compare the version given in his question with the report of Mr. Pilcher's speech in Hansard, I think he will have no difficulty in seeing where the difference lies.

Mr. T. C. Goswami : Does the Honourable the Home Member endorse the statement of Mr. Moberly who, I understand, is Home Member in the Government of Bengal, when he said on the 24th February, 1927, " I would reiterate and emphasise that detention in jail is not resorted to in these cases " (that is to say, cases of political prisoners) " for any crime which a prisoner may be believed to have committed : the detention is partly preventive " ? And may I further remind the Honourable the Home Member of a statement which I made on the floor of the House in Delhi last winter, namely, that Lord Lytton had told me definitely that these detentions were of a purely preventive nature, that statement not having ever been contradicted ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Before I could give any concurrence to, or express any dissent from, the views in either of these two speeches, it would be necessary for me to study them in detail and in their context, but as for the general proposition which appears to underlie the Honourable Member's question, I think it is undoubtedly the case that the measures taken in respect of detention are primarily in their object preventive.

Mr. T. C. Goswami : Does not the Honourable the Home Member think it desirable that when, on an important occasion like a debate in the House of Commons, the name of a man of the position of Mr. S. C. Bose,—a man for whom, whatever the Government may think, we have great respect,—is dragged into the debate, and he has been abused as having been the centre of a gang of conspirators, is it not proper that the Government should repudiate that statement ? Is it not only in the fitness of things that the Government of India should contradict Mr. Pilcher's libellous statement ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : In my reply to the original question I have explained as fully as it appears necessary that the Government do not consider that any action is called for.

Mr. T. C. Goswami : Shame !

THE CRIMINAL LAW REPEALING AND AMENDING BILL—contd.

Mr. President : The House will now resume further consideration of the following motion moved by Sir Hari Singh Gour on the 15th February, 1927 :

" That the Bill to repeal and amend certain provisions of the Indian Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1908, and the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, be taken into consideration."

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar (Home Member) : Sir, I rise to oppose this motion. I do so under the disadvantage of not having had the privilege of being present in this House when this measure was first debated. I have, however, perused the proceedings very carefully and there are two points which I wish at the outset to make. Mr. Tonkinson, during the course of the debate, I observe, pointed out certain somewhat grave imperfections in the Bill, and I observe further that no adequate reply was given to his criticisms. They were treated rather as minor matters of drafting. That point I shall have subsequently to revert to. An Honourable gentleman opposite, in the course of supporting the Bill, said that he considered it proper that Government should not base their case upon minor considerations of drafting but should oppose it, if they had a case, on its merits. Now, Sir, I think that is a very reasonable invitation and I propose now to accept it and to oppose the measure on its merits.

12 NOON.

Sir, it will be within the recollection of Honourable Members who were present at that debate that the Honourable the Mover placed very great reliance upon the Report of the Committee known as the Committee on Repressive Laws and he made two suggestions which it is necessary for me to correct. The suggestion contained in that part of the Honourable Member's speech, which appeared to be one of the main grounds on which he moved this measure, certainly the general impression which would undoubtedly be gathered from it, was that the Committee on the Repressive Laws had recommended the repeal of this Act, and that Government, who had given a general endorsement of the recommendations of the Committee, have, in so far taking no steps to repeal the Act, been guilty of something like a breach of promise. Now, Sir, I must ask the House to bear with me, because this is a very important point, when I proceed to point out that such a representation of the case is extremely inaccurate. At any rate it has a very remote and precarious contact with the facts. The truth of the matter is that the Committee expressly refrained for very good and very weighty and very deliberate reasons, from making any such recommendation as the Honourable Member suggested they had made. They not only spoke in the course of their well-considered Report with some degree of approval of the Act itself but also of the manner in which it had been applied, and as the Honourable and learned gentleman relies so much on the Report of this Committee, it is necessary for me to recall to the recollection of the House in some detail what the Committee actually had to say on this matter. Their first reference to the Act is in the following terms :

"There remain then two Acts, the Indian Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1908, and the Prevention of Seditious Meetings Act, 1911. It is around those two Acts that controversy has centred and regarding which we have been careful to obtain a full expression of opinion. These Acts also differ from those to which we have already referred in that, while the Committee was sitting, they were actually being used in the Punjab, Delhi and the United Provinces. The evidence of some of the witnesses goes to show, that their effect was beneficial and that their application was necessary to maintain public tranquillity. It is affirmed that local officers responsible for the maintenance of peace and order would, under existing conditions if these Acts were repealed, find themselves in an impossible situation faced, it might be, with disorder on a large scale which they could not prevent. The application of these Acts moreover is subject to safeguards which ensure that sanction to their introduction is only granted after careful scrutiny of the necessity for such action. The Local Governments are unanimous in asking for the retention of Seditious Meetings Act. Most of the Local Governments similarly affirm the need for retaining Part II of the Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1908."

The Committee go on to say :

"We realise also that substantial support is necessary for Government to meet the non-co-operation movement, which is the greatest obstacle to the successful development of the reforms recently introduced and to all political and industrial progress. * * * * Evidence has been adduced to show that in certain places the ordinary law is inadequate and this evidence we are not prepared to reject."

Later on they refer once more to the Act :

"We feel that we should not, under present conditions, be justified in advising the immediate repeal of these two Acts" that is to say, the Seditious Meetings Act and the Act now under consideration.....

Mr. K. Ahmed (Rajshahi Division : Muhammadan Rural) : What happened in Ireland ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar :

...."We may also point out that their provisions are not of a drastic character. * * Though seldom applied these two enactments have recently in the present situation been found necessary for the preservation of law and order. Further, an obvious objection to a more complete acceptance of this principle is that in allowing proof of the necessity for legislation to accumulate, even stronger measures than those now under consideration might eventually be required for the suppression of disorder."

Then, Sir, I invite special attention to the following passage which seems to me to show a remarkable foresight on the part of the signatories to this Report :

"As we have already seen, there is definite evidence of certain organisations encouraging acts of violence or resorting to intimidation. Recently in Delhi it has been necessary to declare certain Associations of Volunteers unlawful under section 16 of this Act. We have carefully examined the circumstances which led to this action. The Volunteer movement began with 'social service', but the adherents soon developed a definite tendency to interfere with the duties of the Police and the liberty of the public. They then began to intimidate and terrorise the general body of the population. There was a tendency towards hooliganism. It has been proved that some of these Associations resorted to violence, that their behaviour at railway stations and public meetings was objectionable and rowdy, that they obstructed the funeral of an honoured citizen and held a most undesirable demonstration at the house of another. They actively interfered with the elections by threats and picketing. There was every reason to believe that their activities, if left unchecked, would lead to serious disorder. The conclusion we have arrived at is that some of these Volunteer Associations in Delhi were seditious organisations, formed for the purpose of intimidating loyal citizens, and interfering illegally with the administration of the province * * * * We have received information of a possible recrudescence of secret associations in another part of India. It has also been stated in evidence that Bolshevik emissaries have entered India, and we cannot overlook the possibility of illegal associations promoted by them terrorising the population, and engaging in a campaign of crime and terrorism. Actually Part II of this Act has been sparingly used. Its object is not only to break down existing unlawful associations, but to deter young and comparatively guiltless persons from joining these bodies and to discourage the supply of pecuniary assistance. We regret that we cannot at this juncture recommend the immediate repeal of Part II of this Act."

Now, Sir, the Honourable Member has appealed to the authority of this Committee which he naturally, as he himself was a member of it, places very high and I agree with him, having regard to the important contents of the Report, that it deserves a very high authority. If the Honourable Member desires to have the controversies which he raises determined in the light of the views expressed by the Committee, of the recommendations they made, and in particular of the concluding and crucial sentences of their Report, I should myself be perfectly willing that the issue should be tried in that manner. And the concluding sentences of that Report were as follows :

" We advise that the repeal of Part II of the Indian Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1908, should be deferred for the present....."

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar (Tanjore cum Trichinopoly : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : How long ago was that ? They said " deferred ".

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar :

...." Their retention is necessary in view of recent occurrences and possible developments, which we cannot but regard with the gravest apprehension."

Sir, we have now to consider, with reference to that final pronouncement of the Committee, what were the " recent occurrences and possible development ". Before the Committee had actually framed their conclusions there occurred at Malegaon, a town in the Bombay Presidency, a very serious riot which resulted in the murder of four police officers and the burning of a Hindu temple. It has been judicially found that the proximate causes of that outbreak were the activities of local volunteer associations precisely of the kind referred to in the Committee's Report and which they prophesied might in the future be a serious danger to public security. I mention the case of Malegaon because I have myself to a certain degree responsibility in the matter. The Government of Bombay.....

Lala Lajpat Rai (Jullundur Division : Non-Muhammadan) : Will the Honourable Member give the date of that occurrence ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : That occurred on the 25th and 26th April, 1921. I mention this because I had to some extent special knowledge of the circumstances and some special responsibility in the matter. During these years, 1921 and 1922, the Government of Bombay were enabled to deal with the situation without any resort to Part II of the Criminal Law Amendment Act and I myself was consistently opposed to the use of that Act so long as conditions remained as they then were. But, in view of the judicial finding I have mentioned, it might have been alleged, and alleged perhaps with justice, that the Bombay Government were wrong. It might be alleged that if they had at an earlier stage and with greater promptitude applied this Act, those disastrous events at Malegaon could have been averted. I do not think myself that that is the case, but, at any rate, it is a reasonable attitude to take. I mention that merely to impress on the House, as the strongest instance that I can command, that the Local Governments do not resort to the provisions of this Act except under pressure of the gravest necessity.....

Mr. K. Ahmed : And what have they been doing since 1921 ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I will continue the recital if the Honourable Member will permit. Shortly after the Committee had signed their Report, many of their prognostications were signally proved to be true, and during the months of November and December that immediately followed the signature of the Report, this Act was employed to a larger degree than it has ever been employed before or since. It was employed in respect of volunteer associations in the United Provinces, in Bengal, the Punjab, Assam, the North-West Frontier Province and Bihar and Orissa. Let me take only one out of the various instances set forth to explain briefly the circumstances under which this Act was resorted to. In the United Provinces alone, in the early part of 1922, there were no less than 110,000 enrolled volunteers. Very extensive and very serious disturbances took place, and they culminated in the affair, that melancholy and tragic affair of Chauri Chaura.

Mr. T. C. Goswami (Calcutta Suburbs : Non-Muhammadan Urban) : Were they armed volunteers ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : The affair which took place at Chauri Chaura, I may remind the House, was an assault upon 23 police officers by a large crowd which was headed, according to the judicial decision in the matter, by several hundred volunteers. 23 police officers were done to death. On the following day there occurred a disturbance at Rae-Bareilly which unfortunately also involved blood-shed, but fortunately on not so extensive a scale. These are two most serious instances perhaps in that all deplorable time, and as I read through the records, it is really a matter of great surprise to me that the Local Government were able to pass through that critical and dangerous time without resort to more drastic expedients than the restricted and limited expedients of this Act, and it is largely because they had the Act as a weapon in their hands that it was possible for them to do so.

What followed next ? Even before the Committee had signed their Report, the first black clouds had already appeared on the horizon in Malabar, which in a few short weeks descended in the catastrophe of the Malabar rebellion. Must I remind Honourable Members of some of the occurrences in the Malabar rebellion ? Must I remind them of the fact that many prosperous and peaceful villages were destroyed, that murders of the most atrocious character were committed, and that many of those village communities were subjected in other ways to the grossest oppression and humiliation ? Must I remind them also of the retribution which fell upon the persons who were engaged in that rebellion ? The retribution which ultimately overtook them was almost as tragic as that they themselves inflicted upon their victims.

Mr. K. Ahmed : What about the 100 Moplah under-trial prisoners suffocated in the luggage van at Podanur station ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Here it might be pertinently pointed out to me that the Malabar rebellion was indeed a very serious and a very tragic occurrence, but it is not a very apposite argument in favour of my case inasmuch as the second part of the Criminal Law Amendment Act was not employed. But the only reason was that the catastrophe was so extensive, so sudden and so widespread that much more drastic powers were necessary to enable it to be brought under control. The powers that had ultimately to be employed for that purpose comprised and went a great deal beyond anything that can possibly be extracted from the second part of the Criminal Law Amendment Act. A few months later several districts in the Punjab were terrorised by a series of murderous outrages committed by an organisation calling itself the Babar Akali Jatha. The state of affairs was so extremely serious that there were times when it appeared almost inevitable that peace and order could not be restored without resort to something in the nature of martial law. However, the Local Government held their hand and with the aid of the application of Part II of the Criminal Law Amendment Act they were eventually able to restore law and order without resort to any more drastic expedients.

[Mr. J. Crerar.]

Now, Sir, I should like to pause here and consider, on a reasonable construction of what the apprehensions the Committee themselves had expressed and of the recommendations they made—I should like to pause and speculate for one moment as to what might have been their conclusions if they could have foreseen the actual occurrences which followed so soon upon the promulgation of their Report. My own opinion is that so far from making any recommendation, even a provisional recommendation, for the repeal now or hereafter of the second part of the Criminal Law Amendment Act, they would have positively supported its permanent retention on the Statute-book.

Now, Sir, I have not unfortunately completed my recital, because very shortly after the affair of the Babar Akali Jathas a state of affairs arose in the Punjab which again necessitated resort to the Part II of the Criminal Law Amendment Act. I do not propose to go into the details of that use of the Act because matters have fortunately improved so much since in the Punjab that it would merely recall unhappy memories if I dealt with them in greater detail. I merely record the fact that the resort to the second part of the Criminal Law Amendment Act was again in that instance of the greatest value to the Local Government in restoring peace and order.

Lala Lajpat Rai : What year ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : October, 1923. Then followed the Cawnpore conspiracy case. It was judicially proved in the course of the Cawnpore conspiracy case that there existed an organisation, largely supported by inspiration and funds from abroad, for the promotion of a communist revolutionary movement in India. I am not asking the House to believe that on the assertion of any executive authority, but on the deliberate judgment of two Judges of a High Court. That was in the beginning of 1924. Later, disturbances unfortunately occurred in Burma and once more a prompt and early resort—there were very few prosecutions but a certain number of declarations—to the second part of the Criminal Law Amendment Act was again of the greatest value to the Local Government. Lastly I must refer to a case which culminated only yesterday. I refer to the Kakori conspiracy case, the trial of which has now been concluded in the Chief Court of Oudh.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru (Agra Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : May I ask the Honourable Member whether it has been dealt with under the Criminal Law Amendment Act ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : No, Sir. That case was not dealt with under the Criminal Law Amendment Act.

Lala Lajpat Rai : Was the Bolshevik case tried under that Act ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I have not suggested that it was. My point in referring to that case was this that the course of the judicial inquiry has undoubtedly proved the existence of one or more associations which were of a revolutionary character and that, if the prosecution in this particular case had not been successful, conditions might very well have arisen in which a resort to the second part of the Criminal Law Amendment Act would have been necessary as a preventive measure in the hands of the Local Government.

Well, Sir, I do not propose to continue the recital of this gloomy tale, nor to overload it with details, though it would be very easy for me to do so. What I wish to point out is this—that the Honourable the Mover in supporting his case to the House has singularly neglected two factors which I should have imagined ought to have been of the very greatest importance to his case. He has ignored them perhaps wisely from the point of view of his own case. He has ignored entirely the state of affairs which in the past required the application of the Act and the recurrence of which might necessitate the application of the Act in the future. Nor has he instanced a single case of the abuse of these powers. If the Honourable Member had a practical as well as an academic case against this Act, surely he would have been able, out of the considerable number of cases in which the Act has been applied, to cite some cases in which the Act has been abused. The Honourable Member did not instance one single case of the abuse of the powers under this Act.

Now, Sir, I must revert very briefly to the Bill itself. I pointed out that the criticisms which were made by Mr. Tonkinson have not been answered. An Honourable and learned gentleman from Madras proceeded on the assumption that the Honourable the Mover had been working on an old copy of the Act and that with a few slight and inconsiderable amendments the Bill would be a fit Bill to be enacted. I have no wish myself to stand upon any mere question of drafting. I must try, and I confess I do so with some considerable embarrassment in view of the actual condition of the Bill, to meet fairly what are the Honourable Member's objects and intentions. I take it that his principal motives are that the jurisdiction of the High Courts should be amplified and that the liberty of the subject should be enlarged and also that the powers of the Executive Government should be restricted. Now, Sir, as far as the amplification of the jurisdiction of the High Courts is concerned, any proposal which is conducive to the better administration of justice and to the better maintenance of the King's peace would have my warmest sympathy and I do not yield to the Honourable and learned gentleman in his solicitude for the liberty of the subject. As regards the restrictions on the powers of the Executive Government that is a matter on which we might very naturally differ. But taking the first two of these objects I am compelled to note that the Honourable Member proposes to give to the High Court an appellate power in respect of an order which cannot be passed under the Act as it stands, which could not be passed under the Act as he proposes to amend it, nor under any other Act on the Statute-book. With the best will in the world, therefore, I cannot see how, when we enact that part of the Bill, we should be doing anything likely either to amplify the jurisdiction of the High Court or to enlarge the liberties of the subject. However I pass from that point to one which has caused me even greater difficulties. The part of the Bill which is really effective is that which proposes to repeal section 15, clause (2) (b) of the Act. Now, to do so would completely eviscerate the Act. I have very carefully examined the records dealing with the use which has been made of this Act and I find that the cases in which action has been taken under section 15 (2) (a) were very rare. In at least 90 per cent. of the cases action was taken under the section which the Honourable Member proposes to repeal and for very obvious reasons. It was the simplest, it was the most convenient and in many cases the most appropriate method of taking action. The effect of the Bill would be merely to make the whole Act ineffective and, personally, if I were offered the sole option between an amendment of the Act in this sense, which would really come to the Statute-book as a dusty and unintelligible piece of legislation, and a repeal of the Act, I should honestly prefer repeal.

Now, Sir, the difficulties presented by the Bill as it stands have caused me very great and, as I have said, very real embarrassment. I have seen recently stated in this House a certain doctrine with regard to the care which this House should exercise in examining the provisions of Bills which are brought before it. It is in the following terms :

" Now, I submit, Sir, that this Legislature must be extremely careful in selecting its language and not use one word, one comma or colon, the meaning and extent of which it does not appreciate and understand ".

That doctrine was laid down with such admirable precision and correctness by the Honourable and learned Mover in speaking on another Honourable Member's Bill, and I should certainly be glad to invite the House to join me and the Honourable the learned Mover in applying that doctrine to the present Bill. However, Sir, I have no desire to rely for a moment on any technical points or on any points which might reasonably be construed as technical. My case substantially is this. Past history has shown the necessity for a measure of this character. We should be extremely sanguine, and there is very little to justify us in assuming that such conditions would not possibly recur again. I contend that no abuse of this Act in the past has been proved—that has not even been alleged. If, Sir, the Honourable Member really insists that what I contend are the very limited provisions of this Act really amount to repression, may I invite his attention to an Act which, according to Press accounts, has recently been passed by the Legislature of the Irish Free State ? If the Press account is correct—and I cannot vouch for it—it may perhaps enable the Honourable Member to form a somewhat more accurate perspective of Acts which are repressive and Acts which are not repressive :

" The Senate has finally passed the Public Safety Bill.....Provision has been made declaring certain Associations unlawful and making persons continuing membership of such Associations liable to a maximum sentence of 5 years' penal servitude."

Lala Lajpat Rai : That is only a Bill and not an Act.

Sir Hari Singh Gour (Central Provinces Hindi Divisions : Non-Muhammadan) : What is the duration of the Act ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar :

" Persons associated with the activities of these organisations will be liable to expulsion from the Free State. Special courts may be established to include military officers as well as judges, and there shall be no appeal from them. The death penalty may be extended for possession of fire arms without authority if the Government so notified."

Now, Sir, I express no opinion either on the accuracy of that statement, or upon the propriety of such a piece of legislation or upon the circumstances which have been held to justify it. I merely suggest that if the Honourable Member classifies the second part of the Criminal Law Amendment Act as a repressive law, he should correct his perspective.

Perhaps, before I conclude, I should say a few words with reference to a provision of the Honourable Member's Bill to which I have not so far made any reference, and that is the provision relating to habeas corpus. That provision, as was noted earlier in the debate, has been tacked on to the Honourable Member's measure My reason in not dealing with it is firstly that I have already detained the House for a somewhat longer period and I do not wish to detain it unduly, and secondly that this question of habeas corpus is so lacking in anything that can connect it with the other matter contained in the Bill that, it is impossible for us now to debate it effectively. It is a separate issue altogether, and therefore I do not propose to enter upon it. I conclude, then, with what is my substantial plea to the House, and it is this. When disorders occur, when the peace is broken, critics of Government emphasise the responsibility of the Executive Government in the matter. Sir, they are perfectly justified in doing so, and I make no complaint of it. Indeed, when widespread disorders occur, if the Legislature were not prepared to act upon their rights in holding the Executive Government to account in the matter, they would be failing in their duty. But surely they have a reciprocal responsibility in the matter. If Government are to be held responsible—and I do not deny that they should be held responsible for the maintenance of law and order—is the Legislature justified in taking away from us powers which have been proved in the past to be very valuable instruments for the preservation of law and order the necessity for the further exercise of which in future is still a matter of a strong probability ? Would the Legislature be justified, I ask, in depriving the Executive Government of those powers and then insisting on enforcing their responsibility ? I say, Sir, that that is not a reasonable proposition. If the Honourable Member wishes to decide the matter on legal grounds, I suggest that the legal maxim which ought to apply is durante ratione, duret ipsa lex.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : Sir, I wish very briefly to reply to the Honourable the Home Member. When I heard his speech I was wondering to myself whether the Honourable Member was not referring to matters which we had discussed and disposed of already, when I had introduced a Bill for the total repeal of Part II of the Criminal Law Amendment Act and which this House passed in spite of the opposition of Government. At that time, Sir, Honourable Members on this side of the House, nominated Members and Members who had held responsible positions as Executive Councillors like my friends Sir Chimanlal Setalvad and Sir Sivaswamy Aiyer, appealed to the Government that Part II of the Criminal Law Amendment Act was far too drastic and that they could not possibly support Government in that matter, but they were prepared to go half way if the Government would accede to their wishes to give some jurisdiction to the High Courts to revise and rectify the errors of the Executive. Upon that the Honourable Member said that that is entirely a different matter, and when it came up, it would be disposed of upon its own merits. I understood, Sir, that, while the Government then were not prepared to accede to the total repeal of Part II of the Criminal Law Amendment Act, they were not wholly undisposed to compromise the position by giving the High Courts jurisdiction to revise the orders of the Executive. And, Sir, impelled by that implication I redrafted my Bill, and the Bill that you see before you is a much diluted Bill, and, as I stated in the opening speech while introducing the Bill and asking the House to consider it, further,

[Sir Hari Singh Gour.]

I have toned it down to these matters. I did not want the total repeal of Part II of the Criminal Law Amendment Act. I merely wanted the repeal, and I do want, Sir, the repeal of section 15, clause (2), sub-clause (b), and as for the rest I give the High Court jurisdiction, as in all criminal matters the High Court have and must have jurisdiction, to revise and control the action of the Executive. This is all I want, and this is all that my Bill implies. Now, I fail to understand what the Honourable the Home Member means by recounting those acts of 1921, 1922, 1923 and 1924, if it is not intended to prejudice this House against my measure which does not seek to repeal Part II of the Criminal Law Amendment Act, but the substantive object of it is to delete section 15, clause (2), sub-clause (b) and to give the High Court jurisdiction to revise the orders passed by the Executive. That is, so far as the Criminal Law Amendment Act is concerned. Now, Sir, what is the reply of the Honourable the Home Member on this part of my case? His reply is that " if you repeal section 15, clause (2) (b), you might just as well repeal the whole of Part II of the Criminal Law Amendment Act ". Now, does the Honourable the Home Member justify the retention of section 15, clause (2) (b) on any ground? What is the section? The section says—and I am leaving out the other words,—I am reading only that part of section 15 which I wish to be repealed :

" In this Part ' association ' means any combination or body of persons, whether the same be known by any distinctive name or not, and which has been declared to be unlawful by the Governor General in Council under the powers hereby conferred."

Now, Sir.....

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Sir, the Honourable Member is not quite correct in reading the Act.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : I am reading, Sir, from a copy which the Legislative Department has supplied to the Honourable Members of this part of the House, and if it is not the correct copy, they are responsible for it, not ourselves ; it is the official copy supplied to us in the Library. I know the Devolution Act and the section in question, but probably the Honourable the Home Member's Department do not yet know, because the copy has not yet been corrected. I will deal with that part of the case later on. Now, Sir, what is my objection? My objection is that under this Act the Governor General, and now of course under the Devolution Act the Local Government, have the power to declare any association to be an unlawful association without giving any reason, without calling upon that association to show cause why it should not be declared unlawful, but merely because the executive say that it is an unlawful association, it becomes an unlawful association. But if that were all, that would be bad enough. What is the result? Will the Honourable Member kindly give me a corrected copy? (The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar handed one to the Honourable Member.) Now, Sir, what is the result of this declaration? The result of that declaration is that whoever is a member of an unlawful association or takes part in meetings of any such association or contributes or receives or solicits any contribution for the purpose of any such association, shall be punished with imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months. Now how does this Act work? The Executive Government says, " You are a member of an unlawful association ". That cannot be revised by the High Court. After that, they send him up to the High Court for the purpose of awarding punishment ; and as Sir Lawrence Jenkins in the case reported in Indian Law Reports which I cited on the last occasion pointed out, the High Courts have no jurisdiction to inquire into the legality, sufficiency, propriety or otherwise of the order passed by the Executive Government. They are merely to act as the sentencing court. Now, is this just ? Is this right ? Is this British justice ? That is the question I had put to the Honourable occupants of the Treasury Benches. Do they justify this procedure that the Executive sends up a man and says, " Here is a man ; I hand him over to the High Court to award the punishment. You, the Judges of the High Court, have no jurisdiction to go into the question whether this man is guilty or not : all that you have to do is to award the punishment ". And the High Court, if that is the procedure, may well ask " Why send it up to the High Court at all ? " Why do the Executive then not take upon themselves the power of also sentencing the man to imprisonment in accordance with some amendment which they may make to Part II of the Criminal Law Amendment Act ? That, I submit, is the point which we raised on this side of the House and it was on that ground that we carried the Resolution for the total repeal of Part II of the Criminal Law Amendment Act. Now, Sir, the Honourable the Home Member has said, " Can you give me any instance where we have misused section 15, clause (b) of the Act ? " My answer is, Sir, " How have you prescribed any procedure under this Act under which the judicial authority could have inquired whether the man who has been declared to be a member of an unlawful assembly has been rightly or wrongly so declared ? " If you had prescribed that procedure, then the High Court would have jurisdiction to say whether the man who has been sent up to the High Court for punishment is innocent or guilty. The jurisdiction of the High Court has been taken away. All that the High Court has to do is to sentence the man,—and the Judges may well say : " We regret we have not got the power to inquire whether you are innocent or guilty : the power that we have is to sentence you : therefore, you go to jail ". And for how long ? What is to be the measure of punishment if the Court is not to go into the measure of the offence ? That, Sir, is the position in which you place the High Court, and I wish to ask in what part of the civilized world have you got such a Statute on the permanent Statute-book. I have made some little study of the subject and I venture to submit that there is no part of the British Empire where such a drastic provision of law finds a place upon the permanent Statute-book of the country. Now, Sir. my Honourable friend, the Home Member, says, " If you are to take away clause (b) of section 15, then the whole of Part II of the Act might just as well be repealed ". I submit, that is not the case. Section 15, clause (a), says :

" An unlawful association is an association which encourages or aids persons to commit acts of violence or intimidation or of which the members habitually commit such acts."

The cases which the Honourable the Home Member has cited are cases which could have come and will come under clause (4), sub-clause (2) (a), Part II of the Criminal Law Amendment Act. But as my friend has just now pointed out, it is very easy for the Local Government : why should it inquire whether you are a dangerous man or not ? Why should it inquire whether you commit acts of violence or not when they have got the arbitrary, the uncontrolled, the undisciplined power under clause (b) of saying that you are a guilty man ? Why should it give reasons for it ?

Mr. H. Tonkinson (Burma : Nominated Official) : On a point of order, I should like to point out, Sir, with regard to the statement of my Honourable friend.....

Sir Hari Singh Gour : I cannot hear you.

Mr. H. Tonkinson : I should like to point out, Sir.....

Mr. President : It is not a point of order.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : I wish therefore to ask " Is this provision of section 15, sub-clause (a), not sufficient for all the purposes and in respect of all the cases to which you have adverted in the opening part of your speech ? " I therefore submit, Sir, that in asking for the repeal of clause (b), I am asking this House to remove and purge from the Statute-book a most obnoxious provision of law for which there is no precedent in any known law of which I am aware in the British Empire. Now, Sir, the next thing I ask this House is, where a man has been declared to be guilty and he has appeared before the High Court, is the High Court merely to act as the hangman, or is the High Court to act judicially and inquire whether the man is guilty or not ? That is the short question I ask any Honourable Member in this House to answer. The jurisdiction of the High Court to inquire whether a man sent up to the High Court for punishment is innocent or guilty—I give the High Court that jurisdiction. That is the second thing that I wish to do. Now, Sir, that finishes the first part of my Bill.

The second part of my Bill deals with a congnate matter. It was the subject of the Report of the Repressive Laws Committee, from which, I am afraid, my Honourable friend has cited from wrong places. I shall conclude my speech by citing from the passage upon which I rely, which the Honourable the Home Member will see was the cardinal note struck by the majority of the non-official members when they agreed to sign their Report. The second part of my Bill is to add a few words as regards British subjects. And let me remind Honourable Members of this House as to what is the effect of the second part of my Bill. It is this. There are a very large number of Regulations and Acts and miscellaneous Ordinances and so forth under which there is power of arresting and detaining and keeping people in jail without any trial. I think one Honourable Member of this House was a victim of one of those Regulations. Now, what do I want ? I want to give them reasonable liberty. It was said in the course of the last debate that if you were to place everybody before the High Court and give the High Court jurisdiction either to release that man or to place him upon trial, what would become of non-British subjects that come from across the Frontier, marauders, Communists and persons who owe no allegiance to the British Crown ? These people come in large numbers into this country and may come in large numbers into this country and stir up riots and acts of lawlessness with which the Government will have no power to deal. Well, Sir, I have acceded to that objection, and what I have done is to add the words which qualify the jurisdiction of the High Court only to protect British subjects. Now, Sir, is that not a reasonable protection ? I venture to submit that the Honourable the Home Member feels himself in his conscience that it is reasonable. We are protecting the British people and placing them under the jurisdiction of the High Court and giving them that protection to which they are entitled. That is the meaning of my habeas corpus provision. The Honourable Member says " You have tacked on in one Bill

2 Bills of a different character ". Surely, Sir, those who live in glass houses must not pelt stones at others. Have we not seen in the last Assembly the Repealing and Amending Act running into six pages amending the Penal Code, Transfer of Property Act, Specific Relief Act, Limitation Act and, what not ? Have not you done that ? Do not you do that every year, and you who amend a dozen Acts by one Act come up and tell me that I amend in one Bill two provisions of inconsistent Acts. Are they inconsistent ? They are of a most cognate character. Let me explain to the House. The Repressive Laws Committee were dealing not only with this question but also with the habeas corpus question, and in consequence of their recommendation certain High Courts were given jurisdiction in matters of habeas corpus. But persons arrested under the Regulations and other repressive laws were left out of the consideration of the High Court in the section dealing with habeas corpus. Our position then was, as our position now is, that so far as British subjects are concerned, no repressive laws should touch them without giving them the right of having recourse to a judicial tribunal before whom they should be tried and by whom they should be judged. Is that an unreasonable request ? These two provisions of my Bill, therefore, are the direct outcome of one report dealing with a series of acts relating to one question.

1 P.M.

Lastly, Sir, the Honourable the Home Member says that I have misread and misrepresented the recommendations of the Repressive Laws Committee and he took some little time in reading passages from the Report of the Repressive Laws Committee. Now, if the Honourable the Home Member had paid me the compliment of reading the speech when I introduced this Bill, he would not have compelled me to read the passage upon which I relied and which I cited to the House in justification of my Bill. That passage is contained in paragraph 25, page 11, of the Report and it is said there :

" Many of us hope that it may be possible for the Government to undertake the necessary legislation during the Delhi Session."

They recommended the total repeal of the Repressive Laws and hoped that the Government would introduce a measure during the ensuing Delhi Session for their absolute and total repeal. And what is the date of this Report ? The date of this Report is the 2nd September, 1921. Consequently, the non-official members signed this Report in the hope that the Government would introduce in the winter Delhi Session of 1922 the measure for the repeal of all these Repressive Laws. Has that hope been fulfilled ? I have been after the Government ever since the cold weather Session of 1922 reminding them of the promise and the understanding embodied in paragraph 25 of this Report. And what reply have I got ? " The time is not yet ". And now the Honourable the Home Member takes a different line altogether. In 1922 and onwards the apologia of the Government was : " Yes, we will do it, but the time is not yet. There is this disturbance going on and that disturbance going on, a woman has cracked somebody's head, and so on ". But now when I ask what objection have you to repealing these laws and giving to the High Court the jurisdiction which it should possess, the reply is : " Oh, well, look at what took place in 1921, 1922 and 1923 ". Is that any answer to the recommendation of the Repressive Laws Committee ? And have I, Sir, misrepresented any portion of the Repressive Laws Committee ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Yes.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : I have given the ipsissima verba of the Report of the Repressive Laws Committee, and I can assure the House, speaking for myself and I am afraid I am the only Member now in this House who sat in the Repressive Laws Committee, that I certainly would not have signed that Report if this paragraph had not been inserted. And I assure you, Sir, that there are many of my friends who would never have subscribed to that Report if that passage had not been inserted. I feel, therefore, in duty bound to carry out the promise which I gave to my constituents and to the country at large that these Repressive Laws would be removed from the Statute-book as soon as possible.

In asking this House, therefore, to carry this motion, I am carrying out a duty which I submit, Sir, it was incumbent upon the Government which had accepted the Report en bloc to carry out in fulfilment of the hope which we then expressed and in discharge of the obligation which it had undertaken.

Now, Sir, one more word and I have done. The Honourable the Home Member has criticised the draft of my Bill. I know that the drafting requires amendments. But I will only ask the Honourable the Home Member to ask his official draftsman to move the necessary verbal amendments which are required for the purpose of putting clause 3 in order. That, of course, is the work of the Legislative Department, and I, therefore, submit that that is a work in which we expect the assistance of the Government. The Act supplied to us on the basis of which this Bill was drawn up unfortunately was an incorrect copy and even to-day the Honourable Members of this House have been given only those incorrect copies. It is upon those incorrect copies that this Bill has been drafted. I therefore consider the question of amendment as a pure drafting amendment. If my motion for the consideration of this Bill is passed, I request the Honourable the Home Member to help us by putting the draft in order.

Sir, I move that the Bill be taken into consideration.

(Lala Lajpat Rai then rose to speak.)

Mr. President : The Honourable Member is too late. He must himself protect his own right.

Lala Lajpat Rai : Was the Honourable Member, (Sir H. S. Gour) replying to the debate ?

Mr. President : Of course.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Mr. President, I have already trespassed so long on the patience and indulgence of the House that I do not propose to do so again at any great length. I note as a preliminary point that the Honourable and learned gentleman referred in tone almost of indignation specially directed at me, to the fact that he is in possession of an uncorrected copy of the Act. The Honourable and learned Member is perfectly well aware that it is not the business of the Home Department to supply Honourable gentlemen with copies of Acts. I feel, Sir, that when he directed the vials of his wrath on me on that particular point he must have felt that his case in other respects was singularly defective.

Now, Sir, the first point I wish to take in reply is his further contention as to what the Committee actually did recommend. I am surprised that, after I had laid before the House in very great detail actual recommendations of the Committee, that the Honourable and learned gentleman should have had the temerity to return to that point. It is perfectly true that the Committee recorded that many of its members expressed the hope which was referred to and quoted by the Honourable and learned gentleman, in moving his original motion, I observe that he quoted only a line and a half of the Committee's Report. He refrained with meticulous care from reproducing any part of the Report which dealt with the specific recommendations of the Committee. The Honourable Member went further. He has referred to a promise which has not been fulfilled. Now, Sir, what was the promise ? If the Committee had made a specific recommendation for the repeal of this Act, if the Government of India had specifically approved and endorsed that recommendation and announced their intention to act upon it, that would have been a promise, and any failure to carry it out would have been a breach of promise. The facts, as I have already explained at great length to the House, are contrary. The Committee did express the hope of certain of its members in a line and a half, that it would be possible to repeal this Act. But in several passages in the course of its Report, and more particularly in what I called the crucial and concluding sentences, their express and definite recommendation was that that Act should not then be repealed. Yet in spite of all that, in spite of the care and detail I took to inform the House of what the recommendations of the Committee actually were, the Honourable and learned gentleman still says the Committee recommended the repeal of the Act and the Government, by not having repealed it, has been guilty of a breach of faith. If the Honourable and learned gentleman is compelled to rely upon arguments of that kind in substantiation of his case, I submit he ought not to convince a reasonable House.

Now, Sir, I go on to another point. I suggest—in fact, I venture to assert—that the Honourable and learned gentleman has not only misrepresented the attitude and recommendations of the Committee and the attitude of Government on those points ; he has, as a matter of fact, misrepresented the Act itself. I hope that Honourable gentlemen who are in possession of a correct copy of the Act will look at it. The Honourable Member said the Local Governments do nothing except issue a declaration that a particular association is unlawful.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : That is not a correct statement. I never said the Local Governments do nothing. I said under that law the Government have the power of declaring an association unlawful though they may not give the accused a chance to show cause against it.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Then I take it the Honourable Member is once more raising a merely theoretical objection to the Act which he is incapable of supporting by any practical instances. He went on to say that the courts of justice as a matter of fact have no power in the matter at all, that once a decree of proscription has been issued by the Local Government, all that is open to the judicial courts to do is to endorse their decree and to inflict the penalty. Now, Sir, is that actually the case ? It is perfectly true that the Local Government are given an executive discretion by section 16, but the section very clearly lays upon them the obligation and necessity of coming on reasonable grounds to the conclusion that such an association is an association within the terms of that section. That is sufficient to constitute the association unlawful ; but in order that a conviction may be obtained under the Act it is necessary to prove that the accused person was a member of such an association, and the other ingredients of clause (1) or clause (2) of section 17. On those points the Courts have got an absolute discretion. And moreover they have an absolute discretion with regard to the penalty they can inflict. It may be presumed that when this Act was in active operation unless the courts had some good reason for believing that these activities of the persons before them were of a dangerous character they would not inflict a very serious penalty. But in truth the operation of the Act had not much to do with prosecutions at all. As I have already pointed out, its use was almost entirely preventive and its use in performing that function of prevention was extremely efficacious.

Now, Sir, I pass on to another point on which I strongly based my case and which the Honourable and learned gentleman, with somewhat less than his usual agility, has attempted to evade. I said it ought to be possible for him, if he really had a good case, to show at least one instance in which there had been some notorious abuse of the powers conferred by this Act. What did the Honourable Member reply ? He did not instance any such cases.

Lala Lajpat Rai : There are many such instances.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : " How could I instance such cases," he said ; " the discretion granted to the courts is so nugatory, so absurd, that it would be quite impossible for me to instance such cases."

That is to say, his argument was that he could not instance a case or abuse unless he had a judicial decision to that effect. Now, Sir, I submit that if there had been any numerous cases of abuse or even a single case of notorious abuse, what would be the effect ? What would be the effect if a certain association were to be declared very unreasonably and very improperly by a Local Government to be unlawful ? Would not the fact be well known without any judicial decision ?

Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya (Allahabad and Jhansi Divisions : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Take the case of the Congress Committees.

Lala Lajpat Rai : Or the Volunteer Associations.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I was replying to the Honourable gentleman's argument, when he said he could instance no such case unless he had a judicial decision before him. I claim, therefore, that on that point he has entirely failed to meet my case.

Then, Sir, there is a second part of my case which was conspicuously absent from my Honourable and learned friend's original case but which occupied a conspicuous part in my case, and that also has not been dealt with by him effectively. I referred to the justification, which the year or two immediately following the signature of the Report, gave to the apprehensions of the Committee of which the Honourable Member was a member. I recited at some length the disastrous and catastrophic occurrences in Malabar and elsewhere.....

Lala Lajpat Rai : This Act had nothing to do with these events.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I think I explained sufficiently the reasons why occurrences of that nature could reasonably be brought into the case which I made against the repeal of the amendment which the Honourable Member proposes to repeal. I recited cases which I should have thought would have been sufficiently convincing, but to which the Honourable and learned gentleman referred, I think, in a tone hardly adequate to the importance and gravity of the occasion or to the circumstances to which he was referring. He spoke, I think, of some quarrel in which a woman was cracked on the head. Sir, the Honourable and learned gentleman is notoriously interested in measures for the protection of women and children, and I should think that his instance of a woman being cracked on the head was not an extremely happy one. However, I do not propose to pursue that. My point is that the Honourable Member knows perfectly well that that part of my case was an important part of the case, a case which, whether you agreed with it or not, was one to be dealt with seriously, one which required a serious and considered reply. The Honourable gentleman has found himself unable to give it. Now, Sir, I have no doubt he congratulated himself on having in advance provided himself with a useful side issue—he dealt at some length with the question of habeas corpus. I do not myself propose to deal with it—for the reasons which I have already given. We have already a grave and specific issue before the House in the question of the proposal to repeal the seccond part of the Criminal Law Amendment Act. To deal with a matter which really has, as I have already said, no direct nexus with the considerations which arise on the repeal of the second part of the Criminal Law Amendment Act is really to divert the issue which ought to be the issue before the House. I therefore do not propose to deal with it.

Lastly, I will only say this. He first of all referred in tones of some indignation to the fact that he had not been provided with an accurate copy of the Act, and he said it was the duty of the Legislative Department to come to his assistance. But really I must point out that in February of this year the Honourable and learned Member received the most express notice from these benches of the inaccuracy into which he had fallen.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : Sir, I immediately pointed out that the official draftsman might oblige me by correcting the copy and giving it over to me for that purpose.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : My point, Sir, is this that the Honourable Member had copies several months ago. It is not merely a question of a defect in the drafting but it is a serious defect in the frame and structure of his Bill, which as I have already said caused very grave embarrassment. But the Honourable Member has taken no steps to correct it, which he could quite well have done, and he is now, among other things, inviting this House to confer upon High Courts a power which they could not conceivably exercise. On the Honourable and learned gentleman's own doctrine as to the care which should be exercised in legislation, which I have already quoted to the House, I submit that he is not justified in asking the House to pass his Bill.

Sir, I oppose the motion.

Pandat Madan Mohan Malaviya : Sir, may I submit a point of order for your consideration ? In view of what the Honourable the Home Member has said regarding the two points being taken up together, is it open to us to request you, Sir, to put the two propositions separately, and is it open to this part of the House to ask the Honourable the Home Member, as he had notice of this matter this morning, to express the view of Government as to whether they are in favour of accepting the provision of the proposed habeas corpus or not ?

Mr. President : The question is :

"That the Bill to repeal and amend certain provisions of the Indian Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1908, and the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, be taken into consideration."

The motion was adopted.

The Assembly then adjourned for Lunch till Half Past Two of the Clock.

The Assembly re-assembled after Lunch at Half Past Two of the Clock, Mr. President in the Chair.

Mr. President : The House will now proceed to consider Sir Hari Singh Gour's Bill, clause by clause. The question is :

"That clause 2 do stand part of the Bill."

Mr. W. A. Cosgrave (Assam : Nominated Official) : Sir, I oppose this motion on several grounds. In the first place I would like to point out that this clause is a vital clause in the Bill. If this clause is carried, the Act as it stands at present will be eviscerated, as the Honourable the Home Member has said. This clause 2 reads as follows :

"Sub-clause (b) of clause (2) of section 15 of the Indian Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1908, (hereinafter referred to as the said Act) is hereby repealed."

In other words section 15 of Act XIV of 1908 will be shorn of its important sub-clause (b) which reads :

"has been declared to be unlawful by the Local Government under the powers hereby conferred".

[Mr. W. A. Cosgrave.]

Sir, the Honourable Mover has not been able to adduce any evidence whatever as to the abuse of this Act, although he was challenged to do so, and with all difference to him as one of the recognised legal authorities in India, if not in the world, I feel bound to state that he has somewhat misrepresented the procedure under this Act. The Honourable Member has spoken as if this Act proclaimed individuals. The real point is that it only proclaims associations, and under section 17 of the Act it is incumbent on the Crown or the prosecuting officer to prove that the accused person is a member of the association which has been declared to be an unlawful association. I think, Sir, many of us who have read Sir Hari Singh Gour's Bills with interest and pleasure were somewhat surprised at his talking about the executive dragging up people before the High Court which was only to be treated as a hangman. I am surprised at Sir Hari Singh Gour's speaking in this tone of levity about the High Court. I have tried several cases under this Act and I know that it is incumbent on the Crown to prove that a person is a member of an unlawful association and that also there is an appeal at the present time under section 17 in the ordinary way. The High Court is of course the second court of appeal. Well, another reason for opposing this motion which as I have already said cuts at the body of the present Act is that the Honourable the Home Member has given in my humble opinion most cogent reasons for retaining this Act on the Statute-book. He is in possession of information which is not at the disposal of an ordinary back-bencher like myself. He has told us on how many occasions, in all the cases which have arisen from Peshawar to Tuticorin, this Act has been used with advantage, and I think that Sir Hari Singh Gour is not doing a service to his country if he does anything to take away the strength of the Central Government in maintaining peace and order.

Sir, much has been said this morning about the Report of the Repressive Laws Committee. Well, the Honourable the Home Member has read certain paragraphs. The Honourable the Mover has also read certain paragraphs. I would also like to quote one or two lines from this Report to which my friend Sir Hari Singh Gour has appended his signature. I mention this fact, because Sir Hari Singh Gour has laid stress on the fact that he is the only member of the Repressive Laws Committee still sitting in this House. Now, Sir, what do I read? I see that Sir Hari Singh Gour put his signature to this Report which says :

"We recognise our responsibility in the maintenance of peace and order. We believe that the executive will use any exceptional powers with the utmost caution and discretion."

Sir, the Honourable the Home Member has mentioned a press communiqué showing that even in other parts of the Empire legislation of what is known as a repressive nature is considered necessary. Well, Sir, I would not bring this in again except to say that I spent part of my last leave in that part of the Empire. I have listened to debates in the Dail, I have spoken to people, I have been introduced to people who have a reputation for being champions of liberty like the Honourable gentlemen opposite, such as my friend Lala Lajpat Rai, and yet I say this, that when they have got to rule a country containing less than four millions of people they consider it necessary to have a special Bill to proscribe unlawful associations. I have seen the press communiqué, and I cannot see anything in it that would seem to show that that Bill is only of a temporary nature. That point was raised, I think, by my Honourable friend Sir Hari Singh Gour. I mention this point to emphasise the fact that, however much a man may be in favour of liberty, as an ideal, when he is on the opposition Benches, when he gets into power, he sometimes has to undertake legislation which he would not have liked in previous years. Sir, I would only repeat my argument that this section cuts at the root of the whole of the present Act, and therefore, in the interests of peace and order for which Sir Hari Singh Gour took responsibility in 1921, I beg to oppose the motion.

Lala Lajpat Rai : Sir, the first speech of the Honourable the Home Member had raised expectations in my mind that he was going to be generous in dealing with the merits of the case and that he would not rely at all on the technical defects of the Bill before us. I am sorry to say that those expectations were not realised later on. After having said that he was not going to rely on the technicalities, time and again, he referred to the defects in the drafting of the Bill. It was not necessary to do so if he wanted to confine himself to the merits of the case. I am perfectly at one with him in holding that the drafting of the Bill is not perfect—it is defective—and I also plead guilty to the charge that the interval between the first debate and now has not been properly used to remove the defects of drafting. But all the same, it must be remembered that Members on this side of the House have not got at their disposal the services of a highly paid Legislative Department which is paid from the public exchequer for the purpose of drafting Bills and correcting these mistakes of drafting. In this respect, I should have expected a generous treatment from the Government side. I should have expected that if they saw palpable defects in the drafting of this Bill, they would have suggested the amendments themselves. The arguments on the merits, of course, stand aside. The Government have every right to oppose the Bill on the merits as they have done, and as they might always do—that is a different thing—but to base arguments on defects in the drafting of the Bill, and not to suggest amendments to put the drafting right, does not show a very generous and statesmanlike attitude on the part of a Government which of course, though we do not admit it to be national, claims to be national. So I submit that the complaint on the part of the Honourable the Home Member was not quite consistent with the spirit of the opening sentence of his remarks. Secondly, Sir, it must not be overlooked that the Honourable Sir Hari Singh Gour is not the only person who is interested in this Bill, as the Honourable the Home Member seemed to think when he was giving his final reply. I will readily admit that Sir Hari Singh Gour has been well punished for having at all appended his signature to that Report which deferred the repeal of this Act at the time when it was under the consideration of the Repressive Laws Committee : This was a measure which was obnoxious and vicious in principle, and he should not have agreed to the deferring of the repeal of the Act under any circumstances. and if he finds now that the fact that he agreed to have the repeal of this Act deferred is thrust at him, by Benches opposite, he has only himself to thank for it. Therefore, I have no sympathy with him on that account ; I want to proceed entirely on the merits of the legislative measure before us, and am prepared to say that the whole of this measure was conceived in a wrong spirit, carried out in a wrong spirit, and is being maintained on the Statute-book in a wrong spirit. It cannot be justified on any possible grounds. Sir, taking the Act as it is, it is admitted that it was an exceptional measure, meant for exceptional times and extraordinary conditions. If the issue is narrowed down to this that having been enacted in a time of supposed disorder, confined to one province—I do not admit that it was justified even then—but assuming that it was...

Mr. President : I do not desire to interrupt the Honourable Member, but would it not be better if he reserved his general observations for the last stage of the Bill ? We are now dealing with clause 2 only.

Lala Lajpat Rai : I think, Sir, it will be more convenient for me and save time to place the whole of my argument about this Act before the House.

Mr. President : The Chair has merely made a suggestion which the Honourable Member need not accept if he does not wish to.

Lala Lajpat Rai : I have no objection to defer to the ruling or advice of the Chair, but I find that the speakers on the other side have been attacking the whole Bill all the time.

Mr. President : There was only one speech so far.

Lala Lajpat Rai : Sir, the position which the other side has taken is that it is necessary to retain this Act on the Statute-book.

Mr. President : The Chair has absolutely no objection to the Honourable Members making general observations at this stage, but on the distinct understanding that, when the final stage is reached, Honourable Members will not be allowed to make long speeches.

Lala Lajpat Rai : I do not propose, Sir, to make a second speech. So, with the permission of the Honourable the President, I might go on and finish what I have to say.

Mr. President : Lala Lajpat Rai.

Lala Lajpat Rai : I was saying, Sir, that under any circumstances it was admitted that this was an exceptional measure meant for exceptional times and extraordinary conditions. We are not enacting a new measure. We are just proposing to repeal a measure which is already on the Statute-book but which, I said, was admitted to have been enacted in special circumstances for extraordinary conditions. The issue then is whether it is desirable to retain this measure any longer or for all time to come on the Statute-book. That is practically the issue. Now, Sir, I know that the Governments generally are very fond of taking extraordinary powers and they never part with powers that they have once taken unless they are compelled to do so. Sir, I am not at all surprised at the attitude of the Honourable Members on the other side that they do not want to part with the powers that they have taken under this Act. Their anxiety for the liberties of the subject seems to be too superficial to be taken seriously. They do not care for the liberties of the subject as long as they can keep their hold tight on them by executive measures. No one objects to their exercise of their powers for maintaining peace or for checking disorders, or for doing anything which is permissible to them to protect law and order, under the ordinary laws of the country. Exception is being taken to this exceptional measure being retained on the Statute-book as if it was an ordinary law of the land. We have to see whether any such exceptional measure is needed in the present circumstances to be retained on the Statute-book for the purpose for which it might have been needed at any particular time in the past. That is the real point, Sir. I might say that to my mind the whole of this measure beginning from the Preamble was a grave violation of the liberties of the subject and (subject to correction), I have been unable to find any parallel in the history of any country for such wide and general powers being given to the executive at any time. In order to satisfy myself on this point, I have just consulted the Coalition Acts of Ireland which were passed by the British Imperial Government in those times when there were disorders in Ireland, probably about the time when the Phoenix Park murders took place. There also I find that they were very careful to specify the particular circumstances which had necessitated such a legislation in the Act itself (in the Preamble), and did not use such general terms as have been used in this Act. The Preamble of this Act says that one of the objects of the law is " the prohibition of associations dangerous to the public peace." Such a phrase is very extensive and very drastic : it can cover anything. Looking at the general lines of progress, everything turns on public peace. Any progressive movement may be considered by the powers that be as dangerous to public peace. Ordinarily they do not need special measures of this kind to protect public peace. They have ample powers under the general criminal laws of the country to maintain public peace and order without resorting to special legislation, unless special circumstances justify such legislation. Are we to suppose that these special circumstances exist in the country at the present time ? I submit, they do not. Is this law going to be a permanent feature of the law of the country ? Are the powers that were given to the executive for exceptional circumstances going to be maintained for ever ? I submit they should not.

The case on the merits which has been argued by the Honourable the Home Member is so extraordinarily weak that I do not think many arguments are needed to demolish it. I will divide his arguments into two parts. He has given you certain cases of disorder in the Presidencies of Madras and Bombay. He has said that he himself was connected with the Presidency of Bombay and he has also stated that in those Presidencies no need or occasion arose to apply the law or at least the Local Governments did not apply it in these Presidencies. Is not that conclusive evidence to the effect that the Government can carry on its administration and check such disorders and punish the people concerned in such disorders without the help of this special law ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I rise to a point of personal explanation, Sir. I think I pointed out quite clearly that so far at any rate as Madras was concerned, the condition of affairs that arose was so extensive and so dangerous that so limited and restricted a measure as the second part of the Criminal Law Amendment Act could not have been effective ; I never contended for a moment that circumstances had not arisen which, if they had been less extensive and less dangerous, might not have been effectively dealt with by this Act.

Lala Lajpat Rai : I am not concerned at all with the opinions of the Honourable the Home Member as to the circumstances that existed. I am merely concerned with the fact that the law was not extended, and was not applied, to those Presidencies. That is the outstanding fact on which I rely and we know that the Government of the Bombay Presidency was given credit at that time that they practically suppressed the non-co-operation movement or at least they professed to have suppressed it, without the help of this law. They punished all disorders without having recourse to these repressive laws, i.e., without the extension of the Seditious Meetings Act or the Criminal Law Amendment Act. Credit was taken by that Government and that credit was extensively given to the then Governor of the Bombay Presidency, for this, though in those Presidencies, the non-co-operation movement was not a bit less strong than in Northern India. The disorders that are being relied upon in support of the contention that this law ought to be retained on the Statute-book were not very many. Instances of such disorders in the south and the west were in no way less than those which took place in the Northern parts of India. But still the Governors of those Presidencies did not consider it at all necessary for the preservation of the public peace and for the maintenance of law and order to extend the provisions of this law to their parts of the country. I submit this is conclusive evidence of the fact that the Government has ample powers in the ordinary criminal law of the country to punish all breaches of the peace and all breaches of order without having recourse to this extraordinary law and also to prevent disorder. That argument, instead of helping the Honourable the Home Member in opposing this Bill, practically demolishes the whole of his case. The fact is that when Governments become nervous and panicky, they do not want to have recourse to the ordinary provisions of the law and to the ordinary Criminal Procedure Code. They want executive summary powers to declare so and so, so that the presumptive evidence will be in their favour. That is what has been given to them under this Act. What was done in Northern India ? This Act was originally enacted to suppress the alleged secret societies in Bengal, but when the non-co-operation movement came on and became strong in Northern India with an open volunteer movement, with its avowed legal objects, it was used to suppress it. Of course, all movements are liable to be abused and occasionally there is bound to be some violation of the original objects. People are liable to exceed their legitimate purposes and be carried away by their enthusiasm, but the ordinary law of the land ought to be sufficient for that purpose. But Governments are not satisfied with that ; they do not want to adopt the ordinary course of proving their cases. They want a provision to declare by an executive order in the exercise of a summary secret power, like the one given by Regulation III of 1818, that such and such association is illegal, unlawful, and therefore it ought to be suppressed and persons who are members of that association ought to be punished. I submit there can be absolutely no justification for such a position. I submit that there was no justification whatsoever for declaring that the Volunteers movement of the Congress was an unlawful association at all, even assuming for the sake of argument that there were here and there such disorders and such breaches of the peace as might have been punishable under the ordinary criminal law of the land. The very fact that the Congress Volunteers Association was declared an unlawful association and that people were punished under the provisions of this special law establishes a clear and flagrant case of the abuse of the powers given under this Act and no more instances are required to prove that the power should not be retained by the executive any longer.

I submit, Sir, that one of the complaints made by my Honourable friend Sir Hari Singh Gour was that he was not supplied with a correct copy of the Act on which this Bill is based. In that connection, just by way of a remark, I wish to say that we on this side of the House are in a very unfortunate position. We cannot be expected to bring all our library and up-to-date corrected copies of all Acts with us every time we come to the Assembly. We have to depend upon the library which is provided for the Legislative Assembly, and if in that Legislative Assembly Library, Government does not care to keep corrected copies and up-to-date amended copies of Acts, I submit the Government are to blame and not ourselves. It is very easy for the Government Members to get up and say to our face : " Oh, this is not based on a corrected copy of the Act ". Here, I want to remind Honourable Members that this complaint was made by us even in the last Session, when the Steel Industry (Protection) Bill was introduced, that correct copies of Acts were not available in the Library for the use of Honourable Members f the House Complaints were also made that no adequate literature was available in the Library so that Members could consult it. Nothing has been done till now to improve the state of the Library. All the copies that are available in the Library are those which are said to be unamended and uncorrected. Yet when we use the copies supplied to us by the Library, the fact of the copy on which we rely being incorrect is thrown at us and used as an argument against our case We cannot carry the whole law in our brains. When we are supplied with such uncorrected copies, I submit, Sir, it is the Government that is to be blamed and not we. I hope the Government will take care and keep the Library up-to-date so that we can be supplied with corrected and amended copies of all Acts when required.

But, Sir, I think the amendment pointed out by the Honourable the Home Member has made the case worse so far as open associations are concerned. The original Act gave power only to the Governor General in Council, but the amended Act gives that power to the Local Governments. So that the slight check which the Governor General in Council might have exercised over Local Governments and in this connection the little care and caution which the Government of India might have exercised in applying the provisions of the Act, have also been impossible under the so-called amended Act, as it stands now. Any Local Government can take it into its head to apply the provisions of this Act and declare any association unlawful.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Not any association.

Lala Lajpat Rai : Every Local Government, if it takes it into its head to suppress any association, may declare it unlawful, as they did in the case of the Congress Volunteers Associations on the ground that they considered it dangerous to public peace. My Honourable friend wanted us to give instances of the abuse of such powers by Local Governments. It may not be strictly relevant to this case, but I will give you an instance of the legal acumen and the legal understanding generally shown by Local Governments in applying this kind of laws to particular cases. The Punjab Government with all its legal machinery at its back declared the private meetings of the Provincial Congress Committee and the City Congress Committee of Lahore to be public meetings liable to be prohibited under the Seditious Meetings Act (Shame). Having proceeded to interpret the law in that high-handed fashion, they prosecuted four honourable citizens, got them convicted and sent to jail. Then the Government of India had to come to the rescue and order the release of those people who had been convicted under that law at the instance of the Punjab Government. I do not say that all Local Governments do that ; I do not believe that all do so. But here is one concrete instance of a Local Government with all its machinery going entirely wrong and abusing the powers given to it by the law and declaring private committee meetings of a public body which had not been declared unlawful liable to be prohibited under the Seditious Meetings Act. I see an honourable member representing that Local Government adorning the opposite benches and he might justify the action and the conduct of the legal machinery of that Local Government. Having perpetrated that wrong, that outrageous wrong, the Government has not up to this time apologised for that mistake by which they sent four respectable citizens of the province to jail. They had to rot in jail for seven weeks and then the Local Government without any apology whatsoever and without any excuse simply said : "the Governor General has held that this is a mistake and that this is a wrong conviction and we therefore release these people ". The conviction still hangs against their heads. I may also tell the Honourable the Home Member that it was not the virtuous and magic powers of this Act that caused the Volunteer movement, as he thinks perhaps, to collapse. We all went to jail, not because this Act existed, but because we did not want to defend ourselves. (Hear, hear.) We did not want to use the ordinary machinery of the law for the purpose of proving that we were innocent. It was not they who sent us to jail under the powers given under this Act. We voluntarily went to jail to vindicate what we considered to be our position. We might have been right, or we might have been wrong. But the Honourable the Home Member cannot take the credit of that result for this Bill, and say it helped the Government in maintaining law and order and restoring normal conditions.

Sir, the unlawful associations contemplated by this Act might be of two kinds—secret bodies or open associations. If they are secret bodies, and if they commit crimes of this nature—crimes of violence and intimidation—there is enough provision in the Indian Penal Code to punish them. We all know, and the Honourable the Home Member must know, that there is provision in the Indian Penal Code under which any member of an unlawful assembly can be proceeded against for the acts of other members done in pursuance of their common object and punished. If any member is proved guilty of violence or intimidation, surely all the members who took part in it in pursuance of that common object can be punished. Where is then the necessity for providing a special Act or to keep section 15 (b) on the Statute book ?

3 P.M.

The justification for such a law that was given at the time the Bill was passed was that Bengal was then in a condition of anarchy and the Government could not bring the offenders to punishment by the ordinary processes of law. According to their own statement, that necessity having ceased to exist or having been provided by still more drastic laws, such as the Bengal Ordinance and Regulation III of 1818, this Act has become useless and has no liason detre to remain on the Statute-book. It is merely irritating and annoying, and the Government ought to have come forward itself to repeal this Act and to show that they do not intend to maintain these powers, which were taken for exceptional purposes, for all time to come. I submit that their not having come forward in this way shows that they are not prepared to allow the progress of the country to proceed on normal lines, that they must continue to irritate and annoy people who have the progress of the country at heart and who do not want to make a fetish of peace. Peace is a very good thing in itself, but sometimes in order to make progress peace has to be disturbed, and there are the ordinary laws of the country to meet such a situation. Every Government must maintain peace ; that is perfectly justifiable ; and we have laws for that purpose Special laws are only needed on special occasions and at particular times. Therefore, I consider that every non-official Indian who consents to the general application and unlimited duration of such laws is practically guilty of being an enemy of the progress of his own country—when he consents to the continuance of such laws or when he signs a report like that of the Repressive Laws Committee. I think this is nothing but a slur on our good sense and not only a slur but a handicap to progress to let a Local Government say : " Such and such an association or body of people are very annoying, they are very inconvenient, they cause trouble " and thereupon let us declare them an unlawful association. Of course it is said on the other side, that the Heads of Local Governments or the Members of the Executive Councils are not going to be so unreasonable as that ; but we know what " reasonable " and " unreasonable " mean. The words reasonable and unreasonable practically have no meaning in the dictionary of Governments and much less so in the dictionary of foreign Governments. It is the exigencies of the times that practically determine the reasonableness or unreasonableness of an action. If a Government thinks that the maintenance of their prestige demands the exercise of such extraordinary power, they feel no hesitation in doing so. When they take that power and exercise that power, how can they talk of being reasonable or unreasonable ? Those words do not exist in their dictionary, or have a different meaning. If a law can provide for the prohibition of all institutions and societies that may tend even remotely to disturb the public peace then good-bye to all progress. If that were the correct view then all sorts of political associations and bodies in England, in France, must be declared to be unlawful by executive orders of the Governments. My friends talk of other parts of the Empire. But who can compare the case of Ireland with that of India ? Is there any comparison, I ask, between the two countries ? Absolutely none. My friend over there is laughing. He is an Irishman who is very proud of the stand made by his people in getting Home Rule for Ireland. I congratulate him in taking that pride, but is there absolutely any comparison between the present condition of Ireland and this country ? I admit that Governments do sometimes need special provisions of law ; and if the Cosgrave Government wants to maintain its power by passing certain laws, is that any justification why in a country like this of 300 million people where sometimes and very occasionally disorder occurs, you should say that you are never going to let us alone except by the propagation and maintenance of these laws ? I submit that is not honourable nor reasonable. Hit at us straight. There is the ordinary law. If we are guilty of any violence, if we are guilty of any intimidation, try us in the ordinary courts of justice and punish us if you will ; we have no cause to complain. If we defy your laws we shall deserve punishment. But do not take this back-handed power to declare associations unlawful, to declare people guilty in your secret chambers and convict them upon no evidence but by the fact of the association to which they belong having been declared unlawful by the Governor General in Council or by the Local Government.

By that I submit you are pursuing what I would call a cowardly process which no respectable and civilised Government ought to pursue. We warn you, therefore, in your own interests ; we want you to show yourself a brave Government, a civilised Government, depending upon the ordinary laws of the country and not on exceptional legislation of this kind to maintain peace and public order in this country. If you really cannot maintain peace and public order under the ordinary laws of the land, then you condemn yourself ; you condemn yourself very severely of your own incapacity and your unfitness to govern. This Act is not needed. Why should you need these executive powers to declare associations unlawful and to declare committee meetings of public bodies to be seditious ? In the case of secret societies such as you allege to have found in the Kakori case and the Bolshevik trial at Cawnpore, you cannot reach them except by the ordinary laws of the land. Did you at all use this Act in order to trace the Kakori dacoity or to prevent the spread of communist feeling or communist propaganda in this country ? You cannot touch them in that way. You can only touch them under the ordinary laws of the land. You have not yet declared any associations unlawful under that heading. What is the use then of bringing forward an argument based on such cases ? You only use the powers under this Act in the case of open bodies like the Congress Volunteers and you make improper use of this Act to declare such a high-minded association to be unlawful and to punish its members simply on presumptions and assumptions without giving the necessary proof in the court of law against them. I submit that is unworthy of a civilised Government. There is absolutely no need at the present moment—you yourself admit it—for such a law. The Under-Secretary of State says that the political situation in India has vastly improved, that the non-co-operation movement is dead and there is absolutely no resistance to your authority. These occasional outbursts, like the Kakori case or the Bolshevik trial at Cawnpore, do they justify your keeping this law ? If on your own admission the country is at the present moment in a normal condition and the political situation has vastly improved as the Secretary of State says, where then is the necessity for your opposing the repeal of this Act ? You should have generously come forward and said : " Yes, the political situation has completely improved ; there is absolutely no need of any repressive laws at the present moment, and we shall readily agree to the repeal of this Act." But your opposition shows one of two things : either those statements are false, absolutely false, and the political situation has not improved, or it has really improved ; (though I think from our point of view it has deteriorated, not improved) but from your point of view it has improved and we are at the present moment considering your point of view. Well, if it has really improved and if you really boast of having improved it by your administrative measures, by your diplomacy and your policy, then why oppose the repeal of this Act ? Why do you not generously come forward and say : " We do not require this exceptional legislation now ; you have become good boys." Well, either we are good or we are bad. If we are good boys or have become good boys, then this Act is no longer needed. If we are still bad boys, then you are not right in saying that we have become good boys and have turned over a new leaf. One of these two statements must be wrong. I submit the Government are not properly advised in opposing the passing of this measure. In all countries which are progressive, where there is life, there will be occasional outbursts of disorder, there will be occasionally cases like the Kakori case, there will be occasionally cases like the Bolshevik trial at Cawnpore ; you cannot keep this kind of law for those occasional cases. If there is a widespread secret agency that is undermining the peace and progress of the country, then you may be justified in providing special legislation. But when you yourself admit that there is no widespread conspiracy—perhaps you may try to make out an exception in the case of Bengal—I do not know of any reason why you should still insist on having this law.

Mr. President : The Honourable Member is perfectly within his rights in speaking at this great length ; but I understand Honourable Members are very anxious to get through all the stages of this Bill to-day and they should not find fault with the Chair or with the Government if they are disappointed.

Lala Lajpat Rai : I am not going to prolong this argument ; but, Sir, you will pardon my saying that after the rhetorical speech of the Honourable the Home Member it was necessary to point out the flaws in his argument.....

Mr. President : Which is the more important from the Honourable Member's point of view ?

Lala Lajpat Rai : Under these circumstances, I appeal to this House that they should unanimously vote for the passing of this Bill. If there are any defects in the drafting of the Bill, I think those defects can be remedied by agreeing to verbal alterations in the Bill. I quite agree with the other side that the real vital part of the Bill is clause (b) of section 15. It is that we are attacking and it is that we want to get rid of.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Sir, I do not propose to follow the Honourable Member who has just resumed his seat after a very eloquent speech in the whole course of his argument, firstly, because I have already delivered my own case on the general merits and I do not wish to be guilty of vain repetitions, and secondly, because I frankly do not hope, expect or intend to compete with the Honourable Member in eloquence. I have, however, something to say on the question of his reasoning.

[Mr. J. Crerar.]

The Honourable gentleman complained that I had spoken of disturbances which arose in Madras and in Bombay and he contended that because those disturbances had not been brought under the application of this Act, that was a conclusive case against the merits of the Act. Now, Sir, I think I have already explained why I adduced those two cases. They were neither, I submit, irrelevant nor were they without cogency with regard to the general lines of my case. I will not, however, go over that ground. The particular point I wish to make in regard to the Honourable Member's speech is this. I have repeatedly challenged Honourable gentlemen on the other side of the House to adduce instances of any conspicuous abuse of the powers under this Act. Now, Sir, what did the Honourable gentleman reply ? He adduced no instance whatsoever of the abuse of the second part of the Criminal Law Amendment Act, but he made one allegation of an abuse of the Seditious Meetings Act. Now, it appears to me that the argument is this : the Honourable gentleman adduced an instance of what he alleged was an instance of the abuse of the Seditious Meetings Act. Now that is a totally different Act.

An Honourable Member : This was also abuse.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : The Honourable gentleman will excuse me, but it is as if a person should be accused of, let us say, criminal breach of trust and the prosecution, being unable to adduce a scintilla of evidence on that charge, adduced evidence alleging that on some other occasion he was guilty of, say, criminal trespass and on that plea he proposes that the accused person should be convicted of criminal breach of trust. That, Sir, so far as I understand, is the argument, and if that, Sir, is the kind of argument that is to be adduced against this Act as a whole or in favour of this particular clause, then I say it is an extremely faulty argument and the cause which it supports is not one to which the House ought to lend its support.

Mr. Muhammad Yamin Khan (United Provinces : Nominated Non-official) : Sir, I sympathise and I have got every sympathy with the Mover in his political aspirations on the grounds of which he has introduced his Bill. (An Honourable Member: "Many thanks.") All of us who live in India can share the sentiments of the Honourable the Mover of the present Bill. Nobody who is connected with the legal profession can in any way think it advisable that recourse should be had often to special laws or that special laws of that nature which give very extraordinary powers or are ambiguously worded should remain on the Statute-book for long. But here we are faced with one problem only. We are not to deal with the sentiments, we are not concerned with what ought to have been done or what should be done, but here we are faced only with one question—what the Bill is, whether it is desirable to pass clause 2 of the present Bill or not.

We have to judge it only on legal grounds. To my mind, Sir, if clause 2 of the Bill is passed, it will amend the existing law in such a way as to make it more ambiguous than it is at present. It will not remedy the disease which the Honourable Mover desires to cure. What will be the effect of passing clause 2 of the Bill ? It will only take away one of the definitions from clause 15 of the Criminal Law Amendment

Act, and the definition of an " unlawful association " in clause (a) will remain as it is. An " unlawful association " has been defined in clause (b) as follows :

" which has been declared to be unlawful by the Local Government under the powers hereby conferred."

If this definition is removed but section 16 of the Criminal Law Amendment Act is allowed to remain on the Statute book, the effect will be that an " unlawful association " will be defined in two ways, one as it is defined in clause (a) which reads as follows :

" which encourages or aids persons to commit acts of violence or intimidation or of which the members habitually commit such acts."

or—because the word " or " is not sought to be repealed—as defined in section 16 which says :

" If the Local Government is of opinion that any association interferes or has for its object the interference with the administration of the law or with the maintenance of law and order or that it constitutes a danger to the public peace, the Local Government may, by notification in the official Gazette, declare such association to be unlawful."

This means, Sir, that we will have two definitions of " unlawful associations " still in the same Act, namely, as defined in section 15 (2) (a) and as defined in section 16. Repealing the definition in 15 (2) (b), which has to be read with section 16, has got no sense to my mind unless section 16 is also repealed. If Government are of opinion that certain associations are unlawful and declare them as such, and prosecute them, what will be the effect ? Section 17 does not want that any association, which has been declared to be unlawful, should be proved to be such by any evidence. If Government finds that any person belongs to an association which has been declared to be unlawful under section 16, they can at once arrest him and put him on his trial. All that they have got to prove is only that the man belongs to such-and-such an association or is still connected with such-and-such an association, and that man can only plead whether he belongs to that association or not.

The effect of this Act will still remain the same even if this Bill be passed and sub-clause (b) of clause (2) of section 15 be removed. The Honourable and learned Member is so well known for his books on criminal law and is supposed to be an authority on criminal law so far as books are concerned, that I do not know how it escaped his attention that this Bill will only make it the more ambiguous. It will make the law more intricate and more ambiguous, and the Honourable Member did not care to remove the real thing which is so obvious that anybody who reads the Act will understand it. The grievances which the people could have, have been pointed out by the Honourable Lala Lajpat Rai who has made a long speech, but even he did not point out where the remedy lies. The only remedy which he should have suggested was not the removal of sub-clause (b) of clause (2) of section 15, but the amendment of the words " the Local Government is of opinion." These words make everything so ambiguous that even if sub-clause (b) of clause (2) of section 15 were cut out it would not make any difference. I do not see therefore any advisability of passing this Bill. Of course, we deplore that the Legislature in 1908 passed a Bill like this giving extensive powers which they never should have done to the executive by putting in the words " is of opinion ", and the Indian Members at that time did not care to think of this and put in a more suitable phrase. Even on the last debate which took place about two years ago it was pointed out by me that the only remedy which they ought to have put forward was to replace these words by some more suitable words. By not doing so you still leave the same weapon in the hands of the Government and go about the thing in a roundabout manner. Though the Legislature in 1908 did not notice it, is it befitting that a Legislature of this kind, where it is adorned by men like Sir Hari Singh Gour, should pass a Bill which will require further amendment in future Legislatures ? We should have expected that experienced people as they are, they should have brought in a measure which will be good for a long time to come. But here we have a measure which speaks for itself. I am not going to beat about the bush by arguing whether the words are " Governor General in Council " or " Local Government ". This might be a defect in drafting the Bill, this might have been ignored by Sir Hari Singh Gour because he had a copy which contained the words " Governor General in Council ". But what about section 16 ? He read carefully section 16 and he still wants another clause to be added to section 16 as 16-A. But it does not remedy the matter at all. I am not going to comment on that section because we are dealing only with clause 2 at present. When the time comes, I will show that the addition of the new clause does not remedy matters at all. You will only leave an intricacy and the High Courts will be bothered and probably some of those who are in the legal profession may be benefited by an ambiguous provision like this, but the public as a whole will not benefit by it. On this legal ground I oppose the insertion of this clause. I have got several other grounds besides this. I will just give the Honourable Members of this House one instance. We hear the Honourable Dr. Gour say : " We gave a pledge to our constituencies. Here we are to please them ". But, Sir, we are here to see that our country does not get a law which might be more abused than the present law.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta (Bombay City : Non-Muhammadan Urban) : What is your constituency ?

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : The Government.

Mr. Muhammad Yamin Khan : Is it not a fact that in 1921 the Congress did not want any violence ? It wanted everything to go on peacefully. Is it not a fact that most of the people who acted in the name of the Congress and the Khilafat committed violence ? Is it not a fact that those who disagreed with the Congress and the Khilafat were threatened, ridiculed and jeered at simply because they did not agree with the Congress and the Khilafat people ? I will give you the instance of Maulvi Abdul Ahad who died in Delhi and whose corpse was returned from the cemetery. It was only taken back after certain assurances were given by the descendants of the deceased that he shared the same views as the Khilafat people. Don't you think that certain measures are necessary to check people of that kind ? I do not refer to the real persons of the Congress and the Khilafat and the real followers of Mahatma Gandhi, but those who pretended to act in the name of those bodies. Is not a measure necessary to stop people from repeating those incidents, which took place only five or six years ago ? It may be a justification to say that no such thing is happening to-day. But law is not made for a day or two. Unless some time elapses which justifies your saying that these things have stopped and there is no likelihood of those things being repeated, you cannot ask for the removal of this Act from the Statute-book. You ought to bring in an amendment to section 16 instead of removing a clause which says : " has been declared to be unlawful by the Government under the powers hereby conferred."

Now, to limit those powers ought to have been your remedy, and not to repeal this clause and sub-section and retain section 16. Now, Honourable gentlemen opposite on the Swarajist benches may say here that they did not share the views of the United Provinces Ministers at that time, but I might tell the Nationalists that they did share their views. I know personally that in 1921 the head of the Government in the United Provinces, Sir Harcourt Butler, was not willing to have recourse to this Act, but action was taken under this Act only with the full concurrence and full approval of people of very nationalistic views like the Maharaja Sahib of Mahmudabad, Mr. Chintamani and Pandit Jagat Narain, who then formed the majority in the Cabinet in the United Provinces, and all the cases under this Act were tried with the full concurrence and support of these Ministers who, as I said, then formed the majority in the Government. (Cries of ' No, no ' from the Swarajist Benches.)

Lala Lajpat Rai and Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya : That statement is not correct.

Mr. Muhammad Yamin Khan : Nobody can deny it.

My friends Pandit Malaviya and Lala Lajpat Rai may cry " No " now, but these very gentlemen had several times accused the members of the Cabinet in the United Provinces for giving their concurrence to try cases under this Act.

Mr. M. S. Aney (Berar representative) : On a point of order, Sir. Is the Honourable gentleman in order in making a public statement here with regard to the proceedings which were of a confidential nature ? The Honourable Member evidently refers to the meetings of the Executive Council of the United Provinces Government.

Mr. Muhammad Yamin Khan : I make my statement from what appeared in the Press at that time, from the accusations that were levelled at the Ministers in the United Provinces at that time and the reticence which these gentlemen observed, and these things justify me in saying what I say to-day. There is no denying the fact that all these cases were tried under this clause with the full concurrence of the Ministers who formed a majority at that time in the United Provinces Government. But if that is not a fact, then it is an open convention that if a Member of the Government thinks that he cannot agree with the views of the majority of the Government and the Government is bent upon proceeding with a measure which he thinks is injurious to the country, the only course left to him is to resign from the Government. But as these Honourable gentlemen did not choose to do so, the only conclusion that the public can arrive at is that they gave their full concurrence and approval to Government's action.

Mr. N. M. Joshi (Nominated : Labour Interests) : May I ask the Honourable Member a question, Sir ? Does he not know that the

[Mr. N. M. Joshi.]

Ministers are bound by oath not to divulge the proceedings which take place in confidence in the Cabinet ? (Several voices from the Swarajist Benches : " He knows all that.")

Mr. Muhammad Yamin Khan : Sir, I cannot go on replying to all these questions if Honourable Members do not know the ordinary conventions existing in all constitutional Governments. (Ironical cheers from the Swarajist Benches). As I have pointed out, the only course open to the Ministers or members of the Cabinet, if they cannot agree with the views of the Government, is to resign and come out honourably to show that they will have nothing to do with such a Government. As, however, they did not choose to do so, the only inference the outside public could draw was that they were in full agreement with the views held by the Government at that time on this question.

Mr. Rafi Ahmad Kidwai (Lucknow and Fyzabad Divisions : Muhammadan Rural) : May I ask a question, Sir ? Is the Honourable Member sure that the Ministers were consulted in the matter ?

Mr. Muhammad Yamin Khan : I have shown that clause 2, on account of legal difficulties, cannot be retained.

I have shown that politically it is not desirable at present. The challenge has been thrown out to Honourable Members to show that it had ever been abused. Talking of sentiment, what sentiment is there ? (Laughter.) Yes, some Members might please themselves by shouting or by loudly making a demonstration of a kind which befits them only, but they cannot influence the judgment of people who want with cool heads to go into matters (Laughter) which benefit the people. Legislation can never be improved by bluffing or getting emotional or simply by laughing. (Laughter.)

Several Honourable Members : I move that the question be now put.

Mr. T. A. K. Shervani (Cities of the United Provinces : Muhammadan Urban) : Sir, the only question before the House is whether the clause which is sought to be repealed should be retained in the Act or not. There could have been only two justifications, for the retention of the clause, one that there are times when the Government require certain special measures to protect society from certain political organisations. I assure the Honourable the Home Member that so far as that function is concerned, you have tried the measure not only once but several times and it has proved ineffectual. Instead of stopping or suppressing those associations, this clause, Sir, has served as an incentive to violate the Act. It has been tried in the past ; and try it again in future, the result will be the same. Another justification, however, for the retention of this clause in the Act would have been—and I had been anxiously waiting these two years and had been looking to the Government to do it—to make use of this Act in suppressing certain communal organisations. But I am sorry to say that the Government lost that opportunity. For the last two years certain communal associations are playing havoc in the whole country. There is more disorder created by these associations than by any other association which the Government wants to suppress by means of the Act, but Government would not apply this Act, and I do not think Government are in a mood to apply this Act to them in future ; and therefore the Government have got no justification whatsoever for retaining the clause in the Act.

Sir, so far as the misuse of this Act is concerned, at least I can give the House one instance. In 1921 I believe 55 members of the United Provinces Congress Committee were arrested under this Act. I am not certain, but I think that 55 members of the Congress were arrested under this Act. Was there any justification for the Government of the United Provinces to apply the Act and arrest 55 Congress members and to apply this Act to an association like the United Provinces Congress Committee ? (An Honourable Member : Including Pandit Motilal Nehru). Now, Sir, I beg to submit that the Act is ineffectual in suppressing those associations which they want to suppress by it, and the Government do not apply the Act for suppressing those associations which they ought to suppress, therefore there is no justification whatsoever for the retention of this whole Act, still less of this clause.

As regards the arguments advanced by the learned gentleman who preceded me I am sorry to say that, so far as the legal aspect of the question is concerned, I could not follow him, though I tried my level best to do so ; so far as the logic and the argument were concerned, I was unable to appreciate them, and so far as sentiment was concerned, he had none. So, as a matter of fact, there was nothing in the argument which calls for a reply.

Now, as regards the arguments that Government do require some special Act, to meet special circumstances, no doubt certain things do occur in a country which require the help of special laws, but as to that I assure the Government that there is one section which fulfils the function of this Act as well as a hundred others which the Government might have enacted. That section is S.-144 of the Criminal Procedure Code. So long as section 144 is in the Criminal Procedure Code, Government do not require any special law. It is an all-sufficient and all pervading section. It has been used (An Honourable Member : " And abused ") and abused as my Honourable friend says in all sorts of cases and that gives all the powers to the Government which they need ; especially when there is another section also in the same Code, I mean section 108, I do not think Government require any special law to suppress individuals, to suppress associations and to suppress any and every measure which the people think fit to adopt As the time is very short, I will not take up any more time of the House. The whole case which the speakers on the side opposite tried to make out referred to the period before the last two years. There may have been special circumstances then; but the condition in which we are at present, the state of affairs and the conditions which are prevailing in the country to-day are such that they do not require any special law. We are sufficiently cowed down, and therefore, I submit that this is the most fit and proper time for repealing the clause which is sought to be repealed.

(Several Honourable Members moved that the question be put.)

Mr. President : The question is that the question be now put.

The motion was adopted.

Mr. President : The question is :

" That clause 2 do stand part of the Bill."

(A division was called for.)

Mr. President : The bell is not ringing ; the electricity has gone off. I would therefore ask the Whips of the Parties, if they choose, to call their members in.

(After the lapse of the usual interval the question was again put and the Assembly divided :)

The motion was adopted.

Clause 2 was added to the Bill.

Mr. President : The question is :

" That clause 3 do stand part of the Bill."

Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya : Sir, I beg to move :

" That in clause 3 the following amendment be made :

' For the word ' after ', the word ' for ' be substituted '; and ' For the word ' inserted ', the word ' substituted ' be substituted."

That is my first amendment. We are grateful to the Honourable Mr. Wright for having put these amendments in proper form.

Mr. H. Tonkinson : Might I suggest, Sir, that it would be for the convenience of the House if the Honourable Member moves all his amendments together because they will leave one clause which can then be discussed as a whole.

Sir Hari Singh Gour and Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya : We are quite prepared to do that.

Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya : With your leave, Sir, I will do it.

Mr. President : Are they all connected amendments ?

Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya : Yes, Sir

Mr. President : In that case you can move all the amendments together, and I will treat them as one amendment.

Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya : Sir, I propose :

" That in clause 3 of the Bill the following amendment be made, namely :

(i) for the word ' after ' the word ' for ' and for the word ' inserted ' the word ' substituted ' be substituted ;

(ii) for the figures and letter ' 16-A ' the figures ' 16 ' be substituted ;

(iii) the words beginning with ' any person deeming himself ' and ending with ' to be unlawful and ' be omitted, and for the words ' the declaration should never have been made ' the following be substituted, namely, ' the association in respect of which he was convicted was not an unlawful association '."

To make the matter clear, Sir, this is how the section will stand with the amendments which I have suggested :

" For section 16 of the said Act the following section shall be substituted, namely :—

' 16. Any person convicted under the provisions of section 17 may appeal to the High Court on the ground that the association in respect of which he was convicted was not an unlawful association '."

Mr. H. Tonkinson : Sir, in regard to this amendment, I merely wish to point out that if it is carried, it will leave us with a Bill which is entirely different in its effect from the one which my Honourable friend asked for leave to introduce.

Mr. President : If that were so, it was the duty of the Government to object to the moving of these amendments without notice. The very fact that the Government did not do so shows that they regarded them as merely formal and not of substance. The Chair had certainly been all along under the impression that by common consent they were to be treated merely as formal amendments. I am therefore surprised at the line now taken by the Honourable Member.

Mr. H. Tonkinson : Sir, I regret that you should have had cause to object to the action which has been taken in this matter. It was only a few minutes ago that I saw and realised the purport of the amendment that has been moved by the Honourable Pandit. I said, Sir, that the effect of these amendments would be to substitute an entirely different Bill from the Bill which has been before us hitherto. Hitherto my Honourable friend has suggested that he intended by this Bill to give effect to the suggestion which was thrown out by Sir Chiman Lal Setalvad during the discussion of his Bill in 1924. According to that suggestion.....

Mr. President : I should like to hear the Honourable the Home Member on the question, whether, on behalf of the Government, he regards these amendments as merely formal amendments or as amendments of substance which would change the whole character of the Bill. All along the Chair understood that by common consent the amendments were to be treated as of a formal character, and therefore the Government did not make any objection to the moving of them at this stage without notice. Now an important Member, on behalf of the Government, rises in his seat and tells the House that these amendments are not merely formal but are of such a character that, if they are carried, it would leave us with a Bill entirely different in its effect from the original Bill.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Sir, my position in the matter is this : some objection was raised to the attitude of Government with respect to this Bill both by the Honourable the Mover and by the Honourable Lala Lajpat Rai on the ground that we stand on technical objections. I do not take any objection to the Honourable Pandit moving this amendment largely because I do not wish to give any ground for a reproach of that character. I do as a matter of fact think that the amendment does change very materially both the intention and the construction of the Bill that has hitherto been before us. However, I do not propose to stand on the ground of notice, but I shall at a later stage, if necessary, submit for your consideration an objection under Standing Order 49, if it is proposed on this occasion to move any further motion in connection with the Bill.

Mr. President : The Chair regrets the attitude of the Government in this matter. If it was the intention of the Government to object to the further passage of the Bill to-day under Standing Order 49, their clear duty was to object to the moving of these amendments at this stage without notice. If in their judgment these amendments were of substance and not merely of form, they should have asked the Chair to rule them out on the ground of want of notice. The Chair, and I am sure the House, were under the impression that these amendments were to be treated as formal amendments. The Chair is therefore surprised to find that Government had a mental reservation.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett (Leader of the House) : May I say a word, Sir ? Objection was taken by more than one speaker to what was supposed to be the attitude of the Government in not assisting the private Member who had introduced this Bill in getting it drafted into a shape in which it was intelligible. It was said that we were standing on formal objections in not giving that assistance which it was in our power to give from our draftsman. The draftsman immediately approached the Mover and asked him whether it was his desire that amendments that would put the Bill into a shape in which it was in formal order should be given to him in order that he might move them. I understand that the Mover accepted that suggestion and it is in consequence of that that these amendments have been handed to the Honourable Pandit Malaviya and he has moved them. It was explained at an earlier stage that any amendment, in the view of the Government, to the drafting of this Bill was something more than a mere formality, that it was not merely a question of incorrect drafting, but that the form and structure of the Bill—I think those are the words used by the Honourable the Home Member—would require amendment, and it is only by such an alteration, which is more than an alteration of form and becomes an alteration of substance, that the Bill could be put into a shape in which it is technically correct. But, in view of the objection that you have raised, and after this explanation which shows that Government have done nothing more than try to be helpful with their draftsman, in view of your objection to the Government raising an objection under Standing Order 49 to the further passage of this Bill, I am sure that my Honourable friend, the Home Member, will have no objection to not pressing his right to make an objection under that Standing Order.

Mr. President : The Chair is much obliged to the Leader of the House for coming to its rescue in this somewhat difficult situation.

Mr. H. Tonkinson : Sir, as I was observing, my Honourable and learned friend, Sir Hari Singh Gour, has up to the present brought forward this Bill in the view that it gave effect to a suggestion thrown out by Sir Chimanlal Setalvad during the discussion of his Bill of 1924. On that suggestion, Sir, the Local Government would have been allowed to make a declaration. For the purposes of that suggestion, therefore, it was absolutely essential that clause (b) of section 15 of the Act should have been retained.

That clause has already gone. After the Local Government had made this declaration, Sir Chimanlal Setalvad suggested that there should be the possibility of a reference to the High Court in regard to the declaration of a Local Government. That was, I understand, the intention of the Honourable Member in bringing forward this Bill. With the clause as amended by the Honourable Pandit what we shall have will be another section for section 16 of the present Act, and under that section any person convicted under section 17 will be allowed to appeal to the High Court on the ground that the association in respect of which he has been convicted of being a member is not unlawful. That makes the Bill one of an entirely different character from the Bill which was introduced originally. That is the only point I have to submit, Sir.

Mr. President : The question is :

"That in clause 3 of the Criminal Law Amendment Bill the following amendment be made :

(1) For the word 'after' the word 'for' and for the word 'inserted' the word 'substituted' be substituted.

(2) For the figures and letter '16-A.' the figures '16' be substituted.

(3) The words beginning with 'any person deeming himself' and ending with 'to be unlawful and' be omitted, and for the words 'the declaration should never have been made' the following be substituted, namely :

'the association in respect of which he was convicted was not an unlawful association'."

The motion was adopted.

[Mr. President.]

Clause 3, as amended, was added to the Bill.

Clause 4 was added to the Bill.

Clause 1 was added to the Bill.

The title and preamble were added to the Bill.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : Sir, I move that the Bill, as amended, be passed.

Mr. President : Does the Home Member wish to speak on this motion ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : No, Sir, I have no remarks to offer on this motion. I fear I have already detained the House at length.

Mr. President : The question is :

"That the Bill, as amended, be passed."

(A division was called for.)

(When the division bells were rung, it was noticed that they were out of order.)

Mr. President : I hope the Whips of the Parties will take the place of the bell.

(After an interval.)

Mr. President : I think I have given sufficient time for Honourable Members to come in.

The question is :

"That the Bill, as amended, be passed."

The Assembly divided :

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

Wednesday, 24th August, 1927.

The Assembly met in the Assembly Chamber at Eleven of the Clock, Mr. President in the Chair.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

PROSECUTIONS IN ORISSA FOR THE ILLICIT MANUFACTURE OF SALT FOR DOMESTIC USE.

168 Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Is it a fact that sixteen persons of Marichpur, a flood-distressed part of Puri (Orissa) have been fined for illicit manufacture of salt for domestic use ; and for inability to pay the fines, some of the accused are now in jail ?

(b) Are Government aware that in reply to a question in the Bihar and Orissa Legislative Council, on the 21st February last, the Local Government stated that :

" to meet the situation caused by the general rise in prices during the War, the Government of India agreed in 1918 to instructions being given to the excise authorities in the Districts of Cuttack, Balasore, and Puri to ignore cases of the manufacture of salt on a small scale for domestic use. Owing to distress in those districts, the orders remained in force till 1923. They were revived in 1926 with reference to the Puri District only, and the Local Government are consulting the Government of India on the subject of their remaining in force until the next rains, with effect in the three districts of Cuttack, Balasore and Puri " ?

(c) In the face of this declaration, will Government kindly explain why proceedings were instituted in this case, and how much manufactured salt was found in the possession of the accused ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : (a) No. 14 persons of village Narahana were find : one of them in default of fine was imprisoned for 15 days.

(c) The temporary instructions issued in March 1927 by the Local Government to its officers suggesting leniency in the punishment of the offences of illicitly manufacturing salt in the districts of Balasore, Cuttack and Puri apply only to cases in which the offender is a person suffering from distress owing to the floods and the manufacture is on a small scale only for purely domestic consumption These criteria are not satisfied in the present case and there was no necessity for lenient treatment. The offenders belong to the village of Narahana. This village was not affected by floods and the accused were not in a distressed condition and when convicted paid their fines promptly with one exception.

20 offenders were detected : 4 were discharged on account of age, 1 was acquitted and 1 absconded. 14 were convicted and received sentences varying from detention till the rising of the court up to a fine of

Rs. 15. The quantity of salt seized was 1 maund 35 seers, but this is believed to be only a portion of the quantity manufactured.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : In view of the acute distress prevailing in parts of Orissa on account of the floods, do Government consider it desirable to extend this period of grace ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : I have nothing to add to the long answer I have given.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : I am speaking for the future, Sir.

PROVINCIAL SHARE OF THE INCOME-TAX ON COMPANIES OPERATING IN BIHAR AND ORISSA BUT REGISTERED ELSEWHERE.

169. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to the following remark made by the Honourable Maharaja Bahadur Keshav Prasad Singh, Finance Member, in the Bihar and Orissa Legislative Council on the 25th February last :

" the provincial share of the income-tax on companies operating in Bihar and Orissa, but registered elsewhere goes not to us but to the Province of registration. Bengal, of their courtesy allow us 85 per cent. of the Provincial share. None of the other Provinces allow us anything. This is a point which we have often pressed and will continue to press upon the Government of India " ?

(b) Are Government aware that this arrangement operates inequitably for the Province of Bihar and Orissa, and will they kindly state what decision, if any, has been arrived at in this matter ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : (a) The Government of India have now read the statement in the Legislative Council which the Honourable Member has quoted. Since the arrangement between the Governments of Bengal and Bihar and Orissa was arrived at the Government of India have received no further representations on the subject from the Government of Bihar and Orissa.

(b) It is a matter of opinion what basis for the allocation of income-tax with reference to such factors as residence or origin is equitable. The present arrangement is that when a dispute arises between two Provinces in regard to a case of this sort they may refer it to the Government of India for arbitration. The Government are considering the whole question of the assignment of a share of the revenue from Taxes on Income to the Provinces.

AMALGAMATION OF THE ORIYA-SPEAKING TRACTS.

170. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Will Government kindly state what progress, if any, has been made in the scheme for the amalgamation of Oriya-speaking tracts with the Orissa Division ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : The matter is still under the consideration of Government.

RECOMMENDATIONS OF THE INDIAN SANDHURST COMMITTEE.

171. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Do Government propose to give effect to the recommendations of the Indian Sandhurst Committee ? And if so, when ?

Mr. G. M. Young : The attention of the Honourable Member is invited to the reply which I gave to Diwan Chaman Lall's question No. 109.

PERSONNEL OF THE INDIAN DELEGATION TO THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS.

172. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Will Government kindly explain why the personnel of the Indian delegation to the League of Nations has been selected without reference to the Central Legislature ?

Mr. W. T. M. Wright : I have nothing to add to the reply given to question No. 1778 put by Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan on the 11th September 1924, to which the Honourable Member was referred in the reply to part (b) of his question No. 244 on the 31st August 1925

Mr. R. K. Shanmukham Chetty : In choosing the leader of the Indian delegation this year for the League of Nations, did the Government of India give consideration to the opinion given expression to in this House and in the other place that the leader should be an Indian ?

Mr. W. T. M. Wright : Yes, Sir.

Mr. R. K. Shanmukham Chetty : May I know whether Government in their attempt to find a suitable Indian came to the conclusion that they could not find a suitable Indian ?

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : What is the result of that consideration ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : The result of the consideration is the delegation that has been chosen.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : In other words an Indian was not chosen ?

Mr. R. K. Shanmukham Chetty : Was not a suitable Indian available ?

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : May I ask Government whether it is correct, as stated by Mr. Sastri, that Sir Muhammad Shafi on behalf of the Government gave Sir P. C. Sethna to understand in 1924 that an Indian was likely to be appointed leader of the delegation that year ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : I am sure that cannot arise out of this question

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : It arises in this way that Government then promised to give consideration to the views of the Assembly and the other House ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : I do not think it does.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : May I ask whether it is for the Leader of the House to say whether a question arises out of the main question or not ?

Mr. President : The Leader of the House submits it to the Chair.

APPEALS AND APPLICATIONS FOR REVISION FILED BY INCOME-TAX ASSESSEES IN THE VARIOUS PROVINCES.

173. Sir Hari Singh Gour : (1) Will the Government be pleased to lay on the table a comparative statement showing the number of appeals and applications for revision filed by assessees to the Income-tax Officers in the various Provinces and the percentages of appeals and applications admitted and rejected ?

(2) Will the Government be pleased to state the variation in the assessment made in the Central Provinces during the last 3 years ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : (1) and (2). The Honourable Member will find the figures that he requires in the All-India Reports and Returns for the years in question.

REJECTION BY INCOME-TAX OFFICERS OF THE STATEMENTS MADE BY THE ASSESSEES AS TO THEIR INCOMES.

174. Sir Hari Singh Gour : Will the Government be pleased to state in how many cases the Income-tax Officer has rejected the statements made by the assessee as to his income and the amount of the income returned and assessed thereafter ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : The Honourable Member is referred to Return No. VIII in the All-India Income-tax Report for 1925-26 which contains all the information that the Government have on the subject. The concluding part of his Question is not understood

PERCENTAGE OF COST TO THE INCOME-TAX COLLECTED IN THE CENTRAL PROVINCES.

175. Sir Hari Singh Gour : (1) Will the Government be pleased to state the percentage of collecting charges in the Central Provinces upon the income-tax realised ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : The percentage of cost to tax collected in the year 1925-26 in the Central Provinces and Berar was 9.75 per cent.

EMPLOYMENT OF INFORMERS AND SECRET AGENTS BY THE INCOME-TAX DEPARTMENT.

176. Sir Hari Singh Gour : (1) Will the Government be pleased to state whether the Income-tax Department employ any informers and secret agents and whether they have issued any specific instructions to such informers and secret agents to report the income of the people liable to assessment ?

(2) If so, will Government be pleased to state in what percentage of cases the Income-tax Officers in the Central Provinces have assessed persons to income-tax upon this information ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : The Government do not employ such informers or secret agents as are suggested in part (1) of the question. Part (2) does not arise.

ALLEGED EXACTIONS OF INCOME-TAX OFFICERS IN THE CENTRAL PROVINCES.

177. Sir Hari Singh Gour : Are the Government aware that there is a widespread discontent in the Central Provinces on account of the exactions of the Income-tax Officers ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : The Honourable Member has acquainted me with at least one individual case of discontent. Nonetheless I think I am right in replying that the answer is in the negative.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Are Government aware that there is discontent in the Province of Bihar and Orissa also with regard to the exactions of Income-tax Officers ?

REPORT OF THE INDIAN AUXILIARY AND TERRITORIAL FORCES COMMITTEE.

178. Mr. K. C. Roy : Will the Government be pleased to state whether any decision has been reached by the Secretary of State for India on the Shea Report regarding the Auxiliary and Territorial Forces in India, and if the answer is in the affirmative to place a copy of the order on the table of the House ?

Mr. G. M. Young : The Honourable Member is referred to the Resolution published in the Gazette of India on Saturday, the 20th August.

NUMBER OF INDIAN RESIDENTS IN CHINA.

179. Mr. N. C. Kelkar : Will Government state approximately :

(1) the total number of Indian residents at present in the whole of China ?

(2) the total number of Indian residents in Shanghai, Canton and Hong-Kong ?

(3) the total amount of Indian trade with China, both export and import during the year 1926-27 ?

Sir Denys Bray : (1) If reliance can be placed on a rough estimate made a couple of years ago, the total is in the neighbourhood of 5,000.

(2) 1,400 in Shanghai, 90 in Canton, 1,152 in Hongkong

180. Mr. N. C. Kelkar : (a) Are there different scales of pay for the I. T. O.'s, Examiners, Assistant Examiners, Inspectors and Sub-Inspectors of Income-tax in the different Presidencies ?

(b) What is the scale of pay in each Province ?

(c) If there is any difference in pay, what is such difference due to ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : (a) The scales are not identical in all Provinces.

(c) The scales have been fixed at different times with reference to local conditions and to the scales fixed by the different Local Governments for their own establishments.

PAY OF INCOME-TAX OFFICERS, EXAMINERS AND INSPECTORS IN BOMBAY AND THE MOFUSSIL.

181. Mr. N. C. Kelkar : (a) What are the reasons that necessitate a higher pay for I. T. Os., Examiners and Inspectors in Bombay than what the same officers get in the mofussil, apart from the fact that living in Bombay is dear ?

(b) Have the Government considered the question of having one common time scale of pay for all the Examiners and Inspectors, granting compensatory or local allowance to the Bombay officers ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : (a) and (b). The arrangement dates from the time when the Income-tax Department was under the control of the Local Government, and was presumably modelled on the system by which the pay of other establishments under the Local Government was regulated The Government are not prepared to express an opinion as to the suitability of the alternative suggested by the Honourable Member without enquiry but they will examine it. I may however mention that with one exception, Income-tax Officers draw the same rate of pay in Bombay and in the mofussil, the officers in Bombay drawing a compensatory allowance.

SELECTION OF BRAHMINS AND MAHRATTAS FROM THE BOMBAY PRESIDENCY FOR MILITARY TRAINING.

182. Mr. N. C. Kelkar : Will Government be pleased to state :

(a) what is the total strength of the students in the University Training Corps in the Bombay Presidency ? How many of them are Brahmins and how many Mahrattas ? What was the strength in the Indian Defence Force in the same Presidency ? How many of them are Brahmins and how many Mahrattas ?

(b) How many Brahmins and how many Mahrattas were selected during the last five years from the Bombay Presidency for military training, whether at Sandhurst or elsewhere ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) On the 1st July 1927, the Bombay Battalion, University Training Corps, had an actual enrolled strength of 618 out of a sanctioned establishment of 27 officers and 637 other ranks. The Bombay University companies, Indian Branch of the late Indian Defence Force, had an actual enrolled strength in June 1918 of 485 out of a sanctioned establishment of 8 officers and 492 other ranks.

As regards the composition of the University Corps, the Honourable Member is referred to the reply I gave on the 15th March last to starred question No. 964.

(b) Three Mahratta boys have entered the Dehra Dun College during the last five years. One of them went on to Sandhurst. Two Mahratta and two Brahmin boys from the Bombay Presidency, who had not been to Dehra Dun, entered Sandhurst during the same period.

DISBANDMENT OF THE SPECIAL COMPANY OF MAHRATTA BRAHMINS RAISED DURING THE GREAT WAR.

183. *Mr. N. C. Kelkar : (a) Is it a fact that the special Brahmin Company that was established during the Great War, was raised as a permanent measure ? If yes, why is it disbanded ?

(b) What was the opinion submitted by the Adjutant General in 1918 (March-April) about this special Brahmin Company after inspection of the same ? Will Government place the same on the Assembly table ?

(c) Have Government seen the statement in the Ratnagiri District Gazetteer that Mahratta Brahmins were fine soldiers and that there was a Mahratta Brahmin platoon. When was that platoon established ? When was it disbanded and why ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) The Special company of Mahratta Brahmins was not raised as a permanent measure, but as a war measure. It was disbanded at the end of the war.

(b) There is no record of an inspection by the Adjutant General in India in March or April, 1918. Reports about this unit were however received from the local military authorities and are on record

(c) I cannot trace the statement quoted by the Honourable Member. The only Mahratta Brahmin unit that I know of was the company to which I have just referred.

ADMISSION OF MAHARS TO OTHER PLATOONS, CONSEQUENT ON THE DISBANDMENT OF THE MAHAR BATTALION.

184. *Mr. N. C. Kelkar : (a) What was the number of the Mahars in the Mahar Battalion established during the Great War ?

(b) Is it a fact that when the Mahar Battalion was closed, the Mahars were promised posts in other platoons ?

(c) If yes, in which platoons were the Mahars admitted ? What was the number when they were disbanded, and what is the number that was re-admitted ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) The Mahar Battalion was raised in 1917 and disbanded in 1922. The number of Mahars serving in the Battalion on the 1st of January 1918 was 963 and on the 1st of January 1922, 764.

(b) Yes, some posts were made available.

(c) Two platoons of Mahars were allotted as Machine Gun Platoons with British Infantry battalions, but as recruiting proved unsatisfactory, these two platoons had to be filled by other classes. No Mahars have been readmitted

COMMUNAL REPRESENTATION IN THE PUBLIC SERVICES UNDER THE GOVERNMENTS OF MADRAS, BOMBAY AND THE UNITED PROVINCES.

185. *Mr. N. C. Kelkar : Are Government aware that whilst the Bombay and Madras Governments have fixed the percentage according to which different communities are to be admitted in Government service, the United Provinces Government declare such admission in service on a communal basis is against the Queen's proclamation ? Which of the two courses has been approved by the Government of India ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I have ascertained that the Government of the United Provinces have made no such declaration as is suggested. The Government of India have already announced their policy in the matter, which is directed to preventing any undue preponderance of particular communities in the services and establishments under their control.

RATE OF EXCHANGE, AND SALE AND PURCHASE OF GOLD, ETC.

186. Mr. N. C. Kelkar : Will Government lay on the table a statement showing the following for the period of time since the passing of the Currency Act IV of 1927 :

(1) the average rate of exchange in the market,

(2) the amount of gold bullion sold by Government for exchange in England and other gold standard countries, and for other purposes, under section 5 of Act IV of 1927,

(3) the amount of gold purchased by Government under section 5 of Act IV of 1927,

(4) the amount of currency contracted by cancellation of notes or otherwise,

(5) the amount of gold purchased in England by the Secretary of State for India on behalf of the Government of India,

(6) the amount of gold released directly by Government of India on their own account to the Secretary of State for India, or the Bank of England or any other Bank for the State Secretary,

(7) the amount of Council Bills drawn by Secretary of State for India on India ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : (1) The average rate of exchange for telegraphic transfers from Calcutta on London during the period from 1st April 1927 to 31st July 1927 was 1 shilling 57|8 pence per rupee.

(4) The note circulation on the 31st July 1927 was 6,50 lakhs lower than on the 31st March 1927.

(5) 99,394 fine ounces equivalent of £423,000 were purchased for the Gold Standard Reserve.

(7) Nil. But sterling was purchased in India to the extent of £5,268,000 from 1st April 1927 to the 31st July 1927.

TAX ON EUROPEANS AND ASIATICS IN KENYA FOR EDUCATIONAL PURPOSES.

187. Mr. N. C. Kelkar : (a) With reference to my question No. 10 answered on 27th January 1927 during the Delhi Session, has the attention of Government been drawn to the statement of Mr. D. B. Desai of Broach, published in the Times of India, page 10, column 6, dated the 6th April 1927, on the subject of the tax on Europeans and the tax on Indians or Asiatics levied in Kenya ?

(b) Have Government made any representations to the Kenya Government on the subject ? If so, will Government place on the table a copy of the same ? If they have made no representation, do they propose to make one to point out the inequitable method of taxation as between Europeans and Indian residents of Kenya ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : (a) Yes.

(b) The only fresh development brought to light in the communication referred to by the Honourable Member is the acceptance by the Kenya Government of a motion to appoint a committee of the Legislative Council to consider some more equitable method of taxation in connection with the European Education Cess. As the Honourable Member is probably aware, when these Ordinances were being considered in the Kenya Legislative Council, it was explained, on behalf of the Colonial Government, with reference to the Asiatic poll-tax, that, while this would be in force in 1927, it might be modified later by alternative proposals if reasonable ones could be submitted. It is, therefore, open to the Indian Members of the Legislative Council to take steps to submit alternatives in the same manner as their European colleagues have done. The Government of India have made inquiries as to whether any move in this direction by the Indian Members of Council has either already been made or is contemplated. They regret that this correspondence, which is still proceeding, cannot now be made public.

SEGREGATION OF INDIAN RESIDENTS OF MOMBASA.

188. Mr. N. C. Kelkar : (a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to the grievance of segregation of Indian residents of Mombasa, as reported in the Times of India, dated the 8th April, page 10, column 7 ?

(b) Will Government state the full facts about the position as they understand them ?

(c) Have Government received any representation from the East African Indian National Congress on this subject ? If so will Government disclose to this House the reply given to the representation ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : (a) Yes.

(b) The Honourable Member is referred to the reply given by me to part (c) of Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh's question No. 55 on the 22nd August.

(c) A representation which deals with this matter among others was received from the East African Indian National Congress on the 8th August and is under consideration.

RETURN TO INDIA OF DR. AND MRS. TARAKNATH DAS.

189. Mr. N. C. Kelkar : Have the Government of India any charges against Dr. Taraknath Das which may prevent his returning to India ? Are the Government of India prepared to visa his papers to enable him and his wife to visit his relatives in India ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Government will take these questions into consideration in the event of Dr. Taraknath Das applying for facilities to return to India. They have so far received no application of this character.

REDUCTION OF STORES BALANCES (RAILWAYS).

190. *Mr. N. C. Kelkar : With reference to paragraph 44 of the Explanatory Memorandum of the Railway Budget for 1927-28, will Government give details of the reduction of stores balances amounting to Rs. 32 lakhs obtained by miscellaneous adjustments ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The miscellaneous adjustments referred to represent the difference between the balances at the beginning and end of the year of certain heads of accounts which, under our existing system of accounting, are maintained as sub-heads of the General Stores Suspense Account. The details are as follows :

(c)	Workshop Suspense account	12 lakhs.
(d)	Manufacture Suspense account	4 lakhs.

The question whether the existing procedure should be revised will be examined when the recommendations in Sir Arthur Dickinson's Report are considered.

OMISSION OF THE SOR COLLIERY FROM THE STATEMENT OF RAILWAY COLLIERIES ACQUIRED FROM TIME TO TIME.

191. *Mr. N. C. Kelkar : With reference to the statement at page 151 of the Legislative Assembly Debates, Volume IX, showing the railway collieries acquired from time to time with their capital cost up to 31st March 1925, will Government state why the Sor colliery is omitted from the statement ? Have any other collieries been similarly omitted ? What is the original cost of the Sor colliery ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The Sor colliery was omitted as it was never used for the regular supply of coal for Railways.

No other collieries have been similarly omitted.

The original cost of the Sor colliery was about Rs. 20½ lakhs. For full information regarding this colliery I would refer the Honourable Member to the reply given by Mr. Sim to Mr. K. G. Lohokare's question No. 792 on the 15th February 1926.

HAULAGE CHARGES FOR POSTAL VANS.

192. *Mr. N. C. Kelkar : With reference to page 29 of the Railway Administration Report for 1913-14, will Government kindly lay on the table a statement showing the haulage charges for postal vans then in force and the increased haulage charges now in force ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Prior to 1st April 1913 the haulage charges were 18 pies per mile per four-wheeled vehicle on railways of all gauges. On the 1st April 1913 they were raised to 24 pies per mile on broad gauge railways, and they are now 36 pies per mile on broad gauge railways, and 24 pies per mile on metre and other gauge railways.

INTRODUCTION OF ALL-STEEL COACHES ON THE SOUTH INDIAN RAILWAY.

193. *Mr. N. C. Kelkar : Is it a fact that the South Indian Railway Company are averse to the introduction of all-steel coaches on the South Indian Railway ? If so, will Government lay on the table a copy of their objections ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : In 1914 the South Indian Railway obtained one steel coach for experimental purposes at a cost of about Rs. 3,000 in excess of that of a third class coach of normal construction. In 1923, without expressing any definite aversion to all steel coaches in general, and in reply to a request for information on the subject, the Agent informed the Railway Board that the main disadvantages of the steel coach were, first, that the unloaded weight exceeded that of a wooden-body vehicle on a standard underframe by 3 tons, and secondly that especially in areas such as those traversed by the South Indian Railway, where the humidity is high, the steel is subject to corrosion.

COST OF THE ESTABLISHMENT OF THE MINING ENGINEER (RAILWAYS).

194. *Mr. N. C. Kelkar : With reference to page 6 of the proceedings of the Standing Finance Committee for Railways, Volume II, No. 6, will Government state whether the question of the distribution or the cost of the establishment of the Mining Engineer has been discussed with Sir Arthur Dickinson; and if so, what is the decision arrived at ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The matter was mentioned to Sir Arthur Dickinson at an informal discussion and in the official terms of reference he has been asked to report and make recommendations on the system of accounting for the expenditure and outturn of railway collieries with detailed proposals for the pricing of their output Government do not propose to take any action in the matter until Sir Arthur Dickinson's report is received.

REPORTS OF THE COMMITTEE APPOINTED TO INQUIRE INTO THE WORKING OF THE STAFF SELECTION BOARD.

195. *Mr. N. C. Kelkar : Will Government kindly place in the Library of the Assembly a copy of the Report of the Staff Selection Board Committee ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Copies of the preliminary and final reports of the Staff Selection Board Committee of 1922-23, to which I assume that the Honourable Member refers, have been placed in the Library.

COST OF ALTERING THE EXISTING FIXED STRUCTURES ON THE 5'—6" GAUGE RAILWAYS.

196. *Mr. N. C. Kelkar : With reference to paragraph 68 of the Railway Administration Report for 1922-23, will Government kindly state whether the Railway Board have yet completed the investigation into the cost of altering the existing fixed structures on the 5'—6" gauge railways, so as to permit of the use of engines and rolling stock with increased width and height ; and if so what is the total cost of the alterations and what is the plan adopted for carrying them out ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The investigation is by no means completed. It is first of all necessary to decide the design, and particularly the width and height of rolling stock which it would be economical to adopt for future use, and the Railway Board are at present engaged on this problem. Until it has been settled it is impossible to say what alterations will be necessary to permanent structures, more especially platforms, on the various Railways, or to give any estimate of the cost of such alterations which would have the slightest pretension to accuracy. The cost of necessary alterations will of course be a most material factor in deciding whether to introduce new designs of rolling stock. If the Honourable Member desires more detailed information on the subject, which it is impossible to give within the limits of a reply to a question, I shall be very glad to supply it to him if he will see me in my office.

ABOLITION OF THE PROVINCIAL SERVICES ON RAILWAYS.

197. Mr. N. C. Kelkar : With reference to the answer given on 8th March 1926, to starred question No. 1097, will Government kindly state what decision has been arrived at on the question of the abolition of the provincial services on Railways ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The matter is still under consideration. As it involves some intricate questions of reorganisation of the railway services, it is likely to take a considerable time to settle.

SLEEPING ACCOMMODATION FOR INTERMEDIATE AND THIRD CLASS PASSENGERS ON RAILWAYS.

198. Mr. N. C. Kelkar : With reference to the statement occurring in the answer given on 27th January 1927 to starred question No. 6, that "seating accommodation is provided for intermediate and third class passengers, while sleeping accommodation is provided for first and second class", will Government state the ground for this differentiation ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The intermediate and third class fares charged would not cover the cost of lying down accommodation.

RESERVATION OF FIRST AND SECOND CLASS COMPARTMENTS FROM HOWRAH TO STATIONS ON THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.

199. Mr. N. C. Kelkar : With reference to the answer given on 27th January to starred question No. 5, relating to the experiment of reservation from Howrah to stations on the East Indian Railway of first and second class compartments on payment of one fare less than the marked sleeping capacity, have Government obtained from the Agent, East Indian Railway, any report showing whether this experiment has succeeded in increasing the railway earnings; and if so, will they lay a copy of it on the table ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : A report from the East Indian Railway received in August last year showed that the average number of reservations per mensem had been as follows :

First class	3
Second class	12

No further report has been received and, as the matter is within the competence of the Agent, no further report is being called for.

EDUCATIONAL FACILITIES FOR THE CHILDREN OF RAILWAY EMPLOYEES.

200. *Mr. N. C. Kelkar : With reference to the answer given on 28th March 1927 to starred question No. 1273, relating to the deputation of Mr. C. E. W. Jones, C.I.E., of the Indian Educational Service, will Government kindly state what efforts, if any, were made to obtain a loan of the services of an Indian for the investigation of the question of educational facilities for the children of railway employees ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The Railway Board asked the Educational Commissioner to suggest the name of a suitable officer, and on his advice asked the Government of the Central Provinces for Mr. Jones' services. No racial considerations arose.

SURPLUS LOCOMOTIVES ON THE NORTH WESTERN RAILWAY AND OTHER RAILWAYS.

201. *Mr. N. C. Kelkar : With reference to pages 2912-3 of the Legislative Assembly Debates, Vol. IX, will Government :

(a) indicate the extent to which the North Western Railway is still overstocked in respect of locomotives; and

(b) state what other railways have been found to have excess of locomotives owing to improved methods of working ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) The stock of locomotives on the North-Western Railway at the end of June 1927 was, according to the latest information in the possession of Government, 1,345 ; while the latest examination by the Railway Board made about a month ago, I think, Sir, shows that 1,328 locomotives should probably be sufficient for the traffic which, on present indications, may be expected in 1928-29. These figures show that the Railway is no longer overstocked, if it is overstocked at all.

(b) Judged by the latest figures—those for May 1927—no Railways are, according to the criteria imposed by the Railway Board, overstocked with locomotives for the haulage of the present volume of traffic ; but to prevent any future misunderstanding I should like to explain the position on the Great Indian Peninsula Railway. On this Railway the improvement in methods of working has been very marked, and an extension of electrification is proceeding. As a result it is hoped that it will be possible to scrap this year, and next, between 90 and 100 locomotives of obsolete types not suitable for conversion to superheat, which would otherwise have to be replaced. I should further explain that it is never possible to place a precise figure on the number of locomotives required by a railway on any specific date ; the requirements depend on a number of constantly varying factors, of which the two most important are the possibility of improved methods of working, leading to a smaller number of locomotives being required for a similar volume of traffic, and the possibility of a development of traffic leading to a growth of locomotive requirements. Consequently it should not be assumed that because there is no evidence that the stock of locomotives is at present in excess of the requirements, excesses will not on occasion arise from the operation of the causes I have mentioned, enabling railways to scrap without replacement locomotives which would otherwise have to be replaced. For the same reasons during the slack season, when experience shows that the volume of traffic in India may be as much as 30 or 40 per cent. below that of the busy season, there is likely to be an excess of tractive power on most of the Indian Railways.

STIPULATION IN RAILWAY CONTRACTS GIVEN TO FIRMS AS REGARDS THE EMPLOYMENT OF INDIANS ON THE WORKS IN QUESTION.

202. *Mr. N. C. Kelkar : Will Government state whether in the contracts given to firms for important railway works any stipulation is made as regards the employment of Indians on the works in question ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The answer is in the negative.

CONSTRUCTION OF CHEAPER AGRICULTURAL LINES OF RAILWAY.

203. *Mr. N. C. Kelkar : With reference to the construction of cheaper agricultural lines of railway, will Government state the normal life fixed for the different classes of wasting assets for the purpose of ascertaining the payments to be made into the Depreciation Fund ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The Honourable Member will find the information that he requires in Appendix D to the Report by the Railway Board on Indian Railways for 1924-25, Volume I, a copy of which is in the Library.

NAMES OF FIRMS ENTRUSTED WITH IMPORTANT RAILWAY WORKS.

204. *Mr. N. C. Kelkar : With reference to paragraph 11 of the speech of the Railway Member introducing the Railway Budget for 1927-28, will Government lay on the table a statement showing the names of the firms of contractors entrusted with important railway works, the description of the works so entrusted and the works for which tenders were called for ?

NUMBER OF PASSENGERS DETECTED TRAVELLING WITHOUT TICKETS ON RAILWAYS DURING 1925-26.

205. *Mr. N. C. Kelkar : Will Government lay on the table a statement showing by classes (first, second, intermediate and third) the number of passengers detected travelling without tickets and the amounts collected from them during the year 1925-26 ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Information has been called for from the Railways, and a statement will be furnished to the Honourable Member when it is received.

ALLOCATION OF EXPENDITURE BETWEEN PASSENGER AND GOODS WORKING.

206. *Mr. N. C. Kelkar : With reference to the answer given on 27th January 1927 to starred question No. 8, will Government state whether the question of allocation of expenditure between passenger and goods working has since been looked into ; and, if so, what is the decision arrived at ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : We have just received the report of the officer deputed to examine American methods, and shall look into the question as quickly as possible as soon as the report is ready in print.

CATERING BY MESSRS. BRANDON AND COMPANY ON THE GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY.

207. *Mr. N. C. Kelkar : (a) Is it a fact that Brandon and Company is in charge of about twenty refreshment rooms on different railway stations on the Great Indian Peninsula Railway, catering for both European and Indian customers ?

(b) What is the period during which Brandon and Company has been thus favoured with their choice by the Great Indian Peninsula Railway ?

(c) Is it a fact that Brandon and Company are given a monopoly of dining cars and ice and aerated waters on the whole of the Great Indian Peninsula Railway line, and, if so, for how many years ?

(d) What are the terms and conditions on which this allotment of refreshment rooms and the grant of monopoly of dining cars, etc., is made to this Company ?

RULES REGARDING CATERING ON RAILWAYS.

208. *Mr. N. C. Kelkar : (a) Is it a fact that in 1924-25, new rules were enacted, providing that not more than one refreshment stall should be given to any single contractor ?

(b) Will Government state whether these rules cover the case of Brandon & Co., or whether it is governed by any other set of rules ? If so, will Government place a copy of those rules on the table ?

CATERING ARRANGEMENTS ON THE GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY.

209 *Mr. N. C. Kelkar : (a) Is it a fact that it is the intention of the railway companies to give Hindu refreshment stalls to Hindus and Muhammadan stalls to Muhammadan contractors ?

(b) Is it a fact that the refreshment rooms at Dhond, Kurudwadi and Ahmednagar, intended to cater for Hindus as well as Muhammadans, are given to a Parsee contractor ? Will Government state whether any applications from local Hindu or Muhammadan contractors were received offering to take up these stalls ?

(c) Will Government state the number of old contractors who have been allowed to continue their stalls and the number of new contractors who have displaced old ones on the Great Indian Peninsula Railway ?

(d) Is it a fact that some of the new contractors have been fined during the last year or two owing to their inefficiency ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : With your permission, Sir, I should like to reply to questions Nos. 207 to 209 together. I would refer the Honourable Member to the replies given to the questions asked by him on the 3rd February 1925 and by the late Dr. Lohokare on the 19th August 1926. Government have no information on the subject which is one which they leave to Agents to deal with. But if there is any ground for thinking that present arrangements are unsatisfactory, the matter is one which the Local Advisory Committee might well ask the Agent to discuss with them. It was, I understand, discussed with them when new rules were framed rather over two years ago.

SUPPLY OF RAW HIDES TO THE CAWNPORE HARNESS FACTORY.

210. Mr. T. A. K. Shervani : 1. Is it a fact that in previous years the raw hides in the Cawnpore Harness Factory used to be supplied by means of lowest tenders on lime weights rates ?

2. Will the Government be pleased to state if this system is abolished from the last two years ?

3. If so, (a) Why ?

(c) On what terms ?

and (e) For what period ?

4. Will the Government be pleased to state if the supply of hides under the new system guarantees good quality and weight and is in accordance with the schedule, and are the hides supplied at the risk of the Harness Factory ?

5. Do the Government intend to stick to the new system after the expiry of the term or to revert to the old system ?

6. If the answer to question No. 5 is in the affirmative, will the Government be pleased to lay all the papers and reports concerning the matter on the table to enable the House to appreciate the advantages of the new system in comparison with the old one ?

7. Is it a fact that the Government have entered into an agreement with the British India Corporation, Ltd, to buy through one Mr. Corbett on a commission basis, at the open market rate with all the risk of lime rejections and market fluctuations ?

8. Is it not a fact that under the new system full scheduled quantity has never been delivered ?

Mr. G. M. Young : Parts 1—7. I have nothing to add to the answer which I gave on the 26th March to the Honourable Member's starred question No. 1226, except that the Audit Report on the accounts for the year 1926-27 shows the results of the joint purchase system to be satisfactory. The actual cost of hides to Government is less than that paid under the old tender system.

Part 8. The answer is in the negative.

3. Are Government aware of the memorials submitted by the agriculturists as also of the deputation to the Local Government led by the Members of the Madras Legislative Council representing the district of North Arcot ?

4. Will the Government be pleased to state what redress has been accorded to the agriculturists who have been expressing their grievances?

5. Is it a fact that now proceedings under the Land Acquisition Act have been commenced to acquire a piece of zemindari land for the pumping station without heeding the complaints of the zemindari ryots ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (1) Yes.

(2) & (3). Yes.

(4) A number of sites were investigated in consultation with the Public Works and revenue authorities. The site finally chosen has been carefully selected and it is considered that it will not affect agricultural interests.

(5) Land acquisition proceedings have commenced after carefully considering the objections which were known to have been made.

213. Mr. K. C. Neogy : (a) Will Government be pleased to state if a post of Junior Inspector of Mines was advertised in this country last year ?

(b) If so, how were the applications dealt with and the appointment eventually made ?

(c) Is it a fact that a British candidate who had no previous experience of Indian mines was recruited in England for the post ?

The vacancy was also advertised in England by the High Commissioner for India and the applications received there were considered by a Selection Committee under the presidency of the High Commissioner. One of the candidates recommended by the Selection Committee in England was appointed.

(c) Yes.

(d) It is not the function of the Public Service Commission to interview candidates for a post which is to be filled by selection in England. The candidates were interviewed by the Committee appointed by the High Commissioner, which included the Chief Inspector of Mines.

(e) 30 persons, of whom about two-thirds were Indians applied in India. Five candidates who were considered by the Public Service Commission as likely to be suitable and who were all Indians, were interviewed by the Commission. The candidates were rejected because the Commission considered that none of them was suitable for appointment.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I ask if the Public Service Commission has a majority of Europeans as members ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : The Honourable Member knows full well what the constitution of the Public Service Commission is.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Has the Honourable Member satisfied himself that the standard of qualification which was laid down by the Selection Committee in England was the same as that laid down by the Public Service Commission ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : The standard of qualification was the same, Sir.

214. Mr. K. C. Neogy : (a) Is it a fact a reduction of as. 4-6 per ton was effected in June this year in the terminal charge levied on all railway consignments of coke and patent fuel arriving in Calcutta stations ?

(b) Is it a fact that an additional terminal of as. 4-6 per ton on coke and patent fuel traffic arriving in Calcutta, over and above the terminals which all coal traffic is generally subject to, have been in force for a number of years ?

(c) If the reply to (b) be in the affirmative, will Government state when this additional terminal was first imposed and with what object in view ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) and (b). Yes.

(c) I would refer the Honourable Member to the reply given to question No. 172 asked by Kumar Ganganand Sinha in this Assembly on the 1st February 1927.

The Howrah Bridge toll was imposed under the Howrah Bridge Act of 1871 which came into force on the 5th July 1871.

BALANCE SHEETS OF RAILWAY-OWNED COLLIERIES, ETC.

215. Mr. K. C. Neogy : (a) When are the balance sheets of railway-owned collieries expected to be prepared on commercial principles ?

(b) Will Government be pleased to lay on the table a chemical analysis of the average sample of coal mines in various railway collieries developed since 1919 ?

(c) Will Government be pleased to furnish a statement showing the rates at which surface rent and royalty are paid on account of the railway collieries opened since 1919, and the names of the parties to whom such rent and royalty are payable, stating in the latter case the exact nature of interest of the parties in their respective land or minerals ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) The form of accounts to be adopted for railway-owned collieries was discussed with Sir Arthur Dickinson and will be settled on receipt of his report. I hope it will be possible to introduce any changes needed by the beginning of next financial year.

216. Mr. K. C. Neogy : Did Government receive from the Indian Mining Federation of Calcutta a representation outlining a scheme for popularising the use of coal as a domestic fuel ? If so, will Government state what action they propose to take on the proposal ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : Yes. The proposal is under consideration.

REDUCTION OF RAILWAY FREIGHT ON (1) COKE AND PATENT COAL AND (2) COAL.

217. Mr. K. C. Neogy : Have Government under their consideration further reduction of railway freight on (1) coke and patent coal and (2) coal ? Have Government received a representation from the Bombay Millowners' Association on the subject ? If so, will the Government be pleased to indicate generally the lines and extent of the reduction now being considered ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Government are not at present considering any further reduction of railway freight on coal. The question of a reduction of railway freight on coke is under consideration. A representation was received from the Bombay Millowners' Association on the subject of reduction of railway freights on coal to Bombay and they were informed that no further reductions could at present be made.

COAL PURCHASE POLICY OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

218. *Mr. K. C. Neogy : Did Government receive a representation from the Indian Mining Federation of Calcutta suggesting the appointment of a Committee including the representatives of the Legislature and the coal trade to formulate, among other things, recommendations bearing on the coal purchase policy of the Government ? If so, what action do Government propose to take on the representation ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : Yes.

The Government do not propose to appoint a Committee of the composition suggested by the Indian Mining Federation to formulate their coal purchase policy to be adopted by Government, but the policy is under the consideration of the Government.

220. *Mr. K. C. Neogy : Will Government be pleased to state how many coal mines were closed in each year from 1924 to 1926 and from January 1927 to June 1927 ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : I lay on the table a statement showing the number of coal mines closed, the numbers opened or re-opened and the net reduction in each period.

MANAGEMENT OF THE WESTERN HOSTEL, NEW DELHI.

221. Mr. Harchandrai Vishindas : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state what action, if any, they propose to take for the future management of the Western Hostel, Raisina ?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to state whether they have any intention of selling or transferring this property for purposes other than its use by the Members of the Central Legislature ?

(c) Will the Government be pleased to state whether they have considered the advisability of handing over management of the hostel to the House Committee of the Legislature whose appointment was foreshadowed by the Honourable the President of the Legislative Assembly ?

(d) Will Government consider the advisability of appointing a Committee to go into the whole question of residence and accommodation for Members including the use of the Western Hostel ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) For the forthcoming season it is proposed to continue the same arrangements as were adopted for the 1927 season.

(b) Government have no intention at present of selling or transferring the property, but they are investigating the possibilities of so doing, as the establishment of a hotel in New Delhi is one of considerable importance.

(c) The answer is in the negative.

(d) Government would welcome the appointment of a Committee for the purpose, if this is the wish of the Members of the Legislature. As a matter of fact, I have already tabled a Resolution in regard to a Committee.

APPOINTMENT OF RETIRED GOVERNMENT SERVANTS ON THE ASSAM BENGAL RAILWAY.

222. *Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim : Will the Government in the Department of Railways be pleased to state whether the Assam Bengal Railway has the absolute monopoly of appointing retired servants of Government in filling up vacancies, which require technical skill and knowledge ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : There are no restrictions on the discretion of the authorities of the Assam Bengal Railway in this matter.

GOVERNMENT EXAMINERS OF ACCOUNTS ON THE ASSAM BENGAL RAILWAY.

223. *Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim : Will the Government be pleased to state who is responsible for the appointment of the Examiners of Accounts in the various railway systems in India ? Who is the present incumbent at Chittagong ? Will he have a chance of stepping into the services of the Assam Bengal Railway Company after he reaches his 60th year, and exhausts all extensions as a Government servant like Babu J. R Guha, Assistant Auditor ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : The postings of Government Examiners of Accounts who are members of the Indian Audit and Accounts Service are made by the Auditor General. The Accountant General, Railways, is responsible for the posting of Assistant Audit Officers as Government Examiners. The post of Examiner at Chittagong is held by Mr. P. C. Nandi. The appointments in the office of Chief Auditor, Assam Bengal Railway, are, as on other Company-worked lines, made by the Home Board of the Company and not by Government. With regard to Rai Sahib J. R. Guha, I may point out that he has not yet reached his 55th year.

APPOINTMENT OF MUSSLAMANS AS HOSPITAL ASSISTANTS, COMPOUNDERS AND SANITARY INSPECTORS ON THE ASSAM BENGAL RAILWAY.

224. *Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim : Will the Government be pleased to state what are the reasons for not appointing any hospital assistants, compounders and Sanitary Inspectors by the Assam Bengal Railway Company from the ranks of Mussalmans ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : There are no reasons why Mussalmans should not be appointed to the posts mentioned, provided they have the necessary qualifications.

D.	.. .. ..	Rs. 53—3—74
E.	.. .. ..	Rs. 76—4—100

Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim : May I inquire whether those scales have any similarity to the scales fixed by the State-managed Railways ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I will obtain the information for the Honourable Member. I am afraid I have not got it here.

METHOD OF RECRUITMENT OF ASSISTANT TRAFFIC SUPERINTENDENTS ON THE ASSAM BENGAL RAILWAY.

226. Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim : How do the Assam Bengal Railway recruits their Assistant Traffic Superintendents ? How many are they now ? What are their qualifications ? How many of them have been appointed by this Company from the ranks of Chief Clerks, and have they been required to pass any examinations like others appointed from outside ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Assistant Traffic Superintendents have hitherto been recruited by selection. There are 7 now. They have all passed the necessary examinations in traffic working except one or two who by reason of their long service in the subordinate grade have qualified themselves by practical experience. Two have been promoted from the rank of Chief Clerks, and they have not been required to pass any examinations for the reason I have explained.

RECRUITMENT OF APPRENTICE MECHANICS ON THE ASSAM BENGAL RAILWAY.

227. Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim : Will the Member in charge of Railways be pleased to state :

(b) What is the present number of mechanical apprentices ? How many of them are Mussalmans ? Is there any provision for reservation of posts for qualified Moslem candidates ?

(c) What remuneration is paid to apprentice mechanics ? Is it a fact that the apprentices are treated like ordinary labourers and are paid for the hours they work in the workshop and are not paid anything for Sundays and other public holidays ?

(e) Is it a fact that there is no separate Shop Instructor for the apprentices ? Do the Government propose to improve the present arrangements made by the Assam Bengal Railway for training the mechanical apprentices ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) A copy of the rules will be supplied to the Honourable Member.

(b) The present number of mechanical apprentices is 35, of which 7 are Mussalmans. No posts are reserved for Muslim candidates. Apprentices are engaged on the results of a competitive examination.

(c) The rates of remuneration range between 8 annas per day for the first year to Rs. 1-4 per day for the 5th year of training.

Payment is made only for the days the apprentices work.

(d) I place on the table a statement showing the rates of remuneration of mechanical apprentices on State-worked Railways.

(e) There are 3 Instructors for the apprentices. Government have no reason to believe that the arrangements for training the apprentices are unsatisfactory.

Statement showing the rates of remuneration of mechanical apprentices on State-worked Railways.

The rates of remuneration on the East Indian Railway range between Rs. 10 per month for the first year to Rs. 30 in the 5th year, and on the Eastern Bengal Railway between Rs. 15 per month in the first year to Rs. 40 in the 6th year. Free board (or an allowance in lieu) is allowed to the apprentices on these Railways. NUMBER OF MUHAMMADANS AND NON-MUHAMMADANS EMPLOYED ON THE GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY.

228. Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : (a) Will the Government be pleased to say how many Muhammadans and non-Muhammadans are serving in the Great Indian Peninsula Railway in different grades and establishments both in the higher and lower appointments ?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to say what is the proportion of appointments in different establishments within the last three years ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I would refer the Honourable Member to the information contained in the following issues of the Report by the Railway Board on Indian Railways :

1924-25, Volume I, Appendix G.

1925-26, Volume I, Appendix F.

1924-25, Volume II, Appendix C.

1925-26, Volume II, Appendix C.

Similar information will be published for 1926-27.

NUMBER OF MUHAMMADANS DISMISSED SINCE THE AMALGAMATION OF THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY PORTION (JUBBULPORE TO ALLAHABAD) WITH THE GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY.

229. Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : Will the Government be pleased to say how many Muhammadans have been dismissed since the amalgamation of the East Indian Railway portion (Jubbulpore to Allahabad) with reference to the past preceding three years and in proportion to other Indians for the same period ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I presume the Honourable Member refers to discharges. If so, the figures which he wants are not available and could only be obtained, if at all, by a laborious enquiry which Government do not consider it desirable to undertake.

EMPLOYMENT OF MUHAMMADANS ON THE GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY.

230. Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : Will the Government say what measures have been taken and methods adopted to have a fair proportion of Muhammadans on the Great Indian Peninsula Railway, and if no such steps have been taken, do Government propose to take some steps towards this direction as has been done in other Railways ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The policy of Government in respect of the prevention of the preponderance of any particular community in the Railway Services has been communicated to all Railways, including the Great Indian Peninsula Railway.

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : Will the Government be pleased to enquire what effect has been given by the different Railways to the directions issued by the Government in this connection ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I have no reason to believe that they are not following our policy.

DISCHARGE OF ABDUL MAJID, GOODS CLERK, BY THE GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY.

231. Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : (a) Will the Government be pleased to give reasons for which the Goods Clerk Abdul Majid, Great Indian Peninsula Railway, was discharged from service in August 1926 by the Chief Traffic Manager, Bombay ?

(b) Will the Government further state the charges brought against him, and if there exist no charges, what steps have been taken by the Agent on receipt of notice to the Secretary of State for India in Council and by the Secretary of the Board on receipt of the representation from him in March 1927 ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Government have no information

(b) A representation was received from Abdul Majid by the Railway Board which was not entertained as under the conditions of his service he had no right of appeal to the Railway Board against his discharge.

RULES OF THE GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY REGULATING THE APPEALS OF DISCHARGED HANDS.

232. Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : Will the Government be pleased to lay on the table the rules, if any, of the Railway, which prohibit interviews of subordinates by the Chief Traffic Manager and which prohibit the discharged hands from appealing to represent their cases to the authorities ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : There are no such rules.

DEDUCTION OF WAGES OF RAILWAY EMPLOYEES.

233. *Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : Will the Government be pleased to say if there are any rules of the Railway which allow the authorities to deduct well earned wages of subordinates without intimating the fact to the person concerned ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : There is no such rule.

AWARD OF DOUBLE PUNISHMENTS TO RAILWAY EMPLOYEES.

234. *Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : Will the Government be pleased to say if there are such rules by which a railway subordinate is doubly punished for the same clerical error at different times by different officers ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : There is no such rule.

RE-EMPLOYMENT OF DISCHARGED RAILWAY EMPLOYEES.

235. *Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : Will the Government be pleased to say how many discharged hands are being re-employed during the last 10 years, and what were the charges against them justifying dismissal and the reasons for taking them back in service ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Government have no information, and regret that they cannot offer to undertake to make the laborious and expensive enquiries which would be necessary to obtain it.

AGREEMENTS WITH RAILWAY SERVANTS ON THE GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY.

236. *Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : Will the Government be pleased to say if there was any necessity to have railway servants bound over by agreements since the Great Indian Peninsula Railway became a State Railway ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : All Railways' employees have to execute agreements on appointment, and when the old Great Indian Peninsula Railway staff was taken over by the State, it was necessary that they should enter into agreements with the State.

DISMISSAL OF MR. B. L. DE ROZARIO, LATE DEPÔT STORE KEEPER, ALAMBAGH STORES DEPARTMENT.

237. *Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : (a) Under what circumstances was Mr. B. L. De Rozario, late Depôt Store Keeper, Alambagh Stores Department, dismissed from his service ?

(b) Was the said Mr. De Rozario arrested by the police and after an investigation discharged by an order of the Special Magistrate of Lucknow on the 28th May 1925 ?

(c) Is it a fact that Mr. Lightowler was in direct charge of the Charbagh Stores Department in March 1922, and Mr. Ireland, Sub-Store Keeper, was in charge of the Metal Godown in 1922 and it was he who dealt with the delivery orders and had the handling, weighing and loading of all the brass material in his direct charge ?

(d) Were any of the two to book in connection with the ment fraud cases ?

(e) Is it a fact that under orders G.|8, dated 16th January 1924, and G.|39, dated 15th March 1924, and Order No 19-G dated 27th March 1924 the Depôt Store Keeper had absolutely nothing to do with the delivery of brass material, not even with the weighment of inward and outward wagons in March 1922 ; if so, why was Mr. B. L. De Rozario considered responsible for anything in connection with the Store Department fraud cases ?

(f) Was Mr. De Rozario given any suspension allowance, bonus and gratuity ; if not, why not ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) and (b). In the course of his enquiry in connection with the Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway stores frauds, the special police investigating officer secured proof that Mr. Rozario had been implicated in certain fraudulent transactions. Mr. Rozario was arrested on the 19th September 1924 on a charge of criminal breach of trust. Eventually it was decided to deal with Mr. Rozario departmentally and consequently his bail bonds were cancelled by the Special Magistrate, Lucknow, on the 28th of May 1925. Mr. Rozario was, therefore, called upon to show cause why he should not be dismissed and, as he was unable to give satisfactory replies to the charges framed against him, his services were dispensed with.

(c) Mr. Lightowler was officiating District Controller of Stores, District II, Alambagh, and had control over the Charbagh Stores Department, which was under the direct charge of Mr. Rozario. Mr. Ireland was Sub-Storekeeper under Mr. Rozario.

(d) Mr. Lightowler was given a severe warning for lack of care, intelligence and energy in the performance of his duties. Mr. Ireland was dismissed.

(e) The orders referred to were not in force at the time the frauds, in which Mr. Rozario was implicated, were committed.

(f) Mr. Rozario received suspension pay for the full period he was under suspension, but, in view of the circumstances in which he was dismissed, he was not eligible for bonus or gratuity.

SENIOR COMMERCIAL INSPECTOR, GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY.

238. Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : Will the Government be pleased to state from what date the post of Chief Commercial Inspector was created ? Was there such a post ever in existence in the Great Indian Peninsula or any other Railway ? What are the qualifications of the present incumbent ? What was his designation and pay before and after joining the present post ? Will there be a saving of seven thousand rupees by abolishing the post ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Presumably the Honourable Member refers to the post of Senior Commercial Inspector as there is no post of Chief Commercial Inspector on the Great Indian Peninsula Railway.

The post was created in 1925. Prior to that date, it existed under a different designation.

The present incumbent of the post has the necessary qualifications to discharge his duties efficiently. He has risen from the post of a guard through the ranks of a station master and traffic inspector.

Prior to his appointment as Senior Commercial Inspector he was a Divisional Transportation Inspector on Rs. 500 per mensem and he has since officiated as Assistant Goods Superintendent, Wadi Bunder. His pay as Senior Commercial Inspector is the same as he was drawing as Divisional Transportation Inspector.

There would be no saving by abolishing the post because, if the work that the incumbent of the post performs was left undone, the Railway would lose considerably more than the saving in pay thus effected.

CHIEF GOODS INSPECTORS, GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY.

239. Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : Will the Government be pleased to state if there was any such post as the Chief Goods Inspector on the Great Indian Peninsula Railway or in any other Railways ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : There are two posts of Chief Goods Inspectors on the Great Indian Peninsula Railway on Rs. 450—25—500 per mensem each.

The designation is not used on other Railways, but they have Goods Supervisors or Goods Inspectors.

EMPLOYMENT OF A-GRADE STATION MASTERS AT SUTNA AND KATNI ON THE GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY.

240. Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : Will the Government be pleased to say what is the necessity of having highly paid (A) grade station masters, who have no experience of goods and coaching matters, and of less qualifications at less important stations (such as Sutna and Katni) where sub-assistant station masters and yard inspectors have already been provided ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : It is within the competence of the Agent to post Station Masters of the various grades to the different stations according to requirements, and Government do not interfere in such matters.

THE Rangila Rasul CASE.

241. Mr. Abdul Haye : 1. Are the Government aware that in January last one Raj Pal of Lahore was convicted under section 153-A, Indian Penal Code, for having published a highly offensive and scurrilous pamphlet called Rangila Rasul against the Prophet of Islam and that his appeal was dismissed by the Sessions Judge, Lahore ?

2. Is it a fact that when the case came before the Lahore High Court on the revision side, Mr. Justice Dalip Singh, while agreeing fully with the concurrent finding of the two lower courts that the pamphlet in question was a scurrilous satire on the founder of the Muslim religion, acquitted the accused on the ground that such writings did not fall within the purview of section 153-A of the Indian Penal Code, and that there was no other provision of law under which Raj Pal could be convicted ?

3. Since the enactment of section 153-A of the Indian Penal Code have there been any previous occasions on which this defect in the existing law was pointed out by any of the High Courts in India ?

4. If the answer to part 3 be in the affirmative, why were no steps taken by the Government to amend the law ?

5. Are the Government aware that since the acquittal of Raj Pal there have been repeated scurrilous attacks against the Prophet of Islam by the Hindu Press and Hindu publishers which have considerably exasperated Muslim public opinion ?

6. Are the Government aware that the Allahabad High Court has recently taken a contrary view and dissented from the judgment of Mr. Dalip Singh ?

7. Are the Government aware that in a similar case on an application filed by one Kali Charan Sharma under section 99 of the Criminal Procedure Code, a Special Bench of the Allahabad High Court, presided over by Justices Walsh, Lindsay and Bannerji, has held that such writings containing wanton attacks on the life of a religious teacher promoted, or were intended to promote, feelings of enmity or hatred between different classes of His Majesty's subjects and came within the purview of law ?

8. Did the Government refer this matter of serious conflict of decision to their law officers for opinion ? If so, will the Government lay that opinion on the table ?

9. Do the Government propose to apply to the Privy Council for special leave to appeal against the order of Mr. Justice Dalip Singh in re Raj Pal ?

10. Are the Government aware that the title of this book Rangila Rasul being very offensive and scurrilous is greatly resented by the Muslims ? Are the Government prepared to issue instructions that in official correspondence and communications the actual name of the case (Raj Pal versus Crown) should be used or it should be referred to as Raj Pal's case and not as the Rangila Rasul case ?

11. Are the Government aware that Raj Pal is not the author of the pamphlet Rangila Rasul but only its publisher ? Are the Government prepared to direct the Local Government of the Punjab to find out by police investigation or otherwise the real culprit and prosecute him under section 153-A|109, Indian Penal Code ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : 1 and 2. Yes.

3. Government are not aware that general views of this character have been expressed before by any High Court.

4. Therefore does not arise.

5. Two publications alleged to contain such attacks have come to the notice of Government. Of these one was the subject of legal proceedings, while the other was proscribed by the Government of the Punjab.

6. Mr. Justice Dalal of the Allahabad High Court was unable to agree with some of the general arguments of Mr. Justice Dalip Singh's judgment.

7. The Honourable Judges do not appear to have laid down the exact proposition stated by the Honourable Member. The judgments were concerned with the intention of the writer of the particular book then in question.

8. A Divisional Bench of the Lahore High Court have recently expressed a view of the law, which appears to be substantially in accordance with that held by the Allahabad High Court. The point raised in this question therefore does not arise.

9. No.

10. The title no doubt is objectionable, but it is difficult to avoid all reference to it, and in this connection official correspondence is of much less importance than press notices, which cannot be controlled by the Government.

11. Government do not propose to issue any instructions in the matter to the Government of the Punjab, who are primarily concerned and have throughout handled a very difficult situation with commendable judgment and restraint.

PRECEDENCE OF A MEMBER OF THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY IN DARBARS.

242. *Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim : Will the Government be pleased to state what is the status of a Member of this Assembly, in matters of precedence, in Imperial, Provincial, and Divisional Darbars in India ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : The Honourable Member is referred to the reply given by Sir Alexander Muddiman on the 31st January, 1927, to a similar question.

INTERPETATION OF SECTIONS 148 AND 151 OF THE CODE OF CRIMINAL PROCEDURE, 1908, BY THE HIGH COURT, CALCUTTA.

243. *Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim : Will the Government be pleased to state whether the Legislative Department of the Government of India is in touch with all the machinery of administration which puts into execution the various laws promulgated by this House ? If so, will the Department tell us what have been the decisions of the High Court of Calcutta with regard to the interpretation of sections 148 and 151 of the Criminal Procedure Code of 1908, up to now ?

Mr. W. T. M. Wright : I am not sure that I understand the meaning of the first part of the question. The Legislative Department are not in a position to give the Honourable Member any information regarding decisions of the High Courts other than those reported in the Law Reports or referred to in Commentaries, or which may be specially brought to the notice of the Department.

APPOINTMENT OF MEMBERS OF MINORITY COMMUNITIES TO THE SERVICES.

244. *Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim : Will the Government be pleased to state what are the circulars of the Government of India with regard to the appointment of people from the minority communities of this country ?

Which are the Departments of Government to which no circulars have so far been issued and the Departments where they have proved ineffectual ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : General instructions on the subject have been issued by the Home Department. The principles laid down are applicable to the Government of India as a whole, and Departments do not ordinarily issue independent orders on the subject, but confine themselves to bringing the general orders, where necessary, to the notice of subordinate authorities. I know of no case in which the orders have proved ineffectual.

METHOD OF RECRUITMENT TO THE SERVICES IN INDIA.

245. Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state whether it is a fact that the services in this country are mostly recruited from the relations of officers who have served Government in some capacity or other ?

(b) If the answer is in the affirmative, will the Government be pleased to state if they are prepared to keep a certain percentage of Government appointments for people who answer the necessary qualifications, but are not relations of a Government servant, past or present ?

(c) What is the percentage of officers in the Government of India, who are relations of somebody in the service of the Government of India ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a) It is no doubt the case that there is a tendency for the relatives of Government officers to seek Government service, but Government could not admit the accuracy of the general statement suggested in the question.

(c) The statistics are not available, and as a large proportion of the officers in question are recruited by examination, the results of collecting them could hardly justify the great expenditure of time and labour that would be involved.

PREFERENTIAL CLAIMS OF MUSSALMANS TO APPOINTMENTS IN THE STATE MANAGED RAILWAYS.

246. Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim : Will the Government be pleased to state whether in the State-managed Railways Mussalmans have any preferential claims by virtue of their importance as a community ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I would refer the Honourable Member to the Resolution passed in the Assembly on 10th March, 1923. The policy of Government is to avoid a preponderance of any particular community in the services and not to see that all the various communities are represented according to their numerical strength.

THE MANIHARI RAJ ESTATE IN THE SANTHAL PARGANAS.

247. Kumar Ganganand Sinha : (a) Are the Government aware of the fact that (i) by order, dated the 24th January 1805 the Governor General in Council sanctioned Raja Gajraj Singh to continue in possession of the lands and jagir held by him in the district of the Santhal Parganas free of assessment and not subject to payment of any revenue, (ii) that by a letter dated the 3rd October, 1837 regarding the filing of the redemption suit for that estate, the supreme Government observed that a compromise might unquestionably be made with the heirs of Raja Gajraj Singh ?

(b) Is it a fact that in spite of these directions, the local authorities instituted redemption proceedings under one plea or other ?

(c) Are the Government aware of the fact that the supreme Government by their letter, dated the 15th July, 1839, directed that if the redemption proceedings be decided in favour of the Government, the fact must be reported to the Government before the assessment of the land would begin and as a result of which the collection, which the local authorities had commenced to make over the jagirs of the Manihari Raj, was stopped ?

(d) Will the Government be pleased to state whether the result of the redemption proceedings was reported to the supreme Government for necessary orders, if so, when and what instructions were issued by the supreme Government in this connection ?

(e) Did the Government receive any report with regard to the amicable settlement suggested by them ? If so, did the supreme Government verify the same or not ?

(f) Will the Government be pleased to lay on the table a copy of the letter it received from the local authorities on this point and state how the report was verified, and if it was not verified, why ?

(g) Will the Government be pleased to state whether or not it has ascertained if their direction to definitely ascertain the value of the jagir land and the Malkana rights of the Manihari Rajas was carried out by the local authorities or not ; if so, how and when ; if not, what action has been taken in this connection by the Government ?

Mr. A. R. Dalal : The Government of India have ascertained from the Local Government that the matters referred to in the question form the subject of certain civil suits pending in the court of the Settlement Officer, Santhal Parganas. They are, therefore, precluded from answering any portion of this question.

AMALGAMATION OF THE ORIYA-SPEAKING TRACTS.

248. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Are Government aware that a Resolution recommending the amalgamation of the Oriya-speaking tracts was carried in the Bihar and Orissa Legislative Council on the 25th November 1921 ?

(b) Are Government aware that the Honourable Mr. Madhusudan Das, who was then a Minister, supported the Resolution ?

(c) When do Government propose to take steps for the amalgamation of the Oriya-speaking tracts with the Orissa Division of the Province of Bihar and Orissa ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a) Yes.

(b) Yes.

(c) The whole question is still under consideration, and no definite statement can be made at present.

REMOVAL OF THE CAPITAL OF THE UNITED PROVINCES FROM ALLAHABAD TO LUCKNOW.

249. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Have Government received any memorial from persons of the United Provinces, protesting against the gradual removal of the capital of the United Provinces from Allahabad to Lucknow ?

(b) Will Government kindly state if there is any truth in the report that the area of the United Provinces administration is likely to be separated into two ; or that the permanently settled tracts of the United Provinces are likely to be amalgamated with the Province of Bihar and Orissa, where the system of permanent settlement prevails ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a) Yes.

(b) Government have not heard of any such report.

ALLEGED EXCESSIVE AND UNFAIR ASSESSMENT OF INCOME-TAX IN BIHAR AND ORISSA.

250. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Are Government aware that Mr. W. Johnston, Commissioner of Income-tax, Bihar and Orissa, issued the following Circular, No. A.-334|6, dated Ranchi, the 28th March 1927 to Income-tax Officers :

" As the point on which the legal ruling was communicated in my Circular No. A.-334|4, dated the 9th February 1927 which has since been cancelled, is by no means clear, and as there are contrary rulings on the point at issue, it is impossible to issue a clear laying down policy to be followed in every case. On the other hand you should take the view in any particular case which is favourable to the department, and leave the assessee to press for a decision on a reference to the High Court, if he is so advised " ?

(b) Are Government aware that this Circular, by asking the Income-tax Officers to " take the view in any particular case which is favourable " to the Income-tax Department, has led to the harassment of many assessees by excessive and unfair assessment ?

(c) Do Government propose to ask Mr. Johnston to withdraw this Circular ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : The Government have no information on the subject.

As far as I can judge, the Honourable Member seems to be referring to confidential correspondence between the Income-tax Commissioner and his officers. If so I shall be very grateful if he will explain how it came into his possession and why he is making public use of it.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Are Government aware that the circular to which reference has been made does not bear on the face of it any remark to indicate that it is of a confidential nature ? It was issued in the ordinary course of official business.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : As I said, Government have no information on the subject and judging from the fact that the circular deals with correspondence of a confidential nature, I shall be glad if the Honourable Member will speak to me afterwards if he has made a correct use of it.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : There is nothing to show that it was of a confidential nature. Is it not stated in the Income-tax Manual, Volume I, page 121 that " it is desirable that, with due regard to the fiscal interests of Government, all Income-tax officials should administer the Act in a sympathetic spirit "?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : If the Honourable Member will put the question down, I would verify his quotation from the Manual.

CLAIMS OUTSTANDING AGAINST THE BRITISH WAR OFFICE.

251. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Has there been any expenditure incurred by Government during or on account of the Great War which forms the subject of a claim upon the British War Office ? If so, what is the total amount of the claim, how much of it has already been paid up, and how much is still outstanding ? What is the nature of the claim falling under the last category ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : The attention of the Honourable Member is invited to the statement placed on the table on 1st February, 1924 dealing with important financial items outstanding between His Majesty's Government and the Government of India, and to my answer on 15th February, 1927 to question No. 425 asked by Mr. Chaman Lall. There has been further progress in the matter, but I am not yet in a position to make a statement.

EXPENDITURE ON TROOPS SENT FROM INDIA TO CHINA.

252. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Has any sum been hitherto spent by Government out of India's revenue towards the equipment, despatch, or maintenance of India's troops in China, including arms and ammunitions ? If so, how much ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) I would refer the Honourable Member to the statement that I made in the House on the 25th March last.

(b) On the 1st May 1927, the effective strength of the Indian contingent of the Shanghai Defence Force was—

British ranks	2,232
Indian ranks	3,305
Followers	722

CONTRIBUTION TO THE AITCHISON COLLEGE, LAHORE.

253. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Do Government contribute any sum to the Aitchison College, Lahore ? If so, how much per year ?

(b) Is there any Managing Committee of this Institution ? If so, who are the members ?

Sir Denys Bray : (a) Rs. 15,000 a year from Central Revenues and Rs. 12,000 a year from provincial revenues.

(b) There is a large Committee of Management ; the Honourable Member will find the names in the last annual report of the College, a copy of which is in the Library.

SERIOUS COMPLAINTS MADE BY THE MERCANTILE COMMUNITY OF MEERUT AGAINST THE STATION MASTER OF MEERUT CITY STATION.

254. Mr. Ismail Khan : Is it a fact that the mercantile community of Meerut has made serious complaints against the station master of Meerut City station ? What action have the Government taken against the station master ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Government are not aware of any such complaints. They have, however, sent a copy of the Honourable Member's question to the Agent, North-Western Railway.

CONSTRUCTION OF THE RAJGHAT-JEHANGIRABAD AND BULANDSHAHR BRANCH RAILWAY.

255. Mr. Ismail Khan : Will the Government be pleased to state what progress has been made in the construction of the Rajghat-Jehangirabad and Bulandshahr Branch ? When is it expected to be completed and whereabouts in Jehangirabad is the railway station to be located ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : A report on the project has just been received, and is under examination.

The location of the railway station in Jehangirabad has not yet been settled.

CUTTING OF TREES IN CANTONMENTS.

256. Mr. Ismail Khan : Are the Government aware that in Cantonments no owner of a bungalow can cut a tree in his compound without the previous sanction of the Executive officer, and that if the Executive Officer refuses his sanction, he is compelled to abide by it under a threat of criminal prosecution ? What law sanctions this interference with the rights of private property ?

Mr. G. M. Young : Government cannot prevent the felling of trees on private land. If the land belongs to Government the right of the lessee or grantee depends on the terms of the lease or grant. There is no question of interference with rights in private property.

COLLECTION OF TAXES IN CANTONMENTS.

257. Mr. Ismail Khan : 1. Are the Government aware that there is a great deal of discontent in the Cantonments about the provision of the Cantonment Act of 1923 which makes it compulsory on the occupiers of houses to go to the cantonment office to pay their taxes ? Are Government aware that it entails serious inconvenience and hardship on poor purdah-nashin ladies ?

2. According to the old system was there door to door collection of taxes ? If so, are Government prepared to revert to the old system ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (1) There is no such provision in the Cantonments Act, 1924, nor are the Government aware that any new system of tax collection has been introduced as a result of that Act.

(2) Government have no information on this point. Cantonment Authorities have, however, powers to frame bye-laws on the subject, and I would suggest that if there is any cantonment in which this grievance actually exists, a representation should be made to the Cantonment Authority.

RECOMMENDATIONS OF THE SKEEN COMMITTEE.

258. Mr. Ismail Khan : What action do the Government intend to take on the recommendations of the Skeen Committee with regard to :

(a) ten vacancies allotted to Indians at Sandhurst being doubled in 1928,

Mr. G. M. Young : The Honourable Member is referred to the reply given to Diwan Chaman Lall's question No. 109.

RECOMMENDATIONS OF THE ECONOMIC ENQUIRY COMMITTEE.

259. Mr. M. S. Aney : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state whether the Government of India have by this time finished the consideration of the various recommendations of the Economic Enquiry Committee in so far as they affected them and come to any decisions thereon ?

(b) If the answer to the above be in the affirmative, will the Government be pleased to place the same on the table ?

(c) If the answer be in the negative, will the Government be pleased to explain the reasons for this delay ?

RECOMMENDATIONS OF THE ECONOMIC ENQUIRY COMMITTEE.

260. Mr. M. S. Aney : (a) Will the Government be pleased to say whether they have received replies from all the Provincial Governments to their letter (No. D.|4299-F., Government of India, Finance Department), dated the 23rd of October 1925 ?

(b) If not, will Government be pleased to state what Provincial Governments have yet failed to submit their replies ?

(c) Will the Government be pleased to state what steps they have taken during the last twenty months to expedite the replies from these Provincial Governments ?

(d) With advertence to the reply given by the Honourable Sir Basil Blackett on the 19th of August 1926 on the floor of this House to question No. 105, do Government propose to publish the replies of the Provincial Governments to the above letter received to the beginning of August 1927 without waiting any longer for replies from defaulting Provincial Governments, if any ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : With your permission, Sir, I should like to reply to questions Nos. 259 and 260 together.

The replies of all the Local Governments have been received. The last of them was received only in March, 1927, and every endeavour is being made to deal with the Committee's recommendations as expeditiously as possible.

The Government do not propose to publish the replies, but copies have been placed in the Library.

SOCIAL BOYCOTT OF INDIAN STUDENTS IN EDINBURGH.

261. Mr. Abdul Haye : (a) Are Government aware that Indian students resident in Edinburgh have been subjected to social boycott ?

(c) Is it a fact that in Edinburgh Indian students are refused admittance into places of amusement and entertainment such as restaurants, hotels, dance halls and ball rooms ?

(d) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to the reports sent by the Honorary Secretary, Edinburgh Indian Union, and published recently in almost all the Indian papers in which besides the facts mentioned above it is further stated that even the University life is not free from anti-Asiatic manifestations ; that native students stay at arm's length from the coloured students and any social intercourse is out of the question ; that Indians are not admitted to the Royal Medical Society; that they were refused admittance to the annual dance of the University and even the swimming bath of the University is not open to them ?

(e) If the answer to part (d) be in the affirmative, what steps did the Government take to grant relief to the Indian students in Edinburgh and to safeguard their honour and interests ?

(f) Did the Government correspond with the Secretary of State for India in Council on the subject and ask him to use his good offices and prevent this objectionable treatment of Indian students ?

(g) Are Government prepared to lay this correspondence (if any) on the table ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I invite the Honourable Member's attention to the answer I gave on the 22nd of August to a similar question by Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh. Government understand that Indian students have as a rule no difficulty in getting lodgings.

EXHIBITION OF THE FILM ENTITLED THE " MOON OF ISRAEL " IN DELHI.

262. Mr. Abdul Haye : (a) Will the Government please state what procedure is adopted by the Indian Board of Censors before a cinema film is passed ? Are any facilities afforded to the public to examine and take objection to the matter sought to be filmed ?

(b) Are Government aware that a film called " Moon of Israel " which was duly passed by the Board of Censors was considered objectionable by the Muslim public of Delhi who demanded its stoppage while it was being filmed at the Elphinstone Picture Palace in July last ?

(c) Have Government examined the film since then and what final orders have been passed in this matter ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a) There is at present no all-India Board of Censors. Section 7 (1) of the Cinematograph Act, 1918, as amended by the Cinematograph (Amendment) Act, 1919, empowers Local Governments authorised in this behalf by the Governor General in Council to constitute certifying authorities, and Boards have been set up in Madras, Bombay, Calcutta and Rangoon. Under the Act at least half of the members of these Boards must be non-officials. Government are at present carefully considering the whole system of cinema censorship.

(c) On receiving a report as to the nature of the film the District Magistrate suspended the certificate under section 7 (5) of the Cinematograph Act. The Chief Commissioner of Delhi subsequently discharged this order on obtaining from the Manager of the Picture Palace a written undertaking to the effect that the film would not be exhibited again in Delhi.

ACCOUNTS OF THE POST OFFICE LIFE INSURANCE FUNDS.

263. Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : Will the Government be pleased to state whether the accounts of the Postal Life Insurance Fund have been actually examined for the quinquennium 1922-27, and if so, whether an ad interim bonus has been declared or not ? If not, when may such a declaration be expected ?

Mr. H. A. Sams : The accounts of the Post Office Life Insurance Fund for the quinquennium 1922-27 have been made up for the purpose of the actuarial investigation which has been taken in hand. An ad interim bonus payable during the quinquennium was declared in January 1925.

EDUCATION OF THE CHILDREN OF INDIAN EMPLOYEES OF RAILWAYS.

264. Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : Will the Government be pleased to state what arrangements have been made by the railway authorities in India to carry out the recommendations of the Indian Public Service Commission of 1912, to provide better educational opportunities at all important railway centres to the children of Indian railway employees as is being given to Europeans and Anglo-Indians ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The question of assistance to railway employees in the education of their children is under investigation by an officer of the Educational Department.

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : May I know, Sir, how long has this question been under investigation and how much more time will it take before this investigation is finished ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I think Mr. Jones has been on duty for about 8 years. I received a copy of his report—whether preliminary or final I am not sure,—yesterday.

OPENING OF RAILWAY INSTITUTES TO INDIANS.

265. *Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : Are the Railway Institutes in India open to the Indian employees ? If not, why not ? Do the Government propose to issue orders that the existing Railway Institutes be opened for common use both by Europeans and Indians in order that a spirit of fellowship be promoted thereby between the two classes of employees ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The practice varies on different Railways. In some cases the Institutes are open to all employees—European, Anglo-Indian or Indian—and in others separate Institutes are provided for Indian employees. On account of the difference in the mode of living and the consequent difference in the amenities that the Institutes are intended to provide, Indian employees generally prefer to have separate Institutes of their own.

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : Are there any Institutes established for the Indian employees on any of the Railways ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Yes, Sir.

DISCHARGE OF MR. NASIRUDDIN AHMAD, Ex HEAD ESTABLISHMENT CLERK OF THE COMBINED OFFICES OF GAYA AND DINAPORE, EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.

266. *Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state under what circumstances the services of Mr. Nasiruddin Ahmad, ex-Head Establishment clerk of combined office Dinapur, Gaya Division, were dispensed with ?

(b) Was he served with any charge sheet and given an opportunity to tender an explanation ?

(c) Is it a fact that in 1924 when the post of the Establishment clerk fell vacant, the District Superintendent, Mr. Fitzpatrick, recommended a Bengali clerk for the post, but the then Chief Superintendent, Mr. F. E. Robertson, and the then General Traffic Manager, Mr. Hayman, selected Mr. Ahmad for the post ?

(d) Is it also a fact that the nominee of Mr. Fitzpatrick appealed to the Agent against the order of Mr. Ahmad's appointment which was disallowed by the Agent, Mr. Colvin, under his No. E.-3773|1661-P. I. of 20th December, 1921 ?

(e) Is it a fact that when the Divisional system was enforced in September, 1924, Mr. Ahmad was given a bona fide " offer " of service which he formally accepted ?

(f) Is it a fact that on December 15th, 1924, Mr. Ahmad was taken to Dinapore by Mr. Jacobson to set up a Divisional office which he did ?

(g) Is it a fact that on December 16th, 1924, the said Mr. Jacobson gave Mr. Ahmad a letter to the medical officer for his retirement under physical unfitness ?

(h) Is it also a fact that on December 17th, 1924, Mr. Ahmad was promoted as in charge of the combined offices of Gaya and Dinapore ?

(i) Was Mr. Ahmad abruptly discharged on the 19th December, 1924, purporting to be under the terms of an agreement ?

(j) Is it not a fact that according to his new contract Mr. Ahmad had the prospect of serving 11 years more and on account of his abrupt discharge he lost his place, his gratuity for nearly 21 years and the benefits of retirement ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a), (b) and (i). In his own interests I am not prepared to give the reasons why Mr. Nasiruddin Ahmad was discharged. The East Indian Railway Company dispensed with his services before the Railway was taken under State management, and since the case was one of discharge and not of dismissal, there was no reason for serving him with a charge sheet.

(c) and (d). These events took place in 1921 and not in 1924, otherwise the Honourable Member's question substantially represents what occurred.

(e) and (j). The Honourable Member presumably refers to the offer of employment made to the staff of the East Indian Railway generally in connection with the transfer of the management of that Railway to the State. Mr. Ahmad received that offer, but it automatically lapsed on his discharge by the East Indian Railway Company before the transfer took place.

(f) and (h). Mr. Ahmad was transferred to Dinapore with all the other clerks in the Gaya District Office and was put in charge of the combined establishment branches of Gaya and Dinapore District offices.

(g) There is no record to this effect.

RESERVATION OF FIRST AND SECOND CLASS COMPARTMENTS ON THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.

Mr. B. P. Naidu : Sir, may I ask the questions standing in the name of Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan ?

Mr. President : I allow the Honourable Member to ask questions standing in the name of Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan, but I propose hereafter to discourage the practice of Members giving notice of a large number of questions and not remaining present to put them.

267. Mr. B. P. Naidu (on behalf of Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan) : With reference to the Government reply on 27th January, 1927, to starred question No. 5, regarding the reservation of first and second class compartments on the East Indian Railway, will Government please state if the experiment has actually been extended to all stations on the East Indian Railway as decided by the Agent ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The experiment has been extended to all stations on the East Indian Railway in local booking subject to a minimum distance of 100 miles.

268. *Mr. B. P. Naidu (on behalf of Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan) : (a) With reference to Government reply on 27th January, 1927 to starred question No. 8, regarding the method adopted by railway companies in America showing expenditure distributed between passenger and goods working, will Government please state if they have received the report of the officer deputed to examine American methods ?

(c) If not, by what time do they expect to receive it ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a), (b) and (c). The Honourable Member is referred to the reply given to Mr. N. C. Kelkar's question No. 206 on the same subject.

(c) If no decision has been arrived at, will they please state by what time it is likely to be arrived at ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : The Honourable Member is referred to the reply given by me to Mr. N. C. Kelkar's question No. 187 on the same subject.

FITTING OF AUTOMATIC CENTRE BUFFER COUPLERS TO ROLLING STOCK ON RAILWAYS.

270. *Mr. B. P. Naidu (on behalf of Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan) : (a) With reference to Government reply to starred question No. 12 on the 27th January, 1927, regarding the fitting of automatic centre buffer couplers to rolling stock on Railways, will Government please state whether the proposed trials to be made at Lahore have been made ?

(b) If so, will Government please state if they have come to any decision in the matter ?

(c) If not, by what time do they expect trials to be completed and decision arrived at ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Yes.

(b) No, because these or similar trials are also being made in other places and the investigation into the financial aspect of the problem will need reconsideration after all the trials are complete.

(c) It is not possible yet to name a date.

ARRANGEMENTS FOR THE SECURITY OF INDIAN PILGRIMS BETWEEN JEDDAH AND MECCA.

(b) If so, will they please state whether the reply given in the House of Commons by Earl Winterton as reported is correct ?

(c) Will Government please state if the arrangements for the security of Indian pilgrims between Jeddah and Mecca were satisfactory in the present year ?

Sir Denys Bray : The answer to all three parts of the question is ' Yes '.

INTRODUCTION OF THE CREW SYSTEM ON INDIAN RAILWAYS.

272. *Mr. B. P. Naidu (on behalf of Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan) : (a) When was the crew system introduced on Indian Railways ?

(b) On which lines has the system been introduced so far ?

(c) Will Government please state if the system has proved a success ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) On the East Indian Railway in August 1926.

(c) The system is still under trial.

ACQUISITION OF RAILWAY COLLIERIES.

273. *Mr. B. P. Naidu (on behalf of Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan) : (a) Will Government please state if any railway collieries have been acquired after laying on the table the statement in reply to starred question No. 13 on the 27th January, 1927 ?

(b) If so, how many ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The answer is in the negative.

REPORT OF THE TARIFF BOARD REGARDING THE MANUFACTURE IN INDIA OF ARTICLES IN COMMON USE ON RAILWAYS.

274. *Mr. B. P. Naidu (on behalf of Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan) : (a) Will Government please state if they have received the Report of the Tariff Board on the question of manufacture in India of articles in common use on Railways (vide starred question No. 14 on the 27th January, 1927) ?

(b) If so, will they please communicate the result to the House ?

(c) If not, by what time do they expect to receive it ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : The Report has been received and is under consideration.

(b) Have Government decided whether they would give free copies of the Report to the Members of the Assembly (vide Government reply to the supplementry question to the above question) ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) Yes ; a copy was placed in the Council House Library last February.

(b) The matter was given due consideration and it was found that the supply of the requisite number of copies to Members of the Assembly would necessitate reprinting the Report in India. As the cost of this would have been considerable, and as a copy is available in the Library for the use of Members who wish to consult it (and more can be supplied, if necessary), it was thought unnecessary to incur expenditure in having the Report reprinted.

SUMMARIES OF THE SPEECHES OF REPRESENTATIVES OF INDIA AT THE RECENT IMPERIAL CONFERENCE.

276. Mr. B. P. Naidu (on behalf of Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan) : (a) Will Government please state if they have received copies of the full texts or of official summaries of the speeches of the representatives of India at the recent Imperial Conference ?

(b) If not, by what time do they expect to receive them ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a) and (b). The answer is in the affirmative. A copy of the full texts of the speeches made at the Conference has been placed in the Library of the House.

CANDIDATES FROM BIHAR AND ORISSA AT THE EXAMINATION FOR THE RECRUITMENT OF ACCOUNTANTS FOR RAILWAY AUDIT OFFICERS.

277. Mr. B. P. Naidu (on behalf of Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan) : (a) Will Government please state how many candidates from the Province of Bihar and Orissa appeared at the examination for the recruitment of accountants for Railway Audit Officers under the Accountant General, Railways, held in 1925 and 1926, respectively ?

(e) Is it a fact that he charges an initial fee of Rs. 8 ? If not, how much initial fee does he charge ?

(f) Will they please state whether besides the initial fee he also takes four annas a day from each porter ? If not, how much does he take daily ?

(g) Will Government be pleased to state whether the porters besides paying the Contractor have to make some daily payment to the Contractor's servants ?

(h) Are Government prepared to inquire into the matter through a special officer and place his report before the Advisory Committee ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) The reply is in the affirmative.

(c) The reply is in the negative.

(d), (e) and (f). A daily fee of annas four is charged per porter present, but no initial fee is charged. Each porter on joining pays a security deposit of Rs. 5 which is refunded when he leaves.

(g) The reply is in the negative.

(h) Government see no reason for an enquiry.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I ask the Honourable Member whether the taking of four annas from each porter in the Delhi station does not amount to making the passengers also pay more for the porters' charges ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I am not sure that it does so, Sir. In any case arrangements for carrying their luggage will cost something. I may add to the answer that I have already given that I have received demi-official information from the Agent that he is considering the possibility of controlling these coolies departmentally ; but the difficulty has been to discover any system which will be as effective in the interests of the passengers as the present system.

PROSCRIPTION OF Forward BY THE GOVERNMENT OF BURMA.

280. *Mr. K. C. Roy : (1) Will Government be pleased to state whether it is a fact that the Government of Burma proscribed the Forward newspaper of Calcutta in that province ? If so, will Government be pleased to state the authority under which the Provincial Government acted ?

(2) Will Government be pleased to state the causes which led to the decision proscribing Forward, and place all correspondence in this connection on the Table ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (1) The Government of Burma intercepted copies of the newspaper in question in exercise of their powers under section 26 of the Indian Post Office Act, 1898.

(2) I invite the Honourable Member's attention to the answer I gave on the 22nd August, 1927, to a similar question by Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh.

GRIEVANCES OF THE SUBORDINATE STAFF OF THE GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY.

281. *Mr. N. C. Kelkar : Has the attention of Government been drawn to the letter of Mr. Zabwalla in the Indian National Herald of Bombay, dated the 9th July, 1927, relating to the meagre wages, unduly long hours of duty, and denial of leave to the Great Indian Peninsula Railway staff ? If so, will Government state, on what particular points, they do not regard the statement of Mr. Zabwalla as correct or accurate ? Further, with regard to the statements which they do not challenge, will Government state what action they propose to take to give relief to the staff concerned ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Government have seen the letter referred to. A memorandum dealing with the alleged grievances of the subordinate staff is being sent to the Honourable Member.

HOURS OF WORK OF EMPLOYEES OF STATE RAILWAYS.

282. *Mr. N. C. Kelkar : Is it a fact that the Railway Board has made a rule that the attendance of no railway employee should exceed 60 hours per week ? Will Government state whether the rule is in force on all the State Railways ? If not, will Government state reasons ? Is it a fact that coaching clerks, ticket collectors and parcel clerks have to work in two shifts only, while signallers work in three shifts, per day ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I would refer the Honourable Member to the reply given to question No. 151 put by Mr. N. M. Joshi in the present Session.

GRANT OF PRIVILEGE AND CASUAL LEAVE TO THE EMPLOYEES OF THE GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY.

283 *Mr. N. C. Kelkar : Will Government state approximately in how many per cent. of applications for privilege and casual leave is the request for leave duly granted to the employees of the Great Indian Peninsula Railway ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Government have no information about a minor detail of this description.

GRANT OF A TIME-SCALE TO THE EMPLOYEES OF THE COMMERCIAL DEPARTMENT OF THE GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY.

284. *Mr. N. C. Kelkar : Will Government state whether the employees in the Railway Commercial Department of the Great Indian Peninsula Railway get the advantages of any time-scale ? If not, will Government state the reasons for this adverse differentiation against the Commercial Department employees ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Time-scales of pay are in force in the offices of the Chief and Divisional Traffic Managers. As regards the station staff, no time-scale of pay has been introduced for the Commercial Department nor for any other Department. There is therefore no adverse differentiation against the Commercial Department employees.

PROVISION OF QUARTERS, OR GRANT OF A HOUSE RENT ALLOWANCE IN LIEU THEREOF, TO THE EMPLOYEES OF THE RAILWAY COMMERCIAL DEPARTMENT AT BOMBAY, KARACHI AND POONA.

285. *Mr. N. C. Kelkar : Will Government state whether they intend making any provision for quarters, or payment of rent allowance in lieu thereof, to the employees of the Railway Commercial Department at Bombay, Karachi and Poona, as the Local Government has done for some of their employees ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : An allowance on account of the high cost of living is made to such employees at Bombay and Karachi, but not at Poona. Under the rules employees of the Commercial Department are not entitled to free quarters, as it is not essential that they should live near their work. No change in the existing practice is at present contemplated.

ABOLITION OF THE POSTS OF THREE INDIAN SUB-ASSISTANT STATION MASTERS AT POONA.

286. *Mr. N. C. Kelkar : Is it a fact that posts of three Indian sub-assistant station masters at the Poona station on Rs. 85 were abolished, and new posts of three European assistant station masters were created on Rs. 345 per mensem ? Will Government state full particulars of the case ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : In June last, Government sanctioned three posts of assistant station masters on a maximum pay of Rs. 345 per mensem each in lieu of three posts of sub-assistant station masters on Rs. 85 each for the new Poona and Ghorpuri stations as a result of the recommendations made in this behalf by a Committee appointed to consider the arrangements for working the joint stations, yards and sheds. The posts are not reserved for Europeans.

GRANT OF HOLIDAYS TO THE STAFF OF THE GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY.

287. *Mr. N. C. Kelkar : Will Government state how many whole and how many half holidays are granted to the staff of the Great Indian Peninsula Railway in a year ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : It would take a very considerable time and entail a great deal of labour to collect this information and Government do not consider that any useful purpose will be served thereby.

GRANT OF A HOLIDAY ON THE HINDU NEW YEAR'S DAY TO THE HINDU EMPLOYEES IN THE AMMUNITION FACTORY AT KIRKEE.

288. Mr. N. C. Kelkar : Will Government state what per cent. of the employees in the military factories at Kirkee (Poona) are Hindus ? And will Government state whether they are granted a holiday on the Hindu New Year's day ? Is it a fact that holidays are given on their New Year's day to Muhammadan employees and employees of other faiths ?

Mr G. M. Young : 90 per cent. of the employees in the Ammunition Factory, Kirkee, are Hindus. The holidays allowed in all Ordnance Factories are those mentioned in section 25 of the Negotiable Instruments Act of 1881 and those notified by the Local Government in whose territories the factory is situated. The Bombay Government have notified the Parsi New Year's day, but not the Hindu nor the Muhammadan New Year's day, as a holiday in the current year.

PROTECTIVE DUTY ON IMPORTED PAPER.

289. Mr. N. C. Kelkar : (a) Is it a fact that according to the Paper Industry Protection Act of 1925, the one anna protective duty was intended to be levied against imported paper containing less than 65 per cent. of mechanical wood-pulp ?

(b) If so, is the provision still in force ? If not, will Government state the reasons which led to the departure from this provision ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : (a) The answer is in the affirmative.

(b) The provision is still in force and there has been no departure from it.

LEVY OF A PROTECTIVE DUTY ON PAPER.

290. Mr. N. C. Kelkar : (a) Is it a fact that ruling No. 1 of 1927 (Customs Department) was issued upon representations made by certain paper mills in India ?

(b) If the reply to (a) be in the negative, will Government state whether the ruling in question was issued by Government on representations of any other parties or whether it was issued suo motu ?

(c) Is it a fact that Government have under consideration a revision of the said ruling in such a way that the protective duty of one anna be levied only upon paper containing less than 65 per cent. mechanical wood-pulp of the weight of the fibre contents ?

(d) Will Government state the dates on which the said ruling was put into operation at Bombay, Karachi and Calcutta ?

(e) Will Government state whether they intend to refund the excess duty paid under protest or provisionally levied upon paper to which the revision, if any, of the ruling applies ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : (a) Yes.

(c) The matter was referred to the Tariff Board who have just reported.

(d) The new ruling was communicated by telegram to all the ports on the 3rd February, 1927.

SHORT LEVY OF IMPORT DUTY AT BOMBAY.

291. Mr. N. C. Kelkar : Will Government state whether notices of claims for short levy of import duty under section 39 of the Sea Customs Act were issued at Bombay weeks after the clearance of consignments from the Customs Office ? If so, are not Government aware that the duty was levied upon goods which must in the ordinary course of business have been sold out ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : The Government have no information as regards the first part of the question. Section 39 of the Sea Customs Act leaves it open to the Customs Collector to claim duty that has been short-levied within three months from the date of the first assessment. This right was, however, waived in respect of consignments on which duty was paid before the date on which the ruling was received by the Customs officers.

The Government have no definite information, although the facts are probably as suggested.

CHEMICAL ANALYSIS OF PAPER.

292. Mr. N. C. Kelkar : (a) Will Government state what is the test, in force, at present at Bombay by which the percentage of fibre contents of paper is ascertained ? Also whether the same test applies at Karachi and Calcutta ?

(b) Will Government state whether they intend to prescribe and also publish a standard specified test for the guidance of all Customs Offices at various ports in India ?

(c) What is the average period taken by the Government Chemical Analyser to report on each sample submitted to him for analyses ?

(d) Will Government state whether the present Chemical Analysers of Government have the necessary qualifications for analysing paper ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : (a) The facts are stated in paragraph 9 of the Report of the Indian Tariff Board, dated the 13th July, 1927.

(b) The Government have recently recommended the adoption by Chemical Analysers of the method employed by the Calcutta Customs House, namely, the fibre-count method subject to correction by determination of ash and to check by the phloroglucinal test.

(c) The Government have no information.

CHEMICAL ANALYSIS OF PAPER.

293. Mr. N. C. Kelkar : (a) Are not Government aware that importers of paper are put to a loss by reason of their having to hold over the sale of their paper goods pending the result of chemical analyses and final assessment of import duty on the same ?

(b) Are Government prepared to make arrangements for making chemical analyses of paper in their own Customs Office within 3 days from date of examination so as to avoid delay ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : (a) The Government have no specific information, but it is probably inevitable that the delay caused by chemical analyses, however unavoidable, should sometimes cause loss to merchants.

(b) It is not possible for Government to make arrangements for chemical analysis of paper in the Custom House except in those places in which there is a chemical laboratory in the Custom House itself ; but instructions have been issued to Collectors of Customs that no avoidable delay should be permitted to occur in making analyses of imported goods.

RECOMMENDATIONS OF THE ECONOMIC ENQUIRY COMMITTEE.

294. Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan : (a) Will Government please state if they have received replies from all the Provincial Governments regarding the Economic Enquiry Committee, 1925 ?

(b) If they have, will they please state whether they have arrived at a decision regarding taking action on the recommendations of the Committee ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I would refer the Honourable Member to the reply given by me to-day to questions Nos. 259 and 260 asked by Mr. Aney.

NUMBER OF INDIAN JUDGES OF HIGH COURTS.

295. Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan : Will the Government be pleased to state the number of Indian Judges out of the total number of 89 High Court Judges and Chief Court Judges as shown in the statement laid on the table in reply to unstarred question No. 11 on the 31st January, 1927 ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : 40.

COLONISATION OF THE ANDAMANS BY MOPLAHS.

296. Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan : (a) Is it a fact that a batch of Moplah convicts were recently brought to Malabar from the Andamans and taken about under police custody and made to persuade their own wives and children and the families of other Moplah convicts to migrate to the Islands ?

(b) If they have no information on the subject, will the Government please make enquiries from the Local Government and communicate the result to the House ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a) and (b). I understand that a party of Moplah convicts who voluntarily elected to settle in the Andamans were permitted by the Chief Commissioner to visit Malabar and to bring back their wives and families with them. These facilities were granted in pursuance of the undertaking given by Government in paragraph 10 (iv) of the Government of India, Home Department Resolution No. F.-188/24-Jails, dated the 4th October, 1926, a copy of which I will give the Honourable Member. The suggestion that coercion was used is incorrect.

AIRSHIP SERVICE BETWEEN ENGLAND AND INDIA via EGYPT.

297. Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan: Will Government please state by what time the aerodrome at Karachi is expected to be completed and by what time the aeroplane service from Egypt to Karachi and the airship service from England to India via Egypt is expected to come into operation ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra: (a) The Civil Aerodrome at Karachi is ready for use, and it is anticipated that the ancillary services, for which provision has been made, will be completed by the end of September, 1927.

(b) The Government are not, at present, in a position to say when the aeroplane service, which is now operating between Cairo and Basra, will be extended to Karachi.

(c) No information is available as to when the Airship Service from England to India will come into operation, nor is it likely that the experimental flights in this connection will take place before the end of the year 1928.

APPOINTMENT OF MR. W. B. STAGGS AS AN OFFICIATING SUPERINTENDENT IN THE HOME DEPARTMENT.

298. Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan: (a) Is it a fact that Mr. T. P. Roy, Superintendent, Home Department, was granted two months' leave with effect from the 17th May, 1927 ?

(b) Is it a fact that Mr. W. B. Staggs of the Imperial Secretariat Service was appointed to officiate as a Superintendent in the Home Department in place of Mr. T. P. Roy ?

(c) What are the qualifications of Mr. T. P. Roy and Mr. W. B. Staggs, respectively ?

(d) If (a) and (b) are facts, will Government please state if no Indian of the requisite qualifications was available in the Home Department, who could officiate for Mr. T. P. Roy during his absence on leave ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar: (a) and (b). Yes.

(c) The qualifications of these officers for appointment as Superintendent are the records of their work in the Department.

(d) Mr. Staggs was the next senior assistant for promotion and fully qualified for the appointment. It might have been possible by ignoring the claims of seniority and merit to fill the appointment otherwise though I should mention that Mr. Staggs is a statutory native of India.

(c) If not, will they please state by what time they expect to get the reply (vide Government reply to supplementary question to starred question No. 65 on the 31st January, 1927) ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : (a) The reply given by Mr. Bhore to starred question No. 65 stated that Government were in communication with His (b) If so, will Government please inquire and inform this House if the Bombay Government have arrived at any decision in the matter ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : The Indian Mercantile Marine Committee observed in their report that Sir Mohammad Yousuf's School is a good example of primary nautical schools. The question of the future management of the school and vesting it in a local Board of Governors was considered by the Government of Bombay in consultation with Sir Mohammad Yousuf, but had to be dropped as certain proposals made by Sir Mohammad Yousuf in this connection could not be accepted by the Local Government.

PETITIONS RELATING TO THE CHILDREN'S PROTECTION BILL.

Secretary of the Assembly : Sir, under Standing Order 78, I have to report that 72 petitions signed by 6,608 persons have been received relating to the Bill further to amend the Indian Penal Code and the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, which was introduced in the Legislative Assembly on the 28th March, 1927.

THE INDIAN TARIFF (AMENDMENT) BILL.

The Honourable Sir George Rainy (Member for Commerce and Railways) : Sir, I beg to move that the Bill further to amend the Indian Tariff Act, 1894, be referred to a Select Committee consisting of Maulvi Muhammad Yakub, Mr. R. K. Shanmukham Chetty, Sir Victor Sassoon, Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas, Mr. W. Stonehouse Lamb, Dr. A. Suhrawardy, Diwan Chaman Lall, Mr. N. M. Joshi, Raja Ghazanfar Ali Khan, Mr. C. Duraiswamy Aiyangar, Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta, Mr. S. C. Mitra, Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru, Munshi Iswar Saran, Mr. M. R. Jayakar, and the Mover ; and that the number of members whose presence shall be necessary to constitute a meeting of the Committee shall be five and that the Committee be instructed to report on or before the 31st August, 1927.

This Bill, Mr. President, is the second of the two Bills to amend the Indian Tariff Act which are connected with the cotton textile industry. In these circumstances I thought it might be convenient if the membership of the Select Committee in this case was identical with the membership of the Select Committee which has already been appointed by this House to consider the Bill to amend the Indian Tariff Act for the purpose of safeguarding the manufacture of cotton yarn in India. The names of the members which I have read out are, therefore, identical with the names of the Members appointed to the other Committee.

The primary object of this Bill, Mr. President, is to assist the cotton textile industry in the difficulties which it has at present to encounter by the removal or the reduction of customs duties. That is its primary object. At the same time it must also be regarded as an instalment of what is an essential part of the fiscal policy of the Government of India. This method of assisting industries by means of reducing or removing customs duties was considered by the Fiscal Commission and they refer to it in two or three places in their Report. As regards machinery they remarked that for the development of industries in general the free import of machinery was evidently desirable. They recognised that it might sometimes be desirable to encourage the manufacture of machinery in India, but they were of opinion that such encouragement should not as a rule be given by import duties. As regards raw materials, they said that the raw materials required for Indian industries should ordinarily be admitted free of duty. There might be instances in which it would be found necessary to protect by import duties the production of certain raw materials, but such cases should be comparatively rare seeing that raw materials are in general bulky in proportion to their value. The statements of the Fiscal Commission, which I have read, are accepted by the Government of India, and therefore the proposals contained in this Bill, though directly and primarily intended to assist the cotton textile industry, are, as I have said, also an instalment of the policy which is the declared policy of the Government of India.

The Tariff Board, which enquired into the condition of the cotton textile industry, made the proposals on which this Bill is based. The Government of India, however, were not able to accept them precisely in the form in which they had been put forward. Honourable Members who have examined the Report will remember the Tariff Board gave two lists of mill stores. Those in the first list they proposed should be completely exempted from duty, while as regards the stores in the second list they proposed that the cotton mills should, if they imported them direct, be allowed to import them free of duty, while if they purchased them from stockists, they should subsequently receive a refund of the duty they have paid. As regards the first list, there is no particular difficulty. Of the articles enumerated in that list, which are dutiable at 15 per cent., all except one, I think, is included in the Bill which is before the House. But as regards the second list, the Government of India were unable to accept the recommendation of the Board in the precise form in which it was made. What the Board proposed was to revive an old arrangement which had been in force from 1896 to 1921 as regards the purchase of stores, and from 1916 to 1921 as regards the machinery purchased by the cotton mills. This arrangement was abolished in 1921 when the import duty on piece-goods was raised to 11 per cent. while the excise duty remained at 3½ per cent. Now there are certain minor difficulties about this arrangement. It is always a little difficult when special concessions of this kind are given—administrative difficulties of various kinds must occur, and probably if the arrangement had been revived it would have been necessary to employ a special staff. Also in view of the fact that some stores are made in India, precautions would have had to be taken to prevent the payment of a refund of the duty upon stores which had not been imported and which consequently could not have paid any import duty. These difficulties, however, would not necessarily have been decisive. The real difficulty was this. On what ground would it be possible for Government to discriminate between industry and industry and to prescribe that one industry should import free the materials and the machinery on which other industries had to pay duty? As long as the cotton excise duty was in existence there was a definite reason for differentiating in favour of the cotton textile industry in this matter, because that industry was subject to a disadvantage from which other industries were free. The special arrangement about the importation of stores was definitely a set-off to the excise duty. But now that the excise duty has been removed, that reason for a special concession no longer exists, and the Government of India could not find any valid grounds on which they could agree to differential treatment in favour of one industry which did not extend to all industries. At the same time they were impressed by the desirability of going as far as they could in the direction recommended by the Board in order to assist the cotton textile industry, and the view they took was this—that, although it was not legitimate to make a special concession to one industry which was denied to others, it was perfectly legitimate in giving effect to their declared policy of assisting all industries by the reduction or the removal of the duty on machinery and materials, to give precedence to those articles which were used chiefly in industries passing through a period of depression. They thought that on that basis a satisfactory solution could be arrived at, and it was on that basis that they examined the list of articles which the Tariff Board desired to be freed from duty. As I have already said, there was only one omission in list 1, but in list 2 there were several omissions. The first and most obvious test which was applied was whether the cotton textile industry was the principal consumer of the article concerned. It was obvious, I think, that when Government is sacrificing revenue and when the object of the sacrifice is to benefit a particular industry, it was necessary to see whether the benefit to the industry would be commensurate with the sacrifice of revenue. If we had to sacrifice 10 lakhs of revenue and the benefit to the cotton industry was only 1 lakh, that would obviously be a very weak case. I do not propose, it would obviously take much too much time to go through the list in detail, but I should like to give one concrete example which will illustrate the reasons why certain exclusions were made from the list. The first example I shall take is soda ash. An examination of the import figure showed that 58 per cent. of the imports occurred in Bengal and only 15 per cent. in Bombay.

In view of the concentration of cotton mills on the western side of India and also owing to the fact that a good many mills that are not exactly on the western side of India draw their supplies from Bombay, the fact that only 15 per cent. of the imports came to Bombay made it perfectly clear that the cotton textile industry was not the principal consumer. The sacrifice of revenue was over 7 lakhs and it did not seem probable that the benefit to the cotton mill industry would exceed a lakh or a lakh and a half.

Another instance that might be quoted is lubricating oil which quite clearly must be used by every industry in India and is also used by railways and motor cars : indeed it would be impossible to give an exhaustive enumeration of its users. That was a case again where the Government of India considered that the benefit would not be commensurate with the sacrifice. On the other hand the most important item in the whole list of the stores which we proposed to exempt from duty is the coal tar dyes. In that case Bombay takes 75 per cent. of the imports and I think from all the calculations I have been able to make, that in all probability three-fourths of the loss of revenue which is Rs. 25 lakhs, ought to accrue directly to the benefit of the cotton textile industry. I regard this particular proposal to remove the duty on coal tar dyes as of great importance. Last year, in 1926-27, the exports of piece-goods from India amounted to 197 million yards and of this quantity, 175 million yards were dyed and coloured goods. Obviously, if the cotton mills are relieved of the burden of the payment of duty on the dyes they use, that ought to be of material assistance to them in developing their export trade.

Another reason which influenced Government in excluding certain items is one which applies specially to the various chemicals from which the Tariff Board proposed to remove the import duty, namely, the question of protection. A representation was put in two or three years ago on behalf of the chemical industry asking for the protection of the manufacture of chemicals. It has not yet been found possible to refer that matter to the Tariff Board and so long as it is pending it was considered that it would not be right to prejudice the position by removing the duties. There are several chemicals in the list—soda ash, caustic soda, epsom salts, zinc chloride, and magnesium chloride. Out of these five, only one finds a place in the Bill, namely, magnesium chloride, and it was retained on the ground that the circumstances connected with that particular chemical had already been examined by the Tariff Board who had recommended that protection should not be given. There were also certain minor reasons for excluding particular items, but with these I will not weary the House ; they are rather matters for the Select Committee.

As regards machinery, we start from the general principle that, in the interests of industry, machinery should be free from duty. But I should like to make it quite plain that that does not in any way rule out particular proposals either for encouraging the manufacture of particular kinds of machinery by means of an import duty, if that is the best way of doing it ; nor does it rule out proposals which may be necessary from time to time to remove a positive handicap on the manufacture of machinery. The case I am thinking of is this, where a particular kind of machinery is made in India and is not considered to require protection in the full sense, but a good case might sometimes be made out for what we call equality of tariff treatment, that is to say, the manufacture of the machinery should not be worse off than if there were no duty at all. It may happen at present ; it will still be so if the Bill is carried into law, that he may have to pay duty on the materials he uses, though there is no duty on the finished articles he makes. I should like to make it plain that proposals of that kind are not ruled out. There are two or three cases, I think, pending with the Tariff Board at present and they will no doubt make suitable recommendations stating what they consider the proper action to be taken. I emphasise this point because clearly it would not be right to ask this House to approve the general principle of the exemption of machinery from duty, unless that affirmation is properly qualified by the admission that there are circumstances in which it may be necessary to impose a duty on machinery either for protective purposes or in order to secure equality of tariff treatment.

I think in the Resolution in which the decision of Government to remove the duty on certain stores and machinery was announced, it was stated that the sacrifice of revenue was likely to amount to Rs. 85 lakhs in a full year. There have been certain minor changes since then, but the net result remains very much the same and I do not think there is any material alteration in the total figure. As nearly as I can calculate, it seems probable that the benefit to the cotton textile industry may be expected to amount to about Rs. 42½ lakhs, that is, approximately half the sacrifice of revenue. In the case of the materials, as distinct from the machinery, about three-fourths of the sacrifice of revenue goes to the benefit of the textile industry. In the case of machinery the proportion is a good deal lower—I think not more than about one-fourth. That of course raised the question whether it was possible to discriminate between one kind of machinery and another and limit the concession, as far as possible, to the machinery used for the cotton textile industry. It was found, however, that this was not practicable. First of all, there is the objection in principle that it is very difficult to justify a proposal by which one industry is not to pay duty on its machinery while other industries do so. The other difficulty is a practical difficulty. The present definition of machinery in the Tariff Schedule is a general definition and without a prolonged inquiry it would have been impossible to specify sufficiently exactly for the guidance of customs officers the particular kinds of machinery from which it was proposed to remove the duty. For this reason it was decided that the removal of the duty must operate generally and that if the Tariff Board came forward with proposals for securing protection or equality of tariff treatment to particular kinds of machinery these must be considered subsequently.

Before I sit down, Mr. President, I should like to say something about one particular proposal, namely, the proposal to reduce the duty on artificial silk yarn 15 per cent. to 7½ per cent. During the course of the debate on Monday certain questions were asked and certain requests for information made. I should like to deal very briefly with them. One Member I think asked me where the suggestion to reduce the duty on artificial yarn originated. The answer, Mr. President, is that it originated with the Bombay Chamber of Commerce some 15 or 16 months ago, I think. When I was in Bombay in April, I discussed the proposal with the Committee of the Bombay Millowners' Association and found that they were entirely in favour of it. Another question that was put was where this artificial silk yarn was likely to come from. It appears from the figures that I have obtained that at present the bulk of the artificial silk yarn imported comes from Italy. Amongst the various countries, the United Kingdom comes after Italy, but supplies a much smaller quantity. In 1926-27 nearly four million pounds came from Italy and only about 650,000 pounds came from the United Kingdom. On the other hand, the piece-goods made from artificial silk and cotton mixed came mostly from the United Kingdom, in fact she was the largest supplier sending nearly 16 million yards, while Italy sent nearly 14 million yards. Now, the effect of the reduction of the duty will be to make it more possible for the handloom weavers and the cotton mills in India to manufacture these piece-goods made from artificial silk and cotton and to sell them in competition with what comes from abroad. The branch of the trade which is likely to benefit is the importation of yarn, and the great bulk of that trade is at present in the hands of Italy. On the other hand, the trade which to a certain extent may be reduced is the importation of piece-goods, of which the principal supplier at present is the United Kingdom, and I think these facts ought to be sufficient to dispel any suspicions on the part of the Honourable Member who asked for this information as to any sinister motive behind the Government proposal.

The figures may not be familiar to all the Members of the House, and I should like very briefly to give one or two in order to show the very rapid expansion in the trade in artificial silk yarn. In 1921-22 the quantity of such yarn imported was only 71,000 pounds, and in 1926-27 it had increased to 5¾ million pounds. During the same period the average value per pound had fallen from about Rs. 6½ to Rs. 1¾. I think one Member in the course of the discussion expressed apprehension lest the reduction of this duty might interfere with the silk industry in India. Perhaps the name " artificial " silk is an unfortunate name, because it is apt to suggest ideas which are not really in accordance with the facts. Artificial silk yarn, when it was first introduced, was undoubtedly very expensive—it was almost as expensive as real silk and the two were regarded as comparable, and I believe on its first introduction it did affect the sale of silk yarn ; but since then the circumstances have completely changed. According to the trade returns in 1926-27, the average value of the real silk yarn which was imported was Rs. 5¼ a pound, whereas the average value of the artificial silk yarn was Rs. 1¾ per pound. In these circumstances, it is quite obvious that when the price of artificial silk yarn is comparable to the price of cotton yarn, a reduction of 7½ per cent. in the duty will make no appreciable difference, because the present price of artificial silk yarn is only about one-third of the price of silk yarn. In these circumstances, if it is going to displace silk, it will do so in any case.

I will not weary the House, Mr. President, by dilating on the matter further, but I think I had better make one point plain before I sit down, and it is this, that in asking the House to refer this Bill to the Select Committee, we undoubtedly ask them to affirm the general principle that machinery and the materials of industry should, as far as possible, be free from duty. But we do so subject to the reservations I have already indicated that for particular classes of machinery or for particular materials, it may be in the interests of the country that they should be subject to an import duty. Also I do not ask the House to pronounce finally upon any one item amongst the various proposals included in the Bill. It would obviously be unreasonable to do that. The question of particular items must clearly be left to the Select Committee.

Sir, I move the motion that stands in my name.

Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya (Allahabad and Jhansi Divisions : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I find myself in a difficult position in dealing with this motion. I do not wish to oppose the reference of the Bill to the Select Committee, and yet I feel that I am asked to agree to this proposal under circumstances which are somewhat unfair to us, Members of the House, in that we are not given an opportunity to discuss the proposals of the Tariff Board as a whole before being called upon to support the particular course, the Government have decided to adopt.

(At this stage Mr. President vacated the Chair which was taken by Mr. Deputy President, Maulvi Muhammad Yakub.)

This question, Sir, of affording protection to industries is a very important one. It either implies the imposition of a burden upon the consumer or it involves the sacrifice of revenue to Government. In either case, it is a matter of serious concern to the Assembly, and I submit that when the Government received the Report of the Tariff Board, the proper procedure would have been for them to bring the recommendations of the Tariff Board before this House or to give this House an opportunity to discuss those proposals, and after hearing the views of this House on those proposals to decide what particular proposals to adopt for legislation. Particularly, so, I submit, should this be the course of action when the Government do not accept the proposals of the Tariff Board, as a whole, as they have not accepted them in the matter of the tax on yarn and cloth. On another occasion, namely, the occasion of the Steel Protection Bill, Government agreed to widen the scope of the Bill and gave the House an opportunity to put in amendments which were not strictly within the limits of the Bill. When the Bill to safeguard the manufacture of yarn came up, the Honourable Member for Commerce did not think it fit to agree to such a widening of the scope of the discussion. I do not plead for it so far as the particular measure before us is concerned. But the Honourable Member will recognise, and the House will recognise, that this Assembly is put in a rather awkard position. The Tariff Board discussed the question of how the cotton textile industry should be helped. They suggested certain methods. Government rejected their proposals and decided upon a course of their own. They have now introduced the present Bill in which they have adopted the recommendations of the Tariff Board. I submit that if the Government had done the Tariff Board and this Assembly the courtesy of putting their whole proposals before the Assembly and of allowing the House to express its opinion on them, probably the Honourable Member for Commerce would have carried the House with him to a greater extent than I fear he is able to do at present. I submit for the consideration of the Government and of the Honourable Member for Commerce whether it is not on the whole better for the Government and for the Tariff Board and for this Assembly that the recommendations of the Tariff Board, particularly when the Government do not accept them, should be laid before this Assembly in order that the Assembly may express its opinion on the various recommendations and thereby enable the Government to adopt a measure which may be likely to receive more support from public opinion as represented in this House than perhaps a measure introduced in the present manner, though no doubt decided upon with due care and deliberation by Government. With these observations I resume my seat. As I have said, I do not wish to oppose the reference to the Select Committee, but I hope the Government will consider the point I have raised.

Mr. M. S. Sesha Ayyangar (Madura and Ramnad cum Tinnevelly : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I feel thankful to the Honourable the Mover of this Bill for having given the House the information which I sought the other day. Sir, though he would ask me to dispel my illusions or my doubts or my suspicions regarding what underlay my question to him, I submit it does somewhat dispel my suspicion, no doubt ; but it does not remove the room for closer scrutiny of what I intended to bring to the consideration of the House. The other day, Sir, I was emphasising that nothing should be done under the Tariff Bill to injure or inconvenience the handloom industry. That industry in India is playing a very important part according to the finding of the Tariff Board. In 1925-26 the handloom industry produced 20 per cent. of the total cloth consumed in India. My business now is to invite the attention of the House and of the Members of the Select Committee to pay particular attention and see that in the Schedule to the present Bill things are brought in, which might facilitate the handloom industry by way of cheaply getting the materials for the handloom or the machinery that may be necessary. In fact, being a layman, I am not able to say from the Schedule attached to the Bill what machinery or materials might facilitate the handloom industry. I take it, Sir, however, that No. 18-B. would comprise a few of the articles which might be of help to the handloom industry. I would particularly request the Select Committee to canvass this matter more closely, and enlarge the list of articles, if need be, by facilitating the introduction of machinery or materials which might tend to make the handloom industry improve ; and also to restrict or eliminate such article from the list, as we see in the Schedule, which might even indirectly have the remote effect of adversely affecting the handloom industry.

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I propose, Mr. President, to reply very briefly. I listened, and I am sure every Member of the House must have listened, to the speech that was made by the Honourable Pandit in which he endeavoured—and it is hard not to be moved by the kindly tone of his voice and the obvious desire to win one's heart—to induce me, Mr. President, to agree to go back on the attitude of the Government as I explained it on Monday last. He said that it was not reasonable to ask the House to approve of these particular proposals which are contained in the Bill which we are now considering before the House had had an opportunity of considering the Tariff Board's proposals as a whole. Indeed he suggested that in the case of all Tariff reports the common procedure should be that before Government came to any final conclusions, they should take the Assembly into their confidence, have the whole thing discussed here and then, after that, make up their mind. Well, that would be rather a drastic revolution in the constitutional principles upon which we have hitherto proceeded as regards these matters. I think the correct constitutional principle is that the Executive Government must first make up its own mind what it proposes to do and subsequently place its proposals before the Legislature for its assent. Apart from that, there would be great practical difficulties in accepting the procedure proposed by the Honourable Pandit. One practical difficulty would be that if before Government came to its final conclusion it had to make all the proposals public in the Legislature, it might directly defeat the object that protection was intended because of the delay that would elapse before the first publication of the intention of the proposal to protect and the final decision actually to give protection and the passage into law of the Bills to give effect to it. That would be an obvious practical difficulty. Apart from that, the constitutional difficulty still remains and it is to my mind a very serious one. I do not think the Government of India could possibly put themselves in the position of divesting themselves of the responsibility of making up their own mind as to the proper course of action and then submitting it to the Legislature. As the Honourable Pandit has quoted the steel case I should like to point out that the circumstances are not similar. In the case of the Steel Industry (Protection) Bill there was general agreement in almost every quarter of the House that the protection to the steel industry ought to be continued, and in those circumstances Sir Charles Innes asked the House merely to affirm that much and to leave everything else to the Assembly. But in this case there is no such general agreement. As regards protection to cotton piece-goods general agreement does not exist, and in these circumstances it is impossible for the Government of India to leave the whole thing open after they have had the matter under their consideration for more than six months and have reviewed their original decisions. It is no longer possible for the Government of India to say that they have an open mind on the whole question. They have taken up their stand and to the decisions they have announced it will be necessary for them to adhere. In these circumstances, Mr. Deputy President, I fear it is impossible for me to yield to the persuasion of the Honourable Pandit, but I would like, if I may, to thank him for the very kindly and reasonable manner in which he put his request. He put it so nicely that it really annoys me to have to say no.

As regards the Honourable Member who has just sat down, I would like to draw attention to one item in the Schedule attached to the Bill. If he will look at item 8 in the Schedule, the first sub-item is 18-A. Under 18-A he will find, " fire or other power, not being manual or animal labour ", but if he will look at item 18-B. he will find " The following textile machinery and apparatus by whatever power operated... " A very large number of the items in that list are such as are used in handlooms. Therefore the Bill does include definitely a number of items from which duty is being removed and the removal of that duty would directly benefit the handloom industry.

Mr. M. S. Aney (Berar Representative) : I move that the names of Mr. Sesha Ayyangar and Mr. Mukhtar Singh be added to the Select Committee.

Mr. Deputy President : The motion before the House is that the names of Mr. M. S. Sesha Ayyangar and Mr. Mukhtar Singh be added to the Select Committee.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett (Leader of the House) : May I point out that this Committee is the same in composition as the Committee that was set up to examine the duty on yarn and it will be inconvenient to have different Members on the two Committees, the essential points for discussion being the same. In these circumstances I would suggest that this motion be not pressed.

Mr. M. S. Aney : I do not think there is any point in the contention that the Committee should be identical, and the addition of two names is not going to make them more inconvenient. I do not therefore see the force of the opposition of the Honourable the Leader of the House.

(At this stage Mr. Deputy President vacated the Chair which was resumed by Mr. President.)

Mr. President : The Honourable Member from Berar has, I understand, proposed two more names to the list and the Leader of the House has opposed the proposal.

The question that I have to put is :

" That the names of Mr. M. S. Sesha Ayyangar and Mr. Mukhtar Singh be added to the list of the Select Committee."

The motion was negatived.

Mr. President : The question then is :

" That the Bill further to amend the Indian Tariff Act, 1894, be referred to a Select Committee consisting of Maulvi Muhammad Yakub, Mr. R. K. Shanmukham Chetty, Sir Victor Sassoon, Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas, Mr. W. Stenhouse Lamb, Dr. A. Suhrawardy, Diwan Chaman Lall, Mr. N. M. Joshi, Raja Ghazanfar Ali Khan, Mr. C. Duraiswamy Aiyangar, Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta, Mr. S. C. Mitra, Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru, Munshi Iswar Saran, Mr. M. R. Jayakar, and the Mover; and that the number of members whose presence shall be necessary to constitute a meeting of the Committee be 5 and that the Committee be instructed to report on or before the 31st August, 1927."

The motion was adopted.

THE CRIMINAL LAW AMENDMENT BILL.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar (Home Member) : Sir, I move for leave to introduce a Bill further to amend the Indian Penal Code and the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, for a certain purpose.

I do not propose at this stage, until Honourable Members have had an opportunity of reading at leisure the provisions of the Bill, to speak in any detail. I will only say this, that I hope, and confidently hope, that Honourable Members of this House will unanimously agree that this is an opportune and a desirable measure.

The motion was adopted.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Sir, I introduce the Bill.

THE BAMBOO PAPER INDUSTRY (PROTECTION) BILL.

The Honourable Sir George Rainy (Member for Commerce and Railways) : I rise to move that the Bill to amend the law relating to the fostering and development of the Bamboo Paper Industry in British India, be referred to a Select Committee consisting of Mr. Arthur Moore, Mr. N. C. Kelkar, Mr. K. C. Roy, Mr. K. C. Neogy, Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi, Mr. T. Prakasam, Pandit Nilakantha Das and the Mover ; and that the number of Members whose presence shall be necessary to constitute a meeting of the Committee be 3 and that the Committee be instructed to report on or before the 31st August, 1927.

I said, Mr. President, when I introduced this Bill, that it dealt with three separate points. I will endeavour to make my more detailed explanation to-day as brief as I can. I should like to go back to the original enquiry into the paper industry that was conducted by the Tariff Board in 1924-25. Very early in that enquiry it became evident that some of the paper imported into India competed with Indian paper, some of it did not, and some of it was on the border line and it was difficult to say whether it did compete or not. At the beginning of the enquiry, the paper manufacturers asked for a protective duty upon " newsprint ", that is to say, the kind of paper on which newspapers are commonly printed, and from the first there was strong opposition both from the importers and from the newspapers. What was said was that the mills in India could not, in fact, make paper which would compete in quality and price with the imported " newsprint ". The paper made in the Indian mills was too expensive to compete, and therefore, however high the duty might be, they never would be able to supply the needs of the newspapers in a satisfactory manner. The reason why " newsprint " can be imported into India cheaply is because it contains a high percentage of what is called mechanical wood-pulp. Much the greater part of the world's paper is made from wood fibre, but part of the paper is made from what is known as chemical pulp. If you want a strong and satisfactory and durable paper, you have to use chemical pulp, because in the process of manufacture it is by means of the application of chemicals that the various substances are removed, which would be of no use to the paper and indeed would injure it. But when a cheap paper is required, it is not necessary to use exclusively chemical pulp and cheap paper contains a high percentage of what is called mechanical pulp which is produced by a grinding process. Paper of that kind does not last very long. It is not durable and it is a very weak paper.

[Sir George Rainy.]

It is very easy to tear it. It is used chiefly for newspapers which are essentially ephemeral productions. The fact that it is not very strong and is not very durable does not matter.

The result of these early discussions at the beginning of the Tariff Board inquiry was that eventually the paper manufacturers withdrew their application. They said that they would not ask the Tariff Board to recommend that a protective duty should be put on imported "newsprint". But there was never any question at all from the beginning to the end of the inquiry that the paper which contained no mechanical pulp—which is a much more expensive paper—there was no question at all that it did compete directly with the paper made in the Indian mills, and having taken part in that inquiry I can say that, from beginning to end, that point was never in dispute. If a paper contained no mechanical pulp at all, then it was a paper which competed with the paper made by the Indian mills and it ought to be subject to the protective duty. Well, it was believed when the Bamboo Paper Industry (Protection) Act was passed into law that the Act had been so drafted that paper containing no mechanical wood pulp would be subject to the protective duty. But some months ago the paper importers—or particular paper importing firms—put in a representation to the effect that, as the Act was worded, if a paper contained even 1 per cent. of mechanical wood pulp it was subject to the protective duty, but if it contained no mechanical wood pulp at all, then it was not subject to the protective duty but only to the revenue duty. Legal opinion was taken by the Government of India on this question and the opinion given was that the paper importers were right—that as the Act was actually worded there could be no question that paper which contained no mechanical wood pulp was not subject to the protective duty. The exact wording of the entry in the Tariff Schedule, I think, is "printing paper, all sorts, containing less than 65 per cent. mechanical wood pulp." It was held by lawyers that if it did not contain any pulp at all, then it did not contain less than 65 per cent. To a mathematical mind that sort of argument is difficult, but I have no doubt that the opinion we received was the correct opinion and the only possible opinion from the legal point of view. That was the situation with which the Government had to deal and they came quite clearly to their decision. In the first place we had to administer the law as it stood. We could not go behind the wording of the Act to the original intention. That would not have been permissible. We had to carry out the law as it stood. But the second part of the Government decision was this—that we could not possibly let that state of affairs continue. Legislation at the first opportunity would be necessary because what it meant was that the keystone of the protective arch having been removed the whole structure was in danger of collapse. The great bulk of the paper which was most likely to compete with the Indian mill paper was going to be admitted to the country, subject only to the revenue duty. Therefore, on the 1st of July last, the Government of India published a communiqué to the effect that they intended to legislate at the first opportunity, and also that they would legislate so as to give retrospective effect to the new provision which correctly declares the intention of the Legislature. That was necessary because otherwise even during the three or four months that might elapse before it was possible to amend the law, considerable damage might be done to the paper industry in India. I should like to explain here that the Government of India would ordinarily be very averse, and I think the Legislature would take the same view, to giving retrospective effect to a fiscal measure of this kind. That is a step which can be justified only in entirely exceptional circumstances. But in this case I do think the circumstances are exceptional, because it means that if retrospective effect is not given, then a real injury will be inflicted on the industry, and the policy deliberately adopted by the Legislature will not receive full effect.

I will turn now to the second point which is dealt with in this Bill. According to the provision in the Act the line between the paper which is subject to the protective duty and the paper which is not so subject is drawn at 65 per cent. of mechanical wood pulp. If it contains less than 65 per cent. the paper is subject to the protective duty. If it contains not less than 65 per cent. it is subject only to the revenue duty. Soon after the passing of the Act the question was raised whether this percentage, this 65 per cent., was to be calculated on the total weight of the paper or only on its fibre content. I may explain that printing paper, in addition to the wood fibre or grass fibre or bamboo fibre, or whatever it may be, which essentially is the paper, also contains what is known as loading or sizing which is necessary to give the paper a proper surface. China clay is very largely used for the purpose, and in extreme cases, the loading may be as much as 20 per cent. of the weight of the paper. Now, it makes a good deal of difference whether you calculate the percentage on the total weight of paper or only on the weight of fibre. Let us take as an illustrative case, a paper in which the loading amounts to as much as 15 per cent. of the total weight. Now, suppose mechanical wood pulp is 70 per cent. of the fibre content. In that case it would be less than 60 per cent. of the total weight, and therefore, the method by which you calculate the percentage will determine, in the case I have given, whether it is to be subject to the protective duty or not. Naturally in these circumstances the paper manufacturers said the percentage ought to be calculated on total weight because that brought more imported paper under the protective duty ; and equally naturally the importers contended that it ought to be calculated on the fibre content only. When this question first came before the Central Board of Revenue they issued a ruling that the percentage should be calculated on the fibre content, basing themselves on what they believed to be the intention of the Tariff Board and on the practice of the trade so far as it could be ascertained. However, the question came up again at the end of 1926 and on this occasion it was thought necessary to take legal advice. Here again the legal opinion took us rather by surprise. The opinion given was that, as the entry in the Tariff Schedule was worded, there was no alternative but to calculate the percentage on the total weight ; and accordingly the Government of India issued a fresh ruling giving effect to the legal advice we had received. In this case also it is quite clear the first thing the Government of India had to do was to administer the law as it stood. I think the matter was raised during a discussion possibly in March or the end of February last ; I think it was Colonel Crawford who raised a question in this House and that Sir Charles Innes promised that the matter would be looked into, and that, if necessary, legislation would be undertaken. When the question was examined it was found that there was a difficulty in determining what the intention of the Legislature on this point really had been when it passed the Bamboo

[Sir George Rainy.]

Paper Industry (Protection) Act. I was myself a member of the Tariff Board that inquired into that case, and in these circumstances I had my own views, but it was not clear that it could be demonstrated, so as to convince everybody, what the intention had been. In these circumstances it was thought advisable to refer the matter to the present Tariff Board and to ask them to make an inquiry, to take evidence from both sides and make recommendations. The Board's Report has been received and copies are in the hands of Members of the House. I will try to indicate what their view is and the reasons which have led them to it. They point out that this new ruling by which the percentage is calculated on the total weight of the paper has given rise to considerable diversity of practice in the different Customs Houses, and that of course is very undesirable. It has also made it necessary to analyse a large number of samples of imported paper in order to determine whether they do, or do not, contain less than 65 per cent. of mechanical wood pulp. Now it is not an easy matter to analyse paper accurately and that is a point which in the original inquiry was constantly pressed on the Tariff Board. They drew attention to these difficulties created by the new ruling, but rightly, I think, they do not attempt to lay too great a stress on it. Probably, in the course of time most of them could be overcome, and the procedure of the trade would be brought into conformity with the law as it is now interpreted. But they have definitely recommended that the law should be amended so that it may be made quite clear that the percentage ought to be calculated on the fibre content only and not on the total weight of paper as it is at present. The reasons why they have arrived at that recommendation deserve to be stated clearly. I should like to call the attention of the House, if I may, to a certain passage in the original Report of the Tariff Board submitted in 1925, and I will read it if I may :

'With a few exceptions,'

it was said :

"the important Indian newspapers are printed in 'newsprint', a kind of paper which contains about 70 per cent. of mechanical wood pulp. * * * During the oral examination of the manufacturers at Simla we drew their attention pointedly to the strong objections which could be urged to the imposition of a protective duty on newsprint, and asked them to reconsider the matter. As a result, they informed us on the 30th of August, 1924, of their willingness that mechanical 'newsprint' should be exempted from an increase over its present duty, 'at any rate until such time as we can see what effect such differentiating may have on the paper trade generally'."

They suggested that the examination should extend to all paper containing more than a certain percentage (to be fixed by the Board) of mechanical wood pulp. Then the Report goes on :

"We have no doubt that the manufacturers were well advised in abandoning what was clearly an untenable claim. An increase of 10 per cent. in the duty on 'newsprint' would have been nugatory in its effect, for it would have failed to divert the trade to the Indian mills. Newspapers are ephemeral things, they do not require a strong and durable paper, and cheapness must be for them the primary consideration. It is impossible for the Indian mills using Indian materials to manufacture at a cost which would enable them to compete with imported 'newsprint'."

Now I think it will be quite clear from this passage that the Board's intention was to exclude from the scope of the protective duty the "newsprint" commonly imported into India. There is a second passage I should like to quote :

"We discussed with the representatives of important newspapers, with the manufacturers and with the Controller of Printing, Stationery and Stamps the question how ' newsprint ' should be defined for tariff purposes. The information given by the newspapers shows that the ' newsprint ' commonly imported contains about 70 per cent. of mechanical wood pulp and if paper containing this percentage remains subject to the existing duty, the newspapers will not be prejudiced. We enquired from the Controller whether, by chemical or other tests, the proportion of mechanical wood pulp contained in a given sample of paper could be ascertained accurately, and he said he was doubtful whether it could be done. We think it should be possible, however, to determine the proportion with an error not exceeding 5 per cent., and if the tests at present used in the Controller's Office are insufficient, more exact methods of estimating may be known in other countries. Our proposal is that all papers containing not less than 65 per cent. of mechanical wood pulp should remain subject to the present rates of duty on ' newsprint '."

I have quoted this passage, because I think that read in conjunction with the other passage previously quoted it makes it pretty clear what the intention of the Board was, namely, that the " newsprint " commonly imported into India should never be subject to the protective duty, and that the percentage was fixed in such a manner as to leave a margin, so that there would be no danger of " newsprint " being rendered liable to the protective duty owing to the difficulty of making an accurate analysis. If I am right, Mr. President, in the inference I have drawn as to the original intention of the Board, and if I may fairly, as I think we may, assume, that it was the intention of the Legislature to give effect to the views of the Tariff Board on that point, then it follows at once that the law ought to be amended, for under the law as it is interpreted at present, a considerable amount of " newsprint " which is being imported into India is being held liable to the protective duty. Before passing from this point I should like to draw attention to a passage in the Report of the present Tariff Board. They make a comparison between the price of " newsprint " after it has paid the protective duty and the price of the paper which the Indian mills would sell in competition with the imported " newsprint ". The figures are these. After it has paid the protective duty the price of imported " newsprint " is not more than Rs. 440 a ton (whereas the price of the Indian paper which might be sold in competition is Rs. 500 a ton). These figures make it clear, I think, that the imposition of the protective duty on certain classes of " newsprint " can serve no useful purpose. The only result would be that newspapers would either have to pay more for their paper, but still continue to import it, or they will use a lower quality of imported paper. Neither of these results is a desirable result.

I come now to the last of the three points embodied in this Bill and I will deal with it as briefly as I can. The definition of " writing paper " in the Tariff Schedule is as follows :

" Writing paper, all sorts, including ruled or printed forms and account and manuscript books and the binding thereof."

The reference to ruled or printed forms and account and manuscript books was inserted, because if they were omitted, there was a danger that certain kinds of writing paper might escape the protective duty and the protection given to the Indian industry might thereby be rendered ineffective. But it was not observed when these words were inserted that on certain kinds of ruled and printed forms and account and manuscript books, the protective duty of one anna a pound might not only be less but sometimes a great deal less than the revenue duty of 15 per cent., and the unintended result has been to occasion a loss of revenue to Government which, it is believed, cannot be much less than a lakh of rupees a year. Now, there is no reason at all why, because the paper industry is protected the duty on articles of this kind should be less than what it would have been if all paper was subject to ordinary revenue duty. For this reason it is proposed in the Bill that in future the duty on writing paper should be one anna per pound or 15 per cent. ad valorem whichever is higher. Thus, if the paper is a comparatively cheap paper and competes with Indian paper, it will be subject to the protective duty. If it is an expensive paper—and at present in India the really expensive kinds of paper are not made—then the paper will automatically pay at the ordinary revenue rate of 15 per cent.

I have tried, Mr. President, in what I have said, to cover most of the important points. I will only add that in asking the House to refer the Bill to a Select Committee, I ask them to affirm the general principle that the defect in the law by which the protective policy as regards the paper industry has been endangered should be put right. I do not ask them to come to any final decision as regards the other two points. They are clearly both of them Select Committee points and I do not ask for any final decision as regards them ; but I do ask that the House should accept the general principle that the law regarding the protection of the bamboo paper industry should be brought into a state in which it really gives effect to the policy of Government.

Sir, I move the motion which stands in my name. (Applause.)

Mr. President : The question is :

"That the Bill to amend the law relating to the fostering and development of the Bamboo Paper Industry in British India, be referred to a Select Committee consisting of Mr. Arthur Moore, Mr. N. C. Kelkar, Mr. K. C. Roy, Mr. K. C. Neogy, Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi, Mr. T. Prakasam, Pandit Nilakantha Das and the Mover; and that the number of members whose presence shall be necessary to constitute a meeting of the Committee be 3 and that the Committee be instructed to report on or before the 31st August, 1927."

The motion was adopted.

THE INDIAN DIVORCE (AMENDMENT) BILL.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar (Home Member) : Sir, I move that the Bill further to amend the Indian Divorce Act for a certain purpose, be taken into consideration.

This is a very limited measure and the explanation which has already been given by my predecessor at an earlier stage is one to which I have really very little to add. I will briefly remind the House what the purposes of this measure are.

Under the recently enacted Indian Colonial and Divorce Jurisdiction Act, rules have been passed in accordance with section 1 of that Act providing for the appointment in India of an officer to discharge the duties which in England are discharged by the King's Proctor. In so far as that Act is operative in respect of the appointment of such an officer in India it covers only the cases of British subjects domiciled in England or in Scotland. It is desirable that a similar provision should be made to permit of the appointment of an officer in India to deal with matrimonial causes the parties to which are domiciled in India. That, Sir, is the brief and limited purpose of this Act. I move that the Bill be taken into consideration.

The motion was adopted.

Clause 2 was added to the Bill.

Clause 1 was added to the Bill.

The Title and Preamble were added to the Bill.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Sir, I beg to move that the Bill be passed.

The motion was adopted.

THE CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE (SECOND APPEALS) BILL.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar (Home Member) : Sir, I beg to Move that the Bill further to amend the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, for a certain purpose (Amendment of Order XLII in the First Schedule), be referred to a Select Committee consisting of Mr. K. C. Neogy, Sir Hari Singh Gour, Mr. C. Duraiswamy Aiyangar, Mr. N. C. Kelkar, Dr. A. Suhrawardy, Mian Muhammad Shah Nawaz, Mr. R. T. F. Kirk, Munshi Iswar Saran, Mr. H. Tonkinson, and the Mover ; and that the number of members whose presence shall be necessary to constitute a meeting of the Committee shall be five.

This Bill has already been before the House. It is a technical matter, the issue involved being really a very narrow one, and I do not propose to detain the House at any length in making this motion. I merely observe that one of the recommendations of the Civil Justice Committee was intended to restrain in the interests of the more rapid and equitable administration of justice, appeals to the High Court in cases where such appeals do not appear really necessary for the execution of justice. The present Bill is very much more restricted in scope. As Honourable Members will observe, it deals only with appeals from concurrent judgment of the lower Courts. I do not think I need add to what I have said. I make the motion standing in my name.

Mr. K. C. Neogy (Dacca Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, among other things which my Honourable friend Mr. Crerar has received as a legacy from his predecessor in office, is a box of chocolates to be held in trust for Members of this House. It is a very expensive brand of chocolates, it cost us about 3 lakhs of rupees, and was manufactured by that well-known firm of confectioners, the Civil Justice Committee. (Hear, hear.) The special instructions which Sir Alexander Muddiman must have given to his successor are, to be very careful about the distribution of these sweets ; not to give away too many at a time, so that the box might last as long as possible (Laughter), and the sweets are to be distributed only on special occasions. And to-day I think has been selected for the distribution of these sweets particularly because of the passing of the Criminal Law Amendment Bill yesterday.

Sir, it is rather difficult to be serious in dealing with the procedure Government have adopted in making their legislative proposals on the basis of the recommendations of the Civil Justice Committee. The Civil Justice Committee, among other things, made about 47 recommendations which require legislative enactment in order to be given effect to, and I suppose we have not got through more than seven or eight at the most ; so that if we go on at this rate it will take us about 10 or 12 years more to finish the legislation that will be required to give effect to all the recommendations of the Civil Justice Committee. I do not know, Sir, what particular reason has induced Government to adopt this dilatory procedure in regard to these recommendations. There are recommendations that require the amendment of particular Acts, for instance. I do not know, Sir, why Government have not put into one Bill all their proposals relating to the amendment of one particular Act. Other alternative methods could easily be conceived. For instance, some recommendations relate to the restriction of the right of appeal. Others again relate to the tightening up of execution proceedings. Why could not each class of these proceedings be put into one comprehensive Bill, in order to enable us on this side of the House to have a wider view of things and come to a decision relating to the principles underlying all those recommendations ? At Delhi, during last winter, this House rejected certain proposals which wanted to restrict the remedy which people have at present by way of preferring applications to the High Court under section 115 of the Civil Procedure Code. That was very properly rejected by the House. On the present occasion here is a proposal made by the Government which deserves no better treatment at the hands of this House. Sir, the recommendation of the Civil Justice Committee on which this Bill is supposed to be based, as has already been pointed out by the Honourable the Home Member, was a more comprehensive recommendation. I will place before the House what that recommendation exactly was. The Committee say :

"We are of opinion that in every second appeal to the High Court the appellant should be required to deposit in Court, in cash or in Government promissory notes, a definite sum by way of security for the respondent's costs of the appeal."

Later on, they went on to observe as follows :

"We think that a very reasonable rule would be as follows—to require the appellant to deposit the amount of any costs awarded against him in the lower Courts plus the amount at which the respondent, if successful, could tax his pleader's fee under the High Court rules."

On the present occasion what the Government propose to do is to require the appellant, only in certain classes of cases, to deposit the costs of the second appeal in the High Court. Sir, the deposit will be required only in cases where the appeal is preferred against concurrent judgments. This distinction, as I have already pointed out, was not made by the Civil Justice Committee because of the rather incongruous position in which that Committee would have found itself had it made that recommendation. Sir, the Bill was circulated for eliciting public opinion, as a result of the motion which was carried by this House about a year ago, in the last Assembly. And with what result ? The High Courts of Calcutta, Bombay and the Punjab are opposed to this measure. The High Courts of the United Provinces, Burma and Bihar and Orissa support the Bill, and the Judges of the Madras High Court, the Oudh Chief Court and the Judicial Commissioners of the Central Provinces and of Sind are divided in their opinion. I do not propose to place all the opinions before this House, but from what I have already stated it will be seen that there is a very serious divergence of opinion in this matter.

And what is most remarkable is that the Calcutta High Court which is presided over, among others by Sir George Rankin, who was the Chairman of the Civil Justice Committee, has forwarded a very strong note opposing this measure. Sir, I find that the letter of the Calcutta High Court is dated the 26th January, 1927. Sir George Rankin had, I think, already assumed charge of the office of Chief Justice of that Court before this date, so that either Sir George Rankin differs from the Government of India in regard to this Bill or he has changed his opinion, because there is no indication in this letter that the Judges are divided in their opinion on the subject ; and my surmise is that Sir George Rankin must have seen, as I said, the incongruity of the position that the Government have taken up in this connection. One could have understood the original recommendation of the Civil Justice Committee being sought to be given effect to—making deposit a normal feature in every second appeal. But for the life of me, I cannot understand why Government want to make this distinction between concurrent judgments and dissenting judgments. Sir, there are no statistics available to show as to whether in the second appeals admitted by the High Courts under Order XLI, rule 11, the number of dismissals is greater in the case of appeals preferred against concurrent judgments than in the case of appeals preferred against dissenting judgments. The Civil Justice Committee did not think it necessary to inquire on this point because they did not seek to make any distinction between these two classes of cases. But I took the trouble of finding out as far as possible as to what the position was likely to be on this point. I took the latest complete volumes of the Indian Law Reports, of the Calcutta Series, the Madras Series and the Bombay Series, for the year 1926 ; and I found, taking the Calcutta High Court first, among the cases reported in that volume, 4 second appeals were allowed from concurrent judgments—that is to say, in four cases the concurrent judgments were set aside by the High Court ; and in four cases, again, the appeals preferred from concurrent judgments were dismissed by the High Court. So the number is quite equal. But there is another very interesting figure which I shall just give to the House which shows that among the other appeals that are reported in that volume, no less than six second appeals were dismissed—appeals which were from dissenting judgments. Therefore, Sir, if we can take these figures as a sort of rough guide for coming to a decision on this point, there does not seem any reason whatever for Government to distinguish between concurrent and dissenting judgments ; for we find that in the case of the Calcutta High Court perhaps a larger number of appeals were dismissed which were preferred from dissenting judgments. Now, I come to Bombay. There, I find that four second appeals were allowed from concurrent judgments, five were dismissed from concurrent judgments ; and five again were dismissed from dissenting judgments. In the case of Madras I was rather surprised at the very small number of second appeals reported in that volume, but I find that one appeal was allowed from concurrent judgments, two appeals were dismissed from concurrent judgments, and two appeals were dismissed from dissenting judgments. So, Sir, I maintain that if these figures can be accepted as any guide for the purpose of influencing our decision on the present question, there is absolutely no reason whatsoever for making a distinction between concurrent and dissenting judgments.

Now, Sir, I will place the opinion of the Calcutta High Court before this House. They say as follows :

"The Hon'ble the Chief Justice and Judges do not share in the opinion expressed by the Committee that the absence of a restriction like this, spells injustice in many cases and Their Lordships are unable to subscribe to the view that it will improve the standard of justice. The Code of Civil Procedure was amended in 1908 after exhaustive inquiry and the only change which was introduced with a view to prevent frivolous second appeals was to give power to the Court to send for the record before a preliminary hearing under Order XLI, rule 11. After a second appeal is admitted after a preliminary hearing and after sending for the record, if necessary, it cannot be said that a respondent is called upon to answer a frivolous appeal, and Their Lordships do not think that a further difficulty should be placed in the way of the appellant by asking him to furnish security. In Their Lordships' opinion this will defeat the very object of the rule as it is only the rich litigant who will enjoy the luxury of a second appeal when a poor litigant will be debarred from presenting his appeal though admitted after a preliminary hearing. It may further be pointed out that this Court with a view to discourage frivolous second appeals has made it a practice to insist upon a hearing under Order XLI, rule 11.

In the opinion of the Hon'ble the Chief Justice and Judges, the provisions of Order XLI, rules 10 and 11, are ample for shutting out frivolous appeals and protecting the respondent in a fit case. Their Lordships are, therefore, not in favour of adopting this proposal."

This opinion was submitted on the original proposal of the Civil Justice Committee. Now, the High Court on the present occasion have repeated their observations. They, moreover, say as follows :

"The present proposals of the Government of India go very much further than the proposals of the Civil Justice Committee and in the opinion of the Hon'ble the Chief Justice and Judges"

—be it remembered that Sir George Rankin, the Chief Justice, was the President of the Civil Justice Committee—

"they unduly restrict the right of second appeal. Some of the objections to the present Bill are noticed in the speeches in the Legislative Assembly of Sir Hari Singh Gour and Diwan Bahadur T. Rangachariar, and Their Lordships are of opinion that no grounds whatsoever have been made out for revising the opinion given by this Court in the year 1925."

Sir, what are the present checks on frivolous appeals so far as second appeals are concerned ? As the Calcutta High Court has pointed out, there is Order XLI, rule 10, which reads as follows :

"The appellate Court may, in its discretion, either before the respondent is called upon to appear and answer or afterwards on the application of the respondent, demand from the appellant security for the costs of the appeal, or of the original suit, or both."

Here ample discretion is vested in the High Court for requiring the security for costs to be given if Their Lordships think it necessary and desirable.

Then again, under Order XLI, rule 11 :

"the appellate Court, after sending for the record if it thinks fit so to do, and after fixing a day for hearing the appellant or his pleader and hearing him accordingly if he appears on that day, may dismiss the appeal without sending notice to the Court from whose decree the appeal is preferred and without serving notice on the respondent or his pleader".

Sir, I think I am right in saying that this practice has been universally adopted by all the High Courts and Chief Courts in India, that is to say, no second appeal is admitted all at once, and no respondent is called upon to put in appearance until and unless a preliminary hearing has been gone through, and the Judges have admitted the appeal on the grounds set out in the Civil Procedure Code. Therefore, it is, Sir, that I say that even the existing restrictions give ample scope for requiring security to be given and for dismissing frivolous appeals before the respondent is called upon to appear.

I forgot to refer to another observation which the Calcutta High Court made on a similar occasion previous to the Civil Justice Committee's inquiry, and which has a particular bearing on the present point. This is what the Calcutta High Court said :

"It would be very inadvisable to make any distinction between judgments of affirmance and those of reversal. If a judge knows that a judgment of affirmance is not open to appeal, save under very particular conditions, such knowledge may be calculated to induce such affirmance rather than a reversal."

Therefore, Sir, I want to submit to this House very strongly that if we are to pass this Bill we would be affecting the quality of justice that is administered in this country by holding out an inducement to the lower Courts, as the Calcutta High Court have observed, to pass judgments of affirmance rather than of reversal. It is a very serious thing which must weigh with this House.

Sir, before I conclude, I would cite the opinion of Mr. Justice Gokaran Nath Misra who has got a learned note on this point. I would make only a few quotations from his note. He says :

"It is clear that notice is issued to the respondent only in those cases, where either the case obviously appears to a Judge of this Court as one involving a point of law or one which is deemed by him as a fairly arguable case. This in my opinion constitutes a sufficient check upon frivolous second appeals. When a Judge of this Court himself has admitted an appeal under Order XLI, rule 11, I do not see any further point in calling upon the appellant to deposit security for costs of the respondent. The appellant cannot in such a case be justly accused of harassing the respondent. If the appeal appears to be a frivolous one and the object of the appellant is found merely to harass the respondent, the Court in all likelihood will reject the appeal. I am of opinion that the subordinate judiciary in this country has not yet come up to that degree of judicial perfection, which may justify the taking away from the High Court of the salutary check which exists in their hands by revising the judgment of the lower Courts when they have gone wrong on a question of law. My experience is that in several cases I have found the judgment of the Judges hearing the first appeal to be unsatisfactory. I, therefore, consider it to be dangerous to curtail the right of the second appeal."

Later on he says :

"I have always been of opinion that one of the sources which give strength to the British Government in this country is the sense of security felt by the Indian public that ultimately justice will be done to their cases. Although I am quite anxious to see that frivolous litigations should be stopped, I am equally strong in my opinion that no attempt should be made to stop litigation which is just and fair and which a party resorts to in order to enforce his just rights.''

I conclude by asking the House to remember the warning which this Honourable Judge has uttered.

The Assembly then adjourned for Lunch till a Quarter to Three of the Clock.

The Assembly re-assembled after Lunch at a Quarter to Three of the Clock, Mr. President in the Chair.

Sir Hari Singh Gour (Central Provinces Hindi Divisions : Non-Muhammadan) : I join with my Honourable friend, Mr Neogy, in deprecating this piece-meal legislation. I expected after what we had said in the Delhi Session that, if the Government wished to formulate their recommendations on the Report of the Civil Justice Committee, they would, at any rate, take each Act as a whole and then come up to the House so that we may be able to see how the amendments proposed by the Government are interrelated and how they act and re-act upon the present statute law of the country. Instead of doing that, what the Government have been doing is to introduce into this House from time to time tiny Bills dealing with one or two topics dealt with by the Civil Justice Committee. However, we must take the Bill as we find it, and what do we find there ? Honourable Members are aware that a similar Bill was before this House some time ago. They have now modified it, and I venture to submit that the modification has made it much worse than when the original Bill was introduced into this House. Let me point out to the Honourable occupants of the Treasury Benches how the Bill has deteriorated since its original draft. The Report of the Civil Justice Committee intended to cut down the right of second appeal and three proposals were before that Committee. One was to direct a frontal attack upon all second appeals and to provide that in all cases in which there is a concurrent finding of the two subordinate courts there should be no second appeal as of right, and that an application by way of leave must precede the filing of a regular second appeal. That was the first proposal. The second proposal was that in cases tried by the original courts there should be a bench of subordinate judges who should dispose of these appeals and the decisions of this bench should be final. Those were the frontal attacks directed against the right of second appeal. But there was a flank attack and an insidious one too. It is this, that the right of second appeal should be made conditional and contingent by providing certain obstacles, impediments in the way of the appellant, and the proposal before the House is one of those proposals. It proposes to place an impediment in the way of second appeals in cases where the judgments or the decisions of the original court and of the lower appellate court are concurrent. Now, I wish to ask Honourable Members one question. The judgments of the two courts may be concurrent, but the findings may not be concurrent. Take, for instance, a very simple case. The first court decides the case upon the merits. It goes to the lower appellate court, whom we shall call the District Judge. There the appeal is dismissed either because it was barred by limitation, or because it was filed too late, or because the court-fees had not been paid, or because the appellant had made default by not appearing when he was called upon or upon grounds other than those taken by the first court. Now, the judgment of the appellate court would be a concurrent judgment, that is to say, the decree of the lower appellate court would be a concurrent decree, but the lower appellate court has either not gone into the merits of the case at all, or if it has, it may have reversed the findings of the trial Judge upon every point though it may still have confirmed his decree. In that case what is the remedy ? No provision is made in the Bill as to what the unsuccessful appellant is to do before the High Court, except that he is to give security in the sufficient sum provided for it. That is the first point, and what is to become of the cross-appellant ? Is he also to give security ? If not, the poor appellant is doubly hit—his appeal is dismissed because he had not the money to deposit for security—and by his appeal he runs the risk of losing the little he may have got, because it gave the respondent a chance to turn the tables upon him.

Now take another case. Under the Code of Civil Procedure, section 100, there are three cases in which a second appeal is maintainable. The first is when the decision is " contrary to law or some usage having the force of law ". In my subsequent reference to this clause I shall refer to it for compendiousness of expression as a second appeal on the ground of law. Then follow two very important clauses and I ask the Honourable Member to indulge me by listening to me as to what I have got to say about those clauses. The second ground upon which a second appeal is maintainable is " the decision having failed to determine some material issue of law or usage having the force of law ". The third is a substantial error or defect in the procedure. Honourable Members who are conversant with legal procedure will bear me out that the third ground is often a very good ground for revision. Those are the three grounds upon which a second appeal is maintainable. Now what does the section say. The section says :

" Provided that the High Court may dispense with such security in any case in which it is of opinion that the decision from which the appeal is preferred is on the face of it contrary to law or some usage having the force of law."

In other words the High Court is given the discretion in cases falling under clause (a), that is to say, where the decision is contrary to law, but what about the other two clauses ? Suppose the High Court finds that the decision falls under the provisions of clauses (b) and (c), and (c) as you will find is a much more serious defect in the trial of a case than either (a) or (b), because the ordinary procedure has not been followed in the trial of the cases. In those cases the High Court is given no discretion at all. The proviso excepts only clause (a) and not clauses (b) and (c). And this is not a novel argument. I addressed this House on the identical point on the last occasion and, if I may borrow the words of the Honourable the Home Member, my observations have been before the House since the last winter Session. How have they rectified matters and what answer have they got to give in regard to the serious defect which you have in this Bill ? But that is not all. This Bill contains as many lines as there are defects and I shall make good my statement. First of all what is the present law ? Sir, the present law has been in force from 1882. Honourable Members will remember the enactment of section 549 of the old Code of Civil Procedure, the much lamented Code of Civil Procedure in which we had consecutive sections. It is now Order XLI, Rule 10. It provides that if the respondent or would be respondent or the court suo moto desires that the appellant should furnish security for costs, the court may order accordingly, and I find throughout the Report of the Civil Justice Committee that there is no evidence led before that Committee, nor any finding arrived at upon such evidence, that the present enactment, which was only passed in 1908, has entailed any hardship upon the appellant or upon the respondent. The Civil Justice Committee was appointed not out of any solicitude to safeguard the interests of the respondent or of the appellant. It was appointed, as Honourable Members are aware, to curtail litigation and they have cut the Gordian knot by saying : 'You want us to cut down litigation. Well, we chop this thing off here, that thing off there and will truncate your procedure and there you are, we have cut down litigation". That is not the way to deal with a question of this kind at all. We find in the Statement of Objects and Reasons unwonted solicitude expressed for a respondent, in order to protect the interests of the respondent. Now I beg to ask why should you not have said in plain language that the Bill was intended to cut down litigation or rather to cut down second appeals. That was the object of the Civil Justice Committee and you come here and trot out the philanthropic argument that this Bill is enacted in the interests of the respondent as if the respondent has not been able to take care of himself. Sir, while considering the case of a poor respondent, have you ever considered the case of a poor appellant ? The Calcutta High Court and all other High Courts advert to this aspect of the question. Suppose a man is a poor man. He has gone to the first court and lost his case He has probably spent his all in the first court and he files an appeal either by borrowing money or by pledging his chattels and goes to the High Court because he finds that the judgment passed by the trial court is in violation of every known rule of procedure. That is to say, he brings his case under section 100, clause (c). A very serious case as I have said, though in such a case the High Court interfere even in revision. What is he to do ? The High Court says : " You are a poor man. I commiserate with you but the proviso does not give me the discretion at all. I have therefore to call upon you to pay up the respondent's costs. " And if the respondent is a rich man and engages a senior counsel he goes to the High Court and says : " My costs in this case are so much. " And the Court then calls upon the appellant to deposit those costs. If he is unable to do so the court must reject his appeal. Is that justice ? Take another and still more important case. The Civil Justice Committee was appointed for the purpose of shortening litigation. Now, will the procedure you have prescribed shorten litigation ? It will lengthen it. Let me show you why and how. First of all in every conceivable case counsel will be engaged for the appellant to bring his case under the proviso, and there will be argument at the Bar whether the case falls under the proviso or not. That is really hearing No. 1. Then there is the order passed that you shall give security. Then you go to the ministerial department, and time is given for the purpose of finding security. Now if the respondent is obstructive, and many respondents are, he goes before the court and says : " This security is insufficient. The surety is a man of straw ". The case is then sent down to the lower court. Then he has to certify that the security is a good one. But even if he is a good surety your Bill requires that he should have ready cash. He may be a good security without being able to produce the cash or Government securities that you demand as a deposit. I think perhaps this Bill is inspired by the Finance Department seeing that their recent flotation has not been quite the success they expected it to be and they probably want litigants to purchase and invest their money in Government securities. But what is the object of it all ? I cannot understand. Do you expect a poor rustic of the countryside to give you either cash or Government securities ? He will probably have to sell his bullocks and his plough before he is able to pay cash into a court of justice. Surely, Sir, such a law can only be conceived on the Olympian heights of Simla ; it could not be conceived by those who live and toil amongst the millions in the plains below. And this is the sort of law which it is proposed to enact Then, Sir, look at the third point. Under the Code of Civil Procedure High Courts have made certain rules as regards the fixation of costs. You may pay your counsel any amount of money, but there is a fixed schedule of rates—sometimes a very inadequate one—upon which the court awards costs. But in this case when you go before the High Court there is no provision here that the security will be on the lines of the scheduled or certified costs. The proviso here is this : " such amount as the court thinks fit ". Now the Court has in each case to decide what is the amount which it considers fit. I do not know whether counsel would not say : " My Lord, this is an extremely important case. It deals with the right of way. It deals with injunction. It deals with my most valuable land. This may be a petty rent suit of Rs. 2, but the question involved is a very important question affecting as it does the whole of my estate ". Well the court has now to decide what is the cost which it thinks fit, and it says : " I have not made up my mind as to what would be the cost. I shall issue a notice upon the respondent audi alteram partem. That is the law which the Judges follow. And the Judges will never decide a case unless they have heard both sides of the question. Now I have told you that you have, first of all, a proviso through which every counsel worthy of his salt will try to struggle for the benefit of his client. You have secondly the question of security and the adequacy of it which has got to be inquired into. Then you have the third hearing on the merits of the case ; and as my friend, Mr. Neogy has pointed out, citing a judgment of the Calcutta High Court, when the High Court Judges find that concurrent judgments are let into the court through the very narrow door of the provisions of this Act, they would regard appellants' appeals more or less as an exception, and there would be a tendency on the part of District Judges to concur in the findings of the first court. Those are not my remarks, those are the observations made by the High Court. I therefore submit, what will be the ultimate result of this very short-sighted legislation ? Would it not lead to the deterioration of justice in the mofussil ? Would it not lead to the prolongation of litigation which it is your purpose to shorten ? And would it not lead to an unnecessary waste of time in having to hear this appeal in three and conceivably four stages when it is only heard now in two short stages ? There is, first of all, the examination of the case under Order XLI, rule 11. Is this a good case for a second appeal or not ? And if you find that it is a good case—and they have their rules or practice on the subject—then it is immediately set down without hearing the appellant for final hearing, and on that final hearing the case is disposed of one way or the other. That is the procedure, and what are you going to do ? You come up here and say : " We wish to shorten the procedure "—and the Honourable the Home Member has made no secret of the fact that it is his intention in spite of what has been said in the opening sentence of the Statement of Objects and Reasons. Now I ask him in all seriousness, does he think that in point of practice it would lead to the shortening of litigation ? I humbly submit that it will do nothing of the sort, and it would waste the time of the High Courts much more than it does under the present procedure.

Now, Sir, I always thought that the Government of India have a very strong argument which they use and use with good effect, namely, that all legislation must be post facto. First of all you must make out a prima facie case ; and if you once make out a prima facie case, then the whole machinery of the Government of India begins to grind. Now I wish to ask this question. Has the Honourable the Home Member collected any materials, has he got any evidence that the decree of the lower appellate court, or, for the matter of that, of the trial court, has caused any hardship in the matter of costs ? I wish to submit, Sir—and I have been practising at the Bar for nearly 35 years and I have never heard any complaint from litigants that they have been deprived of their costs, and whenever I have had complaints of that character, I went up immediately before the High Court and said : " Sir, this is a case in which we want costs, " and ordinarily the High Court would immediately issue notice and order the deposit of costs. It causes no trouble, and I wish to ask why do you wish to tighten the law ? How far have you found that the provisions of Order XLI, Rule 11 are inadequate ? Let the Judges of the High Court be my witness. What do the High Court say ? Is there a single High Court here in this compilation of opinions, is there a single High Court, that has expressed the opinion that apart from what the Civil Justice Committee have said, apart from the high prestige of the Government of India who have introduced this Bill, apart from a priori consideration, that there have been any cases of hardship or failure of justice in second appeals which call for the enactment of this provision ? Show me a single instance of any High Court having reported favourably on the Bill upon this question. My friend, the Honourable Mr. Neogy, has drawn attention to the opinions of the various High Courts on this question. He has referred to the opposition of the Calcutta and Bombay High Courts. I wish to add that the Rangoon High Court is equally opposed to this measure, and I draw the Honourable the Home Member's attention to the expression of their opinion at page 21 of this compilation and I acknowledge, Sir, with due humility that the reasons which I gave to this House have appealed to their Lordships of the Rangoon High Court; they say they are opposed to it and for the reasons which I submitted to the House on the last occasion. The Madras High Court—see page 20 of the compilation—are opposed to it. Look at the Judges who are opposed to it. They are all experienced Judges drawn from the Bar and who know what a huge sacrifice it is to a poor litigant to have to carry his case to the High Court. You know, Sir, how expensive civil litigation is in this country. Up to a certain limit you have to pay 7½ per cent. in court-fees ; and when one goes to the High Court and pays his court-fees, what does he get in return ? He files his appeal and then he has to run this extremely difficult hurdle race in which he has to circumvent one hurdle after another and perhaps he will drop through sheer exhaustion before he reaches the final goal. If this is what you call the advancement of the cause of justice, I submit I am certainly not at one with you. Take the opinions of the Allahabad High Court at page 8. Five learned Judges are in favour of it, but the three learned Judges, all drawn from the Bar, are against it and they give very good reasons for it. The Lucknow Chief Court, my friend Mr. Neogy has referred to it, and I do not wish, therefore, to repeat his argument. So far, I have been only dealing with the judiciary. Let us not forget that there is such a thing as the Bar in India. What does the Calcutta Bar say ? The Calcutta Bar Association have strongly protested against this measure and I submit the opinion of the Calcutta Bar counts. Honourable Members will find from page 8 the opinion of the Calcutta Bar Association and they are opposed to it, and almost all the Bar Associations consulted on this subject have expressed themselves strongly, and some of them vigorously, against this measure. Now, take the Chambers of Commerce. Are they in favour of it ? They are against it. Let me give you the opinions of the Bombay Chamber of Commerce. The opinions are summarized at page 23. This is what they say :

"All the Bar Associations in Bombay are against the Bill. Of the commercial bodies consulted, the Chamber of Commerce, Bombay, and the Indian Merchants Chamber are against the Bill and the Bombay Presidency Trades Association and the Karachi Chamber of Commerce are in favour of it. The Advocate-General of Bombay is against it."

So that you will see that I have now very briefly summarized the expert, legal and non-legal opinions on the subject. I venture to submit that I am within the mark in saying that the bulk of Indian public opinion, that of the Judges, that of the members of the Bar and of the commercial bodies, is against this measure. In the teeth of this overwhelming evidence that you have against you, do you feel justified in pressing this measure to a Select Committee and placing it upon the Statute-book ? I ask you to reflect, to consider, and consider carefully, that you are not advancing the cause of justice. On the other hand, you are retarding the very cause which you and I have in view, namely, that there should be a satisfactory administration of civil justice in this country.

One more word, Sir, and I have done. In this short Bill we are told that we do not curtail the right of second appeal at all ; we are merely providing for a safeguard. I have already said before and I wish to repeat it that the real underlying object of this Bill is to carry out the recommendation of the Civil Justice Committee. But the Civil Justice Committee themselves have pointed out at page 361 that "it is, of course, conceivable that the requirements of security might exclude a good appeal". And they also refer to the poor appellant. Consequently, the recommendation that has been made by the Civil

[Sir Hari Singh Gour.]

Justice Committee is not couched in such forceful terms as to justify the Government of India in taking the prompt action they have done upon their recommendation. I beg further to point out that the Chief Justice of Bengal, who was the President of the Civil Justice Committee, has now reconsidered the position if he was ever in favour of it. I venture to opine that probably there was always this mental reservation when he signed this Report because he was not quite sure that this was a salutary provision to be embodied in the Act of Legislature. Two conditions are embodied in this paragraph. One is about the poor men, and they say : " Yes, it is a case of hardship ", and the second is a case of shutting out good second appeals, and to these two objections adumbrated in the Report of the Civil Justice Committee I have pointed out many more to the Honourable Members here, the cumulative effect of which, I submit, is that I am not at all convinced that any case, much less a prima facie case, has been made out for the enactment of this measure.

Mr. M. R. Jayakar (Bombay City : Non-Muhammadan Urban) : Sir, I rise to oppose this Bill and I shall do so on the same grounds on which I had the misfortune of opposing another Bill during the Delhi Session, which sought to curtail the powers of the Bombay High Court under another section, namely, section 115 of the Civil Procedure Code. This is a similar Bill, which, looked at from another point of view, seeks to curtail the powers of the High Court under another section of the Civil Procedure Code relating to second appeals.

I must say, Sir, that I cannot congratulate the Government of India on having selected this new piece of legislation out of the box of chocolates, which my Honourable friend Mr. Neogy said had been handed down to the present Home Member as a legacy. I will add one more feature to that analogy and say, with great respect to the Honourable the Home Member, that he has taken out of this box of chocolates this time the most undelicious and pungent piece that he could have selected. What does this Bill propose to do ? I want Honourable Members to follow very carefully what it seeks to do. I oppose this Bill on the ground that it is an interference with the powers of the High Court which should be the last attempt that should be made in the present days by the Government of India. I do not mind stating frankly for whatever it may be worth, that the High Courts still retain that faith and confidence which the Indian litigant used to have at one time in the entire judiciary of British administration, and if the Government of India now make any attempt by piecemeal legislation to take away the powers of the High Court, one after another, under one section in one Session, and another section in another Session, then a time will come when the British administration of justice will become absolutely devoid of the confidence and faith which it ought to command in this country.

The second ground on which I oppose this measure is that it is absolutely unnecessary in the present circumstances to enact this measure. My reasons are that, if the motive of those who are bringing forward this Bill is to restrict " frivolous litigation "—to quote one of the phrases so fondly used by the Civil Justice Committee—our answer is that there are ample provisions in the Civil Procedure Code which have that effect. This part of my argument has already been referred to by the two learned speakers who have preceded me and I do not therefore want to take a long time over it. Without being technical, may I invite the attention of Honourable Members, especially that of the Honourable the Home Member, that under the Civil Procedure Code, there are two very important safeguards relating to the admission of second appeals. As he must be aware, second appeals are only admitted in cases where there are points of law or of usages having the force of law. All questions of fact are excluded in second appeals. Second appeals are not allowed to be entertained on questions of fact. Therefore out of about one hundred appeals which are preferred, I should certainly think a very large percentage of appeals—the Honourable the Home Member has not given us any figures—but I should certainly think about 75 per cent. of the appeals really relate to facts and they are all excluded. What are left over are only those appeals which involve questions of law or usages having the force of law. Pure questions of law are allowed to be entertained in second appeals. That is one safeguard. The other safeguard, which is the result of an amendment introduced in recent years in the old Procedure Code and it is worth remembering, is that the High Court is given enough power in appropriate cases to require security for costs. This is exactly what this Bill proposes to do. Under the present Code the High Court is empowered to require security in cases where it comes to the conclusion that it is a frivolous appeal. That power is given to the High Court under the Civil Procedure Code, and for the information of my Honourable friend the Home Member I will repeat the exact words of the section :

"An appellate court may in its discretion either before the respondent is called upon to appear or after on the application of the respondent demand from the appellants security for costs."

This section is much wider than the section which the Honourable the Home Member is seeking to enact. The discretion given to the High Court for requiring costs under this section which already exists in the Procedure Code is in relation not only to the cost of the second appeal which the present Bill proposes to do, but the costs of the lower courts also. It refers to the costs of the original court, the 1st court of appeal as also of the second appeal. The Bill before us only speaks of the costs of the second appeal, the costs which will be incurred in the High Court. The power which the High Court enjoys at the present moment is with reference to the costs of all the courts, the first court, the second court and the High Court. The only difference is that under the present section the High Court has a very wide discretion. The High Court has the power to determine after hearing arguments whether it is a fit appeal in which they should exercise the power which has been given to them under Rule 10 of Order XLI, or whether they should not exercise the power. My Honourable friends will bear in mind that the section gives an absolute discretionary power to the High Court. The question is— and I want my Honourable friends to approach this Bill from that point of view—whether the time has come in India upon political, social or other grounds, in other words whether we have arrived at the stage of British administration in this country when this wise power of discretion so wisely given to the High Courts should be compulsorily taken away and the High Court should be, by the express words of the Statute, deprived of this power and discretion and compulsorily told that in every case they must require costs irrespective of the fact whether it is a fit case or not, whether the poor man will suffer, whether nice points of law are involved, and the litigant has a chance of success. All these nice considerations, which it is at present possible under the Procedure Code for the High Court to review, the present Bill makes impossible, and the question is whether the time has come in the history of British administration when this power should be taken away from the High Court which is the highest tribunal in the land under the present system. I submit, Sir, that the Honourable the Home Member is taking a false view of the situation in the country if he is under the impression that such a time has come in the administration of this country. I maintain, Sir, that what the patriotic Judge, Mr. Gokaran Nath Misra, said on this point, represents the truth. My Honourable friends have heard his opinion read out to them by Mr. Neogy. He maintains that the time has not yet come in the administration of British justice when the lower judiciary is so experienced, so free from bias, so free from misconceptions and prejudices, that the last resort of justice, namely, the High Court, should be deprived of this wise power and discretion which they enjoy. I entirely agree with that view. I have been at the Bar for a pretty long time, my practice being more or less confined to the appellate side ; and I can say with confidence to the Honourable the Home Member as the result of my experience that if he insists on this measure going through, it will cause an amount of mischief and consternation which I ask the Government not to risk having regard to the issues at stake. I do maintain, Sir, that we must continue the old law. After all, who are our High Court judges, if I might ask the Honourable the Home Member ? They are men drawn from the best part of the Bar itself, or from the Indian Civil Service, or from the subordinate judicial service—in all cases, men who come to the High Court after 20 or 25 years' experience of the work. Such men man the High Courts at the present moment. The power therefore which we give them under the Procedure Code is vested in very safe hands. No case has been made out by the Honourable the Home Member to show that this power has been abused or that any mischief has arisen or that any trouble has been caused, that the courts have been blocked by the hearing of empty appeals which keep the deserving man from justice. No such reasons aided by statistics have been given to us. The Honourable the Home Member made a very laconic and prudently short speech in which no arguments were advanced and no statistics given to us. We were merely asked on his personal assurance to accept the conclusions embodied in the Statute. I submit, Sir, that no case has been made out why we on the Opposition Benches should adopt this measure which mischievously seeks to take away from the High Court this judicious discretion, which has not been abused. If it is a frivolous appeal then the High Court will require costs ; if it is not a frivolous appeal, the High Court will admit it. Why do we want to lay it down as a fiat going out from this House to the High Courts " No, you will not exercise that power ; we want you in the name of justice in every case, however absurd it may be, to require the litigant to give security for the costs " ? I submit, whatever the history of other countries may be of which I happen to be unaware, the time has not come in British India, of which I have some knowledge, when the High Courts should be denuded of this power.

Now, taking the opinions which have been collected in this case by the Government of India, I am very glad to see that in the Court where I have the privilege of practising, the Chief Justice and the Judges are all against this measure. You know, Sir, what reputation the Bombay High Court enjoyed, especially during the regime of the Chief Justice who only retired a year ago. He had the reputation of being a very speedy dispenser of justice. Therefore, the opinion of the Bombay High Court, having regard to its antecedents and reputation, is entitled to special weight. Without tiring my Honourable friends with technicalities may I point out that it is the opinion of the Bombay High Court that the existing provisions of Order XLI, Rule 10, which I just read out to my Honourable friends, by which the High Court has the power in proper cases to require security for costs, are ample and adequate and that the present amendment is unnecessary ? We cannot say that this is only the technical view of the lawyer. I am quite aware of the charge to which we three lawyers who have spoken against this Bill on this side render ourselves liable, that we are only speaking in the interests of our clients or possibly of ourselves ; but we must take the odium of such a charge being levelled and warn the Government that the time has not yet come. It may come 15 or 20 years hence, when our judiciary is ripe, when their judgments are free from blemish as they are not at present. Such a stage may come in course of time when the Opposition Benches may allow such a measure to go through, it has not yet come, and that is the opinion of most of the important men whom Government have consulted. For the information of the European members who represent Chambers of Commerce, may I point out that the Bombay Chamber of Commerce, an entirely European body, and the Indian Merchants' Chamber, an Indian body of like character, express their opinion against this measure. One cannot say that they were actuated by any professional, personal or selfish bias. These are two important bodies representing commercial interests—men prima facie whose view would be in favour of speedy justice. The Bombay Chamber of Commerce is connected with litigants who come up in commercial cases and that body would be prima facie in favour of having a provision in the Statute-book which makes for speedy justice ; and yet it is surprising that both the representative institutions of Bombay —the European Chamber of Commerce and the Indian Chamber of Commerce—were against this measure. The sense of the Bar as a whole is also against it. Time after time we find sprinkled over this collection the opinions of members of the Bar. I hold in my hand the opinion of a very esteemed member of the Bombay Bar who gave his view before the Civil Justice Committee : he said in effect " so far from agreeing with such restrictive measures, I think the time has come when the High Courts' powers instead of being curtailed should be widened ".

The measure which the Government of India are proposing to place on the Statute-book is a retrograde measure. The Civil Justice Committee went even further than the Government of India. If I may say so, theirs was a most retrograde suggestion—they wanted in every second appeal cost to be compulsorily secured, not only in second appeals with concurrent judgments, but in every second appeal. That means that every litigant who goes to the High Court will have to find the money in anticipation, however poor he may be, and however just and deserving his cause, because he has been denied justice in two courts below. No value should therefore be attached to this opinion of the Civil Justice Committee for they have taken a most retrograde view of this question and their opinion is no ground for accepting this measure. I submit, Sir, that the opinions of the Calcutta, Bombay and Punjab High Courts are entitled to greater weight than the view of the Civil Justice Committee.

To sum up in a few words, Government have the opinions of important Courts against this Bill—Bombay, Calcutta and the Punjab. Madras is equally divided. The sense of the Bar is against the Bill, so far as it has been given a chance of expressing its opinion. Commercial bodies of an important character, as in Bombay, are against it. In whose interests, then, are the Government of India bringing forward this measure at a time when the House has very little time to go into unimportant matters? One begins to wonder why the Government of India should have thought fit to bring forward such an empty measure in this excellent weather which makes us feel dismal and long for the sunshine of our native climes. It is surprising that the Government of India come up all this distance and to this great height, in quest of weather which they can have in abundance at many places down in the plains. They would have done well to have waited until we were back in the delightful weather of the Delhi Session, when Members are more cheerful and yielding. They would have been better advised to risk this measure at a more leisurely time when we had fairer weather, less rain and less chill. Having however introduced the Bill, they must take the risk of losing it. Sir, I wish to oppose the Bill.

Mr. H. Tonkinson (Burma : Nominated Official) : Sir, I am surprised, very much surprised, at the opposition which has been raised to this very simple measure. For the benefit of those Members of the House who may not have studied the provisions of the Bill.....

Mr. R. K. Shanmukham Chetty (Salem and Coimbatore cum North Arcot : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : They are all on the other side.

Mr. H. Tonkinson : For the benefit of those Members of the House who may not have studied the provisions of the Bill, may I explain that under this Bill there will have been one original decision. In that decision of the court, the ultimate respondent has been successful. From that decision there has been a first appeal, and the ultimate respondent has again been successful ; that is to say, the respondent has been kept out of his rights as found by the two lower courts, and the principle underlying this Bill is that in such a case it is only right that if the respondent is to be placed in the position of again defending his case he should be given security for his costs. I am aware, Sir, of Rule 10 in Order XLI, upon which so much stress has been laid by my Honourable friend Mr. Jayakar. Under the rule, as he has explained to us, the appellate court may in its discretion demand from the appellant security for the costs of the appeal or for the original suit, or for both. Now the whole idea of the Civil Justice Committee was to substitute in the particular cases to which their proposals related an inflexible rule instead of a provision for discretion. But, Sir, I submit my Honourable friend Mr. Jayakar is not correct in stating that the powers of the High Court under Rule 10 of Order XLI will be withdrawn by this Bill. Those powers, Sir, will remain absolutely unaffected in regard to first appeals ; they will remain absolutely unaffected in regard to second appeals, except those second appeals which fall within the limits of the Bill now before us.

I should like now to refer to the figures given to us this morning by my Honourable friend Mr. Neogy. I have, Sir, the utmost respect for my Honourable friend's learning and for his industry. I am afraid, however, that the industry which he has exhibited in this case is not very fruitful. He has taken the number of second appeals which have been reported in the Law Reports of three High Courts. Of course, Sir, it is only a very exceptional second appeal which will be reported in the Law Reports. In the case of Calcutta, for the year 1926, he informed us as to what happened in regard to 14 cases. Now I have not the figures before me of the number of second appeals disposed of by the High Court of Calcutta in the year 1926. In the year 1922, however, 3,508 second appeals were disposed of. I ask, Sir, what value can be attached to figures as to what happened in respect of 0.4 per cent. of those second appeals.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : What percentages were admitted by the High Court ?

Mr. H. Tonkinson : I will come to that a little later. Now, Sir, let me turn to the appeal to authority which has been made by each of the three Members who have spoken. Considerable importance, Sir, has been attached to the opinion of the Calcutta High Court. I also have great respect for the views of the Calcutta High Court. In the present case, however, Sir, I submit that the opinion of the Calcutta High Court bears upon its face a reason why it should be rejected at once. The Calcutta High Court say that " the present proposals of the Government of India go very much further than the proposals of the Civil Justice Committee." My Honourable friend Mr. Jayakar a moment ago informed us that that is not the case. I am unable, Sir, to understand how the Calcutta High Court could have arrived at the opinion that the proposals of the Government of India in the present Bill go beyond those of the Civil Justice Committee. In these circumstances I submit that their opinion must, with the greatest respect, be rejected at once.

My Honourable friend Sir Hari Singh Gour referred to the opinion of the Allahabad High Court. He said the Allahabad High Court was opposed to the Bill.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : On a point of order, Sir. I said nothing of the kind.

Mr. President : Order, order. That is no point of order.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : It is a point of correction, Sir.

Mr. President : Order, order. Mr. Tonkinson.

Mr. H. Tonkinson : I noted at the time when the Honourable Member was making his remarks that that was what he said. Of course I accept his statement that he never intended to say that the Allahabad High Court were opposed to the Bill. As a matter of fact, Sir, the Registrar of the High Court has recorded the statement that all the Honourable Judges are in agreement in approving of the general principles of the Bill, that some of them wish to make it more stringent, and all the District Judges who have been consulted, according to the Registrar, approve of the Bill. My Honourable friend also referred to the opinions of the Rangoon High Court. He said that the Rangoon High Court was against the Bill. Now, Sir, what does the Registrar of the Rangoon High Court say ? He says :

"I am directed to say that the Honourable Judges approve of the principle of the proposed Bill."

They approve of the principle. Then they go on to refer to certain criticisms made by Sir Hari Singh Gour, and those criticisms, I submit, are just of the character which can very well be considered in Select Committee. It has been suggested that the mass of opinion of the authorities consulted is opposed to this Bill. I really fail to understand how any one can arrive at that view. I do not think it is worth while reading out the opinions of the different authorities, but there is a considerable mass of opinion, I submit, in favour of the present Bill.

Another point which was made by my Honourable friend, Mr. Neogy, was that there are sufficient provisions in the existing law under Rules 10 and 11 of Order XLI to prevent frivolous second appeals. I submit that this opinion is inaccurate. In support of that I would like to draw attention to the statistics in regard to second appeals which are included in the letter from the Government of Bengal which is one of the opinions in this case. Let us take the year 1922. According to the figures given, there were 3,508 second appeals disposed of in that year. The total number dismissed under Rule 11 and also dismissed for non-prosecution was 1,405, that is to say, 40 per cent. 60 per cent. of the disposals were disposals after prosecution. Now, let us take the disposals after prosecution. There were 2,103 cases, and in 1,637 of these cases the decision of the lower court was confirmed.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : How many of them were from concurrent judgments ?

Mr H. Tonkinson : I have not got these figures.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : That is the point.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : Because we are dealing with concurrent judgments.

Mr. H. Tonkinson : But it is a fact that in 77 per cent. of the cases which were prosecuted the decision of the lower court was confirmed. I submit that there must be something wrong when the respondent is forced to defend his case a third time and when in such a large percentage of cases the decision of the lower court is confirmed.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : Does he not pay for it ?

Mr. H. Tonkinson : The only other point to which I should like to refer is that which Sir Hari Singh Gour made when he said that the Civil Justice Committee's recommendation was not couched in imperative terms. Sir, the Civil Justice Committee said :

"We consider upon the whole that it would much improve the standard of justice attained, if an inflexible rule were laid down that a definite and ascertainable sum should in every case be deposited in court to answer the respondent's costs in case such costs be awarded."

"We are not in favour of this requirement being made discretionary because we think firstly that applications in the presence of the respondent to dispense with security would be constantly made and would be an additional harassment ; secondly, that in order to avoid too prolonged inquiries judges would constantly dispense with it in whole or in part."

Sir, there is no doubt that the Civil Justice Committee came to the definite conclusion that a Bill of a much more stringent character than that now before the House was required. The present Bill is a simple Bill and as such I commend it to this House.

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub (Rohilkund and Kumaon Divisions : Muhammadan Rural) : I am really surprised that my Honourable friend Mr. Tonkinson should express surprise at the opposition which this Bill has evoked from this side of the House, but I am really, Sir, very much surprised that my friend Mr. Tonkinson should reject the opinion of a High Court like that of the Calcutta High Court in the way in which he has done. He has summarily rejected the valued opinion of the Calcutta High Court like a second appeal which contains no point of law and it is really a matter for surprise. After the forceful and very able speeches delivered by three Honourable Members on this side of the House, who have traversed all the grounds on which this Bill could be opposed, I was not required to say any more, but the measure is so pernicious that I owe it to myself not to give a silent vote in opposing the Bill and must make my vote a vocal one. This Bill, as has been pointed out just now by my Honourable friends, who have spoken on this side of the House, clearly takes away from aggrieved litigants the right of the second appeal, in the case of concurrent judgments ; the Bill provides that the appeal will not be admitted until security is filed, and the form of the security is so strict that for an ordinary man living in a village it would be impossible to furnish the security, which must be in cash or in Government promissory notes. I think it will be impossible for an ordinary villager in India to find these two kinds of securities in 90 cases out of 100. Therefore virtually the Bill means a negation of the right of filing a second appeal. Now, Sir, my Honourable friend Mr. Tonkinson tried to meet the arguments advanced on this side of the House, but I am sorry to say that he has hopelessly failed in meeting any of the arguments. He said that a successful respondent requires some security for being dragged to the High Court. As has been pointed out by the learned speakers on this side of the House, even now under the present Civil Procedure Code there are sufficient guarantees to secure the interests of a successful respondent. In the first place my Honourable friend must know that a second appeal to the High Court can only be filed when a question of law is involved ; this is one guarantee for a successful respondent. If no question of law is involved no second appeal can be filed and even if it is filed it will be summarily rejected. There is another guarantee. Even now the High Courts have got the power to demand securities if they consider that the appeal is a frivolous one, and again there is a provision in the Code of Civil Procedure that in certain cases security can be demanded, for instance, when the appellant is a woman or the appellant is a person who resides outside British India or is a man who has got no immoveable property in British India. So, when all these securities are to be found in the Code of Civil Procedure, it is preposterous to suggest that the present Bill is intended to safeguard the interests of respondents. I think the present Bill is a crooked measure which the members of the Civil Justice Committee have invented in order to clear the files of the courts. But I think the remedy which they have invented to clear the files is much worse than the malady itself. As things stood a man could expect to get justice though after a longer time ; but in this case it is a total denial of justice. That is why I say the remedy is much worse than the malady.

[Maulvi Muhammad Yakub.]

My friend Mr. Tonkinson has referred to the opinions of certain Judges. Well, certainly the District Judges and the lower courts would welcome this Bill, because this Bill will deprive the High Courts of the opportunity of scrutinising their judgments and of finding out their capacity for administering justice ; because very few first appeals go to the High Courts, while the number of second appeals is very large and gives the High Court a chance of judging the ability of the lower courts. So, in order to escape that examination naturally the judges of the lower courts would welcome this Bill. But that is certainly not the criterion by which we should judge a measure of this kind.

I think nearly all the points against this Bill have been very ably traversed by the Members who have spoken on this side, and I will not waste any more time. There is only one thing more which I would say. This Bill does not provide for the method by which the successful appellant is to withdraw the money he has deposited. I think in the ordinary course he would have to put in an application through some vakil and apply for the withdrawal of the money. But in that process, although he has been successful in his appeal, I think half of the money he has deposited will be sunk in withdrawing it again from the High Court. It seems to me that it will be a great injustice that an appellant who has succeeded in his appeal should have to lose half of what he has deposited in getting it back. And what is the safeguard against this injustice ? No provision is made for it in this Bill. Probably a voucher will have to be prepared, and those members of the Bar, who have an experience know the worry involved in applying for a voucher and getting it prepared, and the money generally which the poor litigants will have to spend in getting their money back from the coffers of the Government. So, I submit on all counts this Bill is pernicious and it should never be allowed to stand on the Statute-book. With these remarks I strongly oppose the Bill.

Mr. Varahagiri Venkata Jogiah (Ganjam cum Vizagapatam : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : I rise, Sir, to oppose the Bill. The Bill proposes to protect the interests of respondents in second appeals by asking the appellants to deposit security in Government promissory notes or cash. I at first thought that I should support this Bill with an amendment to the effect that instead of security being asked to be deposited in cash or promissory notes, personal security be substituted. But, on second thoughts, I find the Code itself provides safeguards to the appellant and there is no need for such a Bill.

My Honourable friend, Mr. Jayakar, has already referred to the provisions of the Code especially Order XLI, Rule 10, where ample discretion has been given to the High Courts, to protect the interests of respondents in suitable cases. Therefore I do not think any provision of this sort is necessary.

It may be that the right of second appeals is sometimes abused and second appeals are filed in large numbers ; but the safe-guard proposed is not likely to reduce the number to an appreciable extent. If the appellant is a man of means, the demand of the proposed security will not deter him from teasing, if he so wills, the respondent by depositing the costs, because he can afford to do so. It is the poor appellant having a good case for appeal who suffers by this legislation. He would be required not only to meet the costs of the appeal but also to deposit cash by way of security. So that this Bill will not in the least help the poor appellant ; but, on the other hand, if at all, it helps the rich. The poor appellant will find it very difficult to meet both these demands, namely, the costs of the appeal and the deposit of security at one and the same time. This will be too much for him.

Further, the Bill says that the security should be demanded after the admission of the appeal. In Madras, at any rate, all second appeals come up before a single Judge in the first instance, and if he is against admitting a second appeal, it is then placed before a bench of two Judges, and if they, too, think that it ought to be rejected, it will be rejected. It may therefore be said that a second appeal is admitted, only if there is a fairly arguable point of law on behalf of the appellant. When second appeals are admitted, after such great scrutiny, and when they are found to be not frivolous, there is no reason why appellants should be penalized by being asked to deposit costs in cash or in Government promissory notes. Again, when the appeal is admitted, it means that the High Court has recognized the importance of the fact that the appeal involves an important question of law, and there is no reason why the public should be deprived of the decision of the highest court of the land on a point of law that is raised in the particular appeal. To insist on the appellant depositing security in such cases would therefore be felt as merely stifling second appeals. Already the litigant public are put to a very great strain on their resources by their being asked to pay a higher stamp duty than before on appeals, and this proposed legislation to deposit costs would add greatly to the hardships of the poor appellants. For these reasons, Sir, I oppose the Bill.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt (Burdwan Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I felt that we were in the midst of a silly season having nothing much of importance to do in the matter of legislation. In fact, Sir, when I received a copy of this Bill, I thought that the Government can provide us with ample work if they go on having Bills prepared on the basis of every page of the recommendations of the Civil Justice Committee for which they probably entertain views not shared by us. As for ourselves who practise in the mufassil courts in Bengal, we know what good it has brought not only to the litigant public but also to the members of the profession. But here of course I am not addressing this House from the standpoint of my profession. It is a matter of common knowledge that these recommendations of the Civil Justice Committee have led to the increase of bribery and corruption in the law courts. The majority of its recommendations are disapproved not only by the Bar, but by the public at large and one crowning effect of the Civil Justice Committee has been in the way of curtailing evidence, so that appellate courts may not come to a different conclusion from the records of the lower court. The recommendations of the Civil Justice Committee are to the effect that Judges need not take down the evidence in full in the form of a narrative as is provided in the Schedule to the Civil Procedure Code, but a mere memorandum of the substance of the evidence need be recorded and against that I have already given notice of introduction of a Bill in this House. Such is the nature of the recommendations of the Civil Justice Committee, and probably the more the public views with disapprobation the recommendations of any Committee which the Government constitutes, the Members of the Treasury Benches think it necessary to give effect to the same by legislation. Of course, Sir, it is better, as my friends have suggested already, instead of such piecemeal legislation, to bring out a comprehensive legislation from the valuable recommendations of the Civil Justice Committee. Sir, although I do not entertain the same faith in the administration of justice by the High Courts in India as my friend Mr. Jayakar does, at the same time I may say this that they at least sometimes right wrongs committed by members of the subordinate judiciary who are not only ignorant of law but generally take a very perverse view of facts also. (Honourable Members : " No, not all ".)

Mr. President : Such a sweeping remark on the judiciary is not permissible in this House.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : Sir, I think that everything that can be said against this Bill has been said by such able lawyers like my friend Sir Hari Singh Gour and Mr. Jayakar and, I think I should not waste the time of this House by dilating upon the reasons why we oppose this Bill. I also beg to oppose this Bill.

Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya (Allahabad and Jhansi Divisions : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, there is only one point which I wish to draw the attention of the House to. I do not think that the criticism that the lower courts are generally or often ignorant and perverse is quite fair to the lower courts. I think subordinate courts in this country have established a very high reputation for efficiency as well as honesty. But, Sir, they are placed in a very difficult situation. Let me make my point clear. Under the provisions of this Bill the first court decides a case in which a point of law arises according to a ruling of the High Court to which it is subordinate. The case goes to a second court. That second court also decides the case according to the law laid down by the High Court to which it is subordinate. That is the rule. The subordinate court is bound to follow the ruling laid down on a question of law by its own High Court. That ruling may be opposed to the ruling of another High Court or two or three High Courts. The subordinate courts are bound still to follow the rulings of their own High Court. They dare not depart from them. If we lay down the rule proposed by Government let us see what the result will be. The first court decides a case according to the ruling of, say, the Allahabad High Court. The second court decides the case according to the same ruling ; and therefore when the matter goes before a High Court, there will be concurrent findings of two courts, and the High Court will be bound to apply the proposed rule. If the question is raised that there is a point of law involved in the appeals they must say " No ". " There is on the face of it nothing contrary to law ; it is a concurrent judgment of two courts ; that is quite sufficient for deciding the point ". Under the law which is now proposed, security of costs must be demanded. The learned pleader for the appellant pleads that there is a point of law and that other High Courts have differed from the view which the Allahabad High Court has taken, but the Judges will be debarred by this legislation which it is proposed to put on the Statute-book from entertaining that plea, because the proviso says that the only case in which they can dispense with security is a case which on the face of it is contrary to law or some usage having the force of law. But, on the face of it, the decision is not contrary to law because it is consistent with the decision of the Allahabad High Court to which both the courts are subordinate. In such a case the result will be that even if there are two High Courts opposed to the view taken in the judgment of the lower court, the question cannot be raised in the High Court unless the appellant is able to deposit the security. That will be a great hardship. It means that when some case should come up in first appeal in which the same point should be raised, and, when that decision can be reviewed by the High Court, then only can a view of the law which is possibly incorrect be rectified. The decision of the Allahabad High Court in the case of Mata Din Kasaundhan was responsible for injustice in a number of cases. In a case like that the lower courts are bound to decide according to their own High Court's judgment and much injustice will be done. Therefore, without any fault on the part of the lower courts, injustice will be done if this proposed legislation is put on the Statute-book. I venture to think that my Honourable friends the Home Member and Mr. Tonkinson will agree with me that the law has been corrected in many cases in second appeals. Questions of law taken up in second appeals have been subjects of consideration by full benches of the High Courts. When there is a difference between one High Court and another, the matter is taken up in a full bench and the decision is reviewed. I do not remember the names of parties in many cases to-day, but I do remember that there have been many cases in which full benches of the High Courts have reviewed the decisions of a bench and accepted the view of other High Courts or confirmed their own views. I submit, therefore, that if this proposed legislation is put on the Statute-book, there will be a serious case of hardship in the case of those appellants who, having a perfectly good case, will be called upon to deposit securities. I submit, therefore, that the Honourable the Home Member and the Government should reconsider their decision ; and, in view of the strong opinion that has been expressed against this legislation, let the thing lie by until a stronger case for it can be presented to this Assembly.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Sir, this small measure has been debated at great length and I do not think that I should be contributing to the convenience of the House or the further elucidation of the measure if I were prolix in my reply. Most of the points of controversy which have been raised by Honourable and learned gentlemen on the other side of the House have been so pertinently and ably answered by Mr. Tonkinson that I do not think it is necessary to pursue them. What I wish to do is to put the issue as a plain and practical issue, relieved so far as possible of legal technicalities, in order to explain not only the intention of the measure itself but also the causes which actuated the Government of India in bringing it before the House for which they have been criticised, and not I think quite fairly criticised. Well, Sir, I am afraid that it cannot be denied that the processes of civil litigation in India are very slow, laborious and cumbersome. It was the desire of the Government of India to find some remedy for what is undoubtedly a grave cause of public inconvenience and sometimes of failure of justice. With that object, a Committee consisting of some very able and learned lawyers was appointed to consider the whole question and to make recommendations. That Committee has made a large number of recommendations and the Government of India conceived it their duty, with regard to such of them as appeared to be acceptable and conducive to the ends for which they were intended—we conceived it our duty—as far as possible to enact them. I do not think Honourable gentlemen will complain of that part of my case. Well, this is one of the many recommendations made by the Civil Justice Committee and limited as its scope is, we considered it desirable that it should, at any rate, be submitted to the judgment of this House. It has been circulated and a large number of opinions have been collected on it. I agree with my Honourable friend Mr. Tonkinson that an impartial consideration of these opinions will lead to the conclusion that there is a preponderance of opinion in favour of this measure. When this measure was circulated for eliciting public opinion, we were quite aware that it would excite a considerable measure of contention and of controversy. But, I think, Honourable Members opposite, even if they dislike the Bill as it stands, will do us the justice to observe that we could not carry out the main intention of endeavouring to remedy urgent defects in the present administration of justice, if we were not prepared to accept a very considerable measure of controversy and of contention. If we were not prepared to do that we could not have effected anything whatever. There was a considerable amount of controversy and of contention elicited when this measure was issued for criticism and for opinion. There was a strong body of opinion, emanating from very learned authorities, against it and I admit that. The opinions of the dissentient minority have been very ably and forcibly represented and supplemented in this House by Honourable and learned gentlemen opposite. But my contention is that among the opinions received, there was, though not perhaps a great preponderance of opinion, nevertheless there was a preponderance of opinion in favour of this measure. That, Sir, is the general position which I put before the House. I think in view of it, though Honourable and learned gentlemen opposite have somewhat hastily criticised the Government of India, they will be candid enough to admit that, though they may differ from us in their opinion on the merits of this particular measure, they have not justice on their side in complaining of the attitude of the Government of India in submitting this measure for their consideration.

There are only two points of detail which I now wish to take. Mr. Tonkinson was severely criticised by my Honourable friend the Deputy President because he had the temerity to dissent from an opinion of the Calcutta High Court. I will again invite the attention of the House to the fact that precisely the same opinion expressed by Mr. Tonkinson has been expressed by the Honourable and learned gentleman from Bombay; so that if Mr. Tonkinson has erred in that respect—I am not prepared to admit that he did err—he has erred in good company. Then, Sir, I take, with the utmost deference, the point raised by Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya that in certain circumstances appeals may conceivably arise on points of law which have not been decided by the High Court of the Province in which the original suit arose and in which there are conflicting decisions of other High Courts. In circumstances of that kind, inconvenience might no doubt be experienced from the difficulty of getting that particular point decided by the High Court of the Province or the Presidency in which the original cause arose. I frankly admit that that is a possible case, but it would be very rare. We are attempting to meet the great majority of cases, and I venture to say that the kind of case which the Pandit has in mind would be in the category of those hard cases that make bad law.

Well, Sir, I have not attempted, because I think it is unnecessary, to pursue all the various controversial and technical issues of this case ; but I think I have established a sufficiently good case to explain and to justify the Government of India's action in submitting this measure to the judgment of the Assembly and in asking the Assembly to proceed to refer it to a Select Committee, where many of the difficulties raised by Honourable and learned gentlemen opposite can be considered and possibly solutions for them can be found.

Mr. President : The question is :

"That the Bill further to amend the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, for a certain purpose, be referred to a Select Committee consisting of Mr. K. C. Neogy, Sir Hari Singh Gour, Mr. C. Duraiswami Aiyangar, Mr. N. C. Kelkar, Dr. A Suhrawardy, Mian Muhammad Shah Nawaz, Mr. R. T. F. Kirk, Munshi Iswar Saran, Mr. H. Tonkinson, and the Mover ; and that the number of members whose presence shall be necessary to constitute a meeting of the Committee shall be five."

THE REPEALING BILL.

Mr. W. T. M. Wright (Secretary, Legislative Department) : Sir, I rise to move that the Bill to repeal certain enactments be taken into consideration.

I do not think I need say much on this motion, because I have already explained the objects of this Bill the other day when it was introduced, and they are also contained in the Statement of Objects and Reasons. No amendments have been received, and I would ask the House to pass this very useful measure so that we may get on with the work in connection with the revision of the Statute-book.

Sir, I move the motion standing in my name.

Sir Hari Singh Gour (Central Provinces Hindi Divisions : Non-Muhammadan) : Sir, I do not wish to make a speech, but I just want to make a statement. Yesterday my measure was opposed by the Honourable the Home Member on the ground that I had combined two Bills into one. Will they now count up and say if these are not a hundred Bills lumped together ?

Mr. President : The question is :

" That the Bill to repeal certain enactments be taken into consideration ".

The motion was adopted.

Clauses 2 and 3 were added to the Bill.

The Schedule was added to the Bill.

Clause 1 was added to the Bill.

The Title and Preamble were added to the Bill.

Mr. W. T. M. Wright : Sir, I move that the Bill be passed.

The motion was adopted.

THE CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE (AMENDMENT) BILL.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar (Home Member) : Sir, I move that the Bill to amend section 96 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, for a certain purpose, be circulated for the purpose of eliciting opinions thereon.

Sir, the way of the reformer, even when his proposals are very modest, is never easy, and this is particularly so, apparently, if he proposes to amend the Civil Law. I confess that the attitude of the House on the measure I have just submitted to the House is not entirely encouraging, but I propose to proceed with this small measure because all that I am asking the House to do is to consent to its being circulated for the purpose of eliciting opinions thereon. The measure itself is even more restricted than that contained in my previous Bill. It relates only to cases in which, acting under section 47 of the Civil Procedure Code, an objection by a judgment debtor has been taken to the execution of a decree for money on the ground that the decretal amount has been paid in whole or in part.

It proposes to provide that in certain cases there should not be an appeal where the amount does not exceed Rs. 500 or in other cases where the amount does not exceed Rs. 200. Well, Sir, many of the general considerations which I alleged in moving my motion on the previous Bill apply also to this and I do not propose either to weary the House by reiteration or to attempt at this stage to go in close detail into the merits of the Bill. All that I ask for at this stage is that the House should consent to the Bill being circulated in order that opinions may be elicited upon it.

Mr. C. Duraiswamy Aiyangar (Madras ceded Districts and Chittoor : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I have no objection to the Honourable the Home Member having this motion passed. It means nothing more than a little expenditure of postage and stationery and nothing else. But I am constrained to point out that the Honourable the Home Member often follows the practice of the materialistic age that the Scripture is looked at only from the outside and never looked into for its contents inside. Sir, he refers to the Civil Justice Committee's Report as his scripture, but I fail to see the least resemblance between what the Civil Justice Committee has reported on this matter and the measure which the Honourable Member has placed before this House The Civil Justice Committee, in making some halting recommendation in regard to this matter, has distinctly pointed out that in the case of District Munsifs, against whose decision there should be no appeal, special authorisation should be made by the Local Government in specific cases But what is provided for by this measure is that all courts exercising jurisdiction of over two thousand rupees shall ipso facto be entitled to the privilege of having their orders not tested even by first appeal All along we have been discussing the question of how people are deprived of their right of second appeal and a good deal of enthusiasm and eloquence, perhaps disproportionate to the subject itself, was exhibited in this House when the previous motion was before us. On the other hand, this is a case in which there is an attempt to deprive the parties even of the privilege of a first appeal to the first appellate court. Perhaps they would say that there should not be an appeal even from Phillip drunk to Phillip sober I do not really understand what kind of cases are contemplated by this measure If only the Honourable the Home Member will look at Order XXI, rule 2, clause 3, of the Civil Procedure Code, he will find that there is an absolute prohibition there that payments which are not certified in court according to the provisions of rule Nos. 1 and 2 are not to be recognised by an executing court at all and therefore, cases of payments or adjustments, if adjustments are also contemplated—so far as I am aware, perhaps that is not contemplated—actual cases of payment in discharge of a decree which will possibly arise for decision in the first court and which will necessitate an appeal to the first appellate court must be something more complicated than that which is contemplated or covered by Order XXI, Rule 2, clause 3 Therefore, Sir, to say that a party should not be allowed the privilege of having even a first appeal in cases of this kind is literally to give an autocratic power to courts Secondly, I am unable to understand which courts are contemplated when the Bill provides that "no appeal shall lie from the decision of any Court the pecuniary limits of whose jurisdiction exceed two thousand rupees" So far as I am conversant with the affairs of my Presidency—I do not know of other Presidencies—every Munsif's court exercises jurisdiction up to three thousand rupees, and therefore there is no court which exercises jurisdiction below two thousand rupees. I do not therefore really see which courts are contemplated when it is stated here that in cases of courts exercising jurisdiction of less than two thousand rupees, there must be a specific designation made by the Local Government in this behalf I am sure if this Bill is sent for circulation, those whose opinions are asked will be left to imagine what kinds of courts the Honourable the Home Member had in view in preparing this Bill, or if he is only its foster father, what his predecessor had in view in framing this Bill and they would go on drawing upon their imagination and probably come to panchayat courts or such other courts which are not executing decrees but only passing decrees. I am unable exactly to understand the scope of the present Bill and therefore I would have it recorded in the proceedings that this Bill does not really receive the approbation of this House. But for my part, after stating these views, I would not personally grudge the privilege to the Honourable the Home Member of having this motion passed and the Bill sent out for circulation.

Sir Hari Singh Gour (Central Provinces Hindi Divisions : Non-Muhammadan) : I wish to draw the attention of this House to the fact that this is another of those tiny measures which the Government have brought forward on the recommendation of the Civil Justice Committee. Let me very briefly explain to the House what this measure means. We are told that the troubles of the decree holder begin when he obtains the decree and this Bill is intended to aggravate those troubles. Under the law as it is administered at present all matters relating.....

Mr. President : Does the Honourable Member wish to oppose this motion ?

Sir Hari Singh Gour : Yes. All matters relating to execution, discharge and satisfaction of a decree are counted as decrees within the meaning of law, and consequently, there is an appeal and also a second appeal when it lies against the decree of a Court. Now, this right of appeal to the decree holder is denied and is being curtailed in the circumstances mentioned in the Bill, the object of which is once more to reduce the right of appeal. It may be said, " We are doing so in petty cases ", that is to say, in the case of money decrees of small value. But I think Honourable Members will agree with me that money cases not triable by a Small Cause Court may affect immoveable property and that as affecting immoveable property they may be of inestimable value. For instance, it may be a rent suit, it may be a suit for use and occupation of land, it may be for damages and compensation for land, or it may be for contribution to a member of a joint Hindu family, or it may be one of those cases where in the guise of a money suit a right in immoveable property is agitated by a party. In all such cases where a party gets a decree, it is not merely a money decree according to its face value, but it leads to certain legal presumptions. If it is a rent suit.....

Mr. President : Order, order. The Honourable Member knows that the passing of this motion does not commit the House to the principle of the Bill at all, and therefore speeches on it should ordinarily be short.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : I shall make a very short speech in view of the lateness of the hour. The money value may be small, but the effect of it upon the jural relationship of the parties might be very great, indeed. I, therefore, submit that the time has not come, for the reasons which you have endorsed only a few minutes ago, when we should embark on this piece of legislation which would curtail the right of a person to appeal against a decision given by the executing court. I therefore submit that the principle of this measure should be opposed.

Mr. President : The question is :

" That the Bill to amend section 96 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, for a certain purpose, be circulated for the purpose of eliciting opinions thereon "

The motion was adopted.

THE VOLUNTEER POLICE BILL.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar (Home Member) : I move that the Bill to make provision to enable volunteer police forces to be constituted temporarily and employed locally for the purpose of preserving the public peace and protecting persons and property, and to define the powers and duties of such police, be referred to a Select Committee consisting of Maulvi Muhammad Yakub, Mr. J. M. Dunnett, Mr. M. Keane, Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar, Mr. D. V. Belvi, Dr. A. Suhrawardy, Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru, Mr. Abdul Haye, Colonel J. D. Crawford, and the Mover ; and that the number of members whose presence shall be necessary to constitute a meeting of the Committee shall be five.

I do not intend to speak on this motion at any length, principally for this reason that my predecessor, Sir Alexander Muddiman, when he introduced the Bill spoke at very much greater length than is customary at the introduction stage. He explained at that time his own intentions and the reasons which actuated him in promoting this measure, the general objects of the Bill and the more important expedients which it proposes to employ. I think, then, that if I traversed that ground again, and dealt fully with the principles and the intentions of the Bill, I should be guilty of unnecessary reiteration. I hope I may suppose that the Bill, at any rate in the main objects which it proposes, is one which will command a very general measure of support. On particular points, on particular expedients which the Bill proposes may no doubt be some difference of opinion ; but none of them I imagine is such as could not well be composed when the Bill is under consideration by a Select Committee. I hope, therefore, that this House will agree without opposition to submit the Bill to a Select Committee.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar (Tanjore cum Trichinopoly : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : I beg to move that the following names be added to the Select Committee : Mr. Rafi Ahmad Kidwai and Mr. Ganganand Sinha.

Sir Hari Singh Gour (Central Provinces Hindi Divisions : Non-Muhammadan) : I beg to move that the names of Dr. Moonje and Lala Lajpat Rai be added to the Select Committee.

Lala Lajpat Rai (Jullundur Division : Non-Muhammadan) : I want to ask a question of the Honourable the Home Member whether we shall be committed to the principle of the Bill to the extent stated in the Preamble in regard to the temporary and local nature of the force. I mean is it part of the principle that the force proposed to be created should be a temporary force ? If that is part of the Bill, then we must object to the principle of the Bill and I shall have to speak at length on that point. But if it is left open to the Select Committee to change the Bill in that respect, I will have no objection to its going to the Select Committee. I want to know from the Government what its intentions on that point are.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : The intention of the Bill certainly is that the force should in the first instance be a temporary force. I should myself consider that any proposal that it should ab initio be placed on a permanent footing would not be within the scope of the Bill, and I should not be willing to consent that on that particular point the Bill should be amended by the Select Committee.

The Assembly adjourned till Eleven of the Clock on Thursday, the 25th August, 1927.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

Thursday, 25th August, 1927.

The Assembly met in the Assembly Chamber at Eleven of the Clock, Mr. President in the Chair.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

APPOINTMENT OF AGENTS IN COLONIES OTHER THAN SOUTH AFRICA.

313. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Will Government kindly state if there is any proposal to appoint Agents in other Colonies, besides South Africa ?

If so, in which Colonies, and is it contemplated to appoint Indians ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : The answer to the first part of the Honourable Member's question is that the question of appointing Agents in other Colonies will be taken into consideration when sufficient experience has been gained as a result of the appointment recently made in South Africa. The second part of the question does not consequently arise.

PAYMENT BY THE INDIAN EXCHEQUER OF THE SALARIES OF BRITISH OFFICERS FORMERLY EMPLOYED ON STAFF DUTIES IN INDIA ON THEIR RETURN TO ENGLAND

314. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Is it a fact that British officers formerly employed on staff duties in India continue to draw their salaries from the Indian Exchequer even when they return to England and are attached to British units ? If so, why ? And what is the amount which is annually paid on this account out of Indian revenues, during the last three years ?

Mr. G. M. Young : A regimental officer of the British Service, who has held a staff appointment in India, and whose regiment has returned to the United Kingdom during his tenure, normally reverts to his regiment ; and if there is no vacancy in which he can be absorbed, Indian revenues bear the cost of his salary until he is so absorbed. Cases of this kind do not appear to have occurred in the past and there has therefore been no expenditure hitherto : but two or three have occurred recently, all of them being cases of Adjutants of Territorial or Auxiliary Force battalions. It is only staff officers of the British Service below the rank of Colonel who are affected. They are affected only if their regiment has gone to England while they are employed on staff duties in India, and if there is an interval before they can be absorbed in their regiments, and if no temporary employment can be found for them in India to bridge the interval. My Honourable friend will therefore realize that the expenditure involved by this rule will be negligible.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : May I inquire if the question as to why Indian revenues should bear this charge was raised with the Home Government ?

Mr. G. M. Young : Yes, Sir, the question was raised whether Imperial revenues should bear it or not.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : And did the Government of India state that the Home Government should bear it and not this Government ? Did the Government of India object to paying this charge ?

Mr. G. M. Young : No, Sir, the Government of India did not object The question was discussed and this was the conclusion reached.

Mr. K. Ahmed : In view of the fact that the expense incurred is charged to India, do Government propose to take sufficient steps not to allow these officers to go to England and enjoy their salary sitting at home or otherwise ?

Mr. President : The question does not arise.

ALLEGED MISCONDUCT OF A "CREWMAN" OF THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.

315. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to the incident, reported in the Weekly Mazdoor of Dinapur, dated the 6th July, 1927, regarding the conduct of a "crewman" of the East Indian Railway in the throwing out of a third class compartment the luggage of a passenger ?

(b) Are Government aware that the General Secretary of the East Indian Railway Union was also travelling in the same compartment, and was an eye-witness to this incident ?

(c) What action has been taken against the offending "crewman", who threw down the luggage of the passenger ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I have been unable to obtain a copy of the periodical mentioned by the Honourable Member.

THE INDIAN NAVY BILL.

316. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Will Government kindly state why the Indian Navy Bill was introduced in Parliament, and not in the Legislative Assembly ? Is it intended to bring it up before this House ? If so, when ?

Mr. G. M. Young : The Bill was introduced in Parliament because it was a Bill to amend the Government of India Act, which, as my Honourable friend is aware, is an Act of Parliament.

The answer to the second part of the queston is in the negative. The third does not arise.

OPINION OF DR. JAMES H. COUSINS REGARDING NEW DELHI AND ITS BUILDINGS, ETC.

317. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Are Government aware that Dr. James H. Cousins describes New Delhi and its buildings as "ugly, commonplace, unoriginal, slovenly", of "unimaginative pomposity", of "monotonous mediocrity", "more in the nature of prisons than habitations"; and the whole thing as "a nightmare on the chest of India" ?

(b) Will Government kindly state how much they had to pay on account of the design and plan of (i) the Council building, (ii) the Secretariat, and (iii) the new Viceregal residence ; and whether all the money on this account has been paid up, or anything is still due ?

(c) Has Lord Reading or H. E. Lord Irwin approved of the design and get up of the new Viceregal residence, which is in course of construction ? How much money has already been spent on it, and how much more is it estimated to cost ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) Government understand that what purported to be an interview with the gentleman referred to has appeared in the Press.

(b) The total sum payable to the Architects for their work in New Delhi is £195,000. This is in accordance with the supplementary agreement made between the Architects and the Secretary of State for India in November 1921. The agreement covers not only the buildings in question but all buildings designed by the Architects and also advice on the layout of buildings not actually designed by them.

A sum of about £2,750 is still due on this agreement.

(c) The original designs for Government House were approved by Lord Hardinge. The detail designs for furnishing, etc., are submitted to His Excellency Lord Irwin for approval as they are received.

Government House is estimated to cost Rs. 1,94,87,300 (Cries of " Shame, Shame ") of which sum Rs. 97,13,500 has already been spent.

Mr. C. Duraiswamy Aiyangar : With reference to part (a), will Government cause the appropriate facts and evidence to be supplied in answer to Dr. Cousins ?

Separation of Burma from India.

318. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Will Government kindly state if there has been any correspondence between them, and the Government of Burma, or the Secretary of State for India, regarding any proposal to separate Burma from India ? If so, are Government prepared to lay a copy on the table ?

(b) Is it a fact that the people of Burma generally, their national leaders like Rev. N. Ottama, and the Sanghe Council (Council of the Buddhist monks) are opposed to separation ?

(c) Is there any truth in the report that on the separation of Burma from India it is intended to establish a European colony in Burma, in view of its comparative proximity to the Singapore Naval Base ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a) There has been no such correspondence of late.

(b) Government are aware that such views have found expression in the Press but they are not prepared to infer that they represent the views of the people of Burma in general.

(c) Government are not aware of the report to which the Honourable Member refers.

U. Tok Kyi : May I ask if it is not the intention of Government to turn Burma into a Crown Colony after separation ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I am aware of no such project.

U. Tok Kyi : May I further ask if it is not a fact that the European community in Burma has been urging the Government of India to separate Burma from India ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I am not aware, Sir, that any very strong representations of that character have been received specifically from the European community of Burma.

U. Tok Kyi : Is the Honourable Member aware that the European community there has been asking for separation for the last 40 years or so ?

Mr. M. S. Aney : May I ask whether the Honourable Member is not to have the privilege of getting any answer to the question at all ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : No, Sir. I had no wish to be discourteous to the Honourable Member, but I thought my previous reply did as a matter of fact substantially meet his subsequent question.

EXAMINATION OF THE LUGGAGE OF LADY PASSENGERS BY THE CUSTOMS OFFICIALS AT VIRAMGAM.

319. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Is it a fact that on the 9th July, the trunks of two lady passengers, who were travelling from Sihore in the Bhavnagar State, to Bombay, were opened and searched at Viramgam, by the Customs peons and the search was discontinued only when the Inspector of Customs came up, and remonstrated with the peons ?

(b) Is it a fact that the trunks of another lady passenger, belonging to the family of one Mulji Meghaji, who were returning from Jamnagar, after taking part in a marriage, were also opened and searched by the Customs Inspector, Mr. Cooper ?

(c) What steps do Government propose to take to save the passengers from such annoying and vexatious proceedings ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : (a) and (b). The Government have no information.

(c) Instructions have already been issued to the effect that there should be no avoidable inconvenience to passengers and that the examination of luggage should be conducted by or under the immediate personal supervision of responsible officers.

RECRUITMENT TO THE PROPOSED INDIAN NAVY.

320. Mr. M. S. Aney : (a) Is it a fact that H. E. the Commander-in-Chief visited the Muhammadans of the Ratnagiri District in the Jayagad Creek in or about April 1926, in connection with the recruitment to the proposed Indian Navy ?

(b) Is it a fact that in the water sports held in honour of the visit which H. E. the Governor of Bombay paid to Ratnagiri in October 1926, only the Muhammadans obtained the chance of competing ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) The Honourable Member is probably referring to His Excellency the Naval Commander-in-Chief, who, at the request of the Director, Royal Indian Marine, very kindly anchored his flag-ship off Jaigarh in April 1926 so as to give Royal Navy and Royal Indian Marine pensioners an opportunity of seeing the ship, which is one of the latest men-of-war. His visit was not made to the Muhammadans of the Ratnagiri District, nor in order to recruit for the Indian Navy.

RECRUITMENT OF MUHAMMADANS TO THE PROPOSED INDIAN NAVY.

321. Mr. M. S. Aney : 1. Is it a fact that a R. I. M. steamer visited some ports of the Ratnagiri District (Bombay Presidency) at the end of 1926 and recruited only Muhammadan lads for training for the proposed Indian Navy ?

2. Will Government kindly state :

(a) the number of Muhammadan lads recruited,

(b) the nature and duration of training which these recruits are to undergo,

(c) the posts—together with pay and prospects—which these recruits are to fill ?

Mr. G. M. Young : Paragraph 1.—Yes, as has been customary for years.

Paragraph 2.—(a) Fifty-seven, of whom ten have since been discharged as unsuitable.

(b) The boys will receive naval education and training for two years, at the end of which, if they can pass the qualifying examination and are otherwise suitable, they will be admitted into the service.

(c) They will be employed first of all as seamen and stokers. They may eventually rise to the rank of petty officer or warrant officer, as vacancies occur, but will have to pass examinations before attaining these ranks. The pay of a boy when enlisted is Rs. 15 per mensem, and the pay of a senior warrant officer may be taken as Rs. 180 per mensem with free rations and certain allowances.

RECRUITMENT OF MUHAMMADANS TO THE PROPOSED INDIAN NAVY.

322. Mr. M. S. Aney : (a) Is it the intention of Government to confine recruitment to the proposed Indian Navy solely to the Muhammadans ? If the answer be in the negative, why were Hindus not similarly recruited for training ?

(b) Will Government kindly state the qualifications required for being recruited ?

(c) Did H. E. the Commander-in-Chief give any interviews to any Muhammadan leader or leaders in connection with this recruitment ?

(d) If the answer be in the affirmative, what are the names of the persons to whom the interviews were given ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) Recruitment to commissioned rank in the Royal Indian Navy will be open to all Indians. Recruitment to the lower ranks will for the present be confined to the class of Muhammadans who have hitherto filled these ranks in the Royal Indian Marine.

(b) The essential qualification is a healthy constitution. Preference is, however, given to boys who possess, in addition, a certain amount of education.

(c) No, Sir, His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, East Indies Station, has no concern with recruitment for the Indian Navy.

Mr. K. C. Roy : May I ask whether recruitment is possible unless legislation implementing the British Act is undertaken by this House ?

Mr. G. M. Young : Yes, Sir, it is quite possible.

Mr. K. C. Roy : May I ask if it is the intention of Government to bring in legislation this Session ?

Mr. G. M. Young : No, Sir. It cannot be brought in this Session, but we hope to bring it in next Session.

RECRUITMENT OF MUHAMMADANS TO THE PROPOSED INDIAN NAVY.

323. Mr. M. S. Aney : (a) Have any representations been made to Government in respect of recruitment of Muhammadans to the proposed Indian Navy on behalf of the said community ? If so, will Government be pleased to place copies of such representations on the table ?

(b) Is it the intention of Government to recruit Hindus for training for the proposed Indian Navy ?

(c) If the answer to the preceding question be in the affirmative, will Government be pleased to state when such recruitment will be made ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) No, Sir.

(b) and (c). Yes, Sir : the intention is to draw upon other seafaring communities of India, whatever their caste or creed, as soon as the Indian Navy can be enlarged.

RECRUITMENT OF BHANDARIS TO THE PROPOSED INDIAN NAVY.

324. Mr. M. S. Aney : (a) Has H. E. the Commander-in-Chief received any resolutions passed by the Bhandari Shikshan Parishad in its XIIIth sessions held during 1926 at Ratnagiri and Nova Goa, respectively, in connection with recruitment of Bhandaris to the proposed Indian Navy ? If so, what action—if any—has been taken in reference to these resolutions ?

(b) Will Government kindly place on the table copies of the resolutions passed by the Bhandari Shikshan Parishad on this subject, together with replies—if any—sent to the Parishad ?

(c) Will Government state if they have received any communication on the subject from the Government of Bombay, and if they have, will they kindly place its copy on the table ?

(d) Will Government place a statement containing the names of Hindu castes belonging to the Bombay Presidency whom they consider fit for admission into the proposed Indian Navy by reason of their connection with the Navies in the past ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) The Government of India cannot of course take cognisance of the resolution passed at Nova Goa, which is in foreign territory. They received a copy of the resolution passed in Ratnagiri, which ask Government, (I here quote the resolution), " to take precautions at the time of formation of the Indian Navy to perpetuate and to allow scope for the growth of the qualities of clever navigation, able seamanship and bravery in naval warfare of the Bhandaris for which they are famous for centuries ". This request has been acknowledged and noted.

(c) The Government of Bombay forwarded the resolution under a covering letter without comment.

(d) The answer is in the negative, as Government do not propose to recruit Hindu castes into the lower ranks of the Indian Navy at present.

Mr. M. S. Aney : Will the Government give the reasons for not proposing to recruit Hindu castes into the lower ranks of the Indian Navy ?

Mr. G. M. Young : I have already given the reasons in my answer to the previous question. The Royal Indian Marine has recruited Muhammadans of the Ratnagiri district—for the last, I do not know how many years—ever since its formation, and they are the only community who have come forward for the service. Until the Indian Navy is enlarged, it is not proposed to go outside that field of recruitment. As soon as it can be enlarged, it is proposed to go outside that field for recruitment.

KANARESE INSCRIPTIONS.

325. Mr. D. V. Belvi : Will Government be pleased to state :

(a) How many inscriptions in Kanarese have been collected and deciphered hitherto in the Kanarese speaking Districts of British India after the publication of a number of Kanarese inscriptions by the late Mr. Fleet ?

(b) The total number of Kanarese inscriptions that are yet awaiting publication by the Government of India Epigraphy Department ?

(c) What arrangements have been made to publish the said Kannada inscriptions that are already collected ?

(d) Do Government intend to publish all these collected Kanarese inscriptions ?

(e) The approximate number of Kannada inscriptions that are still to be collected in the Kanarese-speaking Districts in British India ?

(f) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to the statement that 60 years would be required only to collect all the Kanarese inscriptions if the work goes on on the present scale as put forward in a series of articles published in the Kannadiga of Bagalkot, in the Bijapur Collectorate of the Bombay Presidency, in its issues, dated 19th November, 1926, 26th November, 1926, 18th February, 1927 and 25th February, 1927 ?

(g) If so, what action has been taken or contemplated by the Government ?

(h) What steps are contemplated by Government to hasten the work of collecting all the inscriptions in each District of the British Karnatak ?

(i) Have any memorials been received by the Government from the President of the Karnatak Historical Society of Dharwar on this subject ?

Mr. A. R. Dalal : (a) 1,842 inscriptions have been collected, approximately three-fourths of which have been tentatively transcribed.

(c) They are being published in the South Indian Inscriptions, Text Series, or in the Epigraphia Indica.

(d) Yes, provided they are of sufficient importance.

(g) Does not arise.

(h) An attached office is maintained in Madras under a gazetted officer with three assistants for the specific purpose of collecting and publishing inscriptions in the Madras Presidency including Karnatak. The attention of the Honourable Member is also invited to the reply given to part (c) of Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan's question No. 245 on the 26th January, 1926.

QUALIFICATIONS OF THE GOVERNMENT EPIGHAPHIST, ETC.

326. Mr. D. V. Belvi : Will Government be pleased to state :

(a) the qualifications usually required for appointment as a Government Epigraphist for India ;

(b) the name, qualifications and the salary of the Government Epigraphist at present ;

(c) the nature of the work which is carried on in the office of the Government Epigraphist for India ?

Mr. A. R. Dalal : (a) University graduate with special knowledge of Indian epigraphy, philology and history, and of the Sanskrit, Prakrit and Pali languages.

(b) Mr. Hirananda Shastri, M.A., M.O.L. Present pay Rs. 800 and special pay Rs. 100 a month.

(c) General superintendence, including editing, co-ordination, deciphering, etc., of the epigraphic work of India and Burma except that relating to Muslim inscriptions.

EDITING OF THE EPIGRAPHIA INDICA BY THE GOVERNMENT EPIGRAPHIST.

327. *Mr. D. V. Belvi : (a) Does the present Government Epigraphist for India edit the Epigraphia Indica ?

(b) In which languages are the ancient inscriptions most numerous in India ?

(c) Are not Tamil, Telugu and Kannada inscriptions more numerous than in any other Indian language ?

(d) Has the Editor of the Epigraphia Indica to deal with inscriptions in Tamil, Telugu and Kannada ?

(e) If so, what arrangements are made and what staff is maintained to edit inscriptions in these three languages ?

(f) How long has the present Government Epigraphist for India been in the Department ?

(g) Has he been an Epigraphist all along ?

(h) What post did he hold before the year 1922 ?

(i) Is he well-versed in Sanskrit and in languages of the Dravidian stock ?

Mr. A. R. Dalal : (a) Yes.

(c) Yes.

(d) Yes.

(e) The Government Epigraprist has in his own office a special staff of experts in Dravidian languages consisting of two gazetted and two non-gazetted officers ; besides which an attached office is maintained in Madras under a gazetted officer with three Assistants for the specific purpose of collecting and publishing inscriptions in the Madras Presidency.

(g) Yes.

(h) Superintendent for Epigraphy in the Government Epigraphist's office.

(i) He is well versed in Sanskrit and allied languages but not in the Dravidian languages.

Mr. President : The Honourable Member (Mr. D. V. Belvi) must make at least the pretence of rising from his seat.

ESTABLISHMENT OF AN EPIGRAPHIC OFFICE IN A CENTRAL PLACE IN THE BRITISH KARNATAK.

328. *Mr. D. V. Belvi : (a) Is it a fact that the Karnatak Historical Association, Dharwar, has petitioned Government for a separate Epigraphical Centre ?

(b) If so, do Government intend to establish an Epigraphic Office in a central place in the British Karnatak ?

Mr. A. R. Dalal : (a) Yes.

(b) The matter is under consideration.

REPRESENTATION OF THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY ON THE BOARD OF AGRICULTURE.

329. *Mr. Mukhtar Singh : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state the constitution of the Board of Agriculture ?

(b) Is there any representation of the Assembly on the Board of Agriculture ?

(c) What is the function of the Board ?

Mr. A. R. Dalal : (a) A statement showing the constitution of the Board is laid upon the table.

(c) The functions of the Board, which is designed to facilitate the exchange of ideas and information between agricultural experts from all over India, are advisory. Its proceedings are submitted to the Government of India for any orders which may be required.

CULTIVATION OF MEDICINAL HERBS AND DRUGS IN INDIA.

330. *Mr. Mukhtar Singh : (a) Is it a fact that sometime in 1914-1918 a Committee was formed to investigate into the possibilities of cultivating medicinal herbs and drugs in this country ?

(b) If the answer be in the affirmative, will the Government be pleased to state whether any report of that Committee has been published ? Will the Government be further pleased to state the main recommendations of that Committee ?

(c) Has any attempt been made to cultivate medicinal herbs and drugs in India ? If so, where and with what results ?

(d) Is the attempt of cultivating medicinal herbs and drugs still being continued ? If so, at what places and with what drugs ? If not, why has the attempt been discontinued ?

Mr. A. R. Dalal : (a) In 1919, a Drugs Manufacture Committee was established by the Government of India. One of the objects for which this Committee was appointed was investigation of the possibilities of the cultivation of medicinal plants in India.

(b) The Committee issued four reports which were printed and distributed to the Local Governments, Departments of the Government of India and certain heads of Departments. Copies of these reports has been placed in the Members' Library. These reports state the recommendations of the Committee and the action taken on them.

(c) A botanical survey of the drug resources of India is necessary before any attempt is made to cultivate medicinal herbs and plants. The question is engaging the attention of Government.

(d) Does not arise.

MORPHIA CONTENTS OF THE POPPY PLANT.

331. *Mr. Mukhtar Singh : (a) Is it a fact that some investigation was taken up in connection with the poppy plant in India as regards its morphia contents ? Was some officer appointed on special duty to investigate into this matter ?

(b) If so, has any report been published containing the results of his investigations ?

(c) Is it not a fact that the officer-in-charge succeeded in isolating a poppy plant which contains the largest percentage of morphia ? If so, was there any attempt made to cultivate and multiply this variety and to prepare morphia on commercial lines from this plant ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : (a) Yes ; several years ago.

(c) No ; it was a departmental investigation.

(c) Yes, the officer on special duty isolated a single capsule characteristic of a pure race of poppy which proved its capacity for high morphine content. The seed of this capsule was multiplied and sown in a large area for several years. It was however discovered that it did not suit all soils and climates. As a result of further research, a special seed agency was established in 1924 with the object of introducing improved varieties of poppy. In view however of the uncertainty of the general outlook, the operations of this agency have been restricted since 1925.

No attempt has so far been made to manufacture morphia on commercial lines from specially selected opium, nor do the Government of India propose to do so at present. Morphia and other alkaloids of opium are at present manufactured at the Ghazipur Factory as a means of utilizing waste material, which would otherwise have to be thrown away.

DEVELOPMENT OF VARIETIES OF THICK SUGAR CANE AT THE COIMBATORE SUGAR STATION.

332. *Mr. Mukhtar Singh : Has the Coimbatore Sugar Station been able to develop some varieties of thick canes for the purpose of sugar manufacture ? If the answer be in the affirmative, have these varieties been tried in the country and with what results ?

Mr. A. R. Dalal : Many medium thick canes have been bred at this Station and sent to the provinces for further trial. The best of these, known as Co. 213, yields fully twice as much as the local canes commonly grown in the North of India. The breeding of thick canes proper has only just been started at the Station and no such canes have yet been sent out to the provinces ; but promising sets of thick canes imported from Java and elsewhere have, after trial at the Station, been sent out to different provinces for further testing and some of them are doing well.

NOMINATION OF INDIANS TO THE AGRICULTURAL BOARD.

333. *Mr. Mukhtar Singh : Since when has the Agricultural Board been in existence ? Has there been any Indian nominated to this Board ? If so, will the Government be pleased to state the name of the gentlemen and the year in which he was nominated ?

Mr. A. R. Dalal : The Board has been in existence since 1904. Membership of it is not based on racial considerations, but, as the list laid upon the table in reply to question No. 329 shows, is almost entirely ex-officio. A number of Indians have in the past been members of the Board in virtue of their holding one or other of the posts mentioned in that list, and some have also been nominated. If the Honourable Member wishes to know the names of all Indians who have been members of the Board, and the years in which they attended he will find information in the printed proceedings of the Board.

PUBLICATION OF THE REPORT OF THE CINCHONA COMMITTEE.

334. *Mr. Mukhtar Singh : Has the Cinchona Committee submitted their report ? Has the report been published and is it available for the public ?

Mr. A. R. Dalal : No Cinchona Committee was appointed by the Government of India. The question of the publication of its report therefore does not arise.

CONSTITUTION OF THE RATES ADVISORY COMMITTEE.

335. *Mr. Mukhtar Singh : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state the constitution of the Rates Advisory Committee ?

(b) Is there any representation on it of the agricultural interests ?

(c) Is there one such committee for the whole of the country or are they constituted for different centres or for different railways ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) The Honourable Member is referred to the reply given in this Assembly to question No. 235 on the 27th August, 1926, on the same subject.

(c) There is one Committee for the whole of India.

LOW RAILWAY RATES FOR TRAFFIC TO AND FROM PORTS.

336. *Mr. Mukhtar Singh : (a) Are there low, exceptional railway rates for traffic to and from ports, especially the great ports of Calcutta and Bombay ?

(b) Have the Government ever investigated the question as to how this affects the industries of this country and if so, with what results ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Rates lower than the ordinary schedule rates, or the ordinary classified rates where they apply, are charged for the carriage of certain commodities to and from various Indian ports. Grain is an example of an export commodity carried at such rates ; machinery, agricultural implements and manures are examples of import commodities. I should explain that these special rates are generally quoted for one or more of the following reasons ; the fact that the volume of traffic is large and the traffic is therefore cheap to handle ; the probability that the volume of traffic will be increased by a low quotation ; and the encouragement which a low quotation gives to long distance traffic. I should add also that special rates lower than the schedule or classified rates are also quoted for exactly the same reasons for the products of certain Indian industries, for example, iron and steel, cement, paper and matches.

(b) The Acworth Committee investigated the question and I would invite the Honourable Member's reference to paragraphs 149 to 152 of their Report.

NUMBER OF OFFICERS EMPLOYED IN THE MILITARY GRASS FARMS.

337. *Mr. Mukhtar Singh : Will the Government be pleased to state the number of officers employed in the military grass farms ? Will the Government be further pleased to state how many of them are Indians ?

Mr. G. M. Young : There are nineteen King's commissioned officers employed in the grass farms branch of the Military Farms Department. None of them is an Indian. No Indian King's commissioned officer has yet applied for appointment to this Department.

DAIRY PRODUCTS OF THE MILITARY DAIRIES.

338. *Mr. Mukhtar Singh : Will the Government be pleased to state the total amount of milk, butter and cheese produced in the dairies run by the Military Department ? What quantity of these articles was supplied to the Indian soldiers during the last year ?

Mr. G. M. Young : 3,630 tons of milk and 358 tons of butter were produced and sold during the year 1925-26. Cheese is not made in military dairies. There is hardly any demand for dairy produce from Indian troops and practically nothing was supplied to them.

REARING OF COWS AND BULLS IN MILITARY DAIRY FARMS.

339. *Mr. Mukhtar Singh : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state whether the fresh born calves in the military dairies are reared at the military farm ? If not, are they destroyed or sold ? If they are sold, for how long are they allowed to be with their mothers ?

(b) Have the Government made any arrangement for rearing cows and bulls in the military dairy farms and for selling them to the public in order to improve the cattle breeding problem of the country ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) Only cow calves of selected dams are reared. The remainder and all bull calves, except the few required for stud or draught purposes, are either sold or given away. They are kept with their dams for about a month after birth.

FREIGHT CHARGES PER TON OF SUGAR FROM BOMBAY TO CAWNPORE AND vice versa.

340. *Mr. Mukhtar Singh : What are the freight charges per ton of sugar from Bombay to Cawnpore and from Cawnpore to Bombay ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The rates for sugar per ton from Bombay to Cawnpore (Generalganj) and from Cawnpore (Generalganj) to Bombay are Rs. 38-4-5 at owner's risk and Rs. 41-13-2 at railway risk.

STATISTICS OF AGRICULTURAL LAND HELD BY AGRICULTURISTS AND NON-AGRICULTURISTS IN EACH PROVINCE IN INDIA.

341. *Mr. Harchandrai Vishindas : Will Government be pleased to state :

(a) the percentage of the total occupied area of agricultural land held by agriculturists and by non-agriculturists (separately) in each province in India in the year 1915 and in the year 1925 ?

(b) the area of agricultural land transferred by agriculturists to non-agriculturists and by non-agriculturists to agriculturists in each province in India from 1905-06 to 1924-25 ?

(c) the percentage of non-agriculturists holding agricultural land to the total number of holders of agricultural land in the year 1915 and in the year 1925 in each province in India ?

Mr. A. R. Dalal : (a), (b) and (c). The Government of India have no information on the subject. They doubt whether Local Governments could furnish the required statistics, and do not propose to call for them in view of the amount of trouble which their compilation, even if feasible, would involve.

NEW PENSION RULES.

342. Mr. Harchandrai Vishindas : Will Government be pleased to state when the new pension rules will be published in the Government Gazette, notification regarding which has already appeared in the newspapers ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : The reports which appeared in the papers were unfounded. No new pension rules have been sanctioned by the Government of India.

PROVISION OF A NEW LEVEL CROSSING AT OKARA ON THE NORTH WESTERN RAILWAY.

343. Mr. Harchandrai Vishindas : 1. Is it a fact that the railway station of Okara on the North-Western Railway, district Montgomery, has recently been removed to the other side of the track ?

2. Is it a fact that by doing so the track now intervenes between the new station and the town, and that for this reason all pedestrian and vehicular traffic from the town to the station has to follow the Dipalpur Road level crossing which is the only level crossing in the neighbourhood ?

3. Is it a fact that the above route involves a long detour causing considerable inconvenience and loss of time to the residents of the town desiring to approach the station ?

4. Is it a fact that the necessity for a new level crossing nearer the station has been admitted by the railway authorities ?

5. Is it a fact that in response to representations from certain factory owners and other members of the public, the new level crossing was sanctioned and the work was ordered to be put in hand as far back as October last ?

6. Is it a fact that the railway authorities have since changed their mind and now refuse to provide a new level crossing ? If so, why ?

7. Did the railway authorities consult the factory owners and the public who were closely concerned with the project, before reversing their former decision ?

8. What action do Government propose to take in the matter ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (1) Yes.

(2) The reply to the first part is in the affirmative and to the latter part in the negative so far as pedestrian traffic is concerned. A foot overbridge has been provided across the tracks from the town side to the station building.

(3) The provision of the overbridge has minimised any inconvenience that would otherwise have been felt.

(4) to (8). I understand the position to be as follows. The new passenger station was built on the far side of the line to the town in order that the goods station might be placed on the town side with direct access to the Mandi ; and the local authorities have not yet constructed a road to the passenger station. The Notified Area Committee asked the railway authorities to hand over a 50 ft. strip of land for the purpose of constructing an approach road, and to provide a level crossing nearer the station than the present level crossing. The particular strip of land required could not be spared by the railway administration and the proposal for a new level crossing consequently fell through. In any case it would not have been advisable to provide a level crossing within staton limits since it would have to be interlocked with signals which would lead to heavy delays to road traffic. I should add that when the present Okara station was being laid out, objections were raised by the public that its site was not opposite the centre of the Mandi and was on the wrong side of the line from it, and the Agent, North Western Railway, went into this matter very carefully with the Financial Commissioner, Punjab who considered that the utmost the merchants could reasonably ask for was a foot overbridge across the railway lines opposite the main entrance of the new town and the location of the station building close to the overbridge. Both these matters have been carried out though they meant the movement of the station site about 500 feet and the abandonment of certain works which had already been started.

PRIMARY DELAYS TO TRAINS CONSEQUENT ON THE INTRODUCTION OF THE DIVISIONAL SCHEME ON STATE RAILWAYS.

344. Mr. Harchandrai Vishindas : 1. Will Government be pleased to state the object of introducing the Divisional Scheme on the State Railways ?

2. (a) Is it a fact that trains have become subject to what is called primary delays as a consequence of the working of the said scheme ?

(b) What was the number and duration of such delays in the twelve months preceding the introduction of the said scheme and what has been the number and duration thereof during each of the similar periods since the introduction of the scheme ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : 1. The object was to obtain more efficient administration.

2. (a) and (b). If the Honourable Member will give me a clear definition of the words " primary delays ", which are not used in railway terminology and are not understood, I will see if I can send him an answer.

PROMOTION OF INDIANS IN THE TRAFFIC BRANCH OF THE NORTH WESTERN RAILWAY TO THE POST OF DISTRICT TRAFFIC SUPERINTENDENT.

345. Mr. Harchandrai Vishindas : Will Government be pleased to state :

(a) The number of Indians in the Traffic Branch of the North-Western Railway in October 1924 who were entitled in the normal course of time to rise to the post of District Traffic Superintendent ?

(b) What provision, if any, has been made in the present scheme to ensure the due promotion of such Indian officers to similar or equivalent higher posts ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) The number of Indian officers in the Traffic Department of the North-Western Railway in October 1924 who might expect in the normal course, and provided, of course, they showed their fitness for promotion, to attain the rank of District Traffic Superintendent was 13.

(b) There is nothing in the present scheme which prevents the due promotion of these Indian officers.

APPOINTMENT OF A COMMITTEE TO STUDY THE RESULTS OF THE " TRANSPORTATION " WORKING OF THE DIVISIONAL SCHEME ON THE NORTH WESTERN RAILWAY.

346. Mr. Harchandrai Vishindas : (a) Is it a fact that the Agent, North-Western Railway, has appointed a Committee to study the results of the " Transportation " working of the Divisional Scheme and to recommend changes, if deemed fit ? What is the personnel of the Committee ?

(b) Is it a fact that the Committee has, almost exclusively, been composed of men who have no knowledge or experience of " Transportation " ?

(c) Is it a fact that the Committee consists of men who were avowedly in favour of recruiting men of engineering qualifications only for the posts filled by men with special practical training in such posts ?

(d) Are Government aware that the proposed Committee is considered by the public and the Traffic Officers as designed to counteract the declared policy of Government to Indianize the Railway Services ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) The Agent, North-Western Railway, has appointed a Committee to review the Divisional organisation and to make recommendations concerning possible changes in the organisation within Divisions. The Committee consists of :

The Deputy Agent.

The Deputy Chief Operating Superintendent.

The Deputy Chief Commercial Manager.

The Deputy Chief Mechanical Engineer.

The Statistical Officer.

(c) Certainly not.

(d) No. The Committee has nothing to do with the policy of indianizing the Railway Services.

EMPLOYMENT OF ENGINEERS TO FILL POSTS HELD BY TRAFFIC OFFICERS CONSEQUENT ON THE INTRODUCTION OF THE DIVISIONAL SCHEME ON STATE RAILWAYS.

347. Mr. Harchandrai Vishindas : Are Government aware ?

(a) that since the Divisional Scheme was introduced Engineers are being posted to fill posts previously held by Traffic Officers ; and

(b) that at the same time, the Railway is engaging extra Engineers for Engineering work which could be performed by Engineers already available in the service ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) No. If the Honourable Member is referring to the posts of Divisional Superintendents, these only came into existence with the introduction of the Divisional Scheme, and it has been the declared intention since the Divisional Scheme was introduced that they would not be allotted to any particular branch of the service but filled by selection from all branches.

(b) Owing to the large programme of works on Railways, for which the existing staff is insufficient a number of temporary engineers has been, and is being engaged.

Maulvi Abdul Matin Chaudhury : May I ask, Sir, question No. 348 ?

Mr. President : Question No. 348 and subsequent questions stand in the name of Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan. I should like to be satisfied why I should allow these questions to be put in view of the fact that the Honourable Member has given notice of a large number of questions and is absent from the beginning of this Session.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Sir, Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan is not the only Member of this Assembly who has absented himself while his questions are being answered ; besides there are some important questions standing in his name to-day.

Mr. President : Order, order : I am asking the Honourable Member (Maulvi Abdul Matin Chaudhury) who is putting the questions.

Maulvi Abdul Matin Chaudhury : I have been asked to put these questions, Sir, and, as some of them are important, I hope the Chair will allow me to put them. Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan is ill.

Mr. President : Has the Honourable Member been asked by the Khan Bahadur to put these questions ?

Maulvi Abdul Matin Chaudhury : Yes, Sir.

Mr. President : But I have received a letter from Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan in which he says he has authorised Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh to put his questions. I am afraid I can not allow these questions to be put.

† 348—362.*

Mr. M. S. Sesha Ayyangar : May I have your permission, Sir, to put questions on behalf of Mr. K. V. Rangaswami Ayyangar ?

Mr. President : Mr. Rangaswami Ayyangar was just here. What has happened to the Honourable Member ?

Several Honourable Members : These questions stand in the name of Mr. K. V. Rangaswami Ayyangar.

(Mr. Sesha Ayyangar was allowed to put the questions standing in the name of Mr. K. V. Rangaswami Ayyangar.)

† Not put at the meeting, but the questions and answers to them will be found at pages 3418—3421 of these proceedings.

Overseas Allowance of Officers of Indian Domicile on the South Indian Railway, etc.

363. *Mr. M. S. Sesha Ayyangar (on behalf of Mr. K. V. Rangaswami Ayyangar): With reference to Mr. Parsons' reply to Mr. Sesha Ayyangar's interpellation (a) in January 1927, will the Government be pleased to state :

(a) Whether Indian officers on State Railways who were in the junior of the dual scales referred to, at the time of the introduction of the overseas allowance, continue to draw that allowance when promoted to the senior scale ;

(b) How the retention of grades on the South Indian Railway specially affected Indian officers promoted to the District grade in respect of overseas allowance ;

(c) Whether Mr. Parsons' reply to question (c) is to be taken to mean that Government have ascertained and verified the facts of the case from the South Indian Railway and have satisfied themselves that the action of the South Indian Railway is fair and justified ;

(d) Whether if the reply to the previous question is in the affirmative, Government will explain their position by comparing the relative status and emoluments of an Indian and a European officer of Assistant's rank getting the same pay on the South Indian Railway just before the introduction of the overseas allowance with those of an Indian and a European officer in corresponding positions on State Railways up to the time the top of the District grade is reached ;

(e) Whether the Government are aware that the acting allowance rules on the South Indian Railway for graded services are less favourable than the rules notified by the Railway Board for such services, and whether the Government can explain how the acting allowance rules on the South Indian Railway can be compared with and said to be more favourable than those on other Company-worked Railways which, as stated by Mr. Parsons, have adopted dual time scales as in Government and follow presumably Government acting allowance rules for such scales ;

(f) How any set of acting allowance rules, favourable or otherwise, can affect or compensate for reduction of emoluments on substantive promotion to higher grades as stated by Mr. Parsons in reply to question (c) ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The Honourable Member presumably refers to the reply given to Mr. Sesha Ayyangar's question No. 254 answered on the 2nd February, 1927.

(a) The reply is in the affirmative.

(b) Indian officers on promotion to District grades were restricted to the rates of pay applicable to officers of non-Asiatic domicile.

(c) The facts were verified by reference to the South Indian Railway. As already stated in connection with Mr. Sesha Ayyangar's question, it is not a matter in which it is possible for Government to interfere with the discretion of the Board of Directors.

(d) I place on the table a statement comparing the various rates. For the sake of simplicity the Traffic Department has been taken. If the Honourable Member wants similar information for other departments it will be supplied to him.

(e) On the State-worked Railways under the dual scale of pay, an officer on the junior scale, if appointed to officiate in the senior grade, gets an increase of Rs. 100 in his emoluments, while on the South Indian Railway on appointment to officiate in the District grade an officer, whatever be his substantive rate of pay, gets the minimum pay of the District grade, which is higher than the maximum pay of the Assistants grade, by Rs. 100. Under the operation of this rule the acting allowances on the South Indian Railway may be higher than those on State-worked Railways.

(f) The Board of Directors decided that in view of the more liberal acting allowance rules it was not necessary to continue the additional pay on promotion to a higher class ; and as already explained it is not possible for Government to interfere with their discretion.

DISTRICT TRAFFIC SUPERINTENDENT.

Statement showing scales of pay in the various grades of the Traffic Department, on the South Indian Railway and State-worked Railways prior to the introduction of overseas pay.

South Indian Railway.	State worked Railways.
700—50—1,000	Grade 1. 1,100
	Grade 2. 1,000.
	Grade 3. 900
	Grade 4. 800
	Grade 5. 700.

ASSISTANT TRAFFIC SUPERINTENDENT.

South Indian Railway.	State worked Railways.
400—25—600	Grade 1. 550
	Grade 2. 450
	Grade 3. 400
	Grade 4. 300.

On the South Indian Railway an Assistant Traffic Superintendent, whether Indian or European, could rise to the maximum pay of Rs. 1,000, and to Rs. 1,100 on the State-worked Railways.

OVERSEAS ALLOWANCE OF OFFICERS OF INDIAN DOMICILE ON THE SOUTH INDIAN RAILWAY.

364. Mr. M. S. Sesha Ayyangar (on behalf of Mr. K. V. Rangaswami Ayyangar) : With reference to Mr. Parsons' reply to Mr. Sesha Ayyangar's question in January 1927, will the Government be pleased to state :

(a) Whether in the Superior Civil Service Rules (Revision of Pay and Pension Rules) which contain the Lee concessions, the Secretary of State did not confirm the existing orders relating to overseas allowances—i.e., whether under these rules officers of Indian domicile who were in service at the time of the introduction of overseas allowances were not declared eligible for rupee overseas allowances ;

(b) Whether it is not a fact that the Railway Board in notifying the Lee concessions to the South Indian Railway have stated in paragraph 3 of their letter No. 341|23 of 14th February 1926 that the " existing incumbents of Asiatic domicile will be allowed to continue to draw present scales of pay, etc., but future entrants of Asiatic domicile will be restricted to basic pay only and will not be eligible for any overseas pay " ;

(c) Whether the South Indian Railway have stated that they accepted the Lee concessions in their entirety ;

(d) If the reply to the previous question be in the affirmative, why have the South Indian Railway in view of the Railway Board's orders quoted in question (b), discontinued to pay overseas allowance to Indian Officers on promotion to the District grades ;

(e) Whether it is not correct to assume that the Railway Board's orders quoted in question (b) cannot be affected by any special orders issued by the Home Board of the South Indian Railway in contravention of the general principle under which on State Railways Indian officers were given additional pay in lieu of overseas allowance ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The Honourable Member presumably refers to the reply given to Mr. Sesha Ayyangar's question No. 254 answered on the 2nd February, 1927.

(a) The Superior Civil Service (Revision of Pay and Pension) Rules confirmed the orders then in existence and did not introduce anything new in regard to officers of Indian domicile. Officers of Indian domicile, who were in receipt of overseas pay or its equivalent at the time these Rules came into force, were allowed to retain such overseas pay or its equivalent, but the Rules did not authorise the grant of overseas pay to Indian officers in service, who were not in receipt of such pay at the time.

(b) Yes, the intention was that the existing rules would continue to apply to the Indian officers then in service.

(c) Yes.

(d) I would refer the Honourable Member to the reply given to part (b) of the question. The South Indian Railway continued to apply to the Indian officers the former rules, and this was not in contravention of the terms of the Railway Board's letter.

(e) Government are not aware that the Board of Directors of the South Indian Railway have in any way contravened the orders of the Railway Board.

Denial to Indian Officers of Company-managed Railways of Privileges and Concessions enjoyed by Indian Officers on State Railways.

365. Mr. M. S. Sesha Ayyangar (on behalf of Mr. K. V. Rangaswami Ayyangar) : With reference to the concluding reply of Mr. Parsons to Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar's supplementary question in January 1927, will the Government be pleased to state whether that reply is to be taken to mean that if under the powers delegated and general sanctions accorded by the Government of India, a Company-worked Railway extended to its European officers all the privileges and concessions enjoyed by similar officers on State Railways and denied to its officers any of the privileges and concessions enjoyed by the Indian officers on State Railways, the Government of India in virtue of the contractual relations between them and the Company cannot interfere ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I am unable to reply to a hypothetical question of this kind. The facts of each individual case would have to be considered in the light of the terms of the contracts.

DISCONTINUANCE OF THE SPECIAL PAY IN LIEU OF OVERSEAS ALLOWANCE TO OFFICERS OF INDIAN DOMICILE ON THE SOUTH INDIAN RAILWAY.

366. Mr. M. S. Sesha Ayyangar (on behalf of Mr. K. V. Rangaswami Ayyangar) : Will the Government be pleased to state :

(a) Whether the Deputy Accountant General of Railways, who recently inspected the South Indian Railway Accounts Office has reported that in view of the sanction accorded by the Home Board and the rules on State Railways, special pay in lieu of overseas allowance is admissible to Indian officers on the South Indian Railway at the time of the introduction of the overseas allowance not only while they were in the Assistant's grade but also after promotion to the District grade, and that the South Indian Railway were wrong in discontinuing the allowance to these officers on promotion to the District grade ;

(b) Whether it is a fact that under their present instructions, Government Examiners of Railway Accounts do not feel bound to take up with the Companies' officers cases in which Companies have withheld what in the Examiner's opinion is correctly payable to their establishment under existing orders of the Government, if so long as the Company's action is not exceeded by competent sanction and results in reduced expenditure ;

(c) Whether the Government have instructed or whether they propose now to instruct Government Examiners of Railway Accounts that in important cases—as for instance when Railway Companies modify general sanctions accorded by Government to the disadvantage of particular classes of officers resulting in racial discrimination—they should insist that principles enunciated by the Government of India should be given effect to ;

(d) Whether the Deputy Accountant General has also reported that the reply given by the South Indian Railway to Railway Board's letter No. 3675-E. of 6th July 1926 (asking for remarks on Mr. Shanmukham Chetty's letter) " is directly conflicting with the actual facts " ;

(e) Whether the Government have considered or are prepared to consider the desirability of taking deterrent disciplinary action against the officer or officers concerned in thus misrepresenting facts to the Government of India ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) The answer is in the affirmative.

(b) There are no definite instructions to the Government Examiners of Railway Accounts on the subject.

(c) Government do not propose to issue any such instructions.

(d) The answer is in the affirmative. But the Government of India do not agree with the Deputy Accountant General.

(e) No. There has been no misrepresentation of facts by the South Indian Railway.

APPLICATION OF THE RECOMMENDATIONS OF THE LEE COMMISSION TO BRANCHES OF THE GOVERNMENT SERVICE NOT DIRECTLY DEALT WITH BY THE COMMISSION.

367. *Mr. K. C. Neogy : Will Government be pleased to enumerate the branches of Government service, as also offices in Government-aided institutions, not directly dealt with by the Lee Commission, but to which any concession analogous to those granted under the Lee Commission recommendations has been extended or is proposed to be extended ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I would refer the Honourable Member to the Superior Civil Services (Revision of Pay, Passage and Pension) Rules, 1924, a copy of which has been placed in the Library. It would not be correct to say that concessions analogous to those granted in pursuance of the Commission's report have been granted to any other branches of Government service as such, but concessions have been granted to a number of officers whose status has been recognised as superior in various branches of Government service. I shall be glad to give the Honourable Member a list of the posts held by such officers if he wishes.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Have any of the provincial service officers who have been held to have a non-Indian domicile been granted the advantages of the Lee Commission's recommendations ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : There are so many miscellaneous and special posts which might come under that category that I should hesitate to give an immediate reply to this question. If the Honourable Member will give me notice, I shall be glad to enquire.

GRANT OF FREE MEDICAL ATTENDANCE TO EUROPEAN JUDGES OF THE INDIAN HIGH COURTS.

368. *Mr. K. C. Neogy : (a) Is there any truth in the statement published in the Press that there is a proposal to grant the privilege of free medical attendance to European Judges of the Indian High Courts ?

(b) Has such special privilege been extended to European members of any other branch of the public service in India, or is any such proposal under consideration ?

(c) Will Government be pleased to publish complete papers on the subject ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a), (b) and (c). Free medical attendance is a privilege which all officers have for long enjoyed. There

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) to (d). The clerical staff in the Calcutta offices of the Government of India Stationery and Printing Department comprising the Central Stationery and Stamp Office, the Central Publication Branch, the Central Forms Store, and the Government of India Press, Calcutta, constitutes a single cadre and recruitment is consequently made irrespective of branches. The total number of clerks at present employed in these offices is 310 of whom 7 per cent. are Moslems.

(e) No. There are about 1,000 persons employed in the Government of India Press at Calcutta and although I have not any recent figures showing the actual number of Moslems in this Press I can assure the Honourable Member that the proportion of Moslems is substantial. It is probably well over 30 per cent. of the total.

(f) 113 vacancies have occurred since 1924. The appointments to 27 of these were offered to Moslems but 6 did not accept and 2 resigned subsequently. I have been unable to trace any assurance given by Mr. Ley in the matter of Moslem appointments in the Stationery and Printing Department, but the practice in this Department does not now differ from the general policy of Government in this matter.

EMPLOYMENT OF STATE VETERINARY SCHOLARS IN THE VETERINARY SERVICE.

415. Mr. K. C. Neogy : (a) Will Government be pleased to state how much was spent on the State Veterinary Scholars who were sent out to the United Kingdom for acquiring Veterinary Diplomas ? What were the objects of the scholarships and how far have those objects been achieved ?

(b) Have the Central Government adjusted the expenditure with the Provincial Governments concerned in view of the ' provincialisation ' of the Indian Veterinary Service ?

(c) Were these scholars sent out under promise of employment ? If so, was their case brought before the Lee Commission in connexion with the question of provincialisation of the Veterinary Service ?

(d) Will Government be pleased to state if they have done anything to rectify the anomalous position of these scholars subsequent to the Lee recommendations ?

(e) Have Government stated in any case that they have no power to make appointments to that service, and that they have addressed the Local Governments some of whom are prepared to consider the claims of these scholars ?

(f) If so, is it not a fact that the posts of Veterinary Research Officer and the Professor of Pathology were advertised by the High Commissioner for India in the London Veterinary Record of November 1926, and in such a way that the last date for receiving the applications would elapse before the Indian scholars trained at Government expense could even know it ?

(g) Is it not a fact that the three year contracts in the provinces have been renewed notwithstanding Government trained scholars waiting for employment ?

(h) Is it not a fact that the said post of Professor of Pathology has been given to one M. R. C. V. S. from Edinburgh, when a Government trained scholar with an additional qualification of the London University was available ?

(i) Will Government be pleased to state whether this step is in agreement with the procedure laid down by the Lee Commission for recruitment to the service with a view to its Indianisation ?

Mr. A. R. Dalal :(a) Precise information as to the amount spent upon the State Veterinary Scholars is not available. The amount can, however, be roughly judged from the fact that each Scholar, besides being eligible for a free second class return passage, was awarded a scholarship of £250 per annum, tenable for four years, in addition to the cost of tuition fees at the rate of about £27 a year. The object of the scholarships was to enable the students to obtain Veterinary Diploma and thereby render themselves eligible for appointment in the Indian Veterinary Service. That object has been achieved to the extent that four out of the five scholars sent secured the Diploma of the Royal College of Veterinary Surgeons, England, though it was not found possible to appoint any of them to the Indian Veterinary Service in view of the cessation of recruitment for that Service.

(b) No. It was decided to waive reciprocal recoveries between the Government of India and Provincial Governments in respect of scholars sent abroad for training.

(c) No.

(d) and (e). As stated in the reply given by Mr. Bhore to Mr. Harchandrai Vishindas on the 18th August, 1926, the Government of India requested certain Local Governments to consider these scholars for appointment on the occurrence of vacancies ; the Government of India have also noted the scholars' names for vacancies at the Muktesar Institute as they arise, and have appointed one of them to a temporary post at this Institute. It is understood that two other scholars have obtained employment under a Local Government.

(f), (g), (h) and (i). It is not understood to what posts the Honourable Member is referring and Government regret therefore that they are unable to answer these questions.

Appointment of State Veterinary Scholars as Stock Breeding Experts in the Provinces.

416. Mr. K. C. Neogy : (a) Will Government be pleased to state if it is a fact that the post of Stock breeding expert has been created in most provinces ?

(b) Are Government aware that in Bengal the State Veterinary Scholars were not even summoned by the Selection Committee, while people of the lower grade were called for and one of them appointed to such post ?

(c) Will Government be pleased to state what policy they intend adopting towards these State Scholars in the face of this attitude on the part of the Local Governments.

Mr. A. R. Dalal : (a) Such posts have been created in most of the major provinces.

(c) The Honourable Member is referred to the reply given to (d) and (e) of the preceding question.

APPOINTMENT OF STATE VETERINARY SCHOLARS TO VACANCIES IN THE IMPERIAL VETERINARY SERVICE AT MUKTESAR.

417. *Mr. K. C. Neogy : (a) Will Government be pleased to state if there are any vacancies for the Imperial Veterinary Service at Muktesar ?

(b) If so, how and when will they be filled ?

(c) Will Government be pleased to state what difficulty there was in appointing the scholars to the permanent vacancies of Veterinary Research Officers ?

(d) Will Government be pleased to state what surplus there was in the last year's revenue of the Muktesar Research Institute ? Do Government propose to utilise the surplus in effecting any expansion of this Institute ?

(e) Will Government be pleased to state what they are prepared to do in the case of such scholars, becoming over age for Veterinary Service before they succeed in securing any appointment ?

Mr. A. R. Dalal : (a), (b) and (c). Two posts borne on the cadre of the Indian Veterinary Service are at present vacant at the Muktesar Institute. They have not been filled up permanently partly because it has not yet been decided on what lines to constitute the new Central Veterinary Service which will replace the Indian Veterinary Service, and partly because it is desired to await the Report of the Royal Commission on Indian Agriculture. In place of one of these posts, however, a temporary three years post has been created, to which one of the scholars referred to by the Honourable Member has been appointed.

(d) The revenue for the year 1925-26, the last year for which figures are available, exceeded the expenditure on the Institute by Rs. 4,53,682. The question of expanding the Institute cannot, however, be considered until the Report of the Royal Commission has been received.

(e) Government are under no obligation to provide these scholars with employment. The fact of his being over the age of 25 will not however be an absolute bar to future employment in the case of any scholar who may still be unemployed.

GRANT OF KING'S COMMISSIONS FOR THE INDIAN ARMY VETERINARY SERVICE TO QUALIFIED INDIAN M. R. C. V. S. MEN.

418. *Mr. K. C. Neogy : (a) Have the Government of India any objection to granting King's Commissions for the Indian Army Veterinary Corps to qualified Indian M. R. C. V. S. men ?

(b) If not, have Government done anything for the above mentioned scholars in this direction ?

(c) Will Government be pleased to state if they have considered the advisability of giving these scholars opportunities of further specialised work in Animal Nutrition and Breeding at the Institute of Animal Husbandry during their period of waiting ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) and (b). Indians holding the M. R. C. V. S. diploma are eligible for the grant of King's Commissions in the Indian Army Veterinary Corps provided that the general education that they have received is suitable. At present the only general education which the Government of India consider suitable is that provided by the Dehra Dun College or by an English public school.

(c) No, Sir.

(c) Is it a fact that Babu Nawal Kishore has left behind him two widows, one child about two years old and his widowed mother ?

(e) Have Government made any provision for his son and are Government prepared to increase the amount of compensation granted ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Government have called for information from the Agent, East Indian Railway, and will send a reply to the Honourable Member's questions as soon as it is received.

GRANT OF THE MONOPOLY OF SELLING NEWSPAPERS, BOOKS, ETC., AT RAILWAY STATIONS TO MESSRS. WHEELER AND CO.

(b) What are the terms and conditions on which the monopoly has been given ?

(c) Was the monopoly given by public advertisement and were any Indian firms given an opportunity to apply for the same ?

---

† Not put at the meeting, but the questions and answers to them will be found at pages 3434—3438 of these proceedings.

(d) Have any conditions been laid down for facilitating the sale of vernacular papers ?

(e) Are Government aware that the monopoly to Messrs. Wheeler & Co. is hampering the sale of vernacular newspapers and causing inconvenience to the Hindustani knowing public ?

(f) Do Government propose to exclude the vernacular newspapers from the articles contained in the monopoly of Messrs. Wheeler & Co. ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) to (f). The information is being obtained and will be furnished to the Honourable Member.

CONTRIBUTIONS BY GOVERNMENT SERVANTS TO THE KHADI FUND.

436. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Will Government kindly state if under Rule 23 (1) of the Government Servants' Conduct Rules, or any other Rule, Government servants are prohibited from subscribing to the Khadi Fund, which is in aid of the All-India Spinners' Association—an Association established with the consent of the All-India Congress Committee, as an integral part of the Congress organisation ?

(b) Are Government aware of the following Resolution which is part of the constitution of the All-India Spinners' Association :

"Whereas the time has arrived for the establishment of an expert organisation for the development of hand-spinning and Khaddar, and whereas experience has shown that such development is not possible without a permanent organisation, unaffected and uncontrolled by politics, by political changes, or political bodies, an organisation called the All-India Spinners' Association is hereby established with the consent of the All-India Congress Committee as an integral part of the Congress organisation, but with independent existence and powers" ?

(c) Has there been any correspondence with the Madras Government on this subject ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a) The Government of Madras have prohibited subscription under rule 23 (1) of the Government Servants' Conduct Rules.

(b) Yes.

(c) The Government of Madras have reported the facts.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : May I know whether this Government will consider the necessity of instructing the Government of Madras to recall the order issued ?

† Not put at the meeting, but the questions and answers to them will be found at pages 3439—3441 of these proceedings.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : The application of section 23 (1) of the Government Servants' Conduct Rules is a matter for the discretion of the Local Governments in respect of their own officers.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : Is it not a matter of sufficient importance because it is one which affects not merely the Government Servants' Conduct Rules in Madras but in other provinces also and it is a general question in which the Government of India might well consider the desirability of issuing instructions ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : It is because the question is of some general interest that I undertook to answer it at all. Otherwise I think I might have said that the matter was primarily one for the Local Government.

APPOINTMENT OF INDIANS TO THE SPECIAL COMMISSION TO INQUIRE INTO THE QUESTION OF THE FEDERATION OF EAST AND CENTRAL AFRICA.

437. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Will Government kindly state when the Special Commission of Inquiry is likely to go out to enquire into the question of a federation of East and Central Africa, and whether it is intended to appoint any Indian on this Commission to represent and safeguard the interests of the Indians in Kenya, Tanganyika, Uganda and other territories concerned ?

(b) Have Government taken any steps, or do they propose to take any steps in this matter ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : Government have no information as to when the Commission is likely to go out to Africa for the enquiry. As regards the rest of the question, the Honourable Member's attention is invited to the statement made by Mr. Dalal in this House and by the Honourable Sir Muhammad Habibullah on the motion of Mr. K. C. Roy last Thursday.

RECOVERY OF PENALTIES FROM RAILWAY COMPANIES FOR OVERCROWDING OF CARRIAGES.

438. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Will Government kindly state if under section 97 of the Indian Railways Act (Act IX of 1890) any suit has ever been brought by the Secretary of State for India in Council, against any Railway Company or administration to recover the penalty prescribed in section 93 of the said Act, for contravening the provisions of section 63, which fixes the maximum number of passengers to be carried in each compartment of a railway train ?

(b) If so, will Government kindly give the names of such Railway Companies or administrations, and the amount of penalty recovered from them separately ?

(c) If no such suit has ever been brought, will Government kindly explain the reasons why action has not been taken against those Railway Companies or administrations, which carry more passengers in the trains than the maximum number prescribed under section 63 of the Railways Act ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Not so far as Government are aware.

(b) Does not arise.

(c) Such action would not have been in the interest of the travelling public. The alternative to overcrowding was the stoppage of booking and such stoppages would, Government understand, have caused greater inconvenience to intending passengers.

ALLEGED INSOLENCE OF A "CREWMAN" OF THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.

439. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Has the attention of the Government been drawn to a signed letter, which appeared in the Forward, dated the 20th July 1927 (page 3), giving the details of the alleged insolence of a "crewman" of the East Indian Railway ? What are the facts of this case, and what steps have been taken, or are proposed to be taken to protect bona fide passengers from the harassment and insolence of railway "crewmen" ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Government have seen the letter referred to. The proper course in a case of this nature is for the person aggrieved to bring the matter to the notice of the Railway Administration concerned who can be relied on to deal with it on its merits.

ALLEGED SHORTAGE OF STORES ON THE SONE BRIDGE AT KOILWAR ON THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.

440. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Is it a fact that when the last inspection of the stores of the Sone Bridge Regirding at Koilwar (East Indian Railway) in Bihar, was made, a considerable amount of stores was found short in the stock ? If so, when was the last inspection made, and what is the approximate value of the stores found short ? Has any inquiry been made, and if so, with what result ?

(b) Have Government any objection in placing a copy of the last Inspection note on the table ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Neither the Railway Board nor the East Indian Railway Administration have any knowledge of any shortage of stores on the Sone Bridge at Koilwar.

CONVEYANCE OF THE ENGLISH MAIL FROM BOMBAY TO CALCUTTA BY THE BENGAL NAGPUR RAILWAY.

441. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Is there any proposal to convey the English Mail from Bombay to Calcutta by the Bengal Nagpur Railway for early delivery ? If so, is it a fact that this proposal, if carried out, will involve an expenditure of about Rs. 60,000 per year out of the funds of the Government of India ?

(b) Is it a fact that this proposal, if carried out, will result in English Mails being delivered somewhat later than at present over considerable portions of territories, such as Behar, Nepal and the United Provinces ?

(c) Is it not a fact that if the English Mails are carried to Calcutta by the Bengal Nagpur Railway, it will only result in Calcutta getting its Mails a few hours earlier on Sundays, which is not a business day ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) No. The second part of the question does not arise.

ENHANCEMENT OF THE LICENCE-FEES PAYABLE BY THE NONIAS (LUNIYAS) FOR THE MANUFACTURE OF CRUDE SALTPETRE, ETC.

442. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Is it a fact that formerly licences for the manufacture of crude saltpetre, rassi and saggi, were issued to the Nonias (Luniyas) through the Post Offices at the nominal fee of two annas only, but since 1924 the licences are issued by District Headquarter Treasuries at Rs. 2 ?

(b) Are Government aware that the Nonias (Luniyas) are a desperately poor class of persons, and this enhancement of the licence fee, together with the trouble and additional expense of obtaining it, and the system of issuing licences from District Headquarter Treasuries instead of through the Post Offices, have resulted in the practical ruin of the saltpetre industry in Bihar and elsewhere ?

(c) Do Government propose to decrease the licence fee, and revive the system of issuing licences through the Post Offices, or any other cheap and readily available agency ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : (a) Yes, except that under the old system the fee was 4 annas and not 2 annas as stated by the Honourable Member, and the Luniya was not allowed to educe salt without paying duty, whereas he may do so now.

(b) and (c). The changes introduced in 1924 were made partly in order to help the Luniyas. In view, however, of the present condition of the saltpetre industry, Government are at present re-examining the whole position, including the possibility of reducing license fees charged to refiners.

(4) The question of enquiry is under the consideration of H. H. the Chancellor of the University.

(b) Has this Commission been appointed with the concurrence of the Government of India ?

Mr. A. R. Dalal : (a) The Government of India understand that H. H. the Chancellor of the Aligarh Muslim University proposes to appoint a committee to enquire into the affairs of that University.

(b) The concurrence of the Government of India is not necessary.

(c) Does not arise.

446. Mr. Ismail Khan : Has the attention of the Government been drawn to the inconvenience experienced by passengers on the East Indian Railway trains, which run between Meerut City and Khurja Junction due to the fact that the first and second class carriages have no lavatories attached to them ? If so, are Government prepared to order that carriages with lavatories be attached to these trains in future ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The answer to the first portion of the question is in the negative. A copy of the question has been forwarded to the Agent, East Indian Railway, for such action as may be necessary.

(c) What were the causes of the mail vans getting sick between Raichur and Madras and the arrangements made for a more reliable supply of mail vans ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The information is being obtained and will be furnished to the Honourable Member.

(b) If it is a fact that a similar time-limit prescribed for the submission of representations in respect of fixation of pay was the 31st July, 1926 ?

(c) If it is a fact that two cases of the officials of the Bombay General Post Office for fixation of pay submitted in time, remain undisposed of for the last two years ?

(d) If the reply to the above be in the affirmative, do Government propose to consider the advisability of fixing some time-limit for the disposal of such cases by the Directorate ?

(c) Is it a fact that the question of escort of cash bags by the Town Inspector is likewise under examination for a long period of time ?

(d) What is the approximate date on which the decision of the Director General may reasonably be expected ?

Mr. H. A. Sams : (a) The 1st April, 1926.

(b) Was the question of his eligibility for election to the Assam Legislative Council ever referred to the Government of India in any connection ? If so, with what result ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a) Mr. Roy is a subject of one of the Khasi states. By a notification of the Government of Assam issued under the Assam Electoral Rules such subjects have been declared not to be ineligible for election and not to be disqualified for registration on the electoral roll by reason only of not being British subjects. Mr. Roy resides in the non-British area of the Shillong Municipality.

S." from Igatpuri on the subject of severe penalties inflicted on the members of the Transportation Staff, Igatpuri, by Mr. Bruce Joy, the Divisional Superintendent, Kalyan section ?

(b) Has the attention of the Government also been drawn to the letter addressed to the Agent, Great Indian Peninsula Railway, by the General Secretary of the Amalgamated Society of Railway Servants of India and Burma, Limited, appearing at pages 4 and 5 of the same issue ?

(c) If so, will Government be pleased to state what steps have been taken by the Agent to enquire into the allegations and to institute an enquiry into the circumstances in which the severe penalties complained of were instituted ?

(d) Do Government propose to take steps to prevent the repetition of such "severe penalties" on the subordinate employees of all Railways by the Divisional Superintendents ?

A copy of this question and reply will however be forwarded to the Agent, Great Indian Peninsula Railway.

Such articles can be taken delivery of from "No delivery" Post Offices also. In offices specially authorised by the Postmaster General, selected postmen can take out insured articles valued at more than Rs. 250.

(b) Yes, but only five minutes' walk from the present building.

(c) The Girgaon post office is at one end of its delivery area, but the Mandvi office is central for delivery purposes.

(d) I do not admit that all the offices referred to in (b) and (c) are in distant corners of their delivery areas. As far as possible delivery offices are located near the centre of the delivery area, but when an office has to be moved to a new building, this is not always possible.

(b) Yes, for the examination in November 1927. This has been postponed in consequence of the Director General's G.-O. referred to in part (a).

(c) It was in connection with the examination usually held by the Postmaster General.

(d) The reply to the first part is in the negative. Under the recently published rules for the new examination which applies also to Superintendents, Head Clerks and Inspectors, the Postmaster General and not the Superintendent nominates.

PLYING OF THE BENGAL AND NORTH-WESTERN RAILWAY STEAMER BETWEEN MAHABIRGHAT AND PAHLEZAGHAT.

420. Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan : (a) Are Government aware that the Bengal and North-Western Railway steamer plies only once during 24 hours between Pahlezaghat and Mahabirghat at Patna in the Province of Bihar and Orissa ?

(b) Are Government aware that the same steamer plies 4 times during 24 hours between Pahlezaghat and Mahendrughat ?

(c) If so, will they state what objection they have to increase the number of steamer trips from Mahabirghat to Pahlezaghat and back ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) and (b). The reply is in the negative.

(c) Government cannot be expected to intervene with regard to local transport arrangements which is a matter for local authorities and Local Advisory Committees.

421. Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan . (a) With reference to Government reply to starred question No. 461 on the 18th February 1927, regarding the abolition of the poll-tax in Fiji, will Government please state if they have got the information now ?

(b) If not, do they propose to obtain it ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : (a) No. The Honourable Member's attention is invited to sub-paragraph (3) of paragraph 3 of the Colonial Office letter No. 9167|25, dated the 20th March 1925, which was published with the Government of India Resolution No. 24-Overseas, dated the 12th January 1927.

STATUS OF INDIANS IN FIJI.

422. Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan : (a) With reference to Government reply to starred question No. 462, on the 16th February, 1927 regarding the status of Indians in Fiji, will Government please state if the question of the expansion of the municipal franchise so as to secure an adequate representation for Indians on Municipal Councils, has been examined as pointed out in the Government reply ? If so, with what result ?

(b) Have the negotiations been completed regarding the right of Indians to demand a jury of their own countrymen in criminal trials or any jury at all and the removal of restrictions imposed on Indians by the Emigration Ordinance, the Education Ordinance, the Flogging Ordinance, the Master and Servant Ordinance, the Prison Ordinance enforcing street and menial labour on Indian prisoners, etc. ; and, if so, will Government please communicate the result to the House ?

(b) If Local Advisory Committees have not been formed on all Indian Railways, will Government please state the reasons ?

2. In whom is the power of appointing and removing members of Local Railway Advisory Committees and of fixing the number of members of such Committees vested ; and who has got the power of deciding whether a Local Railway Advisory Committee on a certain Indian Railway is to be formed ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) A list giving the required information is laid on the table.

(b) Local Advisory Committees have been constituted for all State Railways. All Company Railways have been requested to initiate similar action and all important railways have done so. As regards the remaining Railways the matter rests with the Companies.

2. The rules governing the appointment of members of Advisory Committees vary to some extent on different Railways. On State-managed Railways provision is made for the appointment of members as follows :

> Two Local Government members nominated by the Local Government in whose jurisdiction the headquarters of the railway in question is situated ;

three representatives of the Legislative Council of the Government in whose jurisdiction the headquarters of the railway in question is situated. These members should be selected to represent rural interests and the travelling public ;

one member from the local municipality or corporation at the railway headquarters ; five members representing industries, commerce and trade.

This provision has also been adopted by the majority of the Company-managed Railways. The power of removing members who are nominated by Legislative and local bodies lies with the Local Government. The powers of deciding whether a Local Advisory Committee shall be formed and the number of members of the Committee rests with—

(a) the Railway Board in the case of State Railways,

(b) the Local Government with the approval of the Railway Board in the case of Railways under the control of Local Governments,

EXEMPTION FROM INDIAN INCOME-TAX OF PAY, ALLOWANCES, PENSIONS AND GRATUITIES PAYABLE IN THE UNITED KINGDOM.

424. *Lala Rang Behari Lal : 1. Will Government be pleased to state if it is a fact that all payments made in the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland on account of the following items are exempt from the payment of the Indian Income-tax ?—

(a) Pay and allowances of officers and others (including leave and furlough pay) ; and

2. If the answer to the above is in the affirmative will Government kindly state the total loss of revenue every year to the Indian Government on this score ?

3. Are Government prepared to consider the advisability of so amending the Indian Income-tax Act that all payments made from the Indian revenues at any place outside India are liable to the Indian Income-tax ?

4. Will the Government kindly place on the table a list of payments to civil and military officers, including payments in kind, which are exempt from the payment of Indian Income-tax ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : The answer to part one of the question is in the affirmative. In regard to part two, the calculations that would be involved in framing a close estimate of the tax that would be payable were these items taxable would be elaborate and the results even so would be very conjectural. I would point out to the Honourable Member that, since the officers in question now receive these payments free of Indian income-tax, it is not strictly accurate to describe the non-received tax as a loss. It is necessarily questionable whether a decision to make them taxable would not have to be accompanied by some increase in the amounts payable to the officers concerned. In these circumstances the Government do not at present propose to consider the question raised in part three of the question. In regard to part four the Honourable Member will find the desired information in paragraphs 16 and 20 of the Income-tax Manual.

GRIEVANCES OF THE INCOME-TAX ASSESSEES IN THE DELHI PROVINCE.

425. *Lala Rang Behari Lal : (a) Are Government aware of the fact that copies of assessment orders are not supplied free of cost in the Delhi Province ?

(b) Will Government be pleased to lay on the table a statement showing the amounts realised yearly from 1922 up to date by the Income-tax Department, Delhi, for supplying copies of assessment orders ?

(c) Are Government aware of the fact that assessees are required to produce books of accounts of their branches at the principal place of business thereby causing great inconvenience and expense ?

(d) Are Government prepared to consider the advisability of issuing orders to the effect that branch books may be inspected by the Income-tax Officer of the place where the branch is situate and a report sent to the Income-tax Officer of the principal place of business ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : (a) Till recently, the position was as stated by the Honourable Member, but instructions have since been issued that copies of assessment orders should be supplied free of charge.

(b) The Government understand that the average amount realised in a year is about Rs. 200 ; they do not propose to obtain the figures for each year.

(c) and (d). It will be seen from paragraph 22 (4) of the Income-tax Manual that the intention is that, as far as possible, the accounts of branches should be inspected by the Income-tax Officers of the places where the branches are situated ; but it is undoubtedly legal and may sometimes be necessary for the Income-tax Officer of the principal place of business to call for the branch books. It is not therefore desirable, nor would it be legal, to issue orders as suggested by the Honourable Member. If any Income-tax Officer abuses his powers in this or other respects the persons aggrieved should bring the matter to the notice of the Commissioner of Income-tax.

PREVENTION OF OPIUM SMOKING IN BALUCHISTAN, BIHAR AND ORISSA AND BENGAL.

429. Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan : (a) With reference to Government reply :

" It is proposed to prohibit it in Baluchistan and in Bihar and Orissa and Bengal. In the two provinces last mentioned the introduction of registration and rationing is also under contemplation. The Government of Assam now propose to introduce a Bill prohibiting opium smoking altogether. The Government of Madras also propose to undertake legislation prohibiting opium smoking altogether and the Government of Bombay propose to prohibit absolutely the possession of Chandu " to starred question No. 469 (f) on 18th February, 1927, regarding the abuse of opium, will Government please state if the Local Governments referred to in Government reply, have taken any further action in the matter of opium smoking ?

(b) How do matters stand with regard to opium smoking in Burma ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : (a) Smoking in company has been prohibited in Baluchistan since 1st April 1927. Proposals to prohibit such smoking and to introduce a system of registration and rationing are still under consideration by the Government of Bihar and Orissa. A Bill to penalise opium smoking by other than registered smokers is being drafted by the Government of Bengal. A Bill introduced by the Government of Assam prohibiting opium smoking altogether has recently been passed by the Assam Legislative Council. The Government of India have not heard further from the Governments of Madras and Bombay in regard to their proposals.

(b) A system of registration and rationing is in force in Burma. On the 31st December 1926, the number of Burmans and non-Burmans registered as smokers was 761 and 15,118, respectively. No new names can be added to the register and with the gradual disappearance of the persons now on the register, opium smoking will cease to exist in Burma.

NAMES OF THE NATIONS REPRESENTED IN THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS AND THEIR RESPECTIVE CONTRIBUTIONS TO THE LEAGUE.

430. *Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan : (a) Will Government please make a statement showing the names of the nations represented in the League of Nations and their respective contributions to the League for the year 1927 ?

(b) Will Government please state if the representation of Indians on the League Secretariat is in proportion to the contribution of India to the League of Nations ?

Mr. W. T. M. Wright : (a) The desired information will be found on pages 73—75 of the League of Nations' Official Journal, January, 1927, 8th Year, No. 1, a copy of which is in the Library.

(b) The Honourable Member is referred to the answer given to the last part of question No. 24 put by Kumar Ganganand Sinha, on the 18th August, 1927.

REVISION OF THE SCALES OF PENSION OF THE MENIAL STAFF IN GOVERNMENT DEPARTMENTS.

431. *Mr. Fazal Ibrahim Rahimtulla : (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether the scales of pension of the menial staff in some Departments have been recently revised ? If so, in what Departments ?

(b) Are the new pension rules applicable to the Record Suppliers and Jamadars in the Currency Department ? If not, why not ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : (a) No, the question is under consideration.

(b) Does not arise.

PENSIONS OF MENIALS.

432. *Mr. Fazal Ibrahim Rahimtulla : (a) Are Government aware that menials who have completed more than thirty years' active service are given only Rs. 4 as pension ?

(b) In view of these amounts being fixed many years back are Government prepared to revise them ? If so, when ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : Local Governments of Governors' Provinces have now full powers to make rules regulating the pension of this class of Government servants under their control. Those under the control of the Central Government are entitled to a temporary increase of pension up to Rs. 2 per mensem in addition to their ordinary pension of Rs. 4 per mensem.

PROVIDENT FUND FOR GOVERNMENT SERVANTS.

433. *Mr. Fazal Ibrahim Rahimtulla : (a) Will Government be pleased to state when the Provident Fund system as passed in the Council of State in 1924 is likely to be introduced in Government offices ?

(b) Are Government prepared at the same time to consider the grant of bonus to all the Government servants or their heirs in case of death before retirement ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : (a) The matter is still under consideration and it is not possible to say when a final decision will be reached.

(b) If a Provident Fund is introduced in lieu of pension, the Government will make some contribution, but cannot yet say what form that contribution will take.

GRANT OF INCREMENTS TO THE EMPLOYEES OF CURRENCY OFFICES WITH MORE THAN TEN YEARS' SERVICE.

434. Mr. Fazal Ibrahim Rahimtulla : (a) Are Government aware that there is great discontent amongst the staff in all Currency Offices in India for not applying retrospectively the revision of June 1924 ? If so, do they intend to alleviate the feeling by granting some increments to those who have put in more than ten years' service ?

(b) Is it a fact that the Deputy Controller of the Currency, Madras, and the Currency Officer Mr. Murphy had recommended some such relief ? If so, why was it not granted ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : (a) I would refer the Honourable Member to the reply given to the second part of question No. 471 asked by Mr. M. K. Acharya on the 2nd September 1926. Government do not propose to grant additional increments to those who have put in more than 10 years' service.

PROVIDENT FUND FOR THE STAFF OF THE CURRENCY OFFICE.

435. Mr. Fazal Ibrahim Rahimtulla : (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether they have reconsidered the question of a Provident Fund for the Currency Office Staff ?

(b) If so, has it been considered in the light of the present legislation as stated in the answer to the Questions Nos. 731—737 on the 3rd February 1925 ?

(c) If the answer to part (b) be in the affirmative have Government introduced the practice of adding their share to the Provident Fund of the employee every year ? If not, why not ?

(d) Will Government be pleased to state whether it is not also a fact that by the addition of the Government's share at the end of the employee's service he loses the interest on that share ? If so, are they prepared to take steps to abolish this practice and introduce the one prevailing in other services ? If not, why not ?

(e) Will Government be pleased to state whether they are aware that on Railways, Port Trusts, etc., the employee gets under certain conditions some gratuity over and above the benefit that he is entitled to get under Rule 26 of the Provident Fund Rules ? Are Government prepared to consider the desirability of introducing the same practice in the Currency Offices ? If not, why not ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : In view of probable changes in the control of the Currency Department, the Government do not propose to consider any modifications in the existing Provident Fund arrangements for the staff employed in the Treasurer's Department in the Currency Offices. I may add that the rest of the staff is on a pensionable basis.

EXTRA CHARGES FOR THE DELIVERY OF TELEGRAMS BEYOND A FIVE-MILE RADIUS FROM THE TELEGRAPH STATION.

444. Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan : 1. Is it not a fact that telegraphic messages are not delivered by telegraph peons beyond a five-mile radius from the telegraph station ?

2. Are extra charges made in cases of delivery of telegraph messages beyond a radius of five miles from the telegraph station and, if so, at what rate ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (1) and (2). The Honourable Member is referred to clause 401 of the Indian Post and Telegraph Guide.

(ii) The total number of postal clerks, postmen, and lower grade staff employed in those offices ; and

(iii) The number of postal employees and their dependents who died in those localities on account of fever during the past 10 years ?

(c) Is it a fact that 11 postal clerks out of a sanctioned strength of 59 in Howrah died of consumption during the last 7 years as stated in that article ?

(d) Is it a fact that the clerks attending the office there at 10 A.M. cannot leave it till 8-30 P.M. or even later ?

(e) Was any representation received by the Postmaster-General, Bengal and Assam Circle for an increase of the staff of the office by 16 clerks and 3 sorting postmen ?

(f) Were only three sorting postmen sanctioned by the Postmaster-General ? If so, what is the reason for not increasing the clerical staff ?

(g) Are Government prepared to direct the augmentation of the clerical staff of the office on account of its special conditions ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) Yes.

Information relating to parts (b) to (g) is being collected and will be furnished to the Honourable Member in due course.

Jameson, Medical Officer, Empire of India and Ceylon Tea Company, Limited, to the Superintendent, Lower Assam Division ?

(d) Was it not stated in the medical certificate that the sub-postmaster was suffering from low fever with constipation and loss of appetite, had become thin and emaciated, often forgot things and was unfit for work ?

(i) The general question of granting family pensions in such cases is under consideration.

454. Mr. Abdul Latif Saheb Farookhi : (a) Is it a fact that during the regime of Mr. A. Vernieux, Superintendent of Post Offices, a sub-postmaster of Sukna (Terai) died at night in the office room due to being compelled to work during illness ?

(b) Is it a fact that the next morning the postman of the office found the sub-postmaster dead and communicated the information to the Superintendent by telegraph ?

(c) Is it a fact that when Mr. A. Vernieux was in charge of the Jalpaiguri Division some years ago, a sub-postmaster of the Mal Post Office fell ill, but was not relieved although he applied for leave ?

(d) Is it a fact that about a week after the submission of the leave application, finding that his death was imminent, the sub-postmaster called the clerk, postmen and runners of the office, handed over the keys and requested them to remove him to Dacca so that he might die in his home and amidst wife and children ?

(b) Are Government aware that the Madras Government have sanctioned as far back as the year 1923 higher rates of allowances for their subordinates of the clerical cadre in the specially unhealthy localities than the Post Office ?

(c) Is it a fact that the Postmaster-General, Madras, intimated to the General Secretary of the All-India Postal and R. M. S. Union, Madras, in reply to the Resolution No. 13, passed at the Seventh Session of the Provincial Postal and R. M. S. Conference held at Coimbatore in June 1926 that a proposal to enhance the rate of compensatory allowance was under consideration ?

(d) Will the Government be pleased to state how long the matter of revising the allowances for the specially unhealthy localities has been under their consideration ? What is the reason for the delay in coming to a decision ?

(e) Do Government propose to pay the postal officials of the clerical cadre allowances or special pay on a par with Local Government rates in the Madras Circle ? If not, why ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) Yes.

(b) Yes.

(c) Yes.

(d) The question has been under consideration since 1923, but owing to the heavy demands upon the finances of the Department in connection with allied schemes for revising the scales of pay of various classes of employees, it has not so far been found possible to remove the existing anomalies in the matter of these allowances. A general review of compensatory allowances and special pay is now in progress and proposals for the revision of these allowances, etc., will shortly be submitted to Government by the Director General.

GRANT OF COMPENSATORY ALLOWANCES TO POSTMEN AND THE LOWER GRADE STAFF STATIONED IN UNHEALTHY LOCALITIES IN THE MADRAS CIRCLE.

457. Mr. Abdul Latif Saheb Farookhi : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state if it is a fact that the postmen and the lower grade staff stationed in the unhealthy localities in the Madras Circle are not granted allowance or special pay sanctioned for the clerical cadre ?

(b) If the answer to the above is in the affirmative, what is the reason for such discrimination ?

(c) Are Government aware that the Madras Government have sanctioned compensatory allowance to all classes of their subordinates stationed in such localities ?

(d) Do Government propose to pay compensatory allowance to the postmen and lower grade staff in those localities ? If not, why ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) Yes.

(b) The scales of pay sanctioned for postmen and lower grade staff in these localities are those accepted by Government on the recommendation of the Postal Committee of 1920.

(c) Yes.

(d) The question is being taken up as part of the general question of the revision of the pay and allowances of these subordinates.

LOCAL ALLOWANCE OF THE CLERKS OF THE HEAD POST OFFICES IN OOTACAMUND, ETC.

458. Mr. Abdul Latif Saheb Farookhi : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state if it is a fact that the minimum rate of local allowance sanctioned for the clerks of the Head Post Office at Ootacamund is Rs. 12 and that that for the staff of the Willowbund and Kandul Bazaar Post Offices and the office of the Superintendent of Post Offices, Nilgiri Division, is Rs. 10 ?

(b) Are Government prepared to remove the anomaly, or if not assign reasons for maintaining disparity in the rate of allowance to officials stationed in one and the same town and within the same municipal limits ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) Yes.

(b) With the object of removing such anomalies, the existing rates of compensatory allowance and special pay are under review.

459. Mr. Abdul Latif Saheb Farookhi : (a) Will the Government be pleased to lay on the table a statement showing for the last 5 years :

(i) the number of changes in the personnel of (a) the sub-postmasters, and (b) clerks if any,

(ii) the number of (a) sub-postmasters, and (b) clerks if any, who worked continuously for one year and more, in each of the post offices located at Valparai, Attakatti and Cherambadi in the Nilgiri Division ?

(d) What is the amount of expenditure incurred by the Department for the last three years as travelling allowances for the officials deputed to each of the above offices ?

Mr. H. A. Sams : (a) (i). The number of changes in personnel in all three post offices for the last five years :

(a) Sub-Postmasters 54

(b) Clerks 22

		Rs.	A.	P.
(b)	Attakatti	487	14	0
	Cherambadi	348	4	0
	Valparai	323	14	0

EXPANSION OF THE POST OFFICE BUILDING AT VALPARAI IN THE MADRAS CIRCLE, AND CONSTRUCTION OF QUARTERS FOR THE CLERKS.

460. Mr. Abdul Latif Saheb Farookhi : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state the dimensions of (i) the office room, and (ii) the residential quarters of the sub-postmaster at Valparai ? Is that a notoriously unhealthy locality in the Madras Circle ?

(b) When was the office building constructed and what was the strength of the clerical establishment at that time ?

(c) Was the clerical establishment strengthened in subsequent years ? If so, in what years and by how many men in each of those years ?

(d) What is the area of space occupied by the furniture in the office room ?

(e) Is it a fact that some of the furniture and records are kept in the residential quarters of the sub-postmaster for want of space in the office ?

(f) Is it a fact that quarters have been built only for one clerk there ?

(g) Are Government aware that residential quarters are not available at Valparai even for exorbitant rent ?

(h) When were the annual repairs for the clerk's quarters and the office building last made ?

(i) Is it a fact that in spite of the remarks in the order book of the office made by the Postmaster-General and the Superintendents for the last many years regarding the inadequacy of accommodation in the office and for the Sub-Postmaster and clerks, no steps have been yet taken for the expansion of the post office building and construction of quarters for the clerks ?

(j) Are Government aware that the rest of the clerical staff is experiencing very great difficulty in finding accommodation for cooking, bathing, sleeping, etc., when the senior clerk occupies the quarters ?

(k) Are Government prepared to take up immediately the question of providing quarters for all the clerks and adequate accommodation for the office and the sub-postmaster ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : Government do not think it necessary to obtain all the details asked for in the Honourable Member's question in view of the fact that steps have already been taken for the expansion of the office and quarters and for the construction of additional quarters.

PROVISION OF FREE QUARTERS FOR CLERKS OF THE GUDALUR POST OFFICE IN THE NILGIRI DIVISION.

461. Mr. Abdul Latif Saheb Farookhi : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state the date on which the residential quarters for the clerks of the Gudalur Post Office in the Nilgiri Division built by the Department were made available for occupation ?

(b) Did not the then Superintendent of Post Offices recommend to the Postmaster-General, Madras, that the clerks of that office should be given the quarters rent free owing to the notoriously unhealthy and other special conditions of the locality ?

(c) Is it a fact that for a period of two years from the date of occupation of the quarters, no recovery of rent was made from the clerks ?

(d) Is it a fact that orders were issued by the Superintendent in January this year directing the recovery of rent at 10 per cent. of pay of each clerk who occupied the quarters from the date they were taken over by the Department for use.

(e) Is it not a fact that the postal clerks of Valparai another notoriously unhealthy locality in the same division were exempted two or three years ago from paying rent for the residential quarters constructed there by the Department until such time as the scales of compensatory allowances were increased ?

(f) Were not also the amounts of house rent recovered from the clerks of Valparai refunded to them ?

(g) Do Government propose to provide free quarters for the clerks of the Gudalur Post Office as for those of Valparai and direct the refund of amounts recovered from them ? If not, why ?

Mr. H. A. Sams : (a) 1st August 1925.

(b) Yes. but the Superintendent did not base his recommendation on the unhealthiness of the locality, but on the scarcity of accommodation.

(c) No. The period was about 1 year and 3 months.

(e) Yes, not however for the reasons stated, but because the quarters were inadequate.

(f) No, as no recovery had been made.

(g) The matter is under consideration.

REFUND TO BABU RATIRANJAN SEN GUPTA, A SIGNALLER OF THE KHARAGPUR COMBINED OFFICE, OF RENT CHARGED FOR QUARTERS NOT OCCUPIED BY HIM.

462. Mr. Abdul Latif Saheb Farookhi : (a) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to an article headed " House Accommodation—Kharagpur ", appearing at page 493 in the January 1927 issue of " Labour ", the organ of the Bengal Provincial Postal and R. M. S. Union, Calcutta ?

(b) Is it a fact that the two signallers of the Kharagpur combined office were compelled to occupy the quarters in the upper flat of the old telegraph office building ?

(c) Is it a fact that the quarters in the said upper flat were considered unsuitable for the telegraphists when there was a departmental telegraph office there and were not therefore occupied by the telegraphists who were paid house rent allowance in lieu ?

(d) Is it a fact that Babu Ratiranjan Sen Gupta, one of the signallers of the Kharagpur office, did not occupy the said quarters finding them unsuitable ?

(e) Is it also a fact that even when the quarters were not occupied Babu Ratiranjan Sen Gupta was made to pay 10 per cent. of his pay towards house rent ? If so, why was the recovery made from him ?

(f) Is it compulsory on the part of the officials to occupy Government quarters even if they are unsuitable and inconvenient for themselves and their dependents ?

(g) Are Government prepared to consider the question of refunding to Babu Ratiranjan Sen Gupta the sum recovered from him towards house rent for the period he did not occupy the quarters ?

Mr. H A. Sams : (a) Yes.

(b) There was no compulsion. On account of scarcity of residential accommodation in Kharagpur the quarters were allotted to two signallers for occupation on payment of rent.

(c) No.

(d) and (e). Information is not yet available. It will be communicated to the Honourable Member on receipt.

(f) No not if the quarters are really unsuitable.

(g) The question will be considered when the facts are known.

M. S., and (iii) Telegraph Departments in India and Burma to which departmental grants are made ; and the amount of grants made to each class of recreation clubs during the last 5 years ?

AMOUNT OF FINES RECOVERED FROM POSTAL, R. M. S. AND TELEGRAPH EMPLOYEES.

464. Mr. Abdul Latif Saheb Farookhi : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state the total amount of fines inflicted and recovered from the Postal, R. M. S. and Telegraph employees for the years 1922-23, 1923-24, 1924-25, 1925-26 and 1926-27 ?

(b) Is there any " Fines Fund " in the Postal and Telegraph Department ? If not, under what head in the accounts are the amounts credited ?

(c) Are Government prepared to consider the question of instituting a Fines Fund as in some of the Railway companies ?

Mr. H. A. Sams : (a) The collection of the information asked for would involve a detailed examination of the establishment pay bills of all offices for the past five years. From statistics collected, however, in another connection, it has been ascertained that during the three years ending February 1927, the average annual amount of fines recovered from the Postal, R. M. S., and Telegraph employees was Rs. 15,882.

(b) There is only one such fund maintained, namely, that in respect of the workmen employed in the Telegraph Workshops at Alipur. In all other cases the amounts recovered on account of fines are credited to Government.

(c) The matter is under consideration.

465. Mr. N. C. Kelkar : Will Government be pleased to state :

(b) whether the first selection grade of the Bombay General Post Office is a self-contained cadre ;

(c) whether two qualified Inspectors of the Foreign Mail Division are provided for in the selection grade of the Bombay General Post Office, overriding the claims of hundreds of senior men in that office ;

(e) whether both the Inspectors of Foreign Mails Division were confirmed in the selection grade of the Bombay General Post Office, as Accountant, Foreign Parcel and Joint-Head-Clerk, Foreign Post ;

(f) whether the request made by the Association was refused on the ground that the duties of the Inspectors of Post Offices and Foreign Mails Division were " Quite different " ; and if so, whether the duties of Inspectors of Foreign Mails Division and the Accountant, Foreign Parcel and Joint Head Clerk, are not still more different ;

(g) what were the grounds of their appointment in the selection grade of the Bombay General Post Office ;

(h) whether it is a fact that at the time of their transfer to Bombay General Post Office one unpassed official was working as Inspector in the Foreign Mails Division and whether this official was examined after the protest and was "adjudged" as passed; and

(i) whether any selection grade appointments in the Foreign Mail Division were transferred to the Bombay General Post Office and, if not, whether it is proposed to retransfer these Inspectors to the Foreign Mails Division or Railway Mail Service with a view to remove discontent amongst the officials of the Bombay General Post Office?

(b) If the reply to the above be in the affirmative, will Government be pleased to state why they consider this to be necessary, and whether they are doing this on their own initiative or under instructions from His Majesty's Government?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai: (a) No.

(b) Does not arise.

(b) In view of the passing of the Panama Immigration Law by the Panama Republic, will Government please state what steps they propose to take with a view to safeguard the interests of the Indians residing in the Republic (vide starred question No. 525 on the 21st February 1927)?

Sir Denys Bray: (a) About 300.

(b) As the result of representations by His Majesty's representative the Panama authorities have promised to amend the immigration law so as to enable Indian residents, who may temporarily leave the country, to return. In the meantime they have stated their intention to administer the law with "benevolent leniency".

(b) If so, will they please communicate the result to the House ?

2. Will Government please state the total number of candidates recruited for the Indian Civil Service province by province, both by competition and nomination since the present system came into force ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : In the year 1926-27, 29 Europeans and 20 Indians have been recruited for the Indian Civil Service by competition, and 7 Indians (including 4 Burmans) by nomination. One Mussalman was recruited by competition and two by nomination.

2. I assume that the Honourable Member refers to the province of origin, and place a statement on the table prepared on this basis. The Honourable Member is doubtless aware that candidates are not in all cases posted to their province of origin.

The total number of candidates recruited for the Indian Civil Service since 1922 is 188.

The total number of Indians recruited since 1922 and their provinces of origin, so far as can be ascertained, are as follows :

RESOLUTION RE IMPROVEMENT AND EXPANSION OF BANKING FACILITIES.

Mr. President : The House will now resume the further discussion of the following Resolution moved by Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji on the 10th February, 1927 :

"This Assembly recommends to the Governor General in Council that a Commission consisting of a majority of Indian members with an Indian Chairman be appointed to investigate the present position of the banking institutions, facilities and conditions in India and to make recommendations for their improvement and expansion, with particular reference to the provision in adequate quantity and appropriate form of the capital or finance necessary for the development of the industries and agriculture of India."

Mr. M. S. Sesha Ayyangar (Madura and Ramnad cum Tinnevelly : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, it may be in the recollection of this House that when the Honourable Mr. Haji moved this Resolution in last Delhi Session, he made out a clear and convincing case showing why his Resolution ought to be accepted by this House. He also charged the Government with indifference and inaction in this matter, and the Honourable the Finance Member repudiated that charge by suggesting that since the inauguration seven years ago of the Imperial Bank of India and the establishment of over 100 branches of this Bank the Government had done its duty in the matter. It was further said that the war loans granted during the war and the raising of the Government loans since 1922 had also facilitated the development of banking institutions in this country. It was further urged that the Post Office Savings Bank Account and the Postal Cash Certificates had also helped the country in promoting banking facilities in this country. I am afraid, Sir, that none of these things really touches the fringe of what is involved in my friend Mr. Haji's Resolution. What he wants, as I see from his Resolution, is the grant of an inquiry "to investigate further the present position of the banking institutions, facilities and conditions in India and to make recommendations for their improvement and expansion with particular reference to the provision in adequate quantity and appropriate form of the capital necessary for the development of the industries and agriculture of India." Now, Sir, I do not know what section of the population really is served by the Imperial Bank of India and its several branches. I really do not understand to what extent the Imperial Bank and its several branches are able to meet the needs and requirements of 7 lakhs of villages and over 2,000 towns in this country which are bankless, and how far this institution is able to help the joint stock and other concerns in this country. What is really involved in the Resolution is that something must be done by Government by starting an inquiry, if need be, and then determining the measure that might be considered necessary for the expansion of banking facilities and for promoting agriculture and other industries in this country. I submit, therefore, Sir, that none of the measures suggested by the Honourable the Finance Member really touches the fringe of this question.

No doubt, the Honourable the Finance Member expressed his sympathy for the Resolution, and he said that he also felt the imperative need for an inquiry of this kind, but he added that the time was not yet ripe ; in fact, he said, it was too early to think of the nature of an inquiry of this character or even the personnel of the inquiry. In furtherance of that argument, he said that we have the Reserve Bank Bill on the anvil of the Legislature and that there is also the Agricultural Commission sitting now, and therefore we might await the result of these two and then think of the necessity of starting this inquiry. Now, Sir, so far as the Reserve Bank Bill is concerned, no doubt it was just now announced that it might come up next week or the week after. I also feel that the Honourable the Finance Member is very sincere in his belief that this Bill of his is really a panacea for all the Indian ills, either economic, financial banking or currency. I wish I shared in that belief ; but unfortunately I differ from him in toto. Even assuming for argument's sake that all the amendments of which he has given notice about the Reserve Bank Bill are carried, so long as the facilities sought to be given to the Imperial Bank of India under the separate amendments regarding the Imperial Bank of India are there, I rather feel strongly that all these things would really stifle or retard the growth of banking institutions rather than develop indigenous banking in this country. So that, there is absolutely no use, I submit to the House, in waiting to see what becomes of this Bill ; and further I am not sure as to the fate of this Bill or even as to the form in which it might ultimately emerge from this House. I therefore do not think that there is any good ground at all why this enquiry should be deferred on account of the consideration of the Reserve Bank Bill which is impending.

Next it was submitted to the House that we might as well wait till the Report of the Agricultural Commission was published. Now, I want to put to the Honourable the Finance Member whether the terms of that Commission do really cover the ground that is sought to be involved in this Resolution. If that were so, if only a frank statement had been made to that effect, it would have set matters right, but inasmuch as the terms of reference to the Royal Agricultural Commission do not include what is sought to be covered by this Resolution, I do not see again any reason why we should wait till the Report of the Royal Agricultural Commission is out.

Lastly, urging these grounds, the Honourable the Finance Member gently persuaded the Honourable Mover not to press this Resolution. I do not know if the Honourable Mover is going to be successfully seduced to that position—I do not think he is. I submit, therefore, that I have very good reasons to support this motion, and I would request the House to carry it.

Lala Lajpat Rai (Jullundur Division : Non-Muhammadan) : Sir, I want to support this motion on the basis of some personal knowledge and experience of the working of one of the biggest joint stock Indian banks and of the difficulties under which Indian banking in general suffers at the present day. I do not want to prolong the debate as I find that the Honourable the Finance Member has in a way given promise of an early inquiry in the matter. Speaking on the 10th February, he said :

" Speaking for Government, I am prepared to say that the Government are most desirous that immediate steps should then be taken by some means or other to start a searching inquiry into banking facilities in India and the best means for improving them."

That statement would have been satisfactory if he had not laid down certain other conditions, and made certain other observations which raise a fear that the inquiry contemplated by this Resolution might be postponed indefinitely. First of all, I think he labours under a misapprehension about the intentions of the Mover when he in the last sentence said :

" I rather doubt if the House would care to commit itself to that Resolution as it actually stands with the demand for a Royal Commission at this particular moment."

That is not the demand of the Mover as far as I have been able to ascertain from him. No doubt, he has used the word " Commission " in the Resolution, but that does not mean a Royal Commission. It may be any Committee or Commission which the Honourable the Finance Member may think fit to institute for the purpose of making the inquiry which the Honourable Mover asks for. Therefore, the fear that this House will commit itself to the appointment of a Royal Commission should not deter Members from voting for the motion as it stands now.

I want to emphasise, Sir, the necessity of such an inquiry at an early date, because it is held even by the Honourable the Finance Member that the economic progress of the country depends upon providing adequate banking facilities. In the opening part of his speech on the 10th February he said " Idle money means idle manhood ". Then further on he said :

" If the Government of this country, or any Member of this House knew means by which we could induce the people of this country to make their savings available for the development of their country, we should be contributing to the future of this country a boon far exceeding any that any existing or previous Government has given or that even a Swaraj Government will be able to bring.

Well, Sir, this is a Resolution which has the same object as the Honourable the Finance Member has at heart. But if the Government continues to postpone this inquiry from day to day under one pretence or other, then that day will never come nearer, because I know from personal experience that, unless a sifting inquiry is made into the existing conditions of Indian banking, no such improvement as is desired both by the Government as well as by the people for the development of Indian banking is possible.

I know, Sir, the difficulties under which Indian banking has suffered throughout, and for these difficulties the Government is also partly responsible—I do not say wholly responsible but partly responsible. I know from personal experience that during the Indian banks failures in 1913, several banks failed for want of sympathy and help on the part of the Government. I was at that time concerned with the management of the Punjab National Bank, one of the biggest banks in the Country, which has as many as 34 branches scattered all over the country. It was with great difficulty and in the absence of any sympathetic help from the Government and the Government Bank at the time—I considered the then Bengal Bank the Government Bank—that we tided over a crisis at that time. It is that knowledge which deters many investors, particularly small investors, from giving their money over to the Indian Banks. No amount of branches opened by the Imperial Bank will solve that problem for them. The small Indian investor is not likely to go and invest his money in the Imperial Bank or in any of these European managed banks. I know that the European managed banks have not been looking at the Indian banks, even the joint stock banks, with a favourable eye. They have been trying to discredit them and to say to people that they should not trust these Indian banks. An inquiry of this kind will help the small investor as well as the big investor to know how the Indian banks stand. If they could be assured, under reasonable conditions and on reasonable terms, of the sympathetic attitude of the Government towards Indian banks in times of crises, the small investor will be encouraged to put his money in the Indian banks, and it is these Indian banks alone that can properly take the money of these small investors. The Imperial Bank with its highly paid machinery will be unable to solve that problem at all. Therefore, in the interests of the Indian banking industry, it is necessary that such an inquiry should be hastened, should be proceeded with at an early date though I am quite in agreement with him as to the undesirability of having the matter sifted by a Royal Commission. I agree with him that these Commissions are not very cheap things ; on the contrary they are very expensive things and the cost incurred on them is entirely disproportionate to the benefit they bring to the tax-payer by their conclusions. In fact in most cases the tax-payer has to pay very heavily for that inquiry and also for the carrying out of the conclusions which these Royal Commissions arrive at. Therefore, that is not what the Honourable Mover wants or what this House wants to commit itself to. What we want is a committee of experts and non-experts to inquire into the conditions at present existing in Indian banking and to provide such facilities and checks as will encourage small investors and those people who have money to invest, to go and invest their money in these banks under certain guarantees. I think the Government will be well advised to provide after such an inquiry certain checks upon the auditing of these banks and also upon their investments, such as will assure the small investors about their safety. At present, while the European managed banks do not attract the Indian investor, they are rather afraid of entrusting their savings to Indian banks as well because of so many failures in the past, and because they know that at present legislative provisions do not exist that provide such a necessary check or restrictions on their investments as will put heart into the small investor to go and put his money into these banks. We know the Government is anxious to make this enquiry, but mere statements of anxiety and mere good wishes will not help us. We want a speedy inquiry into this matter, as soon as possible. It should not be postponed from time to time under one pretence or another, either one referring to the Agricultural Commission or the Reserve Bank Bill. As my friend Mr. Sesha Ayyangar said, these questions even if solved properly are not going to solve all the problems. The problem is an extensive one and it will take time to go into it. I therefore desire that the Government should give us a more definite assurance about the time when they are going to institute that inquiry, and to appoint a committee for the purposes of the inquiry contemplated by the Resolution moved by my friend. I have every sympathy with the Resolution and I hope the House will accept it.

[Lala Lajpat Rai.]

Mr. R. K. Shanmukhan Chetty (Salem and Coimbatore cum North Arcot : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, my Honourable friend, Mr. Haji, had done a distinct service in calling the attention of the House to the need for a comprehensive inquiry into the banking facilities that exist in India at present. Honourable Members will recollect that this is not the first occasion when this question of the need for such an inquiry has been brought to the notice of the Government of India and the Indian public. As far back as 1914, the Chamberlain Commission drew the attention of the Government to this aspect of the question of monetary reform in India. Again, the Indian Industrial Commission in 1918, drew the attention of the Government and the public to the necessity for increasing banking facilities in India if Indian industries were to develop at all in this country. Again, in 1919, the attention of the then Imperial Legislative Council was drawn to this question by a Resolution moved by a non-official Member ; and at that time the spokesman of Government accepted the Resolution and gave an undertaking that the inquiry would be started in the very near future. Again, in 1923, the matter was brought up for discussion in another place, and there again, the Resolution was unanimously adopted by that body. And, lastly, in 1925, the External Capital Committee again drew attention to the necessity for such an inquiry. My Honourable friend, Mr. Haji, rightly complained that the Government of India, though they on these different occasions expressed their sympathy with the object underlying the Resolution and gave an undertaking that the inquiry would be started, have practically done nothing. And my Honourable friend, Sir Basil Blackett, in the speech which he delivered on the last occasion, observed that my Honourable friend Mr. Haji was not justified in levelling this charge against the Government of India. I am afraid, Sir, the Honourable the Finance Member has not convinced this House that the Government of India have yet taken any very definite steps towards the starting of such a comprehensive inquiry.

The latest pronouncement on the subject, as I said, is the recommendation of the External Capital Committee and that recommendation runs as follows :

> " India possesses a vast store of dormant capital awaiting development and in order to make this available for investment banking facilities ought to be increased and extended. The examination of various technical measures suggested in the replies with this object is outside the scope of the Committee, but we would emphasise the importance of a co-ordinated survey being undertaken at the earliest opportunity of the whole field of banking in India. This could be followed by a detailed examination by an expert committee or committees on the lines along which progress should be effected."

It was in 1925 that this recommendation was made by the External Capital Committee. They suggested that a co-ordinated survey must be undertaken at the earliest opportunity of the whole field of banking in India, and they said that this survey must be followed by a detailed examination on the lines along which progress should be effected. My Honourable friend, Sir Basil Blackett, the other day gave an account to this House of the action that he took as a result of this recommendation of the External Capital Committee. What was it that the Honourable the Finance Member did ? As a result of this recommendation the Honourable the Finance Member delivered a very interesting lecture on banking to the Delhi

[Mr. R. K. Shanmukhan Chetty.]

University and in that lecture he gave a very lucid exposition, as he always does, of the needs of banking in India and the lines along which reform must be undertaken. Beyond this, I submit, he has not devoted as much attention to the question as the importance of the subject deserves. Sir, in dealing with the question of increasing banking facilities, the Honourable the Finance Member dealt with various aspects of the question. He pointed out that with a view to increase the investing habit of the Indian people he had taken great pains to popularise the Post Office Cash Certificates. I recognise that by the introduction of this system of Post Office Cash Certificates and by the steps that have been taken to popularise them a great advance has certainly been made in encouraging the investment habit of the Indian people. But in this connection I should like to point out to him whether, after all, he has done wisely in reducing the interest rate on the Post Office Cash Certificates. No doubt, when the interest rate stood higher, somewhere in the neighbourhood of 6 per cent., probably the Post Office Cash Certificates system was availed of by the larger investors rather than by the smaller investors. But I have a suspicion that, as a result of the drastic cut in the interest rate, the popularity of the Cash Certificate has been jeopardised. I would, therefore, ask the Honourable the Finance Member to consider, in the light of the experience gained after the reduction of the interest rate, whether it would not be worth while to increase it slightly.

The Honourable the Finance Member then dealt in his lecture with the need for banking education and I must congratulate him on having succeeded in bringing into existence the Indian Institute of Bankers, and I hope that this new institution that has come into existence will be of great help in promoting banking education in this country. He has also taken the right step in removing the stamp duty on cheques and also in introducing the Negotiable Instruments Bill which is now before a Select Committee. In this connection I would like to draw his attention to the need for early action in abolishing the stamp duty upon hundis also. I know that the Honourable the Finance Member feels the necessity for bringing about this reform and I hope that he will take steps to bring about this reform at an early date.

There is another aspect of this question of banking in India which has not yet been discussed and gone into, and that is the question of providing long-term credits for industrial and agricultural purposes. So far as the question of providing long-term credits for agricultural purposes by the creation of land mortgage banks and such other institutions is concerned, the Honourable the Finance Member is evidently of opinion that the result of the enquiry of the Royal Commission on Indian Agriculture must be awaited. I am prepared to concede that what the Royal Commission on Agriculture will have to say on this subject would be very useful in determining the ways by which we may give facilities for long-term credits. There is also another aspect of the question which to my mind has not yet been dealt with at all, and that is the co-ordination of indigenous banking and banking methods with the more advanced western system of banking. In the evidence that Governor Strong gave before the Royal Commission on Indian Currency and Finance, he said about the indigenous system of banking in India :

"I would liken it, if you please, first to the construction of a foundation for a superstructure, and the foundation for a central banking system in India to my mind must be carefully introduced among, and interwoven with the existing banking practices, the existing customs of business, the existing methods of Government in managing its fiscal affairs and the existing business that India conducts, but that it should not be applied, as was done to a considerable extent in America, as a sort of forced readjustment of methods.''

This question of studying the relation of indigenous banking and banking methods to the more advanced western methods of banking, to my mind, seems to be the most important that this Committee, if, and when, it is appointed, must undertake. I do not see why the appointment of this Committee which is asked for in this Resolution should be postponed till the Reserve Bank Bill is passed. I do not know whether it was the intention of my Honourable friend, Mr. Ayyangar, that this question should be postponed till the Reserve Bank Bill is passed by this House, or till the Reserve Bank actually comes into existence. If the Reserve Bank Bill passes this House in this Session, the Reserve Bank itself will probably be established on the 1st July 1928, and I do not see how, even if this Committee is appointed immediately after the 1st July 1928, the new Reserve Bank, which would just have been started, would be in a position to give any material assistance to this Committee. I hope Government will realise that this question of an enquiry into banking facilities in India has been postponed for a very long time, that Government have been, in fact, shirking such an enquiry, and I do hope that the Honourable the Finance Member will realise the urgent necessity of appointing a Committee at as early a date as possible to undertake this much needed survey of banking in India.

Mr. K. C. Roy : (Bengal Nominated Non-Official) : With your permission, Sir, I will first move the amendment that stands against my name:

'' That at the end of the Resolution the following be added :—

' and also to report what, if any, measures are desirable to regulate and control banks and banking business in this country ' ''.

Sir, the subject which my amendment initiates is by no means a new issue. It was discussed in the old Imperial Legislative Council in the year 1914, and among the old Members present to-day I notice my Honourable friend, Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya, who, I am sure, will recall the debate. The debate arose out of a series of bank failures to which my Honourable friend, Lala Lajpat Rai, has briefly referred. My Honourable friend, Mr. Sesha Ayyangar, has reminded the House that it was on the 10th February of this year that my Honourable friend, Mr. Haji's Resolution was partially discussed and the last speaker was the Honourable Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas. In concluding his speech, Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas said :

'' The Indian investor, Sir, in banking institutions has proved to be childlike, oversuspicious, easily misled, and not treating these banking institutions with that seriousness and confidence which alone can give India successful banking institutions.''

I am only sorry that my Honourable friend had no time to develop this theme. What is the cause of this shyness ? If we look back to the history of India since 1913, what do we find ?

There has been a series of banking failures causing immense financial crisis and distress to many humble investors. My amendment only aims at protecting those investors. Against fradulent Bank Managers and bad creditors. There is not a single Province or Presidency which was not affected. In the province in which the House is sitting there have been not less than 12 bank failures. I shall only name 4—two banking institutions which were controlled by Mr. Harkishen Lal, and the Allience Bank of Simla, and the Punjab Banking Corporation. I shall go to the neighbouring province of the United Provinces. There was the failure of the Bank of Upper India. Going to Burma, there was the failure of the Bank of Burma. I will go to my own province, Bengal. There is the regrettable failure of the National Bank which only took place the other day. What have the Government done since to restore public confidence ? We were told in 1914 by Sir William Clark that they were waiting for the termination of the liquidation proceedings. The liquidation proceedings are unhappily continuing even to-day. These bank failures have given a new harvest to liquidators. We were promised that the Local Governments would be consulted, and as soon as the consultations were over, they would consider the necessity of a special inquiry or any other Government action which might be deemed to be in the interests of investors. But nothing has been so far done. I feel that my friend Mr. Haji's Resolution has given an excellent opportunity to the Finance Minister to redeem the promise which was held out in 1914. I am quite sure that Sir Basil Blackett will not lose this opportunity. Much has been said against the attitude of Sir Basil Blackett in regard to the institution of the inquiry which has been suggested by my friend Mr. Haji. The House will forgive me if I put in a word on behalf of Sir Basil Blackett, although he is quite able to take care of himself. I have known him for four years. He is ever industrious, ever busy and no Finance Minister has had a more strenuous time than he has. If he had delayed the solution of the question, it is not because he does not like it but it was inevitable. Sir, I move my amendment.

Mr. N. C. Kelkar : (Bombay Central Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : I rise to support the Resolution of my friend Mr. Haji. In doing so I wish first of all to say this. I am quite aware that the attention of Government has been already directed to the importance of this question. and the recommendations of the Currency Commission also may be taken to be an indication in the same direction. The Commission said :

"We should welcome any steps which can be taken in the direction of making an extensive and scientific survey of banking conditions in India. In any scheme of banking reform that may be planned, we trust that due emphasis will be laid on the provision and extension of cheap facilities to the public, including banks and bankers, for internal remittance."

Since this Report steps have been taken to bring a Reserve Bank into being. This is not the place for saying anything about the Reserve Bank. I can say this, at any rate, that by bringing that bank into being the question of banking facilities for the up-country and the mofussil and the small investor is not going to be tackled. Then again, it is said that something is expected in this direction from the Report of the Agricultural Commission. Personally I do not expect that the Agricultural Commission will help us by its recommendation to a large extent in the particular direction to which this Resolution is directed. I am conscious that the Agricultural Commission is bound to make certain recommendations which will go to a certain extent to help the agriculturist. But the agriculturist is not the only person who is covered by the Resolution. There are other people who have to be thought of and the question will not be solved in my opinion by the recommendations of the Agricultural Commission. Then, there is the question of facilities to be given to the co-operative banks ; because those are also banks to be considered along with other banks. If I may anticipate a certain matter for a limited purpose I may say this that the majority report on the Reserve Bank Bill does provide for one director to represent provincial co-operative banks. Since then I have seen an amendment put in which, in my opinion, restricts the scope of that amendment and makes it applicable only to the protection of agricultural interests. But I think urban depositors, urban unions and urban co-operative societies have also got to be though of in this connection. In this Bill again it will be found that the indigenous and joint stock banks go without any representation on the Reserve Bank and, therefore, you cannot say that the Reserve Bank will take adequate care and give adequate protection to the interests of the joint stock banks and indigenous banks. Then it is said that the Imperial Bank has extended its branches on a wide scale. In spite of that, I do not think that it has successfully established a point of contact with the small investors and the small savings man in the mufassil and up-country. If Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas were here he might perhaps have corrected me if I made any misstatement ; but judging from my little experience I can say this that the Imperial Bank is not a popular institution up-country and in the mufassil. I am quite aware that the Imperial Bank does minister to the wants of a certain class of people, namely, those people who want loans ; and I am conscious again that the Imperial Bank does accommodate these needy people at a rate of interest which is lower than what they may get anywhere else. But there is something also to be said to the contrary. Even taking into account, that the Imperial Bank accommodates those who want loans at a smaller rate of interest, my point in this connection is that if you really want to advance banking facilities and banking habits in the up-country you should take care of only those people who want loans. I cannot make a calculation, but I may say off hand that perhaps only 5 per cent. of those who have got dealings with the Imperial Bank may require loans ; and they again will be people who have got securities or gold or such other things and can offer that security and get loans. But what about the 95 cent. who cannot have adequate banking facilities in the up-country ? It is a matter of common knowledge that the Imperial Bank does not maintain a good point of contact with the small depositor in this that it refuses to give interests on current and small deposits. This is exactly the thing I should say that the Imperial Bank should do if it wants to attract small depositor and the small savings man. It should offer adequate and proper interest on the deposits, and this it should be able to do in view of the fact that the bank gets a very large amount of assistance from Government balances. With regard to the branches established by the Imperial Bank it is my opinion that the working of these branches is not successful and it has been stated that these branches are not being run at a profit but at a loss. The reason in my opinion is that there is extravagance and a highly paid supervising staff with regard to the management of these banks.

Other banks I suppose would do the same business with a little less cost. Therefore, Government must see to it that the Imperial Bank should not only extend its business in the mufassil but the bank should be advised to economise its expenditure so that the extension may go on with greater rapidity. Government have already taken one important step in this matter, namely, the removal of the stamp duty on cheques. I quite recognize that, but that is not enough for the purpose which is at the bottom of the Resolution brought by my friend Mr. Haji. In this connection I would quote Sir Phiroze Sethna, who is the Chairman of the Central Bank in Bombay, one of the largest banks in India. Speaking of the Bankers Institute he says :

"Our Indian youths aspiring to high offices in the banking line also read for the qualifying examinations of the Institute. They are, however, at a great disadvantage in this respect, inasmuch as while the curriculum of studies includes such subjects as English Banking, Law and Practice, and the Bill of Exchange Act, for their daily duties they are required to know the Indian Law and Practice of Banking and the Law and Custom regarding Local Bills and Hundies which subjects naturally do not form part of the curriculum of studies for the examinations of the English Institute. An Indian Institute of Bankers will do away with this anomaly. But we shall look forward to the Institute, if established, not only for educational facilities for students but for a general diffusion of the knowledge of the theory and practice of Banking among the people and for measures for the adoption of common banking practice and procedure."

I would advise the Government in this connection to imitate what is being done by the Provincial Governments as a parallel in respect of giving aid on a substantial scale to co-operative institutions whose main functions and purpose is not to do any co-operative business as such but to diffuse a knowledge of the co-operative movement in the country. I call upon the Government of India therefore to do something like this and to come forward with a generous offer of assistance to any central banking institute which is prepared to serve this purpose. Now, I do not wish to say much with regard to the Reserve Bank Bill. It is well known that we are in a state of transition and we also know that the transition stage is a period of crisis for some people. In this respect I may say this, that while we have before us a Reserve Bank at the top what we find at the bottom is that the private banker is fast losing ground and corporate indigenous banks are not taking his place. I had a specific complaint the other day from a private banker who has been doing all his life business as a hundi wallah. His complaint was that owing to the facilities given by Government of adjustments and transfers of money on their treasuries the hundi wallah is fast losing his business. I should like to state clearly that I do not stand here, and I do not plead here, the cause of the private hundi wallah. In course of time he is bound to go, and I should like to see him go, because I am anxious that corporate bodies of banking should take the place of private hundi wallahs who can charge rates without any limit. But my present point is that the Imperial Bank which gets the benefit of large Government balances at very low rates is actually competing even with the private hundi wallah, and, of course, also with other indigenous banks. I therefore bring this point to the notice of the Finance Member and request him to suggest a remedy if he can think of one.

Now the Resolution is important in this respect that India is far more backward than other countries in the matter of banking facilities. Government must of course be aware of this, but I will just give a few figures in this connection. I will quote the case of America because that country has been taken as a model for our Reserve Bank, but on the other hand you will see the great difference in banking facilities which the two countries enjoy. There is one bank in India for about 7,000 villages. There are 670 banking offices in 267 towns out of 2,300 towns. Of these 670 offices 177 are in about 11 towns, 96 are in small towns and the rest are in towns with one office each. On the other hand America has got 35,000 banking offices for a population of 11 crores. Now with regard to England, owing to the recent fashion of amalgamation of small banks, the actual number of banking offices in England has of course decreased, and the figures I am quoting are for 1911 from Sykes on Banking. In that year there were 6,413 banking offices in England, or one to every 5,630 of the population. Just compare that with India where I think there is one banking office for about 5 lakhs of people. That at once gives an idea of the great difference which exists with regard to banking facilities between America and England and India. And if you take America as a model for India in connection with the Reserve Bank, you ought certainly to do much more in the way of establishing banking facilities in India.

With regard to the Imperial Bank, of course, I have already expressed my opinion. In the joint memorandum presented by the Central Bank, the Allahabad Bank, the Bank of India and other banks the same thing has been clearly pointed out. I know that that is also opinion of the Chairmen of several indigenous banks, namely, that the Imperial Bank is unnecessarily competing with them. I think even the Exchange Banks also have a grievance in this respect. I have of course stated the Indian view, but if the Finance Member would like to hear the non-Indian view I can refer him to Times of India of a recent date, the 29th September, 1926, in which the editor says this :

"Sir Basil has been a keen advocate of the extension of banking facilities and the banking habit in India. Does he appreciate the point that the present proposals to allow the Imperial Bank to operate as an ordinary commercial bound, absolutely unfettered in all its activities, will tend to stifle further banking development in this country and will force out of existence such local banks as now exist."

And with regard to the unfair competition carried on by the Imperial Bank the same writer observes :

"What we have to bear in mind is that this is a country the bulk of whose population is illiterate. If banking ideas and banking habits are to filter through to this huge population it must be through institutions that are by and of, the people. We put it to Sir Basil Blackett that his present proposals to make the Imperial Bank with its huge resources go out as a free lance into the banking field would prevent the growth of small peoples' banks all over the country, and drive the existing ones sooner or later to the verge of extinction. Does Sir Basil consider this desirable ?"

Mr. President : Order, order. The Honourable Member has exceeded his time.

Some Honourable Members : I move that the question be now put.

Sir Victor Sassoon : (Bombay Millowners' Association Indian Commerce) : Sir, we are all agreed, as I take it, that indigenous banking in this country should be developed, and therefore, on the face of it, one might wonder why this present motion cannot be accepted by the Government, and a committee of inquiry, which I understand is what is wanted, appointed. The reason given, if I have understood the Government point of view rightly, is that the ground to be covered is so large, the information required so great, the information existing so little and what does exist probably not available, that the time taken would be too long, so it would not be practicable to appoint a committee at once, because their labours would have to be so extended that they could not send a report in in a reasonable period of time, and consequently the expense would be very large. But if that is, as I understand, the difficulty of the Government, I am going to suggest that something might be done to advance the subject by Government seeing its way to institute a committee of inquiry ; they should at any rate appoint an expert or a Government official to co-ordinate the information that is existing, to collect the facts that they may consider necessary, or if they think fit, they may appoint two or three independent experts to collect facts in different spheres so as to hasten the time when it will be practical politics for them to appoint a committee which can consider these facts and make recommendations. That is the only point I want to put forward before this House and the Government, that something should be done and, if it is not considered advisable to appoint a committee of inquiry to-day, that at any rate something be done to advance the position to the point where it will be useful to appoint a committee.

[Sir Victor Sassoon.]

Mr. J. T. Donovan (Bengal : Nominated Official) : Sir, I think there can be no two opinions about the necessity of the inquiry which is suggested in the Resolution moved by my Honourable friend, Mr. Haji. Everybody whom I have consulted on this, all the papers which I have read, all have one point in common : they agree about the necessity of such an inquiry ; and the Honourable Finance Member has not concealed his agreement about the necessity of such an inquiry, nor have his admissions been half-hearted admissions. He is equally desirous with the Mover to get the information and to put the information into use for the good of India. Now, Sir, if I intervene in this debate, it is not with any other purpose except to show that the present moment is not a suitable moment to set up this committee ; that it is in the interests of India that we should accept the suggestions of the Honourable the Finance Member and wait until the Reserve Bank has been established, or till the question of a Reserve Bank has been dealt with and the Report of the Agricultural Commission has been received. In order to do this, Sir, I propose to consider two important phases of banking activity in this country.

1 P.M.

This country is a country of mysteries. When we first came to the East we were struck by the mango trick and we heard of the rope trick, and of course, even excluding politics, there are many other classical contributions to the magic art. But, Sir, to the serious student of Indian economy, one of the greatest mysteries that meets him at the gate of his investigation is the mystery of the internal trade and traffic in this country and the manner in which it is financed. The volume of that trade has not been ascertained. If it had been ascertained, very probably a great deal of the heat which distinguished the debates of the Delhi Session might have been avoided and the brick which so rudely disturbed the gravity of the Assembly might still be in its place. But an expert like Mr. Madan, has been able to say that the volume of that trade is 5 to 10 times the volume of the external trade in this country, and the volume of the external trade in this country is able to produce 354 crores of bills on foreign destinations. I have met nobody who is willing to venture a closer approximation than Mr. Madan, but in any case, taking his lowest estimate, the volume of the internal trade and traffic in this country is 5 times the external trade which produces 354 crores of bills. Now, all that is financed and the mystery of that finance is one of the greatest mysteries of India. One of the duties of this committee will be to inquire into that mystery and find out all the facts about it. These facts are very, very numerous ; there are 100 phases of that finance, from Karachi to Mandalay, from Tuticorin to the Terai. A committee must inquire into all these phases.

Sir, you have reminded Mr. Kelkar that there is a limit to the time for which one may speak.

Mr. President : The Honourable Member has 10 minutes more.

Mr. J. T. Donovan : I wish to be as brief as possible. I have therefore no intention of going into details or attempting to discuss the enormous number of details about the inland trade and traffic in this country. I pass on, Sir, to another main branch to which I wish to invite the attention of the Assembly, something which has been touched upon, but which certainly has not received the attention which it deserves. I mean the financing of the agriculture of this country. Sir Basil Blackett in his speech on this Resolution in February last referred to the co-operative movement and he paid a compliment to it. He described it as a most important growth of banking in the last 20 years in this country and a most hopeful one. Mr. Kelkar, Mr. Joshi and myself are amongst the few pioneers of that movement in this Assembly and we can remember 15 or 20 years ago, long before Sir Basil Blackett came here, that there was scarcely anybody who valued his name as a business man or his connection with banking who did not pooh-pooh the idea; and when Mr. Joshi and Mr. Kelkar and I were rejoicing over Rs. 50 or Rs. 1,000 or Rs. 10,000 that we got for that movement, we met with nothing but sneers or contempt from many sources. Now, Sir, the co-operative movement has dug out from the mine—in the absence of accurate statistics which the Retrenchment Committee has unfortunately rendered unavailable to us—I would say something between Rs. 25 and Rs. 50 crores in 20 years. In my province alone the amount is about five crores of rupees. This, Sir, is the result of the labours of 20 years. If we go on for another 20 years at the same rate of progress, the co-operative banking and the co-operative financing of this country's agriculture will certainly be among the most important features of the financial life of this country.

Now, Sir, here are two important features, namely, the financing of the internal trade and traffic of this country and the financing of the Agriculture of this country. One must be done by some banking system; it is done by some indigenous system. The other must be done by co-operative banking. We have now two events impending. One is the decision of this Assembly upon the fate of the Reserve Bank Bill and the other is the Report of the Agricultural Commission. Whether this Assembly thinks fit to pass the Reserve Bank Bill or not, the existence or non-existence of that Bill is bound to have a considerable influence on the banking policy of this country and any attempt to evolve a system from the information which this Committee will collect, into which the indigenous banking system of this country will be fitted, must be affected by the decision to have a Reserve Bank or not. Similarly, Sir, it is only natural to expect that the agricultural policy of this country in the immediate future must be affected by the decisions of the Agricultural

[Mr. J. T. Donovan.]

Commission. And, now, Sir, are we going to start off immediately on an inquiry? Perhaps in the course of a year we shall find two policies being laid down which will seriously affect the course of the inquiry and which may perhaps compel us to scrap a good deal of work that has been done.

The form which the committee should take will undoubtedly be influenced by these two impending events. It may be necessary to have separate committees, it may be necessary to have experts and it may be necessary to have a superior committee extracting from the findings of the others the substance which is valuable to the country. These things, Sir, to my mind make it most desirable that we should wait until the two events I have referred to are realised. There can be no danger by adopting this course, there is no intention of indefinite procrastination. As Mr. Roy has magnanimously said about the Finance Member, he is a hard worker and I am sure it is not his intention to postpone this merely to waste time. It is only common sense to await the decision of these two events and then to appoint a committee.

Mr. President : I may inform the Honourable Member that he is not bound to speak for 15 minutes.

Mr. J. T. Donovan : I accept your suggestion, Sir. I have nothing more to say except to reiterate the wisdom of awaiting the decision of these two events.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt (Burdwan Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : I Move, Sir, that the question be now put.

Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji (Bombay Central Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, it is now over six months that I had the honour of moving this Resolution in the Delhi Session of this Honourable House on the 10th February, and I hope the period of time that has elapsed since will enable the Government to regard this motion in a more favourable light than they agreed to regard it at that time.

Particularly, Sir, this point is of special importance because, as we have heard just now the Honourable gentleman who has just finished his speech, has suggested that there was no harm in waiting for a further period in order that we might have the benefit of the recommendations of the Agricultural Commission and the establishment of the Reserve Bank. Now, Sir, I am in the fortunate position of being able to quote in this connection the Honourable Sir Basil Blackett himself against his own argument last time and against the arguments of some of the gentlemen at the present moment who have suggested that we should postpone this enquiry until these two matters have been disposed of. With regard to the Agricultural Commission, the Honourable Sir Basil Blackett speaking last time on this Resolution stated that the Agricultural Commission was covering ground from the point of view of the interests of agriculture and not from the point of the development of banking, and this sentence lends immense weight, to my mind, to the contention that it is not necessary to await the findings of the Agricultural Commission in order that we may make progress with the present enquiry as recommended by the Resolution Of course those who want to find argument for delaying this matter for ever, will say, even after the recommendations of the Agricultural Commission have been made, that the recommendations of the Commission have been made only just now and that we should wait for a few years until the recommendations have been in action. Then the enquiry will begin. Sir, I hope, therefore, that the House will pay no attention whatsoever to the delaying tactics underlying this kind of argument. As regards the Reserve Bank Bill and the relation of that Bank to the Banking Commission, here is the opinion of the Honourable the Finance Member as given at page 696 of Legislative Assembly Debates, Volume IX (10th February 1927) :

" After discussions have taken place in this House and in the country in connection with the creation of the Reserve Bank, when that Bank has been brought into existence or is about to be brought into existence "

—let us hope next week—

" and when the Agricultural Commission's Report has been received, that will be the time for further action."

Now, Sir, it follows from this sentence of the Honourable the Finance Member and from what my Honourable friend Mr. Donovan said a little while ago that we could have a Banking Commission immediately after the Reserve Bank. In that case, Sir, I beg to suggest that we shall all be pleased to support an amendment, if one is brought by the Government to the effect that a Banking Commission be appointed immediately after the Reserve Bank Bill is passed. Here, however, I must add an " if " because it is quite possible that if the wishes of this House are not met in the matter of the details of the Reserve Bank, that Reserve Bank may never be put up at all ; so that with the proviso that we shall have an enquiry in any case, I am prepared to await until the Reserve Bank Bill is through. But it is not necessary to bind ourselves down to not having a Banking Commission, if we do not have a Reserve Bank. As a matter of fact, in that case, the necessity for having this Banking Commission would be all the greater. Now that I mention the word " commission ", I should like to make it clear that I really do not understand why Honourable gentlemen in this House seem to imagine that the word " commission " could be used only for a Royal Commission. Have we not had the Fiscal Commission ? Why should it be necessary to call by a diminutive word like " committee " the bodies that are appointed by the Government of India ? I hope, Sir, that by my not wanting the Commission being a Royal Commission—as I never intended that it should be—it will be easier for the Honourable the Finance Member to accept the Resolution and to proceed with the necessary spade-work.

With regard to the question of spade-work, Sir Victor Sassoon suggested that the Government of India should go ahead with the spade-work in order that in the near future the Banking Commission may be appointed. I do hope, Sir, that in view of the fact that this Resolution was moved six months ago the Government have been doing all that they can—at least I hope they have—in order to get as much material as possible on which this Commission may work. But as a matter of fact my case is that one of the soundest reasons why we should have this Commission is that the Government of India until now have been indifferent to their duty in this matter. The Honourable the Finance Member himself admitted that he had no statistics with regard to indigenous banking institutions. Mr. Donovan stated this morning that this is a land of mysteries and the greatest mystery is the internal trade of this country and its financing. Sir, is it a compliment to this Government that in spite of the insistent recommendations of their own Commissions and of non-official organisations—Indian organisations I mean—in this country for so many years past nothing has been done? The Indian Industrial Conference passed a Resolution to develop Indian banking as early as 1890. Other Commissions appointed by the Government since, like the Industrial Commission, the Chamberlain Commission, the External Capital Committee, etc., have all recommended an enquiry, and I think they must have been greatly impressed by the fact that there is no information available upon a subject which touches us in a very important manner. It is, as Honourable Members are well aware, very easy to get at the figures of joint stock companies, organisations that are working on Western models; but when you come to indigenous banking—that banking which finances a volume of trade which is, to take the lower figure, at least five times the value of the foreign trade of this country, nobody knows exactly what the figures are. And yet we are told banking enquiry can await this and await that. That is my case with regard to this enquiry being taken up immediately, because so far as these two subjects are concerned, the two subjects of the Agricultural Commission and the Reserve Bank, as I have pointed out, there is no particular reason why we should wait. If we do not want to do anything in this matter, it will further be very easy to say that the subject is so vast that it is very difficult to find out how to prepare the terms of reference for the Commission in order that the Commission might finish its labours in a reasonable time at a reasonable cost. Now this is an argument, Sir, which if admitted will prevent progress for ever. Therefore, I suggest that whatever the cost and however wide the issues—as a matter of fact the wider the issues the greater the need for their immediate examination—an enquiry should be taken up by the Government. As regards the cost, Sir, we have to remember that in the past the Government of India have spent lakhs of rupees on Commissions, the result of the findings of which has been the further saddling of this country.....

Mr. President: Order, order. I do not know why the Honourable Member imagines difficulties and proceeds to answer them.

Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji: I was not imagining any difficulties; I was merely referring to one of the arguments of the Honourable the Finance Member last time. His very words are:

> "Royal Commissions and Committees are not very cheap things. They are apt to be rather costly, and before you appoint one you want to be quite sure that you are giving it a subject matter which it can reasonably cover in a reasonable time and in respect of which it can make concrete suggestions."....

Mr. President: That applies to Royal Commissions.

Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji: May I suggest, Sir, that the phrase "Royal Commission" used by the Finance Member is possibly due to the fact that he misunderstood me to say that a commission always meant a Royal Commission. Anyway, Sir, my point was that if the Government in the past had been very willing to appoint Commissions whose recommendations they knew would be costly, why not appoint immediately a commission, whatever its cost, whose recommendations are bound to lead to the scientific growth of banking in the country ? In order, therefore, that we might fully realise the situation with which we are faced to-day, it is necessary to observe that most of the arguments that have been brought in so far refer to what you, Sir, described as imaginary difficulties ; and I do feel myself that if the Government were willing, the way is quite clear. It has been said that the terms of the Resolution, as I have moved it, are very wide and that they are also very vague. I am quite prepared, Sir, to accept any definite suggestions the Honourable Finance Member may have to make in this connection and I am sure we shall all be very pleased if he is good enough to let us know the terms of reference of the Banking Commission which we propose he should appoint. The Honourable Member who spoke on the subject the last time on this side of the House made reference to the Imperial Bank and the many sins of omission and commission that that body had committed. I do not therefore propose to tackle that subject this morning. But before I sit down I should like to draw the attention of this House to one point made by the Honourable the Finance Member to the effect that I had accused the Government of being indifferent and inactive in this matter, that is to say, in connection with the growth of banking in this country. Now, Sir, I should like to make it quite clear that our charges of indifference and inactivity referred not merely to his administration but to the many administrations that have gone on before he came—administrations which did not care how the internal trade of the country was financed, which did not know the number of the indigenous bankers in this country. So far as that is concerned, we very much appreciate the fact that ever since he came he has been trying his best to provide India with means of better banking education ; and as we are well aware recently his efforts have been crowned with success so far as the Indian Institute of Bankers is concerned. But even that is not enough. Mere instruction in banking, though very desirable, is not sufficient to meet the requirements of the growth of banking in this country. I should like to admit also that the Honourable the Finance Member has done a lot by way of providing facilities for better investment by various classes of people. That too is a matter which though important and useful as providing additional investing facilities, is not one that meets directly the requirements of the Resolution. As a matter of fact, it is my opinion that the present Finance Member is one of a type quite different from the Finance Members we have had before. He has an interest in banking which other Members have not had. They were quite content with the figures of Budgets, and they never looked outside their office rooms. But in the present Finance Member we have a gentleman who is very keen on banking matters, and it is therefore all the more necessary and desirable that before he vacates his office we should have an inquiry into the whole problem started in order that all the various different items which he has been trying to put together may find a coping stone in the recommendations of the Banking Commission I suggest. Sir, I beg to move the Resolution that stands in my name.

But before I sit down, I should like to mention that I have great pleasure in accepting the amendment of my friend Mr. K. C. Roy.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett (Finance Member) : Sir, I thank the Honourable Member who has last spoken for the kindly words with which he tried to soften the hard things which he really meant about my relation with banking. It has been said that this is a land of mysteries, and it has been repeated by the last speaker. I think one of the great mysteries is that this House has such an affection for the appointment of Committees and Commissions. But why do they love them so much. They always fail to accept the majority reports. When the Government of India tries to produce a Bill or a measure or to take some steps in accordance with the recommendations of a Committee or Commission, where action is proposed to be taken, it is extraordinarily difficult to get this House to acquiesce.....

Mr. R. K. Shanmukham Chetty : Even Government do not accept the unanimous recommendations of those Committees.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : It is extraordinarily difficult to get this House to acquiesce in the recommendations when it happens that the Government and the majority of the Commission are in agreement. It has been suggested for example that it will be a very good thing to have a Banking Commission but that it is very doubtful whether we ought to have a Reserve Bank. The Honourable Member who last spoke hoped that now that six months have elapsed since he introduced this subject, the Government of India and he were nearer the solution. Well, Sir, the Honourable Member flatters himself. The Government of India began the spade-work long before his Resolution was moved, and I think that his Resolution was rather the result of our spade-work, and not the spade-work the result of his Resolution. Six months have certainly elapsed since that date, and I may perhaps let the House into a secret that in consequence we are six months nearer the appointment of the Committee.

I explained at full length on the last occasion the attitude of Government towards this recommendation. We do not think that the present is a suitable moment ; we do not think that it necessarily should be in the form of a big Committee that the inquiry should be made. Nor do we think that the time is really ripe for deciding either the scope or the exact nature or form of the inquiry to be made. But with reference to what the Honourable Baronet who represents the mill-owners said, I would like to inform him that all this time the spade-work is going on. We have not got an officer on special duty for this purpose, but we are endeavouring to complete the survey of existing conditions relative to banking which is spoken of by the External Capital Committee, a rough outline of whose task I gave in a speech that I made before the Delhi University in November 1925. All this time the spade-work is going on, and some of its fruits are visible such as the creation of the Indian Institute of Bankers, which, I am very glad to say, has finally been brought to a successful issue.

I should like to take this opportunity, in case another does not arise, to say a word in connection with the establishment of this institution about the debt which India owes to a very great banker and a great friend of India, I mean Sir Norcott Warren. Sir Norcott Warren is about to retire from India, for the last time. He did it before, but on a pressing invitation, which was fully concurred in by the Government of India, he came back again. And it is now I believe 42 years since he first came to India and he has been in India almost the whole of those 42 years and he has identified himself with Indian banking and in particular with the renewed Imperial Bank which grew out of the previous Presidency Banks, so much so that it is hard for anybody, I think, who thinks of the Imperial Bank, to think of its existing without Sir Norcott Warren. I am sure that all who hear me will join with me in wishing him, when he retires from these shores a long and happy life in which to enjoy the rest which he has so thoroughly earned by his services to India.

But, Sir, I return to the less pleasant subject of this Resolution. I have urged the Honourable Member who moved it to accept the assurance of the Government of India that they are at least as keen as he is that the right steps should be taken to improve banking conditions in India and that at the right moment an inquiry should be made. I would suggest to him and to a certain number of other speakers to-day and on the previous occasion, to whose speeches all the same I should like to pay a tribute of admiration for what they contain, I should like to suggest to them and to the House generally that the thing that is going to make banking grow in India is the desire of the Indian people for banking facilities and the Government of India is not going to create banking by building banks in every village in India. It really is a thing in which Government can do something but the essential and driving powers must be the demand of the Indian people for banking in India, and no Commission, no Reserve Bank and nothing else except the desire of the Indian people to have facilities for banking will create facilities for banking in India.

Sir, the Government regret that they are unable to accept this Resolution. They do not disagree with the main principle that it is desirable that there should be an examination into banking in India at an early date. But beyond that, they are not able to go and they are unable to accept the Resolution as it stands. I hope still at the last moment that the Honourable Member will be satisfied with that promise and will recognise that it is all that he can usefully get and that even if it is my successor and not I myself who has the pleasure of being in at the birth of this Banking Committee, he will not get it a day earlier by pressing for a promise from the Government for more than I have been able to give. I would urge him, therefore, to withdraw the motion.

Mr. President : The original Resolution was :

"That this Assembly recommends to the Governor General in Council that a Commission consisting of a majority of Indian members with an Indian Chairman be appointed to investigate the present position of the banking institutions, facilities and conditions in India and make recommendations for their improvement and expansion, with particular reference to the provision in adequate quantity and appropriate form of the capital or finance necessary for the development of the industries and agriculture of India."

Since which the following amendment has been moved :

"That at the end of the Resolution the following be added :—

'and also to report what, if any, measures are desirable to regulate and control banks and banking business in this country'."

The question I have to put is that that amendment be made.

The motion was adopted.

Mr. President: The question then is that the following Resolution, as amended, be adopted, namely :

"This Assembly recommends to the Governor General in Council that a Commission consisting of a majority of Indian members with an Indian Chairman be appointed to investigate the present position of the banking institutions, facilities and conditions in India and make recommendations for their improvement and expansion, with particular reference to the provision in adequate quantity and appropriate form of the capital or finance necessary for the development of the industries and agriculture of India and also to report what, if any, measures are desirable to regulate and control banks and banking business in this country."

The motion was adopted.

The Assembly then adjourned for Lunch till Half Past Two of the Clock.

The Assembly re-assembled after Lunch at Half Past Two of the Clock, Mr. President in the Chair.

RESOLUTION RE INDIANISATION OF HALF THE CADRE OF OFFICERS IN THE INDIAN ARMY.

Dr. B. S. Moonje (Nagpur Division : Non-Muhammadan) : Sir, I beg to move the Resolution that stands in my name :

"This Assembly recommends to the Governor General in Council that as a beginning in the direction of preparing India for self-defence immediate steps be taken to bring about the Indianisation of half the cadre of officers in the Indian Army, unanimously recommended by the Skeen Committee, within a period of fifteen years, and to carry out the unanimous recommendations of the Committee with regard to the establishment of an Indian Sandhurst and the recruitment of Indian officers in those arms of the defensive forces, paid for out of Indian revenues, from which they are at present excluded."

The subject-matter of the Resolution is such as affects us Indians vitally, and if we take a historical review of the situation we find that from the time when the Hindu Empire in India of Mahrattas as well as that of the Sikhs was subverted up to the present time, the whole of India has been disarmed and the intelligentsia of India has been ruthlessly dissociated from the defence of their country. This has created a situation which even from the Government's point of view to-day is most anxious—of course, from the peoples' point of view it is very very anxious. It may be asked why we submitted so meekly and so submissively to the disarmament of the country, why we submitted so meekly and so submissively to the policy of not being allowed to take our part, our due share, in the defence of our country ? That is a question which has to be answered. I would like to answer it in a way which might perhaps lead one to think that we were not capable at the time of resisting the vigorous subtleties of those days. When the British came over here, they established novel methods of warfare. They established completely a new system of military organisation in the country, and their administration was so characterised by a sense of discipline and punctuality that we felt completely dumb-founded for the time being and were dazzled. We continued in that state of mind for some time, but soon the national self asserted itself and we started what is called the Indian National Congress. From the very beginning of the Congress we realised the difficulties of the situation. We found out the mistake that we had made and we wanted to correct it, and therefore we started an agitation from the very beginning for the repeal of the Arms Act. It may be remembered that the agitation of the Congress was understood and appreciated and the Commander-in-Chief of those days, His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught, about 40 years ago, thought that our agitation had a lot of point in it and he said that he would do his utmost to see that a military college was established in India or that military education was given to Indians. But nothing has been done so far. Our grievance from that time up to the moment the Anglo-German War was declared could have been said to be sentimental, to be merely academic, because the British Government thought that the Indian people had no right to ask for a share in the military administration of the country as they had guaranteed the defence of their hearths and homes. From their point of view there could have been some meaning in that, but even that is now lost. We do not get even that protection at the present moment. The Anglo-German War for the first time revealed both to them as well as to us that in an Empire like the British, over which the sun never sets, it is very risky for a country of the vastness of India to agree to be entrusted to the care of one people alone. They found that they could not protect the shores of India even at a time when they thought they had the command of the seas. The Emden raids were enough to teach them a lesson and a very much greater lesson to us. Of late the methods of warfare have been so developed and science has so progressed that it is feared that perhaps the next war—God forbid another war—that might come may find England not capable of maintaining its communications with India. What then would be the position at that time ? What would be the situation ? Military science has so progressed, and military appliances are so mechanised that a vast country like India cannot be expected to be prepared in a single day to take its place in a battle-field to defend its home. It is from that point of view that I urge that the Resolution which I move should be accepted.

The situation thus has so changed that our grievance has assumed an aspect which is most material and mundane. From the Indian point of view we find the situation very grave. The gravity of the situation is also appreciated by the Government, though they have not expressed it in so many words. I may here quote what no less a person than His Excellency Sir Malcolm Hailey, the Governor of the Punjab, has said in his evidence before the Skeen Committee on this point. He said :

> " The matter is in my opinion one of supreme importance. India is gradually losing the somewhat isolated position it has occupied for the last two generations in the politics of Asia and we have to meet obligations of a different character than the purely frontier disturbances with which it has been familiar of late years. It is a point on which I need not enlarge. The facts are too well known but it appears to me of supreme importance to secure the best possible material for Indian officers of the army."

If the Government have so changed its view, what would be the aspect of the situation, if seen from the Indian point of view ? India has realised for the first time that there is a possibility that Britain's communication with India may be broken or suspended. What would happen if such a contingency happened ? Look at the physical situation of India. It has a coastline of nearly 6,000 miles. To defend such a length is a difficult task. The coastline traffic in commercial business is in itself sufficiently tempting for a foreign invasion. Now developments in China and Japan are taking place, and there is no knowing what the situation will be five years hence or ten years hence. Looking to the land frontier India may be divided into two parts—the North-East Frontier and the North-West Frontier. In the North-East Frontier there is a line of a thousand miles which borders on China and Tibet. There are turbulent tribes on this Frontier who are still amenable to influences from China. China at the present time is in a state of turmoil. This turmoil may prove to be the throes of a new birth for nationhood and if it happens to be that, we shall have another great nation, militarily consolidated as our next-door neighbour. Suppose she fails—God forbid—and she falls into the clutches of a European nation like Russia. What will be the result ? Can we conceive with equanimity of the constant troubles and the constant anxiety that would be caused by this line of a thousand miles which is amenable to the Chinese and Russian influences. We can imagine that, Government can imagine that. It has been expressed by Sir Malcolm Hailey in such guarded words. Now looking to the North-West Frontier we find that from time immemorial the key to the defence of India lies in what are known as the passes, and these passes run through territory which has long mountain ranges on its sides and are inhabited by people who could be said to be in the words of a historian " ferocious, martial and uncivilised ". Such are the people inhabiting the passes which are the key to the defence of India. Beyond the passes there is a country known as Afghanistan. That country, whether for good or ill, was up to 1919 a kind of vassal of the English Government in India. The English Government in India could control her foreign policy, could control her military progress. But that situation has gone. Afghanistan, the vassal of the British Government, was very wise in taking her opportunity in selecting the time for attack upon the British Government in India. The British Government had come out exhausted from the world struggle and Afghanistan thought it a good time for making its pressure felt. And that pressure was felt so heavily that the British Government had to yield, and Afghanistan made itself independent of the overlordship of Britain. The situation to-day has thus changed tremendously since 1919 from our point of view. The Amir of Afghanistan is to-day an absolutely independent monarch of his country. He can import all the implements of warfare. He can send his students by hundreds to European countries to learn the science and art of modern war. If everything goes on smoothly as it is now going, it is not impossible to suppose that in 10 or 15 years' time Afghanistan will be another nation, militarily developed, militarily consolidated, with a reformed and improved administration, and in every sense like a modern European nation just next door to India. Then we shall have two great nations, one a great land power, i.e., Afghanistan, and one equally strong on land and sea, i.e., China. We shall have these two nations militarily organized as next-door neighbours to India. Now, having seen what the possibilities are in the near future with regard to Afghanistan, having seen the characteristics of the tribes that live round about our passes, we can understand the anxiety of Indians as regards the defence of India I could very well quote from a book to give you an idea of the situation that is now before us from this point of view. Here is a book which has been written by Arthur Vincent, called the " Defence of India ". It is a book which deserves very careful and very earnest study by all Indians who can conceive the prospect of a self-governing India prepared for defence against all foreign aggression. From the naval point of view this author has said, and everybody will appreciate that, that now that Germany has disappeared as a naval power the centre of gravity of all possible naval activity is no longer now in the European seas but in the East and in the Pacific. From the defence point of view, therefore :

[Dr. B. S. Moonje.]

" Times are no longer when the naval defence of all the Dominions either may or can be left to Great Britain alone. Nevertheless the plans for Imperial naval security entail a good deal of contribution from each of the component parts of the Empire and as the individual independence of each component increases, more responsibility must automatically be shouldered by them in State matters of which defence is the most vital of all."

So much from the naval point of view. From the land frontiers point of view, he says :

" Generally speaking, the tribes on the Burmese side are comparatively quiescent, while those on the Chinese side are equally hostile both to ourselves and to their nominal rulers. Many of the latter have blood and marriage relations with their tribes, a fact which complicates political relations to no small extent. The present lack of authority on the Chinese border makes the States that side a happy hunting ground and refuge for dacoits and criminals, forming also natural ' jumping off ' places for raids and encroachments on our frontier."

China being so weak as at present it is, this frontier gives us so much anxiety, as criminals, dacoits and freebooters find it so very easy to raid our country and go back at once for safety beyond our Frontier.

Sir Denys Bray (Foreign Secretary) : I rise to a point of order, Sir. Is not the Honourable gentleman trespassing very near the Government's relations with foreign powers ?

Mr. President : The Honourable Member knows that the very question at issue is whether India should be prepared for self-defence or not, and the Honourable Member is giving his reasons why India should be prepared for self-defence. I do not think these technical objections will weigh with the Chair in such a case.

Dr. B. S. Moonje : I do not want to interfere with the Government's relations with their foreign neighbours, but I have every right to bring forward what the responsibilities of the Government are, and what the situation in India will be from the military point of view. It is a task of Himalayan magnitude, and we all must have a good idea of the colossal magnitude of the situation that is going to face India in the near future. Now as for the North-West Frontier. The key to the defence of India from aggression from beyond the frontier lies in what are called passes. These passes run through highly inaccessible mountain ranges which are inhabited by fierce warlike and uncivilized tribes. By temperament these tribes are " raiders bent at every opportunity upon raiding the plains for loot and rapine, reckoning themselves, not without reason, secure from any effective retribution once they had returned to their mountain fastnesses ".

Such are the people we have to deal with in the passes which are connected with the defence of India : We can have a good idea of their capacity to give us trouble. This is what Mr. Vincent writes in his " Defence of India ", page 27 :

" In all, the fifties witnessed a total of seventeen expeditions of appreciable size ; and in the 72 years during which we defended the frontier in India's behalf there have never been as many as seven consecutive years of freedom from major operations, without count of a host of minor ones."

[Dr. B. S. Moonje.]

We can thus certainly have an idea as to where we would be if the time should come, which God forbid, when the connection between England and India in the time of a great war ceased for the time being. It was in connection with this very fact that our noble Lord, the Secretary of State, Lord Birkenhead, wanted to frighten us out of our wits and also to frighten us out of our demand for full responsible government. He said :

"I put on one side for the purposes of this anticipation, the perils obviously afforded by the existence of two or three million turbulent and martial tribesmen, living precariously between the frontiers of India and the borders of Afghanistan."

Now, speaking from our Indian point of view, there is no Arms Act in that territory which is inhabited by two or three millions of people. Almost every adult person—there is no medical examination too on that side—almost every adult person, whether medically fit or unfit, has got the power, has got the right, to wield a rifle. He knows shooting ; and 3 million people reside there. Out of the 3 million people you may take away half, womenfolk and 1½ millions remain, and if you divide it by three, we have an army of 5 lakhs of men, young sturdy sharp shooters, to give us trouble at a time when we shall have been cut off from all communications at a time of war from England. That will give you some idea of the period we have to face. As regards Afghanistan, this author says :

"As regards Afghanistan, it is most strongly to be hoped that future years may develop the present treaty into one of such an alliance as will remove any ordinary possibilities of war from India's contingencies. At the same time the fact must not be lost sight of that the freedom to import arms and ammunition restored under the treaty allows Afghanistan to build up a strength and reserve of warlike equipment such as she has never possessed before. The attitude of His Majesty the Amir is now that of a friend determined upon sincerity, but Afghanistan"

he gives here a warning—

"Afghanistan is an unstable nation and in the vicissitudes of her future history it is by no means impossible that a less friendly successor should turn the strength of preparedness to the test of war. Upon purely military grounds, the treaty gives India no better position than before in regard to Afghanistan. The Afghan army is moreover reaching a pitch of efficiency which it never knew in the old days, as are the communications and the development of the country."

Therefore this state of things causes an amount of anxiety to us, people of India, and also must cause, we hope, anxiety to the British Government if they want to maintain their position of redeeming their promise of becoming the safe trustee of India. Now, such being the situation, how can the defence of India be organised is a question which has to be answered. By the Britishers alone as heretofore ? Or by the Indians alone as we aspire for ? Or by the unstinted and willing co-operation between the Britishers and Indians on terms of perfect equality ? We have to choose either of these three. Speaking for myself, taking into consideration the fullest possibilities of the present situation, I do not think anybody will doubt the idea that the most practical proposition for the defence of India at present is complete co-operation, unstinted co-operation on perfectly equal terms between Indians and the Britishers. I have already proved and I shall prove again that Britain alone is not capable now of guaranteeing the defence of India. Of course as for us Indians, as we are at present,—you know it is a fact, it does not require to be mentioned—we are absolutely incapable of defending India to-day, not because the desire, the capacity, the capability, to defend one's country —the blood which inspires—is not in us. We are descendants of those races in India who had established their empires, defended their empires in India. To establish empires and to lose empires can be done by people who are great inherently and who can defend themselves. The Hindus and Muhammadans of this country are inheriting that blood which in India itself hardly a hundred years ago was conducting an empire. There are representatives of a race in this House called the Sikhs who hardly 75 years ago were masters and rulers in their country of the Punjab, and it is said of them that they were capable and had already wielded a strong hold and control over these martial tribes of the passes in respect of which our noble Lord, the Secretary of State, has been frightening us. Therefore, looking at it from this point of view, if it could be contended that England alone ought to be able to defend India, at least here is an author who says that the situation as it is developing will not allow England to maintain her hold upon the defence of India as she has been able to do in the past :

"Upon all sides, therefore, it is clear that India has a greater task to be prepared for in the future than she has had in the past.... Yet she must perform worthily her own share in that protection (which she is receiving as a member of the Empire). None but herself can defend herself against the first aggression by land save where the war might be so great as to be a battle of the Empire fought on Indian soil. It is for her and her alone to rule with a firm hand the frontier tribes, to stave off the invasion that may yet come from Russia."

And also from Afghanistan, as it did come in the year 1914.

"Should the task of her defence become too great she will receive help from Imperial resources, but only as soon and for as long as they can be spared from other theatres. Should she ever perform her own task less than adequately or even go so far as to adjure it, although that be a most likely contingency, she can count on none but herself to make good the deficiency. Her immediate responsibility is one to herself, to defend herself within the Empire. Self-defence is a first principle of national existence. In India without it there can be neither consolidation nor development within her frontiers."

So far I have tried to prove that the primary responsibility for the defence of India under the changed situation falls upon India, but if there be an idea that England might perpetuate her policy of being alone responsible entirely for the defence of India and of keeping the Indian intelligentsia quite dissociated from her military organisation, she is ultimately bound to find the task even beyond her, great and powerful though she is. I will here quote another passage from the same book :

"India's ultimate task may thus be a great one. In the future, in such wars as that of 1914-1918, the absolute continuity of British protection can never be guaranteed. In that war Britain's naval supremacy was such as to render India immune from any invasion by sea, and the great issues both by sea and land were fought out many thousand miles away. Also the continued British command of the sea afforded her the certainty of swift reinforcement should her tasks upon land have ever grown greater than she could cope with. It can never be safely prophesied that in future wars of magnitude the conditions will be the same. They might be greatly different. May be Britain will have to contend with Powers possessing Navies far superior to those of the late Central Powers, may be British command of the sea will be temporarily insufficient to protect Indian waters, may be wars will be fought out with weapons as yet undiscovered which greatly depreciate the value of the sea command and which, we are told, Germany is trying to do."

Sir Hari Singh Gour (Central Provinces Hindi Divisions : Non-Muhammadan) : What about the air craft ?

Dr. B. S. Moonje : Now, my friend has reminded me of the air craft. I have said that the position has been rightly appreciated by no less a person than the Governor of the Punjab. He has said that as far as the position of India is concerned now, it is a factor which has to be taken into account. India is not now a land which can be considered to be beyond the grabbing reach of her rival marine powers of the world. Air craft have still further enhanced the seriousness of the situation, by having annihilated distances. India is therefore now a country which is not far off from England or from America or from Afghanistan. About 150 years ago, it took six months for people to come to India from England, about a year and a half for people from America to come here. Now-a-days they take only about 15 days or 12 days. Now times are changing rapidly and it may not be long when people from England would be coming to India in two or three days' time and from Afghanistan in two or three hours.

Mr. President.—The Honourable Member must bring his observations to a close now.

3 P.M.

Dr. B. S. Moonje : In short the advent of aeroplanes has complicated the situation and it has become worse, so much worse that we can never trust our national defence to England alone, and we can never remain satisfied with the situation as it stands. In view of the fact that these recommendations of the Committee are unanimous, I trust the Government will show the grace of accepting them but if, as so very often happens, the Government may not be inclined to accept them now, I feel the circumstances are so moulding themselves that soon, in the near future, the Government may feel compelled to accept them but then all grace shall have been gone. With these words, I commend my Resolution for the acceptance of the House.

Mr. S. Srinivasa Iyengar (Madras City : Non Muhammadan Urban) : Mr. President, I would request you to grant me permission to move the substituted amendment of which I gave notice yesterday. The other amendment which stands in my name on the printed paper was given notice of two or three days ago to the office. But this amendment which I am just moving is a revised amendment and is an agreed amendment, and I think the Honourable Mover of the Resolution will accept it and it will find support on this side of the House. I would therefore request you, Sir, to give me leave to move this amendment without formal notice. The amendment that I have got to move runs as follows :

"That for the original Resolution the following be substituted :

'Subject to the revision of the whole scheme of the defence of the country in any future constitution for India acceptable to the people of India, and while feeling that the recommendations of the Indian Sandhurst committee, specially relating to the continuance of British recruitment, do not satisfy Indian public opinion, this Assembly is of opinion that the acceptance of the unanimous recommendations of that Committee will mark a definite beginning in the Indianisation of the Army in India, and it therefore recommends to the Governor General in Council that he may be pleased to accept those recommendations and give immediate effect to them.'"

Sir, the reasons for this amendment are shortly stated. We want at the outest to make it quite clear that India has claimed and claims to-day her right to defend herself and has never refused to discharge her duty or the burden of defending herself. But no chance has ever been given to India and therefore we want to make it plain that if this House is to accept these recommendations, it is subject to this clear safeguard that we want the entire military defence, including organisation and control and legislation, and in fact everything connected with that, to be in Indian hands, to be with us Indians under a scheme of full responsible government for India such as self-governing Dominions enjoy within the British Empire.

If I move this amendment and if this House accepts it, it is therefore without any prejudice whatever to the fullest claim for full Dominion status and the completest control of military and naval defences in connection therewith which every self-governing Dominion now enjoys.

Secondly, we want also to make it clear that the unanimous recommendations of the Committee, though they are such as to mark a definite beginning in Indianisation and may therefore be accepted for the present by the House, are still inadequate and unsatisfactory and do not represent all that we are entitled to to-day or all that we claim to be entitled to to-day, nor do they represent real Indian opinion throughout the length and breadth of this country.

I must however congratulate the Committee on its admirable labours, and I must say that in the history of Committees of this description in India, it is for the first time that we have got a unanimous report of this far-reaching importance arrived at after a most unbiassed examination of the whole question. Speaking for myself and everyone on this side of the House, though I do not agree that the actual specific recommendations are at all satisfactory, the analysis of the position, the elucidation of the causes, which has been made in this Report, and the way in which the question has been approached, deserve all the praise that Members of this Assembly can give to the disinterested labours of those who have worked so hard to bring the matter to a successful conclusion. I make no distinction between European and Indian, between Lieutenant-General Skeen and Mr. Burdon on the one side, and the Indian members on the other; nor do I make any differentiation whatever between the military officers and the non-official members of the Committee. Our gratitude is particularly due to my friend Mr. Jinnah who has identified himself so thoroughly with the work of the Committee. I must mark my personal appreciation that the Report is a document which self-respecting Indians can read with whole-hearted praise and without any " inferiority complex ". It has been written in a spirit which is free from racial bias, and I congratulate the European members of the Committee on the collaboration which they have given the Indian members and on the way in which they have arrived at this Report.

But having said so much, I must add that the recommendations are certainly not satisfactory. There is no definite goal which has been stated; and the time-limit which is imposed by these recommendations is certainly not a time-limit with which we can agree though the exigencies of the moment may be responsible for the amendment. It is obvious however that this time-limit, which has been generally stated to be 25 years, is very materially qualified by the unanimous agreement of the Committee stated at page 24 of the Report which runs as follows :

"It is however unanimously agreed that whether a slower or more rapid rate of progress is ultimately adopted the scheme actually in operation should be reviewed in 1938, that is, five years after the inauguration of the Indian Sandhurst, with a view to considering whether the success achieved is not sufficiently solid to warrant a further acceleration of the rate of progress."

I regret that in the formal summary of recommendations this recommendation has not been put in with a letter against it. We have no definite recommendation as to the stoppage of British recruitment that is necessary; nor is the college recommended in this Report provided with a sufficient strength. I do not consider, speaking for myself, that 100 is a sufficient number. There are also other important features of this Report upon which one must express dissatisfaction ; there is no recommendation for the establishment of an Indian Cranwell or an Indian Woolwich—arms which are no less important than the infantry or the cavalry arms of the services. It is quite clear that they should have been started at about the same time as the Indian Sandhurst was intended to be started. But anyhow the recommendations are there. And I am perfectly certain that where historical or statistical material is required to be supplied to the Members of the Assembly abler and more competent hands will deal with it. I am content to place my amendment upon the short ground that it is the only amendment which India at the present day—self-respecting, demanding full Dominion status and asserting her right to defend herself and not refusing an iota of the burden which that right involves—can at all agree to for this moment. Therefore it is that as a compromise this agreed amendment is moved with a view to show that the foreword to this Report should not be regarded as of any value at all. We have got a most characteristic foreword, from which I gather that the terms of reference which were originally framed and which are given in the first page of the Report are not wide and that the Committee somehow was not competent to survey parts of the subject. I have read those terms as given in the Report and I think they are wide enough, and I do not understand how this skilful use of language is justified in this foreword. I also disagree with the suggestion made that the Government, when called upon to deal with any scheme of increasing Indianisation extending over a number of years, must leave themselves free to consider whether the basis of that scheme offers a sure and stable line of advance towards the creation of a Dominion army or whether alternative methods which do not fall within the Committee's terms of reference might not be more profitably explored. Of course we all know how, instead of creating disappointment, the psychology is sought to be created that you will not get all that the Committee is recommending, but that you will get some parts of it, while other parts will not be given effect to. You are told that there are alternative methods by which your demands might be satisfied—phrases like Dominion army and things like that are stated in the foreword : but I have not the slightest doubt whatever that nobody is going to be taken in by this Tartuffian language.

I consider, Sir, that the time has come for us to make it perfectly plain that no pretext whatever can be availed of by the Government here or in England for delay in connection with this matter ; and that is the only reason why men like me and my friends on this side of the House have agreed to the amendment which I am moving to-day. It is not to be said that this Indianisation in the Army should be shelved till the constitution for India is settled. It is not to be stated : " Oh, we are exploring ways and perfect ways of creating a Dominion army. Why should you not wait till then ? " The Leader of the House said—and I thank him for the present which he made to us a few minutes ago—the Leader of the House said that he was not particularly enamoured of Committees because the non-official members on this side of the House generally rejected the majority recommendations of their Committees, and there was no use in the Government embarking upon the appointment of Committees. But this is a Committee which the Government appointed themselves ; the terms of reference were made by the Government, and I suppose the Government knew that the training of King's commissioned officers for whatever service was essentially an Imperial concern ; and I presume that the appointement of this Committee and the terms of reference were settled in consultation with the Government at home ; and if they were not so consulted, they should have been consulted. Therefore I presume all these things have been done in the way in which these things are done. We are not to be put off by the distribution of responsibility and the divisions of jurisdiction, and the whole apparatus of dilatory procedure to which we have been accustomed is sought to be employed even in this case where the unanimous recommendations of their own Committee, which was presided over by their most responsible officer, the Chief of the General Staff, are involved. When those recommendations are made, they are sought to be diluted and put a side, and all the arts of trained and evasive diplomacy are directed against us. I say that every Member of this House who realises his responsibility must set his face sternly against such an attempt on the part of Government to let down their own Committee. Here is an instance, Sir, in which at least the Leader of the House will be pleasantly disappointed, because we are willing to give effect to the unanimous recommendations of the Committee, and as he was anxious that this side of the House should agree with him in that respect, I would ask him to accept these recommendations and to see that the Governments here and in England accept those recommendations without any difficulty or without any delay and give immediate effect to them.

Sir, Indianisation of officers of the Indian Army and the connected demands have been long overdue. There is not the slightest doubt whatever that, as the Members of the Committee say,

> " for more than forty years the exponents of political and national aspirations of the Indian people had demanded insistently on the platform of the Indian National Congress and elsewhere that Indians should be given opportunities of service in the Indian Army equal to those enjoyed by their British fellow-subjects, but this demand has so far met with no substantial response from the Government ".

Now, Sir, Government's own responsible Committee has recommended that Indians should be given greater opportunities in the Indian army, and not anybody else desiring to cause trouble to this very very easy-going Government.

I would also very briefly run over the causes which have been stated in the Report as demanding that no further delay should take place in the Indianisation of the Indian army, and also in adopting the various recommendations, particularly the recommendation for the establishment of an Indian Sandhurst of the same standard of efficiency as the one existing in England. I am glad to notice that in no page of this Report is to be found any plea that Indians are or want to be in any way less efficient than the standard of efficiency claimed by the British people. That is really the one great thing which has prompted me to move this amendment. We do claim that we are as efficient as any other race on the face of the earth. Clive and Dupleix demonstrated that Indians, according to the history of English writers which I have read—if the history is false let the other side contradict it—Clive and Dupleix had demonstrated for the first time that if Indians are trained and organized by European officials they will be quite as efficient and equal to any other race on the face of the earth. We have also known on the civil side of the administration that Indians are equal to Europeans in all departments, as heads of Government, as Members of the Executive Council, as Judges and as Secretaries to important Departments,—in fact in all departments they have proved that they are in no way inferior to the English or any other European race, either in moral courage, or in efficiency, any other quality which is necessary for leadership of men. If therefore adequate opportunities have not been given to Indians, it is the Government only that is to blame, but if the chance is given, undoubtedly Indian Captains, Indian Majors, Indian Colonels and Indian Generals will be found in quite large numbers and will be found to be quite as efficient as their European compeers. I have not the slightest doubt about it.

There is however another question which has been very ably dealt with in the Report, and that is, the question whether there is sufficient material in India. I would only refer to that part of the Report which deals with this aspect of the question :

"We have already said that we believe good potential material to exist which the efforts of Government have not yet succeeded in reaching. This belief is based upon evidence of a substantial and credible character. There are a number of young King's commissioned officers already in the Indian Army who are pronounced by their Commanding Officers to be efficient, according to the single standard of efficiency which the army recognises, and many of these have reached their present position in the face of far greater disadvantages and difficulties which a British boy has to overcome. The Royal Military College at Dehra Dun which has been in existence for nearly 4½ years has shown that even average Indian boys, given proper facilities, can pass with credit not only into Sandhurst but out of it. So far no Dehra Dun boy has failed at Sandhurst, and the Dehra Dun boys, as a class, have earned the good opinion of the present Commandant of Sandhurst. Sir John Maynard, formerly Member of the Executive Council of the Punjab, who served for forty years in India, has assured us that in the Punjab alone there are many boys who do not appear for the Sandhurst examination but are of better quality than accepted standard candidates whom he himself had seen. We have similar testimony from other witnesses and also from those of our colleagues who are well acquainted with the standard and type of qualifications required in a King's commissioned officer".

The difficulties that have so far existed have been very clearly analysed by the members of the Committee. They have shown that the method of selection of candidates has been rigidly official and antiquated, and requires them to pass through a hierarchy of officials, so as to eliminate every possible efficient person and to let in practically nobody at all. The meshes are so very fine that nobody is able to come into the Military Department. That is the way in which the method of selection has been till now pursued, and that method of selection has been very severely condemned by the Committee and they have suggested a new method of selection which is certainly better than the existing method of selection. They also pointed out that if till now advantage has not been taken it is because the cost of military training and of the preliminary education and other things has been so prohibitive to the middle classes in India that facilities which exist in Canada and the United States or even in England and France are not given to Indian candidates here ; and that of course is half the trouble. The State ought certainly to bear a much larger proportion of the cost than it does. And again it has been pointed out that having a Sandhurst in England will not be a sufficient attraction. There is the difficulty of people going from here, and there is the difficulty of guardianship and various other difficulties can be imagined. The need therefore for the establishment of military colleges in India of the type of Sandhurst, Woolwich and Cranwell is obvious on the face of it. And it is a wonder that all this has not been till now done. Therefore, Sir, I submit that, while I agree with the case that has been stated and also with the general explanation which has been given of the entire military position, we differ from the members of the Committee in the recommendations themselves, which are unsatisfactory in scope and extent and as to which, I am sure, many of them will certainly agree with us on further reflection. Whether they arrived at it by way of a compromise or whether they arrived at it merely because they thought that was a beginning which ought to be attempted at present, is a different matter. But anyhow we on this side of the House must express our emphatic opinion that it does not at all represent all that we are entitled to. We are not satisfied with them, but at the same time we are not going to make the Government a present of the excuse, that one side of the House is against this recommendation, another side of the House is for that recommendation, therefore we will hang up this matter and we will not start these reforms. That sort of thing should not be allowed. It is that reason and that reason alone which has made many who are for full Dominion status, and who are for the fullest expression of the right of defence, and who are very much dissatisfied with these recommendations, to agree to this amendment. I hope, Sir, that the opinion which will be expressed by most of the Members of the Assembly, if as I hope this motion is carried by all the Members of this House or at any rate without any contradiction on the part of the Members on the Government Benches, if it is carried, I hope that will be sufficient evidence of the desire and capacity of India to defend herself. Let it not be said again and again, as it has been said, that India is not fit for Swaraj because she is not fit to defend herself. Give us a chance to defend ourselves. Give us the right to defend ourselves and you will find whether we are able to defend ourselves or not. I am not going to deal with the cheap gibes against the virility of the Indian people and the malicious propaganda that is recently in evidence about our incapacities. I am now dealing with the more general aspects of the question, and I may say that the history of India shows, the history of the military races in India shows, the history of all the peoples and provinces in India shows in an abundant measure that in no part of India can it be said that there is not manhood enough to man the Indian Army, or for the matter of that, the Navy, or that we cannot have Captains and Generals and leaders of men for all purpose. Is it to be assumed for a moment that the English people when they came to India found the Muhammadan people, the Mahratta people, or the other peoples easy foes to conquer ? If they were alive to-day, if their ghosts could revisit the scenes of their former wrestlings, they would praise in enthusiastic terms the valour and gallantry of the Mahratta, the Muslim, the Sikh, the Punjabi, the Rajput and Jat and all the other races in India, and that is the only testimony to which I would appeal. Therefore, I say that this cannot be delayed a moment longer. Whether the Statutory Commission comes or not ; whether a Swaraj constitution is framed or not, this Indianisation of the officers in the Army should forthwith proceed, and this establishment of colleges for the training of Indian youths in sufficient numbers and with sufficient equipment, supported by sufficient expenditure on the part of the State should be undertaken without a moment's delay without prejudice to our claim for Swaraj, civil and military. I trust that His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief and the Leader of the House and other responsible Members of the Government will look at this question just as the members of the Committee have done without any difference of race, without any difference of Government and governed, and without any difference of officials and non-officials. I would like that they should see that this is a matter on which they ought to support the non-official Indian opinion. This will be a critical matter, a test of good faith on the part of Government before the bar of Indian public opinion. I have not the slightest doubt as to the result of the division. But if perchance this is opposed and lost, why, then, that will be all to the good, and will be a great advantage to men like me. With these words I would cordially request Honourable Members of this House to vote for the amendment.

Colonel J. D. Crawford (Bengal : European) : I rise thus early in the debate after the Movers of the original Resolution and the amendment, because I cannot find myself so enthusiastically in favour of the recommendations of the Skeen Committee as they do, if we are to solve the problem with which this House is faced. What is the problem that we are really discussing to-day ? It is the problem of building up an Indian army of all arms,—by that I mean infantry, cavalry, air force, artillery,—so that it shall be capable under Indian officers of undertaking the defence of the country. Now, those were not the terms of reference to the Skeen Committee, but it is practically the problem with which they tried to deal. There is one factor of special consideration in that problem which we must think of, and that, Dr. Moonje, has already, I am glad to say, elaborated for me. In fact both the speeches of Dr. Moonje and Mr. Srinivasa Iyengar support largely the point of view that I am going to take at a later stage in this debate. I must congratulate Dr. Moonje on at last having got a very clear appreciation of the military problem in India, although he put it in much stronger terms than I would. If those words had come from my lips there would have been howls of derision from the benches opposite and cries of " bogey, bogey ". I trust he will stand up when the time comes for the discussion of the Military Budget and say, " What we want is not 50 crores but 100 crores ". That is one factor in the problem. The facts are that we in India are placed in a geographical position which necessitates the maintenance of an army of the highest efficiency, and on that point I am glad to say the Skeen Committee are thoroughly in agreement and I take it that the House is thoroughly in agreement with me on that point. Efficiency must be our watchword. Why do I say that I find myself not in favour with the recommendations of the Skeen Committee when I come down to find a solution of this problem ? To my mind there is only one word written across the Committee's Report and that is failure, failure to solve the problem with which we are faced. Why do I say failure ? Because they have laid down that for the success of their scheme certain factors are absolutely essential. The first of these factors is efficiency and with that the House agrees. Now what is our experience when we lay down for ourselves a scheme of Indianisation ? What will be our experience ? We will concentrate, not upon the question of efficiency but upon the question of how many men are we going to take in. That is really what the Report does. I am convinced that that is what will happen if we are going to accept this method of solving the problem. In the summary of recommendations they say :

> " A substantial and progressive scheme of Indianisation should be adopted and subject to the present standard of efficiency being maintained, should be faithfully carried out."

The House and the Benches opposite know well that when the time comes they will insist not upon the question of efficiency, but that the proposals be faithfully carried out.

The second point is that the Committee insist that steps should be taken to maintain the proportion of British recruitment required. I believe that this is essential to any scheme of building up the Indian Army. I brought out certain facts in this connection last Session in a series of questions. Are we able to-day to get the number of British officers which we require ? No. We are faced with the fact that we are 50 per cent. short. We are faced with the fact that to-day under existing conditions we cannot get the British officers we require and faced with difficult military situation along our frontiers ; we are already short of the very men on whom we must rely. Now we must face the facts. It is no good blinking at the facts. The success of our scheme is dependent upon the fact that we maintain a sufficiency of the British element until we have got our own Indians trained. I say that neither under the conditions existing to-day nor under the conditions existing under the recommendations of the Skeen Committee can we hope to get the British element that we require.

Mr. M. A. Jinnah (Bombay City : Muhammadan Urban) : Why ?

Colonel J. D. Crawford : My friend Mr. Jinnah has asked " why ". The reason in my opinion is that to-day service in India is not popular in England. The strongest point of all is that the men of one country, be it France or Spain or England, prefer to work in their own surroundings and among men of their own race. That is a perfectly recognised fact. " Birds of a feather flock together ". They naturally go where their interests are common. That is the point. Indians have no desire that the social systems of England should be imposed upon them when they come to the question of their social life in the army. Similarly, Englishmen will not freely and willingly serve under social conditions in the army with which they are not content. That is the position. There is no question of inferiority. That is really the reason why you will find that you will not get your British element.

There is a third point upon which the Committee insisted as an essential, and that is the reform of the educational system in India. With that recommendation I entirely agree, but what, Sir, in the immediate future is the hope that we shall carry out any reform of our educational system ? I am reminded that we have already had the Sadler Commission recommending reforms in our educational system. But to what extent have those suggestions been carried out ? Those are the three points which the Committee say are essential to the success of their scheme, and if they cannot make good on those three points then the scheme falls to the ground. I can tell them now that they cannot make good on those points and the scheme has already fallen to the ground.

Now, Sir, I have given my mature consideration to the recommendations of the Skeen Committee. There is one other point to which I may refer. The material which we require for the stamp of officers that shall be of the requisite standard of efficiency, that is, the standard of efficiency of our present British officers, is not available. It is due, as the Committee have rightly said, to the failure of our educational system. It is due to another thing as well, and that is the failure of the education in the home. If you are going to recruit men with the requisite qualities of leadership, not only have you got to give them that education of character in your preparatory schools and in your public schools, but you have also to give it to them in your homes. Now that is a question which only Members on the opposite side can touch upon, which they probably realize much better than we do. But I had hopes that out of this Committee would have come something worth while when I heard one of the Members say : " I believe the crux of this question lies in the education of our women ".

Now, Sir, I have criticised the Skeen Committee's Report and I do not want to be entirely destructive in my criticism. I believe entirely that we must concentrate all our energies on the building up of an Indian Army of all arms officered entirely by Indians if we are ever to make this country capable of Dominion self-government. That army has got to be capable of undertaking a large proportion of the defence of India ; I will not say the whole, because I think a portion of the defence of this country will surely be an Imperial responsibility. How are we going to set about it ? It seems to me that your best method of setting about it is the one which the Skeen Committee actually rejected, and that is to keep your present army to meet the dangers you have to-day. Keep up their standard of efficiency. The dangers are real. Keep your present army and start to build up your own Indian Army alongside. That is the major portion of the scheme. (An Honourable Member :—" That is, double the army ".) That is the method by which the problem should be tackled. And as your Indian Dominion army is ready to take over then reduce the redundant units in the existing army. That is the main basis of my proposal. Now, Sir, to-day we keep on talking only about Indianizing the higher ranks. But the officer establishment of an Indian battalion does not consist only of British officers. In Indian as in British battalions it consists of 30 officers. To-day we have 19 Indian officers already in our Indian Army regiments. But for various reasons, they are not up to the standard that we require of our officers, and my first proposition to you therefore is, " Let us raise and improve the standard of our Indian officers "; and for that, I would recommend that we should start at once in India a military college to which we should send from the ranks of our Indian Army men selected and thought suitable to eventually become officers. Also we would have recruited for this College from the various civil walks of life. After three years' training I would have drafted them to the Indian army as platoon commanders, that is into the position which the Indian officer holds to-day. They would be men with a higher training, better education and more capable of carrying out their responsibilities. That is one of the steps which I would have recommended ; and instead of taking the men from the ranks at a very late age in life after 15, 16 or 17 years' service, I think I would have taken them after about 4 years' service when I had some chance of judging as to their character and educational qualifications, and as to whether they were likely in due course to be at persons to become officers ; and I would have given all those Indian officers a better status than they have got to-day. I would have done away with the Viceroy's Commissioned officers. I would not have worried about the King's Commissions. I would have had our own King's Dominion Commissions similar to those in other Dominions. In addition to that, I would have got my trained candidates through Sandhurst and the military colleges at home, and I would have drafted them in also as platoon commanders. I would have, as they rose in rank, given them the opportunity to pass to the higher commands, company commands, and I would have drafted them gradually, in order to retain my British element, into my Indian Dominion Army. Now that is the type of scheme which I believe might have been adopted. I am not concerned with the time-limit : we are not concerned to-day with the question of time-limit, because we have got a military problem to face. We have now got a very efficient army, and we cannot risk allowing that efficiency to drop in any way. On that I am absolutely at one with my friends, and as I say, I would have gone on building up and increasing the position of our present Indian officers of the Indian Army, and alongside that, I would have started my full-fledged Dominion Army, of which I should have had every reason to be proud. I cannot understand, I fail to understand, why Indians should consider the eight-unit scheme a scheme of segregation. Now to my mind, if that is really your opinion, it shows that you think your men have got an inferiority complex : and if your men have got this inferiority complex, if they have got no confidence in themselves, how will they lead their own men or inspire confidence in others ? I ask that. It seems to me that those men who had the honour of being in the first regiments which were to be Indianised should have felt proud that they had the opportunity to show that they were as good and could turn out as good regiments as their British comrades on the other side. That would have been true patriotism if they had the grit to do it and we would have had greater chances of building an Indian Army. I am afraid, Sir, I cannot find myself in the least bit in sympathy with the recommendations of the Skeen Committee's Report. I believe that that Report will fail entirely to solve the problem which we are all anxious to solve, and therefore, I find myself in opposition to the Resolution of my friend, Dr. Moonje and the amendment of my friend, Mr. Srinivasa Iyengar—not in opposition to the problem ; the problem has got to be solved, but it will not be solved by the Report of the Skeen Committee.

Mr. K. C. Roy (Bengal : Nominated Non-official) : Sir, there are at the present moment two propositions before the House, the substantive motion of my Honourable friend Dr. Moonje and the amendment moved by my friend Mr. Srinivasa Iyengar. I have an amendment also standing in my name ; I have no wish to move it, because I know that it will not meet with support either from the non-official or official benches. I therefore support the amendment of my friend Mr. Srinivasa Iyengar. (Hear, hear). His amendment may be divided into two parts. The first is the preamble. I sympathise with the preamble. He has laid it down that it will be the duty of the forthcoming Statutory Commission to examine the question of Indian defence, not Indian defence alone, but Indian defence in its relation to Imperial defence. This was not considered by Mr. Montagu and Lord Chelmsford. We are therefore facing considerable difficulties. The Statutory Commission will undoubtedly have to consider the interdependence of civil and military administrations in India. In the domain of civil administration we have advanced very greatly in recent years ; but in the domain of military affairs, we are where we were ; and for the backwardness the responsibility does not belong to us ; it belongs to the Government of India and to His Majesty's Government. Shortly after the introduction of Reforms the question was taken up by a Committee over which my esteemed friend General Sir John Shea presided, and we have not seen any results so far from the recommendations of that Committee.

Then, Sir, the second part of the Resolution is the operative part. The operative part represents the amendment of which I have given notice. The operative part of the Resolution recommends to the Governor General in Council to accept the recommendations of the Skeen Committee. I think, Sir, it is their clear duty to do so. It is the Government of India which appointed this Skeen Committee. It is the Government of India which determined its terms of reference. It is the Government of India and Army Headquarters which were in constant touch during the progress of the Committee in India. I consider that it will be a clear deviation from the normal conduct of Government if they raise serious objections to the acceptance of the unanimous recommendations made by the Skeen Committee.

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub (Rohilkund and Kumaon Divisions : Muhammadan Rural) : Who appointed the Frontier Enquiry Committee ?

Mr. K. C. Roy : Sir Denys Bray will give you the reply.

Before I come to the Skeen Committee's Report, I have a word to say about the preface. When I saw the famous " foreword ", about which I asked a few questions the other day, for the first time, it came upon me as a surprise. I have been a keen student of the Government of India for nearly 25 years. I have seen many Commissions and Committees come and go, but I have never seen a " foreword " before. I therefore thought it my duty to table a few questions which I did, but the masterly way in which my Honourable friend Mr. Mackworth Young replied to my questions left me speechless. I left it to my friend Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru to put supplementary questions, and so he did and I hope that when the discussion proceeds further, my friend Mr. Jinnah will be able to elucidate the points further. But there is one point to which reference has been made both by my friend Mr. Srinivasa Iyengar and my gallant friend Colonel Crawford, and that is about the possibility of developing a Dominion army. But what is the genesis of a Dominion army ? A Dominion army implies immediate autonomy of this Legislature to legislate for the defence of India and also a Dominion Civil Service. Is Colonel Crawford prepared to give it ? A Dominion army also postulates the withdrawal of the King's Army from India. Is Colonel Crawford prepared for this ? A Dominion army further implies citizenship rights to a Dominion citizen. A Dominion citizen can enter the King's army in any branch he likes ; but to-day Indians are ineligible for admission to the various arms. Is he prepared to wipe that away ? I will leave Government to answer these questions.

Now, Sir, let us take the composition of the Skeen Committee. Who presided over it ? The next man to the Commander-in-Chief, a man well-known and respected throughout the whole of India and among the Indian army, (Applause)—a man with whom it was my privilege to work during the Great War, a man of unimpeachable character and integrity and a man who would only do the right thing. And who were the members ? My Honourable friend Sardar Jogendra Singh and Mr. Jinnah, men who could speak on India's behalf with unimpeachable authority. And who were the representatives of the Indian Army ? Two distinguished officers whose loyalty cannot be questioned, whose sincerity for the good government for India is beyond a shadow of doubt. Now, we are asked by our friend, Colonel Crawford to dismiss the Skeen Committee's Report as a failure and to accept his wholesome advice. (Laughter.) If the House were to accept Colonel Crawford's advice to-day, it will take another thousand years for the Indianisation of the Indian Army. (Hear, hear). And, then, Sir, we are asked to reject the Skeen Committee's Report ; and on what grounds ? The grounds suggested are precisely the same on which we shall urge the acceptance of that Report. My friend Colonel Moonje (Laughter)—I am sorry to have suddenly promoted my friend to that rank—has given a very graphic description of the external conditions of India. I accept his description and I can assure my friend Colonel Crawford that these considerations were ever present in the mind of General Skeen who, as the Chief of the Indian General Staff, knew the external conditions of India much better than an intelligence officer who retired from the Army Headquarters about ten years ago. (Hear, hear.)

Then, Sir, I come to the four points which Colonel Crawford has urged. I accept his criticism of the test of efficiency. In my boyhood I was connected with educational institutions. I can assure His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief that India could produce 100 to 200 men for the Indian Army every year. Indeed if they do not satisfy the test of efficiency do not have them. I say that efficiency shall be the sole test and that we have not so far failed to produce this in any walks of life.

Then, Sir, I come to his next point. He says that there is the lack of British recruits and that they are not coming in sufficient numbers. I accept that position. But, Sir, I look upon it as a temporary phase. The British youth knows his responsibility and his obligations ; the British youth knows the value of India ; the British youth knows the important place that India occupies in the chain of Imperial defence. It is his duty to come. But I would ask my gallant friend to look at the other side of the picture. What about the Indian youths and what about the Indian population ? Suppose you have a war in the North-West Frontier to-morrow. Colonel Crawford was associated with me during the publicity work and I know the value he attached to Indian public opinion in those days. I want him to consider, if there is a war in which His Majesty's Government is engaged and in which you do not get the co-operation of the Indian people, what will happen ? In fact, by making a speech like the one which Colonel Crawford has made to-day, I can assure the House that you are straining the loyalty of the Indian sepoys and the Indian people. (Hear, hear.) I want you again to consider the other side of the shield. You cannot fight another

[Mr. K. C. Roy.]

European war without the fullest co-operation in money, in munitions and in men from India. When my gallant friend was associated with me during the publicity campaign in the days of the Great War, he did not find a single Indian who was not willing to assist us. Is that the reward he is proposing now ?

And, Sir, what is his next point that he talked about ? He talks against the abandonment of the 8-unit scheme. I remember, Sir, the day when the announcement was made. I was sitting in the Press Gallery and my friend Mr. Burdon came up to me with a bundle of papers in his hand and said : " Here is the 8-unit scheme " and asked me what I thought of it. I told Mr. Burdon : " Take it from me, it is foredoomed to failure." I am sorry he is not here to bear his personal testimony to that effect, but that is what I told him.

Now this is the finding of the Skeen Committee and not the finding of the Indian people. We are not afraid of taking risks and of showing our own merit if we are given opportunities. But what we very strongly object to is the racial discrimination involved in the scheme. In the civil government of India, in our private, social and political life, racial discrimination is practically gone. (Honourable Members " No, no.") Well, I have been in Simla for over 25 years and I know what the position was 25 years ago and I know what it is to-day. In the civil government of India racial discrimination is well-nigh gone. Please do not substitute it in the Army. (An Honourable Member " Communal appointments ! ") Well, these communal appointments are all your contribution. Please do not introduce racial discrimination in the Army.

Lastly, Sir, before I sit down, I wish to acknowledge the deep debt we all owe to the Commander-in-Chief for the early orders that he has obtained on the Shea Committee's Report (Laughter) I deprecate laughter. You are not conversant with the methods of the British Government. I know His Excellency is straining every nerve to secure an early decision on the Skeen Committee's Report, but I may tell him that if that decision be not the acceptance of the entire recommendations of the Skeen Committee, then it will create widespread dissatisfaction all over the country, and it will really mar the political, economic and social progress which this House has so much at heart. I support the amendment.

Maulvi Abdul Matin Chaudhury : (Assam : Muhammadan) : Sir, I rise to offer a few brief observations on the Resolution that is before us to-day. I confess I am not one of those who went exactly into raptures or ecstasies over this Report of the Skeen Committee. Though I do not withhold my tribute of admiration from the members of the committee, both European and Indian, for the courageous and the conscientious way in which they tried to discharge their duties, I must say, Sir, at the same time, that it falls far short of Indian expectations (Hear, hear.) The Report, Sir, was evidently in the nature of a compromise. But whatever enthusiasm I might have felt for the recommendations of the Committee, my enthusiasm reached its freezing point as I went through the ingenious " foreword " with which the Government of India has taken care to fringe the Report. There is a saying, Sir, that the sting of the scorpion lies in its tail ; we find that the sting of the Government of India lies in the small slips of paper which they always attach to the otherwise admirable reports. Such was the case with the Resolution on the Textile Enquiry Committee's Report, and such is the case with this " foreword " also.

Since the introduction of the reforms, no Committee or Commission had aroused such a high expectation in the minds of the Indians as this Skeen Committee. The terms of reference were so explicit and definite that we were hypnotised into the belief that probably the Government of India were really earnest and sincere in the matter. With the appointment of this Committee, we began, Sir, in our credulity to see visions of swarms of Indian Captains strutting along the Mall in spick and span uniforms, of Indian Majors swaggering on railway platforms ; we dreamt, Sir, of Indian Colonels in command at Jutogh or of Indian Generals installed at Razmak. The prospects seemed so rosy, that it induced even Pandit Motilal Nehru, the Leader of the Swaraj Party in the Assembly, to give up the position of a dignified dissociation from the Government and walk quietly into the spider's parlour. (Laughter.)

4 P.M.

But, Sir, with one stroke of the pen the Government of India have dashed all our hopes to the ground. The Government now tell us that the recommendations of the Skeen Committee possess no more than a mere academic value as a basis of discussion. The Government unblushingly tell us that they have more cards up their sleeve than they produced before the Skeen Committee. They tell us that we have been living in a fool's paradise if we believed that anything substantial would come out of the Committee's recommendations.

Now I am very much struck by the difference of treatment that is accorded by the Government to the recommendations of Commissions, which concern Indian interests and those which concern the European. When a Commission recommends an extra allowance for officials of non-Asiatic domicile, we are asked to bow unquestioningly to the superior wisdom and expert knowledge of the Commissioners ; we are asked to take it as a gospel. When, again, a Committee recommends some preferential treatment for an article of British manufacture, we are reminded that this House can hardly be expected to improve within two hours upon the recommendations of a Committee which it has taken the experts eight months to produce. But, Sir, when a Committee, one of the ablest and the most representative that can be found in this country, after two years of hard labour and searching investigation, takes the unusual course of recommending a general advance for Indians in a particular direction, the Government of India at once become very uneasy ; like an old garrulous woman, they begin to fumble and flutter and set about inventing excuses to shelve the whole matter.

The position, Sir, is this. When we ask for Swaraj or Dominion status or Home Rule or anything of that sort, the retort is hurled at us : " It is absurd for people to talk of Swaraj who cannot defend their own country ". When, Sir, we ask for opportunities, we are told : " That is no concern of yours ; these are Imperial questions to be decided by the Imperial statesmen at Downing Street or Whitehall ". Sir, in the spacious days of post-war promises we were encouraged to toy with the idea of self-determination ; we were deluded with the prospect of being equal partners in what is euphemestically called the British Commonwealth of Nations. The attitude of the Government towards this Resolution, Sir, will be the test (Lala Lajpat Rai : " Acid test "), an acid test of the sincerity or otherwise of Government professions. From it, Sir, the Indian public will judge whether the Government are really desirous of leading us to a progressive realisation of responsible government in India or whether they want to keep us down by the " sharp edge of the sword ", as our brilliant Secretary of State has so beautifully put it. We shall, Sir, wait and see.

His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief : Sir, I think I need hardly assure the House that I have listened to the speeches which have been made with the very greatest interest, and before I go any further I would crave the indulgence of the House in the difficulty I feel in making anything like an adequate reply to the speeches and for reasons which will very shortly appear. I was not quite certain when my Honourable friend the Mover of this amendment, Mr. Srinivasa Iyengar, was speaking whether he was speaking on the majority or the minority report of his party. I understood that he was advocating the report of either the majority or the minority, and that he hoped later on to be able to move on behalf of that section which he, at present, is not representing. I did gather from his speech, however, that he was under the impression that Government were inclined to burke or to shelve the issues raised by the Skeen Committee's Report. When Government formed that Committee they naturally realised that the issues roughly would be to some extent what they have been. They are prepared to face those issues and they are prepared to give information regarding their policy after having due time for consideration. Mr. Srinivasa Iyengar talked about the possibility of our deferring consideration on this Report until the arrival of the Statutory Commission in India. Well, as a matter of fact, had Government decided on such action, I think it might not have been very difficult to justify it, because I know that there are a good many people, and certainly some Members of this House, who have felt that Indianisation of the Indian Army is a matter which might so vitally affect the constitution and administration of India that it would have been suitable to refer a big question like this to that Commission when it comes out here. I may say that Government have not taken that attitude. As soon as Government received the Committee's Report, they at once set to work upon it, to examine it as quickly as they possibly could, considering the very great importance of the Report concerned. Indeed, I had hoped that to-day I might have been able to give this House some information as regards the policy of Government in this matter. It is to me a matter of great regret that I am unable to do so. Government, however, were only able to arrive at their own provisional conclusions shortly before Parliament at Home rose, and there was therefore no time for the Home Government to form a considered judgment on the matter. Government, however, have submitted their provisional views by telegram to the Secretary of State, and later on we hope that as a result of this debate to-day, when we are more in a position to know what the wishes of the House are, we shall be able to send a full despatch on the subject to the Secretary of State. I gather that from what Mr. Srinivasa Iyengar said, he and other Members of the House are of the opinion that Government might have been quicker in this matter. I would ask them to remember the great magnitude of the question and what very far-reaching and indeed irrevocable results might come from a faulty or over-hasty decision in this matter. I think I am right in saying that from the time the Committee first sat to the time they were able to issue this Report, a period of sixteen months elapsed, while probably that time would have been longer had not Government been able to place unreservedly at the disposal of the Committee the services of Mr. Burdon, who, I understand, was of the greatest assistance to them in writing their Report. I need hardly say that I make no complaint whatever about the time taken. I think it is absolutely right that the Committee should have gone as deeply as they did into the whole matter, but I think we must realise this, that no Government could possibly delegate its own responsibility to any Committee, however influential, and when we realise the time the Committee had to take in formulating its Report, I trust there will not be any general feeling that Government have been dilatory in dealing with it.

I would now, Sir, turn to the Report itself, and with your permission I will read the first term of reference which was this :

"By what means it might be possible to improve upon the present supply of Indian candidates for the King's Commission, both in regard to number and quality."

Well, Sir, the Committee having gone very deeply into that question came to the conclusion that it was not possible to improve upon the present supply of Indian candidates, unless there was a definite increase made in the number of vacancies available for Indians at Sandhurst. After coming to this conclusion the Committee drew up a programme of progressive increase of Indianisation among the commissioned ranks of the Indian Army up to the year 1952, by which time, according to the calculation of the Committee, one-half of the officers of the Indian Army holding King's Commissions would be Indians. Beyond that the Committee made no recommendations.

Now, Sir, I feel that the Committee were perfectly right in taking up that point, and in doing so they stressed very distinctly two other aspects of the case which are of the greatest importance and which were just referred to by Colonel Crawford. More than once in that Report the Committee mention the fact that the whole of their recommendations are dependent upon the maintenance of efficiency and also upon the importance of retaining the requisite proportion of British officers in the Indian Army. Just as they were right in emphasising these two points, they were also, I think, equally right in not proceeding to deal with them, because they were to some extent beyond their purview. The Government of India, however, naturally must take up these two points, as the Committee will, I am sure, be the first to recognise.

The problem strikes me as two-sided. On the one hand, you have the question of Indianisation ; that is, the finding of adequate opportunity for Indians to serve as combatant officers in the Army of India and of training them in the qualities of leadership and command. Closely allied to that, is the question of efficiency which again is bound up with the maintenance of British recruitment. I am sure, Sir, it must be clear from the utterances made by Government during the last five or six years that Government are in sympathy with Indian aspirations regarding this, and if there were any doubt on that score, it must surely have been dispelled by the very fact of the appointment and the composition of the Indian Sandhurst Committee.

I will now read, Sir, to the House what the Committee state as regards the standard of efficiency. They state as follows :

" It is not our purpose or desire that the number of Indian King's commissioned officers in the Army should be increased without reference to considerations of efficiency. We recognise that in the Army there can only be one standard of efficiency, namely, the highest. We hold strongly, therefore, that the severity of the existing tests should not be relaxed in any way, and, if Indians capable of satisfying these tests are not forthcoming, then the pace of Indianisation must for the time lag behind the number of vacancies offered. We are fully alive to the fact that the progress of our scheme, as of any scheme, must be contingent upon success being secured at each stage and upon military efficiency being maintained throughout ".

I am sure, Sir, the House will agree with that, as they also will with the further point brought out by the Committee as to how essential it is that the educational authorities in this country must undertake the onus of educating boys in the initial stage, so that they may eventually be fit to take their place in the Army. That, Sir, I believe, is the starting point of the whole question. That, I believe, is really an important question, and the Committee have laid stress upon it by stating, that the development of the educational system in India on the lines indicated is a vital element in the scheme which they recommend. Let us remember also that this must not be merely a question of Government effort. It is not only Government effort which is necessary, but public opinion and private enterprise have got to take their due share. There must be no misapprehension about it at all ; it is absolutely essential, because I feel confident that no one will be able to deny the advance of Indianisation if we make sure that the initial stage has been properly and thoroughly laid. Equally, no one must be allowed to think that those initial stages can be avoided or " jumped ".

In this connection I would like to refer to the efforts being made by one of my colleagues, the Honourable Mr. Das. Mr. Das, as I think the House probably knows, is making the greatest effort to establish in India a really fine public school. I sincerely trust that his efforts will meet with the success they deserve. He is working wholeheartedly in the matter, and, should he succeed in his efforts, I honestly believe we should have overcome the first of the many very great difficulties in the problem.

In connection with Sandhurst, I have heard occasionally Members of this House and certainly many parents of " umedwars " for Sandhurst say and being under the impression, that once a boy has got into Sandhurst, even though he has only scraped through that once there all difficulties have disappeared. I need hardly point out how that cannot be the case. The actual passing into Sandhurst is only the first of the many qualifications which a cadet and, later on, an officer must have in his career, and I cannot think it is a kindness to send any boy to Sandhurst with lower qualifications than his brother British cadets and later his brother British commissioned officer. I am sorry to say that at present the standard of the examination for boys going up for examination in India is undoubtedly lower than that passed by their British brothers in England, and, as a result, we know, to our regret, the percentage of failures among Indian boys at Sandhurst is greater than that among English boys.

I trust, Sir, that I have not unduly stressed this question of want of education and the necessity of putting it right. I have done so because the Committee themselves stress it and I think it only right to emphasise the fact that the whole of their recommendations are dependent upon efficiency being maintained at every stage at the high standard on which the Committee have rightly insisted.

I would turn now, Sir, to the matter of British recruitment, and with your permission I would read out what the Committee say about that :

"On the civil side of the administration the fear has often been expressed, and has to some extent been realised, that Indianisation will cause a falling off in the recruitment of British candidates for the services. The same phenomenon is liable to occur in connexion with the Indianisation of the Army. As we have indicated in our observations regarding the 'eight units scheme', a continued supply of British officers, of the same high quality as those who have served India in the past, will, apart from everything else, be a great and valuable aid for the present and for some time to come to successful Indianisation. We should, therefore, regard it as specially important to maintain the proportion of British recruitment required."

That, Sir, was the view of the Committee. But naturally no Committee in this country could be in a position to keep its finger on the pulse of what I might call the home recruiting market, or to be able to gauge with any accuracy what the exact result of their recommendations would be on the boys that we get out from Sandhurst. The authorities in England can alone be in a good position to judge regarding this and when the Committee lay stress on the necessity for maintaining the proper proportion of British recruitment, it is only right that the Government of India and His Majesty's Government must regard the matter from the very widest point of view. Let us remember that the Government of India is responsible for the defence of India and that responsibility lies entirely upon the efficiency of her fighting forces, and, as my friend Dr. Moonje has pointed out, we know that we have no margin to spare as far as our Army in India is concerned. The Army in India is one link in the Imperial chain of the defence of the Empire and naturally therefore no alterations in its organisation, which might in any way affect its efficiency can be taken without the fullest consideration of His Majesty's Government, which is ultimately responsible for Imperial security. We know that in the last war, the Indian army took its part in upholding the integrity of the British Empire. That integrity was only maintained by fighting in practically all parts of the world. Let us never forget how fortunate India was that such fighting did not take place in her own territory. I certainly trust that it may be many years before another great war comes to scourge this world, but should such a war come, we have to remember that he would be a very rash man who would dare to prophesy in what arena fighting would or would not take place, and should the actual defence of India then be forced upon us, it is certain that not only would any failure here mean disaster to India but it would react upon the British Empire as a whole and consequently His Majesty's Government would be failing in their duty if they did not fully satisfy themselves that any reorganisation of the army did not in any way cause inefficiency—when we realize the great responsibilities inherent in His Majesty's Government for matters which may vitally affect the security and defence of the whole Empire, I feel confident that Honourable Members will not wish to hurry His Majesty's Government unduly in such a matter as this. As I have said, the Government of India have already transmitted to His Majesty's Government their provisional proposals and for the reasons I have stated it has not yet been possible for His Majesty's Government to arrive at any decision.

[H. E. the Commander-in-Chief.]

Before I sit down, I wish to say one word more and that is this. I believe, we, all of us here in this Assembly to-day, are at one in the dual purpose of doing all that is possible to assist Indians in increasing numbers in taking part in the defence of their country, while at the same time we are also determined that the measures chosen to do this shall not in any way, directly or indirectly, weaken the instrument of self-defence upon which the security of India depends. I trust that this Resolution may not be pressed. If pressed, the Government of India will have no other recourse than that of opposing it for the reasons I have given, but I am rather hoping that the present event may be regarded more as an opportunity for Members to state their opinions than as an attack upon Government. The Home Government, as I have already said, have not yet had time to formulate their opinions and surely it will be best if they are not asked to do so in a hostile atmosphere. I trust that the Mover thereof may withdraw it. (Applause.)

Mr. President : As Honourable Members are aware, His Excellency the Governor General will address the Members of both Houses in this Chamber on Monday next at 11 o'clock. The House now stands adjourned till 12 Noon on Monday next.

The Assembly then adjourned till Twelve of the Clock on Monday, the 29th August 1927.

ADDRESS BY HIS EXCELLENCY THE VICEROY TO THE MEMBERS OF THE COUNCIL OF STATE AND THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

H. E. the Viceroy : Gentlemen, little more than a year ago, I invited India to pause and consider seriously the communal situation, and I then appealed to leaders and rank and file to pursue peace and cultivate a spirit of toleration towards one another. For several months past I have had it in mind again to speak to the conscience and heart of India upon that question which still dwarfs all others in her life, but I have felt some doubt as to the most convenient means of doing it. I finally came to the conclusion that there was no more appropriate way of reaching the ear of the multitudes of India than by addressing them through the representatives of India in the Central Legislature. Accordingly I decided, in exercise of the statutory privileges conferred upon me by the Government of India Act, to ask the Members of the Legislature to meet me here to-day, and I am gratified that so large a number of Honourable Members of both Houses should have been able to attend.

Let me recall the salient incidents of India's recent history.

I am not exaggerating when I say that during the 17 months that I have been in India, the whole landscape has been overshadowed by the lowering clouds of communal tension, which have repeatedly discharged their thunderbolts, spreading far throughout the land their devastating havoc.

From April to July last year, Calcutta seemed to be under the mastery of some evil spirit, which so gripped the minds of men that in their insanity they held themselves absolved from the most sacred restraints of human conduct. Honest citizens went abroad in peril of their lives from fanatical attack, and the paralysis that overtook the commercial life of a great metropolis was only less serious than the civic loss that flowed from a naked and unashamed violation of the law, which perforce had to be reasserted by methods drastic and severe. Since then we have seen the same sinister influences at work in Pabna, Rawalpindi, Lahore and many other places, and have been forced to look upon that abyss of unchained human passions that lies too often beneath the surface of habit and of law.

In less than 18 months, so far as numbers are available, the toll taken by this bloody strife has been between 250 and 300 killed, and over 2,500 injured. While angry temper reigns we are not always sensible of the tragedy that lies behind figures such as these. The appreciation of it is dulled in the poisoned atmosphere, which for the time prevails, suggesting that such things are inseparable from the defence of principles jealously revered, and tempting men to forget how frequently in history the attempt has been made to cloak such crimes against society in honourable guise. But let us translate these things into terms of human sorrow and bereavement, and let our minds dwell in pity and in shame upon the broken human lives that they represent, mothers robbed of sons whose welfare they counted more precious than their own, the partnership of lives severed, the promise of young life denied. The sorrows of war are often mercifully redeemed, as many of us have known, by an element of self-sacrifice that transfigures and consecrates them to the achievement of some high purpose. But here, over these domestic battlefields, sorrow holds sway unredeemed by any such transforming power, and speaks only of the senseless and futile passions that have caused it.

Nor are the many houses of mourning the only measure of the damage which is being done to India. Is there not much in Indian social life that still cries out for remedy and reform and which enlightened India of to-day would fain mould otherwise ? Nowhere perhaps is the task before the reformers more laborious ; for in India civilisation is age-long, immemorial ; and all things are deep-rooted in the past. United must be the effort if it is to gain success ; and on the successful issue of such work depends the building of the Indian nation. Yet the would-be builders must approach their task sorely handicapped and with heavy heart, so long as the forces to which they would appeal are distracted and torn by present animosities. For nothing wholesome can flourish in unwholesome soil, and no one may hope to build a house to stand against the wind and the rain and the storm of life upon foundations that are rotten and unsound.

And what shall we say of the effect of these troubles upon India's progress in the field of constitutional evolution ? There are many who hold that the very reforms that were designed to lead India along the peaceful road of political development have, by reason of the political power that they conferred, been directly responsible for the aggravation of these anxieties. True it most certainly is that national self-government must be founded upon the self-government and self-control of individuals. Where private citizens do not possess these qualities, political self-government of a nation is an empty name, and merely serves to disguise under an honourable title the continuance of something perilously akin to civil war.

And thus this problem, of which the reactions upon the future of India must be so intimate, is a problem with which Great Britain, not less than India, is vitally concerned. For India desires to win self-government, and it is Great Britain's self-appointed task to guide her to this end. Surely it is evident that those who desire to win, and those who desire to lend assistance in the winning, are mutually and vitally confronted with the necessity of laying the spectre that besets the path of their common hopes. By the logic of our purpose or desires, we are partners in the task, and no one of us can here shirk or decline responsibility. Of the burden which India's unhappy disunion imposes on Government, the figures I gave earlier in my speech are eloquent. It is our inalienable duty to preserve order and to vindicate the law. We may make mistakes in doing it ; there are few human beings who can avoid them ; but if we make them, they are, believe me, mistakes made in the cause of a genuine attempt to discharge the difficult and painful duty that is ours.

But I cannot reconcile it with my conception of a real and effective partnership in this matter between Great Britain and India to confine the responsibility, either of myself or my Government, to a mere repression of disorder. Necessary as that is, the situation, as I see it to-day, demands a more constructive effort.

A year ago an appeal was made to me by many men of influence and distinction that I should take the initiative in convening a conference to examine any means that might hold out promise of amelioration. For reasons which seemed to me convincing, I thought it inadvisable to take that step ; and I have not wavered in my conviction that my decision was well-founded. But the passage of events between that time and this has compelled me perpetually to review the grounds on which I then formed my judgment. I had hoped that, in answer to my appeal to the communities, it might not have been impossible that they themselves, freely taking counsel together, might have reached an agreement genuine, convinced and thus effective, that would have brought much-desired and long sought relief from these distractions. In this respect my hopes have been disappointed. Partial agreements, it is true, have been reached in regard to this or that aspect of the problem, reflecting much honour upon those who exposed themselves, I do not doubt, to considerable risk with many of their own friends in making them. But, so far as I can judge, those agreements have failed to offer that fundamental solution of the problem, and to gain that measure of acceptance, which are necessary if we are to win through the present distress. And one condition remains constant, which is, as I said last year, that no conference can offer any hope of success unless those participating in it are truly inspired with a will to peace.

It was with real pleasure that I observed statements recently in the press which indicated that fresh efforts might be made to bring together Hindus and Muslims for the discussion of these matters. Any such attempt deserves the active good-will and support of all who care for India's welfare and good name. I myself have long been considering anxiously whether any action by Government could help to stimulate that general desire of reconciliation without which nothing can be done. It is not easy, or perhaps possible, for me to give a positive or assured answer to these reflections. In matters of this kind, each man must search his own heart and answer for himself whether he does in truth and without reserve desire to play his part as an apostle of peace, and whether those associated with him are like-minded. But this I can say. If it were represented to me by the responsible leaders of the great communities that they thought a useful purpose might be served by my convening a conference myself with the object of frankly facing the causes of these miserable differences, and then in a spirit of determined good-will considering whether any practical solution or mitigation of them could be found, I should welcome it as evidence of a firm resolve to leave no way unsearched that might disclose means of rescuing India from her present unhappy state. And, if these representations were made by those who occupy such a position in their communities as to permit me to assume that the communities would accept and abide by any decisions at which they might arrive on their behalf, then, allying myself with them and such other leaders of public thought as might be willing to assist, I should gladly and cordially throw my whole energies into this honourable quest.

[H. E. the Viceroy.]

I have been told that any such efforts are foredoomed to failure, and that all we might accomplish would be to contribute a few more barren pages to the story of unprofitable discussions. I do not underestimate the difficulties; I do not minimise the risk of failure. But difficulties are meant to be surmounted, and outward success or failure is not the sole or the final test of conduct in this sphere. After all, many of the greatest ventures in human history have sprung from what the world deemed failures. At any given time the evil forces of life may be so strong that the efforts we can make against them appear unavailing. Yet to allow this thought to drive us into a posture of feeble acquiescence in something against which our whole moral sense rebels, and into losing our will for better things, this surely would be deliberately to turn our back upon everything that makes life worth living.

There is an epitaph in a small country churchyard of England upon an English country gentleman, whose lot had been cast in those unhappy days of English history, when England too was torn by religious strife. It runs as follows :

> "In the year 1643, when all things sacred were either demolished or profaned, this Church was built by Sir Francis Shirley, Baronet, whose singular praise it is to have done the best things in the worst times, and to have hoped them in the most calamitous."

I doubt whether higher testimony could be paid to any man, or more concise expression given to the forces by which this world is moved.

There must surely have been times during these latter months when Indian patriots, gazing upon their motherland, bruised by this internecine and senseless struggle, must have been hard put to it to maintain their faith in India's destiny untarnished, and when many must have been even tempted to hate the very name of religion, which ought to be man's greatest solace and reward. Yet may it not be that the purpose of these trials has been to test the calibre of our faith, and that some day when the testing time is past, those who with trust in their hearts, and hope in their eyes, have striven unceasingly to spread kindly feeling among their fellowmen, will reap for India a reward that will repay tenfold the bitter cost at which it has been purchased ?

You will forgive me, Gentlemen, for speaking in a strain that may seem to some to accord ill with the hard facts of life and the common atmosphere of politics. But I believe—and I think India believes—in the power of spiritual forces to assert themselves over their material expression, by which they may often be betrayed. And it is because of this belief that is hers and mine that I have ventured once more to trace out the only path along which India can lead her peoples to take their appropriate part in the fulfilment of the ordered purpose for humanity.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

The Assembly met in the Assembly Chamber at Twelve of the Clock, Mr. President in the Chair.

MEMBERS SWORN.

U. Hla Tun Pru, M.L.A. (Burma : Non-European) ;

Sir Alexander Robertson Murray, Kt., C.B.E., M.L.A. (Associated Chambers of Commerce : Nominated Non-Official).

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

DUTY REALISED ON SUGAR UNDER THE INDIAN TARIFF (AMENDMENT) ACT, 1925, FROM THE 1ST JUNE 1925, TO THE 30TH MARCH 1927.

477. Haji Abdoola Haroon : Will Government be pleased to produce accounts of the duty realized on sugar under the Indian Tariff (Amendment) Act, 1925, in comparison to the same as if it were realised in accordance with the previous practice of 25 per cent as from the 1st June 1925, and up to the end of the last official year, and show exactly what surplus has thereby been gained ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : The duty realised on sugar during the period 1st June, 1925, to 30th March, 1927, under the Indian Tariff (Amendment) Act, 1925, amounted to Rs. 13,05,08,390. Under the old rate of 25 per cent. during the same period it is estimated that it would have amounted to Rs. 8,25,43,068.

ALLEGED RUDE CONDUCT OF A GUARD AND A CONSTABLE TOWARDS INDIAN PASSENGERS ON THE NORTH WESTERN RAILWAY.

478. Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava : (a) Will the Government please state if any complaint by a gentleman of Panipat, Ambala Division, Punjab, was received by the Agent, North-Western Railway, and the Inspector-General, Government Railway Police, Lahore, regarding the rude treatment and abuse of powers by the guard of 23 Up of 4th July 1927 and a constable of the same train in respect of reserving a compartment occupied by some ladies at some intermediate station between Delhi and Ambala resulting in great discomfort and humiliation to the passengers concerned, of whom one was an invalid old lady and the other a pregnant lady ?

(b) If the answer is in the affirmative, will the Government state what action has been taken by the authorities in this matter ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) and (b). Government have no information. The gentleman seems to have taken quite the proper course in approaching the Agent.

† Not put at the meeting, owing to the absence of the questioner, but the questions and answers to them will be found at page 3541 of these proceedings.

OPENING OF THE BOOKING OFFICE AT DELHI OF THE METRE GAUGE SECTION OF THE BOMBAY, BARODA AND CENTRAL INDIA RAILWAY.

479. Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava : Is it a fact that the third class booking office at Delhi (Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway) metre gauge does not remain open in accordance with the rules, but that, to the great inconvenience and exploitation of the passengers concerned, it is generally opened only half an hour or so before the time of departure of trains ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Government have no information, but a copy of the question has been sent to the Agent of the Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway for such action as may be necessary.

ALLEGED HARASSMENT OF PASSENGERS BY THE TRAVELLING LUGGAGE INSPECTORS ON THE BOMBAY, BARODA AND CENTRAL INDIA RAILWAY.

480. Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava : Is it a fact that since some time the travelling luggage inspectors on the Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway metre gauge section, have become a source of great havoc, inconvenience, and trouble to illiterate passengers, poor peasants and ladies in so far that they try to extort money for themselves and sometimes overweigh the luggage and work on the fears of the passengers in other ways ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Government have no information, but a copy of the question has been sent to the Agent of the Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway for such action as may be necessary.

ALLEGED MUHAMMADAN FANATICISM IN DELHI AND THE NORTH-WEST FRONTIER PROVINCE.

481. Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava : (a) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to the piece of news appearing on page 1 of the Hindustan Times of July 30th under the heading " Victims of Rangila Rasul vendetta and Muslim fanaticism let loose " ?

(b) If so, do Government propose to inquire into the allegations and in case the inquiry has already been made to state how far the allegations contained in the report are correct ?

(c) What steps have the Government taken to protect the Hindus and Sikhs of the affected area and what punishment has been awarded to the offenders ?

(d) Are the Government aware that organised attempts are being made by some Mussalmans throughout India to inflame the public mind and incite Muslims to injure the Hindus under cover of the Rangila Rasul agitation, and that virulent and inflammatory speeches have been made by some Muslim leaders containing open threats of violence to the author of the book Rangila Rasul and the Hindus in general and advocating the boycott of Hindus ?

(e) Have the Government prosecuted so far any of the persons responsible for such speeches as clearly came within the ambit of Section 153-A., I. P. C. in the Province of Delhi and the North-West Frontier Province ?

Sir Denys Bray : (a), (b) and (c). I have seen the article. That it contains some exaggeration and misstatements will have been apparent from the statement I made on the 18th August.

To that statement, there is nothing, I think, which I can usefully add at present, except that the Pakhai and Zakha Afridi and the Shinwari Elders have invited the Hindus from their country to return, and have given a written guarantee not to molest them in any way if they do so. The Shinwari Hindus are about three-quarters of the total number of refugees now in Peshawar.

(d) Government are aware that the contents of the pamphlet and the acquittal of the publisher stirred strong feelings and gave rise to agitation in the course of which speeches of an extreme character were made in certain places.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : Are the Government convinced that this written guarantee will be observed ?

Sir Denys Bray : I hope so, Sir.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Are the Government aware that the decision of the High Court of the Punjab remains a dead letter and an obiter dictum as Justice Broadway's Judgment has confirmed the decision of the Allahabad High Court and therefore Justice Dalip Singh's ruling will have no application to any other case ?

Is it not a fact, Sir, that it remains a dead letter as an obiter dictum in the law report of the Punjab High Court ?

ALLEGED VILIFICATION OF HINDUS AND ARYA SAMAJISTS BY HASAN NIZAMI OF DELHI.

482. Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava : (a) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to the persistent campaign of vilification of Hindus in general and Arya Samajists in particular by Hussan Nizami of Delhi ?

(b) Has that gentleman ever been and is he at present in the employ of the C. I. D. of Delhi or any other Province ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a) The attention of Government has been drawn to an objectionable article published in a paper edited by Khwaja Hasan Nizami, for which he subsequently made a public apology.

(b) He is not and never has been in the employ of the Criminal Investigation Department of Delhi, and Government have no reason to suppose that he has ever been so employed in any Province.

UNFOUNDED ALLEGATIONS MADE BY HASAN NIZAMI AGAINST THE ARYA SAMAJISTS OF DELHI.

483. Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava : (a) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to a piece of news published in Hussan Nizami's paper Munadi to the effect that Arya Samajists adopted foul means of conversion so much so that a motor car containing girls with a placard " Choose and be converted " was paraded by them in the public streets of Delhi, which news Hasan Nizami was subsequently forced to own to be absolutely unfounded ?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to state its reasons for not prosecuting Hasan Nizami in this case ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a) Government have not seen the newspaper in question, but their attention was drawn to the incident.

b) In view of Khwaja Hasan Nizami's public apology and retraction of the statement made, no prosecution was thought necessary.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Would it not be for the benefit of the country if the writer of the article set out in the question No. 481, and also Maulana Hasan Nizami are prosecuted ? If the Public Prosecutor and the Government counsel on behalf of the Crown are instructed to move for the setting aside of the order of acquittal of the High Court Judge of the Punjab and, the writer of the article is retried for promoting class hatred, would it not be for the benefit of the country ? Maulana Hasan Nizami may be prosecuted as well to stop communal trouble and to bring about peace in the country ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : The Honourable Member's supplementary question refers to a question which has not yet been asked.

OBJECT OF THE PUBLICATION OF THE BOOK "RANGILA RASUL" AND THE ARTICLE "SAIR DOZAKH" IN THE "VARTMAN."

484. Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava : Will the Government state if it is a fact that the book Rangila Rasul and the article Sair Dozakh in the paper Vartman was written by way of reply to similar books Unnisvin Saddi ka Maharishi and the article Sair Din Va Dunia written by Muhammadan authors ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Government have no reason to suppose that this was the case.

PROSECUTION OF THE AUTHORS OF "UNNISVIN SADDI KA MAHARISHI" AND "SAIR DIN VA DUNIA", ETC.

485. Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava : Will the Government state if the authors of Unnisvin Saddi ka Maharishi and Sair Din Va Dunia have been prosecuted and the publication proscribed ; if not, why not ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : No. The authorities concerned did not consider that the effect of these publications was such as to call for the measures mentioned.

RESENTMENT OF THE HINDUS AND ARYA SAMAJISTS AT THE ATTITUDE OF GOVERNMENT IN THE MATTER OF COMMUNAL AND RELIGIOUS QUESTIONS.

486. Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava : Are the Government aware that there is a widespread feeling of dissatisfaction and resentment among the Hindus in general and the Arya Samajists in particular that the Government is not holding the scales even between the two communities in respect of various communal, religious questions specially with reference to prosecution, proscription of literature, and observance of Nagar Kirtans and Ramlilas ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Government are aware that allegations of this character have from time to time been made by members both of the Hindu and of the Muhammadan community. Such allegations are entirely without foundation.

RESTORATION OF CONFIDENCE AMONG THE HINDUS OF THE NORTH WEST FRONTIER PROVINCE.

487. Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava : Will the Government be pleased to state what steps they have taken to restore confidence among the Hindus of the North-West Frontier Province in general and of Kohat in particular after the riot of 1924 ?

Sir Denys Bray : In Kohat the City Police has been strengthened by 50 per cent. and at least 30 per cent. of the total strength in the City and Cantonments is composed of Hindus and Sikhs. At least one Hindu first class magistrate is always posted to Kohat, and there is also at present a Sikh District Judge and a Hindu Treasury Officer. Liberal loans were granted by Government for the rebuilding of houses and the restarting of business ; financial assistance was given for the rebuilding of the Dharamsala ; and the civil courts are showing consideration over terms of payment when granting money decrees against those who suffered in the riots. The good effect of these measures has been demonstrated by the calm atmosphere prevailing in Kohat during the recent tension elsewhere over the Rajpal case.

STRENGTH OF MUHAMMADAN POLICE OFFICERS IN THE NORTH-WEST FRONTIER PROVINCE, THE PUNJAB, DELHI, AJMER-MERWARA AND THE UNITED PROVINCES.

488. Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava : Will the Government be pleased to state the total number of Constables, Head Constables, Sub-Inspectors, Inspectors, Deputy Superintendents and Superintendents of Police separately in each of the Provinces of the North-West Frontier, the Punjab, Delhi, Ajmer-Merwara and the United Provinces, and what percentage of these posts is manned by Muhammadans as well as the percentage of Muhammadans in these posts with regard to the population bases in these Provinces ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I place on the table a statement showing the total number of constables, etc., in the North-West Frontier Province, Delhi and Ajmer-Merwara, and the percentage of Muhammadans among them. The last part of the Honourable Member's question is not very clear, and I am not sure what further information he desires.

Mr. G. M. Young : The Honourable Member is referred to the reply given to Diwan Chaman Lall's starred question No. 109.

TOTAL MUSLIM POPULATION OF INDIA SHOWING MALES AND FEMALES AND LITERATES AND ILLITERATES.

490. Khan Bahadur Makhdum Syed Rajan Bakhsh Shah : Will the Government please state the Muslim population in British India and how many of them are males and females, scholars and non-scholars ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : The Honourable Member is referred to Table VIII on pages 74-75 of Part II of the Census of India, 1921, Volume I, a copy of which is in the Library of the Assembly.

PROMULGATION OF AN ORDINANCE TO STOP SCURRILOUS ATTACKS ON THE FOUNDER OF ISLAM.

491. Khan Bahadur Makhdum Syed Rajan Bakhsh Shah : Do the Government propose to introduce an Ordinance stopping mean and scurrilous attacks on the Great Founder of Islam in future ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Government introduced a Bill on the 24th August, which is intended to have the effect among other things of preventing such attacks.

NUMBER OF INDIANS SELECTED FOR THE INDIAN CIVIL SERVICE FROM 1922 TO 1927.

492. Khan Bahadur Makhdum Syed Rajan Bakhsh Shah : (a) Will the Government please state the number of the Indians selected for the Indian Civil Service from 1922 to 1927 both in India and in England ?

(b) How many appointments have gone to the Muhammadans, the Hindus, the Sikhs and the Indian Christians ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a) The number of Indians, including Burmans, who have been selected since 1922 for the Indian Civil Service is 109.

(b) 10 appointments have gone to Muhammadans, 81 to Hindus, 2 to Sikhs and 7 to Indian Christians. The remaining 9 appointments have gone to Burmans.

Lieut.-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney : Will the Honourable Member kindly inform the House how many Anglo-Indians were admitted into the I. C. S. during this period ?

Mr. K. Ahmed : That question does not arise. (Laughter.)

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I must ask for notice of that question.

GRANT OF A LARGER NUMBER OF KING'S COMMISSIONS TO MUHAMMADANS.

493. Khan Bahadur Makhdum Syed Rajan Bakhsh Shah : (a) Will the Government please state the number of Muslims, Hindus, Sikhs and other Indians selected for the King's Commissions, from 1922 to 1927 ?

(b) If the representation of the Muhammadans in the said Commission is not in proportion to their population as compared with the Sikh representation (who are only 4 millions), do Government propose to make up the deficiency by recruiting them in greater numbers than before ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) As far as can be gathered from the Army Lists of the years in question, the answer is 20 Muhammadans, 15 Hindus, 15 Sikhs and none of other religions.

(b) Government do not consider the suggestion feasible.

NON-REPRESENTATION OF THE MUSLIMS OF THE PUNJAB IN THE POSTAL DEPARTMENT.

494. Khan Bahadur Makhdum Syed Rajan Bakhsh Shah : (a) Are the Government aware that the Muslims are 55 per cent. of the whole population in the Punjab ?

(b) Are the Government aware that the Muslims are not represented in the Postal Department according to their population ?

(c) If so, are Government prepared to direct the Director General of Post and Telegraph to recruit Muhammadans in proportion to their population ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) The correct figure is, I understand, 51.04 per cent. according to the Census of 1921.

(b) The proportion of Muslims in the Postal Department in the Punjab and North-West Frontier Circle is 47.82 per cent.

(c) The Government of India are not prepared to go beyond the general instructions already laid down for all Departments.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Will the Government be pleased to state what the instructions are ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : The instructions have on several occasions been referred to by the Honourable the Home Member in this House.

(Mr. K. Ahmed then put a supplementary question twice, but it was inaudible.)

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : I shall be obliged if the Honourable Member will put down that question.

Mr. K. Ahmed : It is not necessary to put it down, because it is so clear, and in the alternative it will remain a dead letter in the Standing Rules and Orders of this Assembly if it is not acted upon, that is to say, if questions are not answered.

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : I cannot find aything in my answer which can lead the Honourable Member to assume that the policy of the Government of India in the matter is not being given effect to.

Mr. K. Ahmed : But the rules and procedure of this House are being trodden down, that is to say, the Honourable Member is unable or will not answer what is called a supplementary question in clear terms.

RECRUITMENT TO THE ROYAL INDIAN NAVY.

495. Mr. N. M. Joshi : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state from which class they have selected men for the Royal Indian Navy ?

(b) Is it a fact that only Muhammadans are at present considered eligible for recruitment ?

(c) Are Government aware that on the western coast of the Bombay Presidency there are castes of Hindus who have been well known for their sea-faring qualities ?

(d) Is it a fact that the Government have refused to make recruitment from any of these Hindu castes ?

(e) Will the Government be pleased to explain the exclusion of Hindus from recruitment ?

(f) Are Government prepared to take the opinion of the Assembly on this question by a Resolution ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a), (b), (d) and (e). The Honourable Member is referred to the replies given to Mr. M. S. Aney's questions Nos. 321 to 324.

(c) The Government of India are aware that there are seafaring Hindu communities both on the Bombay coast and in other parts of the coast of India.

(f) The Government of India, in view of my answer to Mr. Aney's question No. 324, see no necessity to elicit a debate in the House by moving a Resolution.

INFLAMMATORY COMMUNAL WRITINGS IN A SECTION OF THE PUNJAB PRESS.

496. Mr. K. C. Roy : (a) Has the attention of the Government of India been drawn to the speeches made by the Honourable Sir Geoffrey deMontmorency and Mr. H. D. Craik in the Punjab Legislative Council on the 18th July last on the subject of inflammatory communal writings in a section of the Punjab Press ?

(b) Have the Punjab Government submitted any proposals, whether of a legislative or administrative character to deal with this problem ?

(c) If the answer to (b) be in the negative, will the Government of India be pleased to state if they have at all been addressed by the Punjab Government on the subject and if the reply be in the affirmative, will they be further pleased to place on the table of the Assembly a copy of the Punjab Government's letter on the subject ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a) I have seen reports of the speeches in the Press.

(b) and (c). A letter has been received and is under consideration. It is not proposed to lay a copy on the table.

INFLAMMATORY COMMUNAL WRITINGS IN THE VARIOUS PROVINCES.

497. Mr. K. C. Roy : Will the Government of India be pleased to state whether it has satisfied itself that the Provincial Governments have used their full resources in dealing with communal inflammatory writings in the various provinces ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : The Government of India are satisfied that Provincial Governments are fully alive to the evil caused by such writings and are using to the best advantage the power which the existing law gives them.

LENGTHS OF JURISDICTION OF DISTRICT TRAFFIC SUPERINTENDENTS AND EXECUTIVE ENGINEERS ON THE ASSAM BENGAL, THE EAST INDIAN, THE EASTERN BENGAL AND THE NORTH WESTERN RAILWAYS.

498. Mr. Srish Chandra Dutta : Will the Government be pleased to state the average area in miles over which District Traffic Superintendents and Executive Engineers are placed on the (1) Assam Bengal Railway, (2) the East Indian Railway, (3) the Eastern Bengal Railway, and (4) the North Western Railway ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : There are no longer Traffic or Engineering Districts on the East Indian and North Western Railways where the Divisional System has been introduced. On the Eastern Bengal Railway, though the Divisional System has not yet been introduced, the Transportation and Commercial work of the old Traffic Department has been separated, and apart from the Chitpur Yard the only remaining Traffic District is the Dacca District. This district is in charge of a District Traffic Superintendent and has a route mileage of 161. The average route mileage on the districts in charge of Open Line Executive Engineers on the Eastern Bengal Railway is 245. The average route mileage under District Traffic Superintendents and District Executive Engineers on the Assam Bengal Railway is approximately 273.

(At this stage Sir Victor Sassoon, wearing a top hat, entered the Chamber and took his seat without removing his hat.)

Mr. K. Ahmed : Sir, I rise to a point of order. Is an Honourable Member of this Assembly allowed to sit here with a top hat on ? (Laughter.)

Mr. President : Order, order.

ACCIDENT ON THE ASSAM BENGAL RAILWAY BETWEEN BARLEKHA AND LATU STATIONS.

499. Mr. Srish Chandra Dutta : Will the Government be pleased to publish the results of the enquiry held regarding the accident that occurred on the Assam Bengal Railway line between Barlekha and Latu stations to No. 10 down train on the night of the 30th March last ? What was the accident due to ? Is it the opinion of the experts that it is possible for carriages being severed from the train by a violent storm even though they may be securely chained ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Government do not consider it necessary to publish the results of the enquiry, but I am quite willing to show the Honourable Member the report if he will call at my office. The accident was due to a cyclone, and the answer to the last part of the question is in the affirmative.

INCONVENIENCES OF HIGHER CLASS PASSENGERS ON THE ASSAM BENGAL RAILWAY.

500. Mr. Srish Chandra Dutta : Are the Government aware that higher class passengers are subjected to much trouble and inconvenience on the Assam Bengal Railway line specially at night for want of accommodation owing to the Travelling Ticket Examiners being allowed to travel by second class ? If so, do Government propose to recommend providing more accommodation so that the passengers may not be subjected to any inconvenience ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Government have received no complaints to this effect, but a copy of the question and this answer will be sent to the Agent, Assam Bengal Railway.

†501.—503.

DISCONTINUANCE OF THE UPPER SUBORDINATE ENGINEERING SERVICE ON STATE RAILWAYS.

504. Mr. Mukhtar Singh : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state the time since when the upper subordinate engineering service has been discontinued in the Railway Department ?

(b) How many employees were serving in the different State Railways at the time when the upper subordinate service was discontinued ?

(c) Are there some rules made for the future prospects of the employees of this service as regards their promotion, allowance, etc.? Will the Government be pleased to place on the table a copy of these rules ?

(d) Since when has any increment not been given to the employees of this branch and how long is it not likely that they will be given any promotions ?

(e) Is there any objection to granting them the time-scale pay as in other branches of the service ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) No recruitment has been made to what was designated the State Railway Upper Subordinate Engineering Establishment since 1923.

*Not put at the meeting, owing to the absence of the questioner, but the questions and answers to them will be found at page 3542 of these proceedings.

(e) No definite rules have been laid down for the future prospects of the men in question. Promotion within the class of overseers is regulated according to the length of service and that to the other grades depends on the occurrence of vacancies. The men are also eligible for promotion to the Provincial Engineering service and the Indian Railway Service of Engineers.

Their allowances are regulated by the Fundamental and Supplementary Rules.

(d) The last promotions were made in August 1927. Further promotions will be made as occasion arises.

(e) Government do not consider it necessary to introduce a time-scale of pay for this class of subordinates.

Temporary Engineers in the Railway Department.

505. Mr. Mukhtar Singh : (a) How many temporary engineers have been employed in the Railway Department during the last three years ?

(b) Why were the men already in service not given any promotions to these posts instead of recruiting men from outside ?

(c) What is the nature of the work entrusted to them and what are their qualifications ?

(d) What is the amount of salary drawn by these temporary engineers and what is the amount of salary drawn by permanent men of the same qualifications ?

(e) How many employees are serving as temporary engineers for more than 10 years in the Railway Department ?

(f) Why are they not made permanent and attached to the cadre of different departments of service for which they are qualified ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a), (d) and (e). The Honourable Member will find the information which he wants in the Classified List of State Railway Establishment, copies of which are in the Library.

(b), (c) and (f). To supplement the permanent staff of engineers to the extent necessary to cope with survey, construction and special works, the volume of which is subject to fluctuation from year to year, engineers with acceptable qualifications are engaged on short term agreements. The employment of this temporary engineering staff does not affect the prospects of the permanent engineering staff ; on the contrary the expansion of the permanent cadre to meet these temporary needs would not only affect the prospects of the permanent staff unfavourably, but would expose members of the permanent staff to the risk of their services being terminated prematurely when the programme of such work is slowed down or is completed.

Restriction on the Playing of Music by Hindus in their Houses during the Muharram.

506. Mr. Mukhtar Singh : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state the places at which the authorities stopped the Hindus playing music in their own houses during the last Muharram days ?

(b) Did the Imperial Government issue any instructions on this point ? If so will the Government be pleased to place on the table a copy of such instructions ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a) The Government of India are not in possession of the information.

SUPPLY OF GHEE TO THE ARMY.

507. Mr. Mukhtar Singh : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state whether or not tenders are taken from the different firms who wish to supply ghee to the Army ? If the answer be in the affirmative were the tenders invited in 1926-27 ?

(b) If not, why was the general rule departed from and to whom and at what rate was the contract for the supply of ghee given ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) and (b). Tenders are invited from firms whose names are borne on the list of approved ghee contractors maintained by the Director of Contracts. In 1926-27, as an experimental measure of economy, ghee was obtained through a purchasing agent at actual cost to Government plus a small buying commission instead of on contract at fixed rates. Messrs. Pahlad Das Alopi Parshad and Company were appointed as the buying agents and the rate at which ghee was purchased was Rs. 79|7|0 per 100 lbs.

SUPPLY OF GHEE TO THE ARMY.

508. Mr. Mukhtar Singh : At what rate was the contract for the supply of ghee to the Army given in 1925-26 and in 1926-27 ?

Mr. G. M. Young : In 1925-26 the ghee cost Rs. 90 per 100 lbs. In 1926-27 the actual cost of ghee plus the agent's commission amounted to Rs. 79|7|0 per 100 lbs.

ANALYSIS OF THE DIFFERENT BRANDS OF IMPORTED GHEE.

509. Mr. Mukhtar Singh : Will the Government be pleased to state the method employed by the Military Department to ascertain that the ghee supplied is really ghee made from milk and is not adulterated by the imported artificial ghee ? Has the Military Department analysed the imported ghees of different brands and have they found out the method of distinguishing them from the natural product ? If so, will the Government be pleased to place on the table the analysis of the different brands and the method of distinguishing them from the natural product ? If not, do the Government propose to take steps to do it now ?

Mr. G. M. Young : The ghee tendered for acceptance is conditioned and sampled in the manner prescribed for analytical and other tests by the Military Food Laboratory. I am not myself aware of the precise methods employed, nor would it serve any public purpose to give technical details. The answer to the second part of the question is in the affirmative. It is not usual to disclose any analysis of the Military Food Laboratory and the Government see no reason to do so in this case. The information which the Honourable Member requires could be obtained from any competent analyst on payment of his fee.

Sir Victor Sassoon : Is artificial ghee less beneficial to the health than natural ghee ?

Mr. G. M. Young : I believe it to be the opinion of medical authorities that it is less beneficial. It is certainly less preferred by the sepoys who consume it.

PUBLICATION OF THE REPORT OF THE SUB-COMMITTEE OF THE INDIAN SANDHURST COMMITTEE WHICH VISITED EUROPE AND AMERICA.

512. Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : (a) Are Government aware that a Sub-Committee of the Indian Sandhurst Committee went to England, France, Canada, and the United States of America to study the military training institutions there ?

(b) Did the Sub-Committee receive oral evidence or written memoranda from military, educational, or other authorities in those countries on the points which it was required to study ?

(c) Did it submit its report and the information collected by it to the Indian Sandhurst Committee ? Did it recommend that its report and proceedings should be published ?

(d) Did the Indian Sandhurst Committee approve of their publication ?

(e) Did the report of the Sub-Committee form part of the report submitted by the Committee to the Government of India ?

(f) Has the Sub-Committee's Report been published ? If not, will Government be pleased to state the reasons for the suppression of the Sub-Committee's report ?

(g) Did Government modify the report of the Indian Sandhurst Committee in any manner before allowing its publication ?

(h) Will Government reconsider their decision and lay the Sub-Committee's report on the table ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) and the first part of (c). My Honourable friend will find the answer to his questions in paragraph 4 of the Indian Sandhurst Committee's Report.

(b) The Sub-Committee received in the course of their proceedings both oral evidence and written memoranda.

(c) Second part. The Report of the Sub-Committee contains no such recommendation, but I understand that the Sub-Committee made the recommendation to the Committee.

(d) It appears from the Committee's proceedings, as well as from an informal communication made to Government, that the Committee desired that the Sub-Committee's report should be published. Government were aware of this fact when they decided not to publish the report.

† Not put at the meeting, owing to the absence of the questioner, but the questions and answers to them will be found at pages 3542—43 of these proceedings.

(f) The principal reason was that the report of the main Committee was self-contained. The main Committee incorporated verbatim in their report such passages of the Sub-Committee's report as they thought necessary, but did not submit the Sub-Committee's report as a whole. Apart from this there were passages in the Sub-Committee's report which influenced the Government of India and His Majesty's Government in their decision not to publish it. The report of the Sub-Committee moreover was made to the main Committee, and not to the Government of India. It thus merely formed part of the material on which the Committee based their main report. It is not required for a proper understanding of the main report or it would doubtless have been submitted as part of the main report. For these reasons it has not been published.

(g) The Committee's main report was published exactly as it stood. It was not modified in any respect before publication.

(h) The answer is in the negative.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : How is it, Sir, that the Honourable Member stated the other day on behalf of Government that they were not aware of the fact that the Indian Sandhurst Committee had recommended the publication of the Sub-Committee's report and proceedings ?

Mr. G. M. Young : The Indian Sandhurst Committee made no such recommendation. As I have just stated, it appears from their proceedings that they desired the Sub-Committee's report to be published, but they did not make a recommendation to the Government that it should be published.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Were Government aware of the fact that there was a Resolution in the proceedings of the Committee recommending the publication of the Sub-Committee's report, when he answered a similar question before ?

Mr. G. M. Young : Sir, I was not aware of it then, and I am not aware of it now. I have perused the minutes of the Committee's proceedings and there is no such Resolution recorded.

Mr. M. A. Jinnah : May I ask whether the fact of a recommendation of the Sandhurst Committee regarding the publication of the report of the Sub-Committee and of the proceedings having been made would have weighed with the Government in deciding the question of publication of the report and the proceedings of the Sub-Committee ?

Mr. G. M. Young : I cannot answer a hypothetical question of that kind.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : May I know whether the Government received any communication from the Secretary of the Committee formally asking them that the report of the Committee should be published ?

Mr. G. M. Young : No, Sir. As I have already stated, it was an informal communication.

Mr. M. A. Jinnah : May I know if it is a fact that the Government decided not to publish the report of the Sub-Committee and the proceedings purely on the ground that they themselves considered it undesirable ?

Mr. G. M. Young : Sir, I have given in full the reasons why the Government of India decided not to publish the report of the Sub-Committee.

Mr. M. A Jinnah : Do I understand then that the decision had nothing whatever to do with the fact whether the Sandhurst Committee formally recommended its publication or not ? It had nothing whatever to do with that fact ?

Mr. G. M. Young : That, Sir, is the case. The fact that the recommendation, such as it was, was made in an informal manner made no difference at all. Government were aware that the Committee desired the publication of the report, and the mere fact that they had not stated that desire formally did not weigh with the Government in the least.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Sir, may I know whether the Honourable Member stated the other day on behalf of Government that it was His Majesty's Government that had stipulated that the material placed before the Sub-Committee should not be published, and how does he reconcile that reply with the reply which he has given to-day, namely, that not merely His Majesty's Government but also the Government of India are against the publication of the Sub-Committee's report and proceedings ?

Mr. G. M. Young : My Honourable friend, I think, is confusing, if I may say so, the material which was placed before the Sub-Committee by official representatives of His Majesty's Government and which formed part of the Sub-Committee's proceedings, with the Sub-Committee's report.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Am I to understand that while His Majesty's Government were opposed to the publication of the proceedings, the Government of India went further and opposed the publication of the report also ?

Mr. M. A. Jinnah : Do I understand the Honourable Member to state that any stipulation was made by anybody, either by the authorities or the witnesses who appeared before the Sub-Committee, that they were not to publish their proceedings, their materials or their evidence ?

Do I understand the Honourable Member to state on the floor of the House that any stipulation was made by anybody to this effect ?

Mr. G. M. Young : The Government of India are aware that that is the case ; and they also informed the Secretary of State that the Sub-Committee had stated that no stipulation was made to them and that they were not told that any part of the material laid before them was confidential. The stipulation was made by His Majesty's Government with the Government of India.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Are the Government of India aware that it is derogatory to the principle of spending the money of the tax-payer from the Indian Exchequer to appoint a Committee while not giving publicity to the report of the Committee ? Do Government realise that ?

REPORT OF THE AUXILIARY AND TERRITORIAL FORCES COMMITTEE.

513. Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Have the Government of India received a despatch from the Secretary of State for India announcing the orders of His Majesty's Government on the Auxiliary and Territorial Forces Committee's report ? If so, will they be pleased to lay the despatch on the table ?

Mr. G. M. Young : The Honourable Member is referred to the Resolution published in the Gazette of India on the 20th August. The Secretary of State's sanction to the Government of India's proposals was received by cable and contained no comments. Government do not propose to lay any correspondence on this subject on the table of the House.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : The Honourable Member has not answered the last part of my question about laying the correspondence on the table ?

Mr. G. M. Young : The Government will consider that.

SUPPLY OF RIFLES AND PRACTICE AMMUNITION TO THE UNIVERSITY TRAINING CORPS IN THE UNITED PROVINCES.

514. Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : (a) Which Universities and Colleges in the United Provinces have made arrangements for the safe custody of rifles ?

(b) Have service rifles been supplied for the members of the University Training Corps to those Universities and Colleges in the United Provinces, which have armouries, in accordance with the promise given by the Army Secretary during the Budget Debate on the 14th March, 1927 ?

(c) Has the quantity of ammunition supplied to the University Training Corps in the United Provinces been increased as was promised by the same authority ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) None at present, Sir, but the military authorities have the matter in hand. It is a question either of storing the rifles in the nearest military armoury, and conveying them under guard to the unit headquarters when required ; or of substituting armed and disciplined guards for unarmed chowkidars at the existing armouries in the Universities. The first course was found too inconvenient and expensive. The second is now being worked out.

(b) Service rifles have not yet been issued ; but they will be issued, in accordance with my undertaking, when adequate arrangements for their safe custody have been effected.

(c) If my Honourable friend will consult the record, he will find that I said that if the University Corps wished to fire more rounds, and if that feeling should make itself apparent, there was no desire on the part of Government to prevent anything of the sort. No representation has been received from any University or College in the United Provinces on the subject of practice ammunition.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : I did not catch the reply to the first part of the question. Did the Honourable Member say that no armouries had been erected anywhere ?

Mr. G. M. Young : No, Sir ; the armouries are for the most part in existence, but adequate arrangements have not yet been made to guard them.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Did the military authorities communicate that fact to the universities and colleges and tell them that, as soon as proper arrangements were made, they would get service rifles ?

Mr G. M. Young : No, Sir, it is not a question of the universities providing these armed guards ; the military authorities are going to do it themselves.

HAJ PILGRIMS.

515. Haji Abdoola Haroon : Will Government be pleased to state :

(a) How many Haj pilgrims returned to India out of the total number of pilgrims that went to the Haj during the years 1924, 1925 and 1926 ?

(b) How many return tickets were issued in all during the years 1924, 1925 and 1926 ?

(c) How many of those pilgrims who had taken return tickets in 1924, 1925 and 1926 died in the Holy Lands and never returned to India ?

(d) How many pilgrims kept deposits in the years 1924, 1925 and 1926 with the Government for their passage, etc., and what was the total amount of such deposits ?

(e) Whether these deposits have been returned to the pilgrims concerned ?

(f) How much interest was realized from these deposits and how were they spent ?

(g) Whether there is any amount remaining unclaimed with the shipping companies since the last three years ? If so, what is the total amount ?

(h) Whether there is any amount remaining unclaimed with Government since the last three years ? If so, what is the total amount ?

(i) How much per cent. is deducted by the Agents of the shipping companies at Jedda while allowing a refund of the difference of passage fare between single and return tickets to the pilgrims who do not return to India ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : The information has been called for from the Local Governments concerned and will be supplied to the Honourable Member when received.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Is the Honourable Member not aware of the fact that before his arrival, his predecessor, on behalf of the Government in this Assembly, promised in this House to supply a list of Muhammadan pilgrims to Jeddah who did not return to India after they had purchased their return tickets and paid for them ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : I am not aware of the undertaking to which the Honourable Member refers. I made an investigation into our records and did not find any such undertaking.

Mr. K. Ahmed : In view of the fact that it is such a long time since Mr. Bhore was in this Assembly, when he had promised to supply a list of pilgrims and the arrival of the Honourable Member to fill his place here ....

Mr. President : Mr. Haroon.

COST OF RETURN TICKETS TO JEDDAH.

516. Haji Abdoola Haroon : (a) Are Government aware that during the year 1927 the Companies issued tickets at Rs. 195 return to Jeddah which was the maximum fixed by the Government ?

(b) Are Government aware that during the War when the rates of freight were enormously advanced and the cost of running steamers was very high, return tickets were issued at Rs. 125 which was the maximum fixed by Government ?

(c) Do the Government propose a reduction of the passage fare now and to fix the maximum at Rs. 150 ?

Mr. G S. Bajpai : (a) The price of return tickets varied from time to time. In Bombay the maximum was Rs. 195 and the minimum Rs. 100. In Karachi the maximum was the same as in Bombay and the minimum Rs. 70. In Calcutta a maximum of Rs. 235 and a minimum of Rs. 210 were charged. No rates were fixed by Government.

(b) The price of return tickets during the War was Rs. 125 per pilgrim but was not fixed by Government.

(c) No.

Mr. K. Ahmed : In view of the fact that the price of the ticket has been unnecessarily put up, much higher than the rate which was paid before, do Government propose to take steps to minimise the amount of the rates for the tickets to Jeddah ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : I am not quite sure as to whether the Honourable Member has any particular figure in mind, or whether he wants Government to take action to fix minima. If the latter is his idea, then I would refer him to the proceedings of the Select Committee which discussed the Bill to amend the Indian Merchant Shipping Act. The Committee definitely came to the conclusion that it was not in the interests of the pilgrims to fix minima figures ; and if the Honourable Member would look at the figures which I supplied in reply to part (a) of the question, he will find that the Committee's conclusion was correct. At one stage return tickets were sold for Rs. 100 last season.

Mr. K. Ahmed : In view of the fact that the Honourable Member is perfectly in a position to know the figure and it is for the benefit of pilgrims going to Jeddah that the Government of India must intervene, so that .....

Mr. President : Order, order. The Honourable Member is not putting a supplementary question but is making a speech. Mr. Shervani.

† Not put at the meeting, owing to the absence of the questioner, but the question and answer to it will be found at pages 3543—44 of these proceedings.

INFORMATION AND DATA RELATING TO WAGES.

518. Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas: Will Government be pleased to get information and data up to the latest date available to them for the whole of India on the lines of the chart submitted by Mr. Gennings on wages to the Royal Commission on Indian Currency and Finance, as appearing on page 364 of Vol. II, Appendices, to the said Commission's Report ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai: The attention of the Honourable Member is invited to paragraphs 65 and 67 of the Report of the Indian Economic Enquiry Committee, which show that wage statistics are unreliable in some places and non-existent in others. Cost of living indices exist for a very few places only. The Government of India regret, therefore, that it is not possible to obtain reliable information and data for the whole of India on the lines required by the Honourable Member.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas: Is the Honourable Member aware that the table to which I refer does not contain figures about the whole of India at all, but only contains figures regarding Bombay city and the urban areas in the Bombay Presidency ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai: I have seen, Sir, the report to which the Honourable Member refers and I am aware of the fact that it compares the wages and cost of living for Bombay only. If the Honourable Member wishes that we should get information in regard to Bombay only, I shall certainly consider the suggestion and communicate with the Government of Bombay with a view to getting it.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas: Under the circumstances, Sir, nothing more appears feasible.

CANCELLATION OF THE CITIZENSHIP OF 45 INDIANS NATURALISED IN THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.

519. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh: (a) Are Government aware that the United States Supreme Court has rejected the application of the United States Solicitor General, who petitioned to the Supreme Court that the decision rendered in favour of Mr. Sakharam Ganesh Pandit, Attorney-at-Law, of Los Angeles, by the Circuit Court of Appeals at San Francisco, California, be reviewed by the Supreme Court ?

(b) Do Government propose to ascertain whether it is a fact that the United States Courts have already cancelled the citizenship of about 45 Hindus, who were naturalized before ?

Sir Denys Bray: (a) Yes, Sir.

(b) According to Government's information the number is about 30.

ACCIDENTS IN MINES DUE TO WORKMEN SLEEPING IN DANGEROUS PLACES.

520. Mr N. M. Joshi: (a) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to a statement in the Report of the Chief Inspector of Mines for 1925, that some accidents resulting in deaths had taken place on account of the workmen having gone to sleep in dangerous places ?

(b) Do the Government of India propose to enquire whether these accidents were not the result of long hours of work in mines ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) Yes.

(b) An enquiry is being made, though Government have no reason for believing that hours of work in mines are unduly long.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I know how Government conclude that they have no reason to believe that the hours of work in mines are not long ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : That conclusion, Sir, is based on reports received from the Inspectors of Mines.

Diwan Chaman Lall : How do the hours of work in mines in India compare with the hours of work in mines in Great Britain ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : That, I submit, does not arise out of the question. If the Honourable Member wants to have that information, I shall be glad to supply him with it, but the fact that the comparison may be unfavourable to the Indian mines does not prove that the hours of work of the latter are by themselves long.

Diwan Chaman Lall : May I ask what the test is as to the hours of work being too long ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : The test, Sir, is that there is a limit to the number of hours which a miner may work every week.

Diwan Chaman Lall : May I ask the Honourable Member whether he does not mean that a miner can work for 24 hours out of the 24 hours ? Would he consider 24 hours not too long ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : I should consider 24 hours to be unusually long, because I know that a miner could not possibly work 24 hours.

Diwan Chaman Lall : Would he consider 8 hours too long ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : I should certainly not consider 8 hours to be long.

Diwan Chaman Lall : May I take it that the Honourable Member means that he would consider 8 hours work too long ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : I should not I said.

Diwan Chaman Lall : Will the Honourable Member try to work in a mine for 8 hours and see.....

Mr. President : Order, order.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I ask whether the fact that the miners go to sleep in the mines is not indicative of the long hours of work in the mines ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : That, Sir, does not follow necessarily.

PENALTIES IMPOSED ON OFFENDERS CONTRAVENING THE INDIAN MINES ACT.

521. Mr. N. M. Joshi : With reference to the Appendix III to the Report of the Chief Inspector of Mines for 1925, are Government prepared to request the Chief Inspector to give in the statement in his future

Reports the nature of the penalties imposed upon the offenders by the Magistrates or Judges ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : The information is already given in section IV of the letter-press of the Report.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : Does the Honourable Member suggest that the information regarding the penalties and the amount of fines levied on these people is given ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : I believe so, Sir.

AVERAGE WAGES PAID TO PERSONS EMPLOYED IN INDIAN AND BRITISH MINES.

522. *Mr. N. M. Joshi : (a) Is it a fact that the Report of the Chief Inspector of Mines for 1925, gives on page 3 comparative figures of the average output of coal per person employed in Indian and British mines ?

(b) Are the Government of India prepared to request the Chief Inspector of Mines to give also the comparative figures of the average wage paid per person employed in Indian and British mines ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) Yes.

(b) Some particulars of wages in Indian mines have been given in recent reports and an endeavour is being made to collect further information regarding wages with a view to publication. Government do not consider it necessary to publish figures relating to wages in British mines, which are given in English reports.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I ask whether Government do not consider it to be unfair to the miners in India that there should be a comparison made as regards production and not as regards wages ? The report of the Chief Inspector of Mines makes a comparison about the production of the British miners and the Indian miners ; at the same time there is no comparison made as regards wages paid in Great Britain and in India.

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : At that particular place in the report to which the Honourable Member refers the Chief Inspector of Mines is only comparing production ; he is not from that trying to draw any conclusion. If my Honourable friend or anybody else wants thereafter to draw any conclusions, it is open to him to compare the miner's wages in India with the miner's wages in England ; the latter is always available from the reports of the Ministry of Labour in England.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I ask, Sir, whether the public which read these reports does not draw any conclusions ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : The public which wants to draw conclusions are in a position to get the complete information.

LOAN TO THE NAWAB BAHADUR OF DACCA.

525. *Mr. K. C. Neogy : (a) With reference to my question No. 182 in the Legislative Assembly on the 19th of February, 1921, and answer to clause (b) thereof, will Government be pleased to state how much of the loan to the Nawab Bahadur of Dacca is yet outstanding ?

(b) What are the circumstances in which the said loan was advanced, and on what terms ?

(c) What are the reasons for not transferring the said loan to the account of the Government of Bengal ?

(d) Have Government received any definite assurance as to the period of time during which the loan will be repaid ? At what rate approximately per year has the principal amount due been repaid so far ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : (a) Rs. 6,18,356 on 31st March, 1927.

(c) The loan was not transferred to the Government of Bengal as it was not considered part of the Provincial Loan Account.

(d) Government expect that the loan will be repaid in 1952, but they are unable, without making enquiries from the local authorities, to furnish information as to the repayment of principal.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Were the circumstances referred to in (b) and (c) of a political nature ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : Government regret that they are not prepared to furnish the information asked for.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : May we know why Government are not prepared to furnish the information ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : I cannot add anything to my statement.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : What rate of interest does this loan carry ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : I am afraid I do not know ; I shall enquire.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : May I ask whether loans to notabilities under clause (4) of the Provincial Loans Fund are part of the Provincial Loans Fund Scheme ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : I have explained that it is not on provincial loan account.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : May I know why, Sir ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : Sir, I am afraid I cannot add anything to the statement that Government regret that they are not prepared to furnish any more information.

Mr. K. Ahmed : In view of the fact that at my instance a Resolution was passed in this Assembly in the year 1924, in the month of January, I believe, that when a question is asked in this Assembly it is for the Member on behalf of Government to answer and not to refer it to a Local Government, as has been stated by the Honourable the Finance Member, do Government propose to answer the question in full to the satisfaction of the Members of this House ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : I did not refer to any Local Government, but I gave a clear answer to the question— it may not have been a satisfactory answer to the Honourable Member. I suggest to him that if he expects us to answer all his supplementary questions, Mr. Joshi and Mr. Chaman Lall would be objecting to my being overworked for 24 hours a day.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Is it a fact that the rate of interest at which the loan was advanced is much lower than the rate at which Government have been borrowing at the present moment ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : I have already stated that I do not know ; I will enquire.

Mr. B. Das : Is it not a fact that this loan was given to the Nawab of Dacca for his help to Government during the Partition movement in 1904-06 ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : I am entirely unable to answer this question In any case, even if I were in a position to answer it, I regret to say I could not.

Mr. B. Das : Is it a fact that the Nawab of Dacca is only a zamindar and that there is no political question arising out of this loan ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : I am afraid I must ask for notice of further questions that may be put. I have exhausted all my ingenuity in answering these supplementary questions.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Will Government inquire and find out from the Local Government as to when this loan is expected to be repaid ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : I have already given that information.

Mr. D. V. Belvi : Sir, may I ask question No. 523 standing in my name ?

Mr. President : I am afraid the Honourable Member is too late. He must take his opportunity last.

INQUIRY INTO THE ADMINISTRATION OF THE IMPERIAL LIBRARY, CALCUTTA.

526. Mr. K. C. Neogy : (a) Is it a fact that a departmental inquiry was recently made into the administration of the Imperial Library and connected questions ?

(b) If so, will Government be pleased to state the scope of the said inquiry and its results ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : (a) Yes.

(b) The enquiry was made with reference to the present condition and future of the Library. The report of the committee of enquiry is under the consideration of the Government of India.

Mr. B. Das : Will Government be pleased to consult this House before they take any steps for the transfer of the control of the Imperial Library to any Local Government as a result of the recommendations that may be made by the Committee ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : I can only undertake to consider the suggestion, Sir.

REVISION OF THE PAY OF POSTMEN, OVERSEERS, BRANCH POSTMASTERS, ETC.

527. Mr. M. R. Jayakar : Will Government be pleased to state when they expect to be able to issue orders regarding the revision of the pay of postmen, overseers, branch postmasters, etc, at certain first class areas in India, provision for which was sanctioned during the last Session of the Legislative Assembly ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mira : The orders were issued on the 27th July 1927

GRADING OF CERTAIN SORTING POSTMEN AT POONA HEAD OFFICE AS SORTING CLERKS

528. Mr. M R. Jayakar : Are Government aware that, for the last five years, sorting postmen at Poona Head Office have been doing sorting work for the Railway Mail Service of the same nature as the clerks in the Railway Mail Service, and that notwithstanding the same they are still receiving the emoluments of sorting postmen only and not of sorting clerks ? If so, do Government propose to grade them now as sorting clerks and give them the pay of the clerks in the grade ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : Government are informed that the sorting postmen of the Poona Head Post Office do only such sorting work in connection with the delivery or despatch of postal articles as forms part of their ordinary duties prescribed by departmental rules. The question of bringing them on to the clerical cadre does not, therefore, arise.

GRIEVANCES OF BRANCH POSTMASTERS.

529 Mr. M. R Jayakar : Are Government aware that branch postmasters are often kept acting either as clerks or sub-postmasters for a number of years and are then reverted to their substantive appointments as branch postmasters on the ground that they have not passed the prescribed test examination ? Are Government prepared to consider the desirability of doing away with such test examinations in cases where branch postmasters have acted as clerks or sub-postmasters for a number of years ?

Mr. H A Sams : Government are not aware of the fact stated by the Honourable Member, but information on the point has been called for.

DISCONTINUANCE OF THE PRACTICE OF MAKING READERS IN THE POST OFFICES IN BOMBAY CITY SIGN AS ESCORTS TO POSTMEN.

530. Mr. M R. Jayakar : In view of the Government's reply to question No. 490 put on 18th February 1927 during the last Session of the Assembly that " the practice of making Readers in the Post Offices in Bombay City, sign as escorts to postmen when actually they are not allowed to escort, is being discontinued ", will Government be pleased to state if they have since issued any orders in that respect ? If not, when will Government issue the necessary orders ?

Mr. H. A. Sams : Orders were issued on the 5th March last discontinuing the practice.

CASUAL LEAVE OF SORTERS OF THE RAILWAY MAIL SERVICE.

532. Mr. M. R. Jayakar : (a) Are the Railway Mail Service sorters entitled to have the concession of casual leave up to the maximum period of 20 days in the course of an official year without having to make any payments for the same ?

(b) What was the average number of days of casual leave enjoyed per sorter attached to the Bombay Record Office during the year 1926-27 ?

(c) What was the total amount paid by these sorters for casual leave during the year 1926-27 ?

(d) Were any orders issued to the Divisional Superintendent asking that savings should be effected by keeping the Record Office staff below strength ?

(e) What was the saving effected by Government by so keeping the said establishment below strength ?

Mr. H. A. Sams : The information has been called for and will be furnished to the Honourable Member in due course.

REFUSAL TO GRANT CASUAL LEAVE TO A DELEGATE FROM THE BOMBAY RECORD OFFICE TO ATTEND MEETINGS OF THE ALL-INDIA POST AND R. M. S. CONFERENCE.

533. Mr. M. R. Jayakar : (a) Is it a fact that on three successive occasions a delegate from the Bombay Record Office to the sessions of the All-India Post Office and R. M. S Conference was compelled to take privilege leave in order to be able to attend the Conference, because the Department refused to grant him casual leave without payment of double duty ?

(b) Is it a fact that this case was brought to the notice of the Director General in 1925 ? If so, what action did he take in the matter ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : The information has been called for and will be furnished to the Honourable Member in due course.

NUMBER OF SOVEREIGNS RESERVED BY THE CONTROLLER OF CURRENCY SINCE THE DEMONETISATION OF THE SOVEREIGNS IN MARCH LAST.

540. Mr. N. C. Kelkar : Will Government state the number of sovereigns that were paid back to the Controller of Currency direct or through Government Treasuries in exchange for gold bullion therein or its equivalent since sovereigns were demonetised in March last ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : 65 sovereigns were received at their bullion equivalent up to the 31st July 1927.

INFORMATION RELATING TO THE IMPERIAL BANK OF INDIA.

541. Mr. N. C. Kelkar : Will Government lay on the table a statement showing for the last three years 1924, 1925, 1926

(1) the rate of dividend declared or paid to the shareholders of the Imperial Bank,

(2) the total amount of Government balances used by the Imperial Bank each year free of interest,

(3) the average rate of interest at which loans were given or advances made to its customers by the Bank

(a) against Government paper or other securities,

† Not put at the meeting, owing to the absence of the questioner, but the questions and answers to them will be found at pages 3544—47 of these proceedings.

(b) on personal security,

(c) against deposit of gold, etc.,

(d) against commercial goods pledged or pawned with the Bank ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : (1) 16 per cent. per annum.

(2) Government balances are deposited with the Imperial Bank of India free of interest. The amount of these balances on the last day of every month for the three years will be found in paragraph 18 (page 13) of the Report of the Controller of the Currency for 1926-27. It is impossible to say what proportion of these were used by the Bank as they are not held separately from other deposits. Paragraph 24 of the Report, however, shows the amount of the cash balances of the Bank during the same period.

(3) Paragraph 26 of the above Report gives the bank rate during the year, that is to say, the rate at which the Imperial Bank of India will ordinarily advance money against Government securities and the hundi rate, or the rate at which it will discount or rediscount first class three months' bills. The rates for previous years are also given in previous Reports. Other rates fluctuate according to the character of the borrower and the nature of the credit.

METHOD OF WRITING DOWN OF THE STORES BALANCES OF RAILWAYS.

542. Mr. N. C. Kelkar : (a) Referring to the value of stores balances mentioned on page 20 of the Railway Administration Report for 1925-26, will Government be pleased to say whether the value of stores is written down according to the market, or at book value ?

(b) Is the reduction noticeable altogether on account of actual quantities held in stock having gone down, or merely a matter of value or both ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Market price.

RECRUITMENT OF INDIANS FOR THE OFFICE OF CONTROLLERS OF STORES OF THE VARIOUS STATE RAILWAYS.

543. Mr. N. C. Kelkar : (a) Will Government be pleased to state the qualifications and the nature and amount of service of each of the present holders of the office of Controller of Stores of the various State Railway lines ?

(b) How many Indians occupy this position ?

(c) What efforts have been made to recruit Indians for this purpose ?

(d) When can Indians be expected to fill these places as things are at present ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Controllers of Stores are selected from officers already in State Railway service and with experience either in the Stores or other Departments of the Railways. The nature and amount of service of the present holders of these appointments is given in the History of Services of Officers of the Indian State Railways, a copy of which the Honourable Member will find in the Library.

(b) None at present.

(c) and (d). As has been explained, the office of Controller of Stores is not filled by direct recruitment but by selection from officers already in railway services. The steps taken to secure the recruitment of Indians to those services are explained in the Railway Department's Resolution, No. 2058-E., dated 15th July, 1927, which is published in Part I of the Gazette of India, dated the 17th July, 1927.

PURCHASE OF STORES FOR STATE RAILWAYS.

544. Mr. N. C. Kelkar : (a) Will Government be pleased to state what machinery they have provided for the stores required by State Railways to be purchased in India ?

(b) Did Sir Charles Innes promise that such stores would be purchased through the Indian Stores Department ?

(c) What is the percentage of the total purchases of imported stores by the State Railways which was bought in India ?

(d) Is it true that though the Indian Stores Department have pointed out on many occasions that certain things could be purchased in India, the purchasing officers have not paid any regard to it and have continued to indent from London ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Stores for the State-managed Railways are purchased either through the Stores Departments of the Railways or through the Indian Stores Department.

(b) No. The position was fully explained by Sir Charles Innes in his speech in this House on the 24th February, 1927.

(c) Of the imported stores bought by the State-managed Railways in 1926-27, the latest year for which figures are available, 47 per cent. were bought in India.

(d) No. Since September 1926 the recommendations of the Indian Stores Department have been accepted in 137 out of 150 cases, and in the remaining 13 cases the Indian Stores Department after full discussion with the Railway Board decided that the action taken by the Railway Administrations did not conflict with the principles enunciated in the rules for the purchase of articles for the public service.

GROSS REVENUE, TONNAGE HANDLED AND THE MILEAGE OPEN TO TRAFFIC IN RESPECT OF RAILWAYS FOR THE YEARS 1922-23 AND 1926-27 RESPECTIVELY.

545 Mr. N. C. Kelkar : (a) Will Government be pleased to state the gross revenue, the tonnage handled, and the mileage open to traffic for the year 1922-23 and for the year 1926-27 ?

(b) Why are the reductions recently made in freight charges so small compared with the full rise in freight during the post-war conditions ?

(c) Have the Rates Advisory Committee been asked to look into the question of general freight levels and to report on the same ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) The information which the Honourable Member desires will be found in Statements Nos. IX, VIII and IV, respectively, in Volume II of the Report by the Railway Board on Indian Railways for the year 1922-23, copies of which will be found in the Library. Similar information for 1926-27 is still under preparation, and a copy of Volume II of the Report for 1926-27, containing this information, will be placed in the Library when published.

(b) Considerable reductions have been made in passenger fares and in coal rates. The financial position of Indian Railways has not yet permitted further reductions in goods rates.

(c) No. The Rates Advisory Committee were appointed to investigate cases falling under certain categories when submitted to them, and a general investigation into the question of freight levels does not fall within their functions.

Training of Indians in the Mechanical Department and Loco Services of Railways.

546. Mr. N. C. Kelkar : (a) Are Government aware that the terms for the training of Indians as apprentices in the Mechanical Department and Loco. Services have been regarded as unsatisfactory by the respective candidates ?

(b) For how many years must a man be apprenticed before he can become a full-fledged engineer ?

(c) Why is a longer period fixed in India than the corresponding period fixed in the United Kingdom ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) No.

(b) It is presumed that the Honourable Member is referring to the apprentices recruited in India for the superior service of the Mechanical Engineering Department. If so, the answer is 7 years.

(c) The period is on the whole no longer than the corresponding period in England, if both theoretical and practical training are taken into account.

Number of Officers drawing Rs. 500 and over in the Service of State Railways, including the Railway Board.

547. Mr. N. C. Kelkar : (a) Will Government be pleased to state the number of officers, whose substantive salary is Rs. 500 or more, in the service of Indian State Railways including the Railway Board ?

(b) How many of these are Indians ?

(c) What steps are taken to increase the number of Indians ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) and (b). The information is available to the Honourable Member in the Classified List of State Railway Establishment, copy of which will be found in the Library.

(c) The attention of the Honourable Member is invited to the Railway Department's Resolution No. 2058-E., dated 15th July, 1926, published in the Gazette of India, dated the 17th July, 1926.

NUMBER OF NEW RECRUITS IN THE LOCO ENGINEERING SERVICES ON STATE RAILWAYS.

548. Mr. N. C. Kelkar : (a) Will Government be pleased to state the total number of new recruits in the Loco. Engineering Services on State Railways during the year 1926-27 ?

(b) How many of these are Indians ?

(c) What is the percentage recommended by the Lee Commission and was this percentage adhered to ? If not, why not ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Two.

(b) One. Six Indian apprentices were also engaged.

(c) I must draw the attention of the Honourable Member to the exact terms of the Lee Commission's recommendation. It ran as follows :

"We are strongly of opinion that the extension of the existing facilities should be pressed forward as expeditiously as possible in order that recruitment in India may be advanced as soon as practicable up to 75 per cent. of the total number of vacancies in the railway departments as a whole, the remaining 25 per cent. being recruited in England."

This recommendation is being carried out.

EXPENDITURE BY THE GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY ON ADVERTISEMENTS IN GREAT BRITAIN.

549. Mr. N. C. Kelkar : (a) Will Government be pleased to state what sum has been spent by the Great Indian Peninsula Railway on advertisements in the United Kingdom since January last ?

(b) Will Government ask the Agent for an explanation as to why advertisements should be given in the United Kingdom on such scale ?

(c) What are the advantages which Government expect from such advertisements by a particular railway ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) I have made enquiries and will let the Honourable Member know.

(b) and (c). The Great Indian Peninsula Railway is the first Indian Railway to establish a Publicity Department with the object of increasing railway travelling generally and in order to attract tourist traffic which is not only profitable to railways but a potential source of income to the people of India ; it did not confine its advertising efforts to India but extended them to the United Kingdom, America and Canada. The benefit from their efforts was not, of course, confined to the Great Indian Peninsula Railway but was shared by other railways over which the tourists travel ; and early this year the Railway Board established a General Publicity Department for all State Railways with headquarters at Bombay, the Great Indian Peninsula Railway's Publicity Department being absorbed in it. I should like to add that the activities of this Department are not restricted to the attraction of tourists but extend to the encouragement of railway travelling generally.

EXPENDITURE ON THE PURCHASE OF UNDERFRAMES FOR STATE RAILWAYS.

550. *Mr. N. C. Kelkar : (a) What is the amount spent by State Railways on underframes during each of the years from 1921 to 1926-27 ?

(b) Do Government propose to manufacture underframes at the Peninsular Locomotive Company's works at Tatanagar ?

(c) Has any representation been received on the subject from the Engineering Association ?

(d) Do Government expect to manufacture underframes in their own shops cheaper than they can buy them ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : (a) I have not got the exact figures, but the approximate amounts spent by State-managed Railways on broad gauge coaching underframes are :

1921 22	13½ lakhs.
1922-23	20½ lakhs.
1923-24	19¼ lakhs.
1924-25	8¾ lakhs.
1925-26	36 lakhs.
1926-27	45 lakhs.

(b) Yes.

(c) A representation has been received from the Indian Engineering Association which raises the question of the use to which the Peninsular Locomotive works will be put.

STEEL WORK FOR THE ELECTRIFICATION OF THE BOMBAY, BARODA AND CENTRAL INDIA RAILWAY AND THE GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY.

551. *Mr. N. C. Kelkar : (a) Is it true that steel work for the electrification of the Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway and the Great Indian Peninsula Railway has been imported and bears a duty of only 2½ per cent. ?

(b) Why was not local enterprise for the erection of the steel work requisitioned ?

(c) Was the duty on fabricated steel 25 per cent. and did it subsequently become 17 per cent. ? Is it a fact that imported articles are allowed under the head of electrical goods to come in at 2½ per cent. ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Yes.

(b) Local labour has been used entirely for the erection of the steel work. As no firms in India have had experience in this work and the erection had to be carried out over lines on which trains were running, it was considered desirable to place the order with a firm having experience of similar work in other countries.

(c) Yes.

REPORT REGARDING THE WORKING OF THE CONVENTION FOR THE SEPARATION OF RAILWAY FROM GENERAL FINANCES.

552. *Mr. N. C. Kelkar : (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether they promised an enquiry into the working of the convention of the separation of railway from general finances in September 1924 ?

(b) What steps do Government propose to take during the Session to institute this enquiry ?

(c) Are Government aware that they have not yet carried out their promises in the matter of the appointment of an Indian to the Railway Board and in the matter of purchases of stores in India by rupee tender,—promises which were made at the time when the Assembly consented to this convention ?

Mr A. A. L. Parsons : (a) No. The agreement was that the arrangements for separation should be provisionally tried for at least three years.

(b) The position of Government was explained by Sir Charles Innes in his speech on the 22nd of February last. What he said was this :

"If there is any general desire in the House that the whole question should be brought under review again the House may take it from me that the Government will not stand in its way. I myself would prefer to wait for some time longer. For one thing I think we have got to give time to this great experiment to work itself out. In the second place, Sir Arthur Dickson's report may have a considerable bearing on this question, and for that reason I should prefer myself to wait for some time longer before-re-examining the whole subject. But as I have said, if the House is anxious to have the whole matter brought under review I myself will certainly see that the Railway Board does begin a preliminary re-examination of the subject."

(c) No promises made by Government at the time the Assembly consented to the separation convention have not been carried out. The position of Government with regard to the matters mentioned by the Honourable Member was made perfectly clear by Sir Charles Innes at the time.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : Will the Honourable Member let us know when Sir Arthur Dickinson's report will be available to this House ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I hope it will come by this mail—I have not yet received the mail. I am expecting it by any mail now.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : When it does reach the Government of India, will it be made available to the Members of this House ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I cannot give an unqualified promise, but I do not see any reason why it should not be made available. I think I have already promised to give it to the members of the Standing Finance Committee for Railways immediately it is received.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : Will it be made available to the House ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I have no reason to believe that it will not be possible to make it available to the House. But I cannot give an unqualified promise before I have seen it myself.

Mr. B. Das : With reference to the answer to part (c), will the Government be pleased to let the House know why they have not come to any decision about the purchase of stores in India by rupee tenders ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : Sir, I will have to give a complete reply on the subject with reference to a question which will come before the House later on. But I may tell my Honourable friend over there that as I explained, I think in March last, a decision has been arrived at by Government on the subject. We are now trying to work out detailed rules to give effect to that decision. That is naturally taking a certain amount of time, because several Departments of Government are involved. But we are hoping to complete the framing of these rules in the near future.

Mr. B. Das : Did it not take over four years for Government to come to a decision on the question of rupee tenders ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : That may have been on the general question.

ISSUE OF FREE PASSES ON THE VARIOUS STATE RAILWAYS.

553. Mr. N. C. Kelkar : (a) Will Government be pleased to state how many free passes have been issued on the various State Railways (first, second and third class) ?

(b) To what class of men are these passes issued and for what period of time and what are the privileges attached to them ?

(c) How many persons, not in the service of Railways, are enjoying these passes and what is the consideration for the passes ?

(d) What is the total money value of these passes ?

Mr A. A. L. Parsons : The information asked for in the question is not available and to compile it in the form the question is put would involve so much labour that Government do not propose to obtain it.

WITHDRAWAL OF THE NOTIFICATION DECLARING THE CHOTA NAGPUR DIVISION AND OTHER AREAS IN BIHAR AND ORISSA AS BACKWARD TRACTS.

554. Mr. Ram Narayan Singh : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state whether they have taken any steps with regard to the Resolution passed by the Indian Legislative Assembly on Thursday, the 10th February 1927, about the withdrawal of the Notification declaring the Chota Nagpur Division and other areas in the Province of Bihar and Orissa as backward tracts and, if so, what ?

(b) Is it a fact that the Government have asked the Bihar Government to submit a report and their opinion about this matter and if so, when and with what result ?

(c) Have the Government got any means to test the accuracy of the reports of the Provincial Government and if so, what ? If not, why not ?

(d) Will the Government be pleased to state whether they are prepared to accept and give effect to the resolution ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a) Government have not taken any action except that which was indicated in the answer given to question No. 885 on the 12th March 1927.

(b) No such report has been called for.

(c) Does not arise.

(d) Government do not propose to take any further steps in the matter.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : May I know, Sir, if Government have merely forwarded the Resolution with the debates to the Secretary of State or have also added their own recommendations to it ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I must have notice of that question.

Mr. Ram Narayan Singh : May I take it, Sir, that the Government do not care for the Resolution passed by the Legislative Assembly ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Will the Honourable Member kindly repeat his question ?

Mr. Ram Narayan Singh : May I take it, Sir, that the Government do not care for the Resolution passed by this Assembly ?

Mr. President : Will the Honourable Member proceed to the next question ?

Mr. Ram Narayan Singh : My supplementary question has not been answered.

Mr. President : The Honourable Member himself knows what effect Government give to the Resolutions passed by this Assembly from time to time. Will the Honourable Member proceed to the next question ?

STOPPAGE OF THE BOMBAY MAIL AT KODARMA.

555. Mr. Ram Narayan Singh : (a) Are the Government aware that the Kodarma station on the Grand Chord line is the centre of the mica industry in the province of Bihar and Orissa ?

(b) Is it a fact that the Bombay Mail does not stop at Kodarma these days ? If so, why ? Are the Government aware of the loss suffered by the mica merchants there from this change ?

(c) Is it a fact that the Mail stops at Gajhandi only the next station after Kodarma ? If so, will the Government state in detail the reason for the mail stopping at Gajhandi ?

(d) Are the Government aware that the people engaged in the mica industry have made a great grievance of it ? Are the Government prepared to consider this grievance of the people there ?

(e) Will the Government be pleased to give the figures of the first class passengers booked from each and every station on the Grand Chord line, when the Mail used to stop at Kodarma also ?

(f) Is there any objection to arranging that the Bombay Mail may stop at Kodarma instead of at Gajhandi ? If so what is the objection ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Yes.

(b) The time table shows that the Bombay Mails do not stop at Kodarma. Regarding the remainder of this question Government have no information.

(c) The time table shows that the Mail does not stop at Gajhandi.

(d) to (f). It is quite impossible for Government to undertake the arrangement of time tables. A copy of the question and this reply will be forwarded to the Agent of the Railway.

†556*.

RAILWAY EMBANKMENTS AND FLOODS IN GUJARAT AND ORISSA.

557. Mr. B. Das : Will Government be pleased to state to what extent the havocs of floods are enhanced by railway embankments in the Districts of Gujerat (Bombay) and Cuttack in Orissa ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Government have received no report that the havoc caused by the recent floods in either of the districts mentioned has been enhanced by railway embankments.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : Are Government aware that in the Broach district in the most affected taluka, it is generally believed that the havoc is partly due to the reason stated in the question ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I have not received any report to that effect so far.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : Will the Government please call for a report from the Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway about their Broach Jambusar line ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : We shall in any case get a report in regard to the breaches of the railway there, and I presume we shall obtain information on the point mentioned by the Honourable Member.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : Will that report be made available to the House ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I cannot say until I have seen it.

PROVISION OF THE RAILWAY EMBANKMENTS IN THE CUTTACK DISTRICT WITH PROPER BRIDGES, CULVERTS AND SLUICES.

558. Mr. B. Das : (a) Is it not a fact that in the Cuttack District the flood water has been on a very high level on the west side of the railway lines of the Bengal Nagpur Railway and that on the east side at low level ?

(b) Is it not a fact that the flood water cannot be drained off for want of sufficient waterways provided in that Railway ?

(c) Are Government aware that villages and agricultural lands have been submerged in those flood affected areas because the railway embankments have not been provided with proper bridges, culverts and sluices ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : From reports so far received it appears that the railway line has been breached over a distance of about 11 miles mostly north of the Baitarani River by the bursting of the Baitarani dam, the line being entirely submerged, the bank in most places completely washed away, one bridge of 5 spans of 40 ft. girders destroyed and other bridges damaged. My Honourable friend will realise that it is not practicable to provide waterways sufficient to pass the great volume of water discharged on the sudden bursting of a dam of the size—Baitarani dam is 20 miles long ; but in any case there is at present no evidence that the existence of a railway embankment in any way added to the area submerged.

† Not put at the meeting, owing to the absence of the questioner, but the question and answer to it will be found at page 3547 of these proceedings.

STATISTICS RELATING TO THE LENGTH OF WATERWAYS PROVIDED ON EACH RAILWAY, ETC.

559. *Mr. B. Das : (a) Have Government any statistics as to the total length of waterways (bridges, culverts, sluices, etc.) provided in every Railway and will Government be pleased to lay a statement on the table shewing the length of waterway originally provided in each system of Railways and the percentage of increase to those waterways as a result of pressure of Provincial Governments and the Central Government during the last five years ?

(b) Is it not a fact that large alterations have been made in the waterways of the North-Western Railway, East Indian Railway and Eastern Bengal Railway during the last five years to allow flood water and rain water to drain away quickly ?

(c) Will Government be pleased to state if the Railway Board propose to revise the designs of their waterways to allow proper drainage of flood and rain waters ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Government have no statistics showing the length of waterways provided on each railway, but the total length is probably about 300 miles. I am unable to accept the Honourable Member's suggestion that the provision of extra waterways, where they have been provided, during the last five years has been due to pressure by Provincial and Central Governments and not to the efforts of Railway Administrations themselves ; or to give, without imposing on Railway Administrations an amount of investigation and compilation quite incommensurate with their value, the statistics for which he asks in the latter part of this question. The position is that in localities where the original bridging has been found insufficient extra waterways have been provided but the total length of these extra waterways is no doubt a very small percentage of the total waterways originally provided on the 40,000 of miles of railways in India.

(b) Not so far as I am aware, but I am making inquiries and will let the Honourable Member know the result.

(c) It is not so much a question of revising the design of bridges, culverts and sluices, as of seeing that sufficient passage is allowed for the drainage of flood and rain water. The measures which the Railway Board and Railway Administrations take to secure this were fully described by Sir Clement Hindley in his speech in this House on the 24th September 1924.

Mr. H. Ahmed : In view of the fact that the Honourable Member and his predecessor—I think it was Sir Clement Hindley—in 1924 promised that sufficient passages would be provided in the constructions of the future railway lines, do Government propose now to make inquiries and in future take proper steps, so that sufficient water passages may be provided in the construction of new lines ?

1 P.M.

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I am very uncertain whether I have correctly caught the gist of my Honourable friend's question, but we do take steps whenever a new line is being constructed, in consultation with local authorities, to provide if possible for sufficient waterways to carry off all flood water.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Is the Honourable Member aware that from the report of the local authority on the Eastern Bengal Railway, Mr. Ganga Ram—the Engineer's report, I believe—in 1924 it was answered in the same terms, that in future constructions of railways sufficient waterways would be provided ? The construction of the North Bengal Railway will be taken up within a short period, because we have passed the amount of expenditure for new constructions in the last Session. Do Government propose to allow sufficient passage for water to pass through, so that the homesteads and huts of the poor people in the villages may not be submerged by floods again ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : On this occasion, Sir, I am perfectly certain that I have not caught even the gist of my Honourable friend's question.

INQUIRY BY THE ROYAL AGRICULTURAL COMMISSION INTO THE CAUSES OF FLOODS AND DISTRESS CAUSED THEREBY.

560. Mr. B. Das : (a) Will Government be pleased to state if the Royal Commission on Agriculture will inquire or are inquiring into the causes of floods and distress caused thereby to the agriculturist class as a whole ?

(b) Has any estimate been made of the money value of the loss suffered by agriculturists from floods all over India during the last five years ? If so, what is it ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : (a) It is for the Royal Commission to interpret their terms of reference. The question of the causes of floods and distress caused thereby has not been specifically referred to them.

(b) No.

Mr. B. Das : May I ask the Honourable Member if he does not think it the work of the Department of Agriculture to inquire into the economic losses to the agriculturist due to these floods ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : I would refer the Honourable Member to the division of subjects between the Central Government and the Local Government. He will find from it that this work is primarily the concern of the Local Government and not of the Government of India.

Mr. B. Das : Will the Honourable Member invite the attention of the Provincial Governments to this and ask them to inquire into the economic losses of the agriculturist, in view of the fact that they are not taking any interest in the matter of ascertaining economic losses to the masses ?

MEMORIAL RELATING TO THE CONSTRUCTION OF SANCTIONED AND NEW LINES IN THE KARNATAK.

523. Mr. D. V. Belvi : Will Government be pleased to state if :

(a) a memorial signed by about 5,000 residents of the Karnatak has been received by the Railway Board requesting the Government to expedite the construction of the sanctioned lines and to commence new lines in the various Districts of the Karnatak ;

(b) any steps have been taken by Government to expedite the construction of the six lines as mentioned in the memorial ;

(c) any action has been taken by Government to survey the two proposed new lines, viz., (1) Hubli-Karwar-Mangalore line, (2) Mysore-Mercarra-Mangalore line, as asked by the memorialists ;

(d) it is a fact that the Bagalkot-Ilkal Branch of the proposed Nippani-Ilungund line is abandoned ;

(e) any of the proposed six lines will be commenced before the end of this year ;

(f) the Gadag-Wadi-Raichur line has still a chance of being constructed ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Government have received a memorial asking for the early construction of six lines, investigations into which have, in the past, been made, but none of which have been sanctioned for construction. The memorialists also asked that two new lines, not yet examined, should be constructed.

(b) Two out of the three lines lying in British territory are now re-investigated. The other three lines pass through Indian States.

(c) A survey is being undertaken for a line from Mangalore to Malapi. The examination of a further extension of this line northwards will depend to some extent upon the results of this survey. The second line passes through an Indian State.

(d) No. The project is being re-investigated by the Madras and Southern Mahratta Railway Administration.

(e) It is not likely that the results of the surveys will be received in time to allow of construction being commenced before the end of this year.

(f) Government have no information on the subject. The line passes through an Indian State.

LEE COMMISSION'S PROPOSALS IN REGARD TO THE INDIAN MEDICAL SERVICE.

Mr. G. M. Young : I am grateful to you, Sir, for this opportunity to correct a statement which I made on Thursday last in reply to one of many supplementary questions to question No. 369 about the Lee Commission's proposals in regard to the Indian Medical Service. I said that no more Indian officers are now recruited to the Indian Medical Service on a temporary basis. It is true that the number of temporary officers is not being enlarged ; but is, on the contrary, being reduced in proportion as officers are appointed to permanent commissions in the service. Normally, therefore, no more officers would be appointed to temporary commissions. But I find that instructions were issued last year by Army Headquarters to local military authorities to terminate in future the contracts of temporary officers when they have served for nine years. That means that other temporary officers have to be recruited in their places, though the total number of temporary officers remains affected. I was not aware of these instructions when I spoke. They were issued last year when I was serving in another Department. I gather that there is some feeling about them in certain quarters of this House and elsewhere. That being so, I propose to re-examine the question ; though of course I can give no undertaking that the instructions will be either reversed or modified.

QUESTIONS NOT PUT AT THE MEETING, OWING TO THE ABSENCE OF THE QUESTIONER, WITH ANSWERS TO THE SAME.

NUMBER OF INDIAN OFFICERS IN THE TRAFFIC AND LOCOMOTIVE SERVICE OF THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY DRAWING MORE THAN RS. 500 PER MENSEM.

474. Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan : Will the Government be pleased to state :

(a) the total number of officers in the Traffic and Locomotive service of the East Indian Railway drawing more than Rs. 500 per mensem ?

(b) the number of Indians out of the total number ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) and (b). The information is available to the Honourable Member in the Classified List of State Railway Establishment a copy of which will be found in the library.

THE ROYAL AIR FORCE IN INDIA.

475. Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan : (a) What is the total strength of the Royal Air Force in India ?

(b) Is it a fact that the cost of the Royal Air Force in India amounts to over a crore and three quarters a year and is met out of the revenues of India ?

(c) Is it a fact that the Royal Air Force is a unit of the Imperial Forces and not part of the Indian Army ?

(d) If the answers to (b) and (c) are in the affirmative, do Government propose to move the authorities concerned in the interest of India to make the Royal Air Force in India a part of the Indian Army or to have the cost of the Force met from the British Exchequer ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) The sanctioned establishment of the Royal Air Force in India is 227 officers, 1,777 British other ranks and 202 personnel of the Indian Technical Section.

(b) and (c). I would refer the Honourable Member to the answer I gave on February 26th last to Sir Hari Singh Gour's question No. 614.

USE OF STATIONERY FOR MEMBERS OF THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

476. Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan : Will Government please state whether the stationery supplied in the writing room for the use of the Members of the Assembly is meant exclusively for writing matters connected with the Assembly business, or also for writing private letters ?

Mr. W. T. M. Wright : The stationery supplied in the writing room may be used for any correspondence which Members may desire to conduct while on the Assembly premises.

INCREASE IN THE MAXIMUM RATE OF THE INDIAN INCOME-TAX.

501. Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan : Will Government be pleased to state the reasons why the maximum rate of Indian income-tax increased steadily from 12 pies in the rupee to 18 pies in the rupee, while the British income-tax rates for the same period decreased from 6 shillings in the £ to 4 shillings in the £ (As shown in the statement laid on the table in reply to starred question No. 616 on the 26th February 1927) ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : If the Honourable Member will make his comparison between pre-war conditions and the present time, he will find that the main difference between the position in India and the position in Great Britain in this matter is that the British tax was raised more early and more steeply than the Indian ; and that the subsequent reduction in the British tax still leaves the net increase in Great Britain much the same as the increase in India, while the actual rate in Great Britain is of course very much higher.

ANNUAL INCREMENT OF SECOND DIVISION CLERKS OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA SECRETARIAT.

502. Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan : 1. (a) With reference to Government reply " A further representation has been received and is under consideration " to starred question No. 619 (7), (8), and (10) on 26th February 1927, regarding the annual increments of men in the second division of the Government of India Secretariat, will Government please state if they have come to any decision ?

(b) If so, will they please communicate the result to the House ?

2. Will Government please lay on the table a complete list of the establishment for the second division of the Government of India Secretariat ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a) Yes.

(b) The prayer was rejected.

2. I would refer the Honourable Member to the reply given on the 8th March 1924 to his question No. 603.

DEPARTMENTAL STANDING COMMITTEES.

503. Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan : (a) Has the information asked for in starred question No. 743, on 7th March 1927, re Departmental Standing Committees been collected ?

(b) If so, will Government please lay a copy of the information so collected, on the table for the information of the House ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a) and (b). The information regarding departmental Standing Committees asked for by Mr. Aney has been supplied to him. It is being furnished to the Honourable Member also.

GRIEVANCES OF LUGGAGE PORTERS AT HOWRAH.

510. Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan : (a) Referring to Government reply " Government are awaiting the Agent's report in the matter " to starred question No. 661 (c) and (d) on the 1st March, 1927, re Grievances of luggage porters at Howrah, will Government please state if they have received the report ?

(b) If so, will they please communicate the result to the House ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Yes.

(b) All begari has been stopped.

The license fee paid by the porters has been reduced to Rs. 5 per month.

The rate of 2 annas per load at Howrah has been reduced to 1½ annas.

ABOLITION OF THE Begari OR FREE LABOUR SYSTEM ON THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.

511. Khan Bahadur Saifaraz Hussain Khan : (a) Was the Begari system or free labour system sanctioned by the Agent, East Indian Railway in April, 1921 or at any other time ?

(b) If so, is the system still in force ?

(c) Is it a fact that the Agent has of late issued instructions that the Begari system be abolished ?

(d) If so, will Government please state if the system has now been absolutely abolished ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) The Honourable Member is referred to items (a) and (b) of the reply given to question No. 663 asked by Mr. N. M. Joshi in this Assembly on the 1st March, 1927.

(c) and (d). Yes.

CONTRACTS FOR REGIMENTAL INSTITUTES.

517. Mr. T. A. K. Shervani : (a) Is there any provision in the rules for the management and control of Regimental Institutes that only contractors on the approved list of the Army Headquarters should be given the contract ?

(b) If so, is it a fact that this provision was made solely to guard against the deterioration of the canteen service by the admission of unexperienced hands ?

(c) Are Government aware that this practice is now being departed from and that contracts in the Northern and Western Commands are being allotted indiscriminately ?

(d) If so, what steps, if any, have the Government taken to stop this practice in the interests of the troops ?

(e) Are Government prepared to rule that great care should be exercised in the selection of contractors and that in the interests of troops the Government should restrict the number of contracts to be given to a particular person, so as to be compatible with efficiency and to have the benefit of personal supervision ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) Yes.

(b) The object of the provision is to prevent contracts being given to persons who are not approved.

(c) The answer is in the negative. Contracts are allotted with discrimination, and the name of each contractor is submitted to Army Headquarters for approval.

(e) Great care is taken in the selection of contractors, with a view to efficiency and the need for adequate personal supervision.

STAMPING OUT OF SLAVERY IN SOME OF THE OUTLYING TERRITORIES SITUATED CLOSE TO THE BURMESE FRONTIERS.

524. Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan : 1. Will Government please give some detailed information of the measures taken by Government to stamp out slavery in some of the outlying territories situated close to the Burmese Frontiers (vide the address of His Excellency the Viceroy to the Members of the Assembly on the 24th January 1927) ?

2. Will Government please state if slavery still exists in any of the backward or hilly places in India ?

Sir Denys Bray : Full and accurate accounts of the two anti-slavery expeditions despatched last cold season into the outlying parts of Northern Burma have appeared in the Press and it is hardly possible to add to them within the scope of an answer. One expedition entered the Hukawng Valley and Naga Hills and emancipated the few slaves which the expedition of the previous year had been unable to reach. The other traversed the barely explored area known as the Triangle and emancipated 4,000 slaves. These operations were carried out with much skill under arduous conditions but unhappily not without loss of life, Captain West, Lance Naik Agam Singh and Zawng Ze, peon, having been killed in an ambush.

2. Yes, in certain unadministered and in some cases still unexplored areas in Burma and Assam.

RE-APPOINTMENT OF MESSRS. MATHEWS AND MCGUIRE, INSOLVENTS, BY THE EASTERN BENGAL RAILWAY.

534. Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan : (a) Referring to Government reply " Government have no information, but are making inquiries ", to unstarred question No. 122, re re-appointment of Messrs. Mathews and McGuire, insolvents, by the Eastern Bengal Railway, will Government please state if the enquiries have been completed ?

(b) If so, will they please communicate the result of the inquiries to the House ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : A copy of the letter in which Mr. Amar Nath Dutt was supplied with the information asked for in his unstarred question No. 122 on 1st March 1927 is laid on the table.

COPY OF A LETTER FROM THE SECRETARY TO THE RAILWAY BOARD, TO MR. AMAR NATH DUTT, M.L.A., NO. 486, DATED THE 25TH MARCH 1927.

With reference to the question No. 122 asked by you in the Legislative Assembly on the 1st March 1927, I am directed to state that Government have made enquiries and the following information is furnished :

(a) The reply is in the affirmative.

(b) Mr. Mathews was adjudicated insolvent on 17th July 1925 and was allowed to resign his post. On an application submitted by Mr. Mathews to the Calcutta High Court the adjudication order was annulled on 2nd February 1926, vide High Court Notification in the Gazette of India, Part II, dated 27th March 1926, page 418. Mr. Mathews therefore on re-employment was no longer insolvent.

(c) The matter of insolvency and habitual indebtedness is dealt with in paragraph 16 of the Government Servants' Conduct Rules.

(d) Mr. McGuire was not removed from service solely on the ground of indebtedness. Other factors were, continued unsatisfactory working, overstaying leave without permission and insubordination on several occasions.

DECISION OF THE PRIVY COUNCIL IN THE CASE OF GANESH LAL vs. KHETRA MOHAN MAHAPATRA.

535. Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan : (a) With regard to the decision of the Privy Council in the case of Ganesh Lal v. Khetra Mohan Mahapatra, will Government please state if they have come to any decision as to the desirability of their taking action in the matter [vide Government reply to the starred question No. 682 (c) on the 1st March 1927] ?

(b) If so, will they please communicate their decision to the House ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Government have decided to take no action until they see how the Courts in India view the judgment of the Privy Council.

NUMBER OF INDIANS EMPLOYED AS WIRELESS OPERATORS.

536. * Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan : Will the Government please state :

(a) Why out of the total number of 26 men recruited to work as wireless operators only one is an Indian ?

(b) The names of the 26 men recruited, their qualifications and their pay ?

(c) How many of the 26 men were ex-service men and how many departmental ?

Mr. H. A. Sams : (a) Presumably the Honourable Member refers to the selection of 24 not 26 telegraphists from the Traffic Branch of the Department, made at the end of June last, for training in Wheatstone wireless working. 24 telegraphists were selected, of whom 13 are Indians.

(b) A statement giving the particulars required will be handed to the Honourable Member.

(c) No ex-service men were selected ; all the men were departmental telegraphists.

ALLEGED ASSAULT ON AND DISMISSAL OF SUKH LAL, AN EMPLOYEE OF THE BENGAL NAGPUR RAILWAY WORKSHOP AT KHARAGPUR.

537. Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan: (a) Has the report asked for from the Agent regarding the alleged assault on and dismissal of Sukh Lal, an employee of Bengal Nagpur Railway Workshop at Kharagpur, been received (vide Government reply to starred question No. 753 on 7th March 1927) ?

(b) If so, will Government please lay a copy of the report on the table ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons: A copy of the letter in which the Agent's report was communicated to Rai Bahadur Tarit Bhusan Roy with reference to his starred question No. 753 on 7th March, 1927, is laid on the table.

COPY OF A LETTER FROM THE SECRETARY, RAILWAY BOARD, TO RAI BAHADUR TARIT BHUSAN ROY, M.L.A., NO. 4646-E., DATED THE 29TH APRIL 1927.

With reference to the reply given to your question No. 753, dated the 7th March, 1927, in the Legislative Assembly, I am directed to state that the following report has been received from the Agent, Bengal-Nagpur Railway :

> "An employee named Sukhlal was asleep under a wagon during working hours. It is not a fact that he had an attack of sun-stroke, nor was he pulled out by his hair.
> It is correct that he was subsequently dismissed for unsatisfactory working, fault having been found with him on several previous occasions."

RULES FOR THE GRANT OF PASSPORTS TO PERSONS ENTERING INDIA FROM NEPAL, BHUTAN, ETC.

538. Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan: (a) Are there no rules relating to passports for persons entering India by land except through the Chaman, Khyber, and Nushki routes, as indicated by Government in their reply to unstarred question No. 177 on 7th March 1927 ?

(b) If so, do Government propose to make rules relating to passports for persons entering India from Nepal, Bhutan, and other main north-eastern routes ?

Sir Denys Bray: The answer to both parts of the question is in the negative.

NUMBER OF POLITICAL DETENUS SUFFERING FROM TUBERCULOSIS.

539. Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan: Will Government please state :

(a) How many out of the total number of political detenus are suffering from tuberculosis ?

(b) If it is a fact that tuberculosis patients are kept in the same ward ?

(c) If tuberculosis patients are given especial facilities regarding their diet and freedom of action in chosing physicians of their own liking for their treatment ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : No detenus in jails are known to be suffering from tuberculosis. One has been placed under observation, but tuberculosis has not been diagnosed. Two detenus who are not confined in jails are suspected of suffering from tuberculosis. They are in a position to arrange their own diet and choose their own doctors.

STARTING SALARIES OF GRADUATES AND MATRICULATES IN THE CLERICAL ESTABLISHMENT OF THE NORTH WESTERN RAILWAY.

556. Mr. Harchandrai Vishindas : (a) Will Government be pleased to state what are the starting salaries of graduates and matriculates in the clerical establishment of the North Western Railway Department ?

(b) Do Government observe any distinction between the salaries of graduates and other employees in the clerical establishment on the North Western Railway ?

(c) If not, why not ?

(d) Do Government hold any competitive examination for every vacancy to be filled ?

(e) If not, do the Government intend to do so in future ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Government have no information.

The method of recruitment and appointment of clerks are left entirely in the hands of the Agent.

UNSTARRED QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

CONSUMPTION OF COAL ON THE MAJOR INDIAN RAILWAYS.

53. Mr. K. C. Neogy : Will Government be pleased to state what is the aggregate tonnage of coal consumed during the last two years by the major Indian railways for the purposes indicated below, the figures for each railway being shown separately :

(a) running of mail and fast expresses,

(b) running of passenger trains,

(c) running of goods trains,

(d) shunting ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I have sent a statement to the Honourable Member giving such information as is available.

COALS SUITABLE FOR THE REQUIREMENTS OF THE MAJOR INDIAN RAILWAYS.

54. Mr. K. C. Neogy : Will Government be pleased to lay on the table a statement showing the coals, described with reference to the collieries in which they are mined, which met the requirements of each of the major Indian railways under each of the following heads, during the last two years :

(a) running of mail and fast expresses,

(b) running of ordinary passenger trains,

(c) running of goods trains, and

Mr. A. A L. Parsons : I regret that it is not possible to supply the information for which the Honourable Member asks as, in the first place, no record is maintained by railways of the particular services on which coal from each colliery is used and, even if this information was available, it would not be possible to say if it met the requirements of the railway.

USE OF COAL RAISED IN COLLIERIES OWNED BY STATE RAILWAYS ON THE COMPANY-MANAGED RAILWAYS.

55. Mr. K. C. Neogy : (a) Is it a fact that the coal raised in the colliery of one State Railway is used for others ? If so, will Government furnish particulars of all such recent instances in point ? Will Government be pleased to state how the quota of each railway is determined when a colliery is jointly owned by two or three railway owners ?

(b) Is it a fact that the coal raised in collieries owned by State Railways is used on the Company-managed Railways ? If so, will Government furnish particulars of such instances in point occurring within the last two years ? On what basis is the price for such coal charged ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Coal raised in the colliery of one State Railway is, when necessary, allotted to other railways. The following allotments have been made for the year 1927-28 :—

1,20,000 tons from the East Indian Railway Giridih Colliery to the North-Western Railway.

1,20,000 tons from the East Indian Railway Giridih Colliery to the Great Indian Peninsula Railway.

12,000 tons from the East Indian Railway Giridih Colliery to the Eastern Bengal Railway.

1,72,000 tons from the Great Indian Peninsula Railway Kargali Colliery to the East Indian Railway.

1,53,800 tons from the Great Indian Peninsula Railway Kargali Colliery to the Eastern Bengal Railway.

The division of the colliery output of jointly owned collieries is fixed by agreement when the collieries are acquired.

CONSTRUCTION BY THE BOMBAY, BARODA AND CENTRAL INDIA RAILWAY OF SPECIAL ENGINES TO SUIT THE CONSUMPTION OF SECOND CLASS COAL.

56. Mr. K. C. Neogy : Is it a fact that the Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway constructed some special engines three or four years back to suit the consumption of second class coal thereon ? If so, will Government be pleased to state wherein exactly lies the speciality of such locomotives ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway as an experiment obtained delivery of two passenger and two goods locomotives in 1924 which were larger than their previous standard types. These locomotives are provided with larger fire grates than has been usual on Indian locomotives and can therefore burn some second class coals with less loss of efficiency or economy than certain other types of locomotives.

CAPITAL OUTLAY MADE BY THE PROPOSED RAILWAY COLLIERY IN TALCHUR FIELD AND IN RELIGARI-DARI.

57. Mr. K. C. Neogy : Will Government be pleased to say what is the amount of capital outlay so far made by the proposed railway colliery in Talchur field and in Religari-dari ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The information asked for is being obtained from the Railway Administrations concerned and will be furnished to the Honourable Member when received

PRICE PER TON OF COAL PURCHASED FOR THE RAILWAYS FOR EACH YEAR FROM 1906-07 TO 1926-27.

58. Mr. K. C. Neogy : Will the Government be pleased to state what average price per ton was paid for coal purchased for the Railways, the figure being worked out for each year from 1906-07 to 1926-27 ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I am afraid I am unable to give the Honourable Member the information in the exact form in which he has asked for it since it has not been collected in that form in our statistics. But he will find full details of the average cost per ton of both foregn coal and Indian coal consumed from 1906-07 to 1925-26 in the Administration Reports of Railways. The average pit's-mouth rate for coal purchased by State-managed Railways in 1926-27 was Rs. 5-2-0 per ton.

EXEMPTION FROM ASSESSMENT TO INCOME-TAX OR SUPER-TAX OF THE PROFITS OF TRADING SET APART FOR CHARITABLE OR RELIGIOUS PURPOSES.

59. Seth Jamnadas : (a) Is it a fact that profits of trading set apart for charitable or religious purposes are, under the existing practice, not exempt from assessment to income-tax or super-tax ?

(b) If so, are Government aware of the discontent prevailing among the mercantile and other classes who, pursuant to custom prevalent in the country from time immemorial, invariably set apart for charitable or religious purposes part of the profits of trading and apply them for purposes charitable or religious in the localities concerned ?

(c) Are Government prepared to consider the question of exempting such income from liability to income-tax or super-tax ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : (a) To some extent the answer to this question would apparently depend on the circumstances.

(b) and (c). The matter is at present before a High Court—or likely to come before a High Court. The Government will consider the question when that Court has decided it.

INSTRUCTIONS TO AN INCOME-TAX OFFICER TO COLLECT A CERTAIN AMOUNT OF INCOME-TAX FROM HIS CIRCLE.

60. Seth Jamnadas : (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether an Income-tax Officer is departmentally instructed to collect a certain amount of income-tax from his circle ?

(b) If so, are Government prepared to stop this practice ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : The Government can hardly believe that any officer would issue such orders which would obviously be most improper and entirely illegal. I should be obliged if the Honourable Member would give me a concrete instance if he knows of any.

REMISSION OF THE INCOME-TAX ON "NAZARANA" REALISED BY LANDLORDS FROM THEIR TENANTS.

61. Seth Jamnadas : (a) Are Government aware that the Income-tax Officers in some places have assessed tax on "Nazarana" realised by landlords from tenants for transfers of holdings or other licences ?

(b) If this is a fact, have Government considered the question of remitting the amount of tax so realised on the ground that this is an income derived from agriculture ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : (a) and (b). It has been held by the Calcutta High Court that "Nazarana" is agricultural income and is therefore not liable to income-tax. The Government have no reason to suppose that Income-tax Officers or Assistant Commissioners have overlooked the ruling, but the Central Board of Revenue will make enquiries.

EXEMPTION FROM INCOME-TAX OF INCOME REALISED FROM THE SALE OF LAC.

62. Seth Jamnadas : (a) Will Government be pleased to enquire and state whether at some places the Income-tax Officers have taxed the income from the sale of lac which lac growers themselves propagated and prepared for the market ?

(b) If so, are Government prepared to take steps to save such income from taxation on the ground that it is included in agricultural income ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : (a) and (b). Whether income from the sale of lac is income from agriculture or not would depend on the facts of each case. If the Honourable Member or any one in whom he is interested is dissatisfied with the principles at present applied I would suggest that the facts should be stated to the Central Board of Revenue.

AMOUNT OF COURT-FEES LEVIED IN THE CASE OF INCOME-TAX APPEALS.

63. Seth Jamnadas : (a) Are Government aware that some appellants in income-tax appeals affix insufficient court-fees for want of proper information on the subject causing some delay in the disposal of their appeals ?

(b) Are Government prepared to make necessary corrections in the forms of appeals prescribed under Rules 21 and 22 of the Notification of the Board of Inland Revenue No. 3-I.T., dated Delhi, 1st April 1922 (vide Income-tax Manual) stating the amount of court-fees that is to be affixed on such appeals ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : (a) The answer is in the negative.

(b) Court-fees are regulated by the Court-fees Acts as amended from time to time by the Provincial Legislative Councils, and the statutory forms of appeals prescribed under Rules 21 and 22 of the Indian Income-tax Rules cannot therefore be amended in the manner suggested by the Honourable Member.

REFUND OF COURT-FEES WHERE APPEALS ARE ALLOWED BY THE ASSISTANT COMMISSIONER OF INCOME-TAX.

64. Seth Jamnadas : (a) Is it a fact that the Assistant Commissioner of Income-tax at times allows appeals and remits the entire assessment made by an Income-tax Officer ? In such cases are the court-fees also refunded ?

(b) If not, are Government prepared to consider the advisability of making rules for the refund of court-fees in such cases ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : The answer to the first part of (a) is in the affirmative and to the second part in the negative. The answer to (b) is in the negative.

INCOME-TAX APPEALS.

65. Seth Jamnadas : (a) Are Government aware that some appellants in income-tax appeals fail to attach notices of demand prescribed under section 2 of the Income-tax Act, 1922, or copies of orders of assessment of Income-tax Officers enumerated in sections 30 and 32 of the Income-tax Act with their appeals for want of proper information ?

(b) Has this led to some delay in the disposal of appeals in such cases ?

(c) Are Government prepared to make necessary corrections in the Income-tax forms referred to in (a) requiring the appellants concerned to attach the same to avoid delay ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : (a) The Government have no information.

(b) and (c). The forms of appeal prescribed by the rules already state clearly that the demand notice or a copy of the Income-tax Officer's order is attached where it is necessary that such notice or copy should accompany the appeal. Where this is not provided for in the form the appellant is under no obligation to attach the notice or copy, as the case may be, and it is not clear how his failure to attach it in such circumstances could lead to delay.

ACCOUNTS OF INCOME-TAX ASSESSEES.

66. Seth Jamnadas : (a) Is it a fact that some of the assessees of Income-tax are not fully conversant as to the sort of accounts needed by the Department ?

(b) Is it also a fact that in some cases innocent assessees have to suffer merely on account of the absence of proper knowledge of the keeping of accounts needed by the Department ?

(c) Is it a fact that in most cases the Income-tax Officer has to reject the accounts as unclosed and assess on the percentage basis on the ground that the accounts are not properly kept ?

(d) Are Government aware that there is an amount of discontent on this account amongst the income-tax assessees ?

(e) Are Government prepared to publish in the vernacular of the provinces small pamphlets on the subject and make them available at a nominal price with a view to educate assessees in this connection ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : (a) and (b). The Department does not require accounts maintained on any particular system. Accounts maintained according to any regular system indigenous or western are accepted, and also any accounts from which the profits can as a matter of fact be ascertained. The Government are not aware that Income-tax Officers generally follow any other principle.

(c) This is certainly happens in a considerable, but decreasing proportion of cases.

(d) This is probable, but appears to be to some extent unavoidable.

(e) The Central Board of Revenue will consider the suggestion.

GRANT OF RELIEF TO THE FAMILY OF THE LATE MR. MADAN GOPAL, A POSTAL EMPLOYEE IN THE CENTRAL PROVINCES.

67. Seth Jamnadas : (a) Will Government be pleased to enquire and state whether Mr. Madan Gopal was a Head clerk in the office of Superintendent of Post Offices, Nerbudda Division, Central Provinces ?

(b) Was he transferred to Chanda (Central Provinces) in February last ?

(c) Did he apply for his transfer to a Hindi-speaking district as he could not understand the language of the place ?

(d) If so, with what result ?

(e) Was he on tour in the Sironcha Circle in May 1927 ?

(f) Was he suddenly called from Sironcha to relieve the Postmaster of Chanda (Central Provinces) ?

(g) Did he proceed to Chanda in the heat of the summer and fall ill ?

(h) Did he expire in that illness ?

(i) Is it a fact that his services in the Department were always reported as satisfactory ?

(j) Is it a fact that he has left behind him a number of widows in the family practically without any means of maintenance ?

(k) Has his widow applied for some sort of gratuity ?

Mr. H. A. Sams : (a), (b) and (c). Yes.

(f) While at Mul in the Chanda District, he was ordered by telegraph on the 14th May 1927, to relieve the Postmaster, Chanda, who required leave urgently.

(g) He proceeded to Chanda on the 15th May 1927, and reported sick on the 18th May 1927.

(h) The medical certificate submitted by him showed that he was suffering from measles. He died on the 27th May 1927. The actual cause of death has not yet been reported to his Divisional Superintendent or the Postmaster General.

(i) Yes.

(j) He has left a widow and four minor children dependent on her. She is reported to be in straitened circumstances.

(k) Yes.

RECOMMENDATIONS OF THE JOINT PARLIAMENTARY COMMITTEE REGARDING THE REVISION OF LAND REVENUE ASSESSMENT IN THE VARIOUS PROVINCES.

68. Seth Jamnadas : With reference to the recommendations of the Joint Parliamentary Committee appointed in connection with the Government of India Bill, 1919, stating that the process of revising the land revenue assessment in the various provinces should be brought under closer regulation by Statute as soon as possible, will Government be pleased to state whether any general or special instructions have been issued by them to the Provincial Governments to give effect to those recommendations and if so, will Government be pleased to lay on the table a copy of the instruction or instructions so issued ?

Mr. A. R. Dalal : The recommendations of the Joint Parliamentary Committee were referred to Local Governments in March 1920, and their attention was drawn to the need for early action on the lines indicated therein. The Government of India have recently again impressed upon Local Governments the importance of introducing legislation at an early date. They regret their inability to lay a copy of the correspondence on the table.

RECONSTRUCTION OF THE BRIDGE ON THE GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY IN THE DISTRICT OF JUBBULPORE, ETC.

69 Seth Jamnadas : (a) With reference to my starred question No. 448, dated 15th February 1927, will Government be pleased to state whether the reconstruction of the bridge on the Great Indian Peninsula Railway in the district of Jubbulpore (Central Provinces) has been completed or not ?

(b) If not, will Government be pleased to state the reasons as to why the same was not completed before the commencement of the rainy season as originally proposed ?

(c) Is it a fact that in this connection the Deputy Commissioner, Narsinghpur, and the Central Provinces Government have received representations from the public to the effect that the new bridge on the Great Indian Peninsula Railway should be made a combined rail and road bridge ?

(d) Will Government be pleased to state whether the question of providing a road bridge over the river has been taken up with the Local Government and, if so, with what result ?

(e) Will Government be pleased to state the result of the investigation regarding the providing of a roadway for wheeled traffic in connection with the bridge on the Bengal Nagpur Railway under construction in the Jubbulpore district (Central Provinces) ?

(f) Do Government intend to take steps to construct the new bridge on the Bengal Nagpur Railway as a combined rail and road bridge ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) The answer is in the negative.

(c) Government have no information.

(d) No, in view of the fact that the piers and abutments of the washed away bridge were found to be unfit for repair and use for a road bridge.

(e) and (f). The girders which are being replaced on the bridge after repairs cannot be altered so as to take also a roadway nor are the piers long enough to carry an extra roadway span alongside the railway spans.

REDUCTION IN THE RAILWAY RATES ON COAL DESPATCHED FROM THE CENTRAL PROVINCES COALFIELDS.

70. Mr. K. C. Neogy : Will Government be pleased to state if in recent years reductions were effected in freight on coal despatched from the Central Provinces coalfields ? If so, will Government state when were the reductions effected and the extent of the reduction granted from time to time ? ..

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Reductions in railway rates on coal despatched from the Central Provinces coalfields have been as follows :—

With effect from 1st September 1923 an average reduction of approximately 13.5 per cent.

With effect from 1st April 1926 approximately 10 per cent.

SHIFTING OF GOALUNDO GHÂT IN THE DISTRICT OF FARIDPUR IN BENGAL.

71. Rai Bahadur Tarit Bhusan Roy : Will Government be pleased to state :

(a) How often the Goalundo Ghât in the District of Faridpur in Bengal has been shifted since the year 1921 to 1927 ?

(b) What has been the total expense incidental to such shifting of the Goalundo Ghât ?

(c) Whether the entire expense has been borne by the Eastern Bengal Railway ?

(d) Have the I. G. N. and Railway Company, Limited, and the B. S. N. Company, Limited, contributed to such expense ; if so, in what proportion ?

(e) Is it not a fact that the Joint River Steam Services carry the Dacca and Chittagong Mails from Goalundo ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The information is being collected and will be furnished to the Honourable Member when ready.

RESTORATION OF GOOD FEELINGS BETWEEN THE SIKHS AND MUHAMMADANS IN THE NORTH-WEST FRONTIER PROVINCE.

72. Rai Bahadur Tarit Bhusan Roy : (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether it is a fact that a large number of Hindu and Sikh families comprising about 300 persons have vacated Landi Kotal (Lawerghi) and arrived at Peshawar safely by train on 2nd August, 1927 ?

(b) Is it a fact that the political authority had detained 50 escorts for their safe conduct to Peshawar as there was every danger of these persons being looted and plundered on the way from Khyber and Landi Kotal ?

(c) Is it a fact that the tribal authorities across the border in the Agency Area proposed the following terms to Hindus and Sikhs under which they could continue to reside there :

(1) to wear red turbans.

(2) to ride on horses without saddles.

(3) to vacate the charpoy and sit down on the ground as a mark in respect for the Moslems whenever he should happen to come to a Hindu or a Sikh.

(4) not to charge interest on loans ?

(d) What step if any do Government propose to take to restore good feeling between the Sikhs and Muhammadans ?

Sir Denys Bray : The Honourable Member is referred to the statement I made on the 18th instant, and to my answer to Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava's question No. 481.

UNCOMFORTABLE SECOND CLASS LOWER BERTHS IN THE EASTERN BENGAL RAILWAY.

73. Rai Bahadur Tarit Bhusan Roy : Will Government be pleased to state whether it is a fact that in the new second class compartments in the Eastern Bengal Railway the lower berths are narrower, and uncomfortable for sleeping purposes and if so what steps, if any, will be taken to remove this inconvenience ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : No. The lower berths in the new second class compartments are of the same width as before, and Government have received no complaints that they are uncomfortable for sleeping purposes. If they were widened they would certainly be uncomfortable for seating, as the room between the seats would be very narrow.

REDUCTION OF THIRD CLASS FARES ON THE EASTERN BENGAL RAILWAY.

74. Rai Bahadur Tarit Bhusan Roy : Will Government be pleased to state whether the authorities of the Eastern Bengal Railway intend to reduce the fare of third class passengers who are generally very poor ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The Eastern Bengal Railway has only lately been able to pay its way again, and cannot at present afford a reduction of fares.

THE GOLD STANDARD AND RESERVE BANK OF INDIA BILL.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett (Finance Member) : Sir, a speech from me on the principles of the Bill is not needed to-day for the purposes of the motion which I am making. The principles of the measure have been before the country for more than a year, and I dealt at some length with the Bill when I moved for its circulation last January. What the House will want to-day, I think, will be some guidance as to the meaning of the modifications introduced into the Bill by the Joint Committee—at any rate of the more important ones.

In certain particular respects the Bill now before us has been profoundly modified from the Bill which was before the Assembly last March. Nevertheless, I think that perhaps the most remarkable feature of the Bill, as now before us and of the work of the Joint Committee, is the extent of the ground covered by the measure on which there is little or no disagreement. The somewhat unfortunate publicity given to the proceedings of the Joint Committee, which were supposed to be confidential, besides on occasions hampering our freedom in Committee and possibly making agreement more difficult, has, I think, tended to leave on the general public the impression that the chief feature of our discussions in Committee were acute differences of opinion all along the line. This impression might at first sight seem to be confirmed by the large number of amendments put down in my name. But on examination the amendments in my name will be found to relate almost entirely to two main issues, and I think the strongest impression left on the minds of the Committee—certainly on my own—was the large extent of agreement obtained. As time went on and as we became more intimately acquainted with the Bill, more and more we realised that there was practical unanimity as to the desirability in principle of the establishment of a Reserve Bank in the general interests of India. We were agreed on the principle, and it was very remarkable that on nearly every point of detail, so far as the technical portions of the Bill are concerned, we managed so to adjust our views, some of which at first sight seemed to be diametrically opposed, as to produce a re-draft of the Bill in which, so far as the technical clauses were concerned, there was only one specific point on which the Government and the other side of the House have not been able more or less to accommodate themselves to each other's view point. That point is really almost more a political than a technical point—I refer to the introduction of the conception of a gold mohur into the Bill by the majority of the Committee. Even here, though our differences are vital, I should like to dwell rather on the extent to which we have approached towards agreement than on the differences. It has been frankly recognised by the majority of the Joint Committee—and I trust the House will have no difficulty in endorsing that conclusion—that however strong may be the desire in India for a gold currency, it is not practical politics to contemplate any immediate or very early steps being taken to put gold coins into effective circulation. The majority of the Committee, however, while recognising this fact, have decided to introduce into the Indian currency system the conception of a full value gold coin. In clause 18 they have made provision for notes to be expressed not only in rupees but also in mohurs. A hundred-rupee note, for example, is to be expressed as one hundred rupees or five mohurs. In clause 48 the Committee have provided that power be given to the Governor General to coin gold mohurs, though they have been careful to make it clear that this power is to be exercised at the absolute discretion of the Governor General in Council. In addition, in the same clause, the Committee have provided for restoring legal tender privileges to the sovereign, a provision which, in the view of the Government, is not only incompatible with the new gold bullion standard but is incidentally not in consonance with the proposal for a gold mohur.

Now, I had to make it plain to the Committee and I want to make it plain to the Assembly that the Government believe that it would be entirely impracticable for them to coin and issue gold mohurs for at any rate many years to come. The effective circulation of gold mohur or of a full value gold coin or of the gold sovereign is entirely incompatible with the gold bullion standard or any other standard which India is in a position at the present time to adopt. Any attempt at the present day or in the immediately foreseeable future to put gold mohurs into circulation would only lead to a further débâcle in our currency system. This being the case—and it is recognised to be the case by the majority—the Government feel that it would be premature and misleading and in other respects objectionable, that the power to coin gold mohurs should be conferred upon Government at present, even though it is purely a discretionary power. It involves a premature decision as to any future gold coin for India if there is eventually to be one. It must, in the opinion of Government, tend to mislead the public if power is taken to coin a gold coin which the Government have clearly no intention of coining for the present. It is felt that the inclusion in an Act of the Indian Legislature of authority to coin a gold coin can only lead to attempts being made inside and outside the Legislature to put pressure on the Government to take a step which in their view they can only take with disastrous consequences to the currency system of India. Steps to put a gold coin into circulation could only be taken if and when the gold bullion standard is discarded in favour of a gold currency standard. The time for doing that is not yet come. Such a step ought to be taken only as the outcome of a definite and considered decision of the Government and the Legislature when, and if the time has come when, it is a matter of practical politics ; and such a step will have to take the form of special legislation when the time is ripe. In these circumstances the Government hold strongly that the wise course is to follow the advice of the Currency Commission to exclude any references to gold coin from the Bill at present and to leave over to some future date, when the issue and circulation of gold coin has become a practical proposition, the question whether or not a gold coin in circulation should be legislated for in India. I have put down amendments on this point to omit all references to gold mohurs in the Bill, and will leave further argument upon it till we reach the clauses concerned.

It will be seen that in regard to the gold mohur the difference between the Government and the majority of the Joint Committee, though vital, is really in some respects a question of convenience and opportunity and expediency. It is agreed by the majority of the protagonists of the mohur that practical action to coin mohurs is not possible at the present time. So, even if a provision were to be included in the Bill, the practical position would not be greatly changed. No gold coin would be coined or put into circulation ; but the position of the Government would be, to say the least of it, very unsatisfactory. Apart from the question of gold mohurs, there is hardly a single point in the technical portions of the Bill on which we in the Joint Committee have not succeeded in accommodating our view points very closely in an amicable manner. There has been give and take on both sides. I gladly recognise the extent to which concession has been made by some who held a strong view on certain points in order to reach agreement, and I hope that they too will recognise that I, on behalf of Government, have done my best to accommodate my view point where I did not regard matters as absolutely vital and accept a decision on a point which I should have preferred to deal with in a rather different way. This general desire for harmonious settlement on the points in dispute is, I say, a happy augury for the work which this Assembly is going to do in the next fortnight.

The other point remaining unsettled is not a technical point at all. It has no relation to the new currency standard and leaves unaffected the functions and methods of working of the Reserve Bank once it has come into existence. It is a difference concerning the constitution of the Bank and the method of framing the Directorate. There is practical unanimity as to what the Reserve Bank is to do. The difference of opinion is in regard to the method of constituting the Directorate that is to do the work. The proposal of the Currency Commission accepted by the Government and incorporated in the Bill originally introduced in this House was that the capital of the Bank should be obtained by inviting subscriptions from private shareholders, and that apart from the non-voting Government official who is to be a member of the Board, the Board should consist of 14 Directors, of whom five, including the Governor and the Deputy Governor, will be nominated by Government, and the other nine elected by the shareholders. The Joint Committee decided at their first meeting that the whole of the capital of the Bank should be subscribed by the Government of India thus getting rid of the shareholders altogether, and having got rid of the shareholders, as there were no shareholders to elect the members of the Board, some other constituency or constituencies had to be framed. Eventually the majority have adopted the scheme which is now in the Bill. Under it, four members of the Board including the Governor and the Deputy Governor are to be nominated by the Government.

Mr. President : I do not wish to interrupt the Honourable Member in any way, but there is one difficulty which the Chair feels in connection with the speech he is making. I understand the motion he is making is that the Bill, as reported by the Joint Committee, be taken into consideration. He is perfectly in order in so far as he advances arguments in support of that motion. I am not sure—and I am glad the Honourable the Law Member is here to help us in the matter—how far the Honourable the Finance Member would be in order in advancing arguments against his own motion.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : I see no reason why I should not do so when moving the motion that the Bill, as reported by the Joint Select Committee, be taken into consideration. I accept all that it has got to say on the technical clauses. I see no reason why we should not be wiser from the recommendations of the Joint Committee and amend the clauses raising the constitution of the Bank in a way which I have indicated.

Mr. President : The Honourable Member is perfectly right in saying that the House is entitled to go outside the recommendations of the Joint Committee and improve upon those recommendations, but whether the Honourable Member himself would be justified, after making the motion that the Bill, as reported by the Joint Committee, be taken into consideration, in advancing arguments against his own motion is not a question free from doubt. That is the difficulty which the Chair feels and on which the Honourable the Law Member will be good enough to enlighten us.

The Honourable Mr. S. R. Das (Law Member) : Sir, I regret that this matter should be put to me without previous notice, because I have not had time to consider it. But I should have thought that the motion that the Bill, as reported by the Joint Committee, be taken into consideration is a formal motion on the part of Government who alone can make that motion having regard to the fact that the Bill is introduced by the Government Member. I should think, Sir, that there would be nothing objectionable in the Government moving amendments to the Bill and in suggesting for the consideration of the House the amendments that the Government propose to move. That is how it strikes me. The question has come to me rather as a surprise.

Mr. President : If the view advanced by the Honourable the Law Member is carried to its logical conclusion, the Honourable the Leader of the House can make a motion that the Bill, as reported by the Joint Committee, be taken into consideration and yet make a speech asking the House to oppose it and throw it out. That would be the logical result.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : I submit, Sir, that there are many precedents for a thing like this in this House for speeches by Members of Government on bringing back a Bill from a Select Committee or a Joint Committee in which they have differed proposing to make amendments in the Bill. I submit, Sir, that I am not the mouthpiece of the Joint Committee, I was just one member of it—I was not even the Chairman—and that I am in order in speaking on this motion in the sense that, while I am in agreement with a large portion of the Joint Committee's Report, and am desirous that this House should take it into consideration, I hope when this House does take it into consideration, it will make certain amendments.

Mr. President : It is a very difficult question indeed. Personally I am not satisfied that the Honourable the Leader of the House is really in order in advancing arguments against his own motion. The more proper course would have been for any one member of the majority of the Committee to move a motion that the Bill as amended by the Joint Committee be taken into consideration, and then for the Honourable the Leader of the House to move his amendments against the recommendations of the Joint Committee. If this course is not permissible under the Standing Orders, the Leader of the House should have moved that the Bill, as reported, be recommitted to the Joint Committee or recirculated for opinion.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : Sir, I will take advantage of your ruling, and I propose to continue. I would, however, with respect submit that the motion to take the Report of the Joint Committee into consideration is not a motion requesting the House to take into consideration and pass the Bill as reported. There are at any rate many precedents for the course which I am now adopting.

Mr. President: I would allow the Honourable the Leader of the House to proceed with his arguments without committing myself to any ruling. This should not form a precedent ; the Chair allows this procedure, as a special case. It is really a question whether a member is in order in making a speech against his own motion.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : I am not advancing any arguments against my own motion, Sir.

Mr. President : The Chair has its own view about the Honourable Member's speech.

Mr. K. C. Neogy (Dacca Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, may I draw your attention to Standing Order 44 which deals with the procedure after presentation of the Report of the Select Committee. Clause 1 says :

"After the presentation of the final Report of a Select Committee on a Bill, the member in charge may move that the Bill as reported by the Select Committee be taken into consideration," and so on. Then clause (b) says that he may further move—

"that the Bill as reported by the Select Committee be recommitted either—

(i) without limitation, or

(ii) with respect to particular clauses or amendments only, or

(iii) with instructions to the Select Committee to make some particular or additional provision in the Bill; or (c) that the Bill as reported by the Select Committee be recirculated for the purpose of obtaining further opinion thereon."

I think, Sir, on a reading of this Standing Order, it is not quite clear that the Member in charge who alone has the right to move that the Bill as reported by the Joint Committee be taken into consideration, necessarily commits himself to that particular Report.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : Sir, I will now proceed with the motion that the Joint Committee's Report be taken into consideration. The Joint Committee by a majority recommended a Directorate on the following lines. 4 members of the Board to be nominated by the Government, including the Governor and the Deputy Governor ; 3 elected by the elected members of the Central Legislature, 3 elected by the elected Members of the Provincial Legislatures, two each elected by the Federation of the Indian Chamber of Commerce and the Associated Chambers of Commerce, and one by the Provincial Co-operative Banks. When the original decision was taken in the Joint Committee against the proposal to have a shareholders' bank, it seemed to me at first that the meaning of the vote was that the Board of the Bank should be under the control of the Government and of the Legislature. This is what I understood it meant by a State Bank, and it still seems to me to be the natural meaning of a State Bank. It is indeed difficult to see how the Board of a Bank, the whole of whose capital is subscribed by the Government, can be made entirely independent of it. It proved, however, that this was not the view of the majority. The Committee agreed that it was fundamental to the idea of a Reserve Bank that it should be completely independent of the Government and the Legislature, free to conduct the business of the Bank on lines of prudent finance and in accordance with the directions of the Statute under which it came into being, without being subject to any direct or indirect political influence. The question of share capital in these circumstances became largely a question of convenience and expediency. Whether there is share capital or not, the Bank is not to be a State Bank in the sense of being under the control of the State. It was, however, felt by the majority of the Committee that with shareholders the Directorate might possibly fall under the control of vested interests and I do not think I should be doing the majority an injustice if I say that what they particularly feared was that the Directorate might be non-Indian in outlook or might even have an anti-Indian bias. I do not, and did not, think that these fears were justified, but though the Government still felt and feel that the original plan for a shareholders' bank is the wisest, I endeavoured to co-operate with the Committee in framing a Bank without share capital that would surmount the many and various difficulties which such an attempt involved. I do not want at this stage to enter into the details of the various possible alternatives and the particular difficulties attaching to each of them. In the end we failed to come to any agreement. I do not think that we should be much blamed for this. The negative result of the discussion goes to show that the task of framing a suitable plan and securing a suitable Directorate that will work efficiently—and remember it will have enormously responsible functions—and will be completely independent of the State, is extraordinarily difficult unless you adopt the device of shareholders. It is a device well understood the world over that has been almost universally adopted in those countries who have set themselves the task of establishing an independent central bank and has proved its value by the test of experience. It has the merit of making the members of the Board responsible for money which they themselves have contributed out of their own pockets and responsible to shareholders to whom they are accountable for the money which they have contributed out of their pockets and not merely responsible to their own consciences. It has the further merit of providing a ready-made constituency for the selection of a representative Directorate. On the other hand, the scheme now framed in the Bill is in the view of the Government very far from securing full independence of the Bank. It intrudes other things, such as politics into the question of the selection of a business board in a way that in the view of the Government can only mean bad business and bad politics. It leaves the Board in the air, theoretically responsible to no one, and for that reason and for the reason that the State will find the whole capital, is likely in the end to become subservient to the Government and the Legislature; and incidentally it involves a serious departure from the straight constitutional path in proposing to use members of the Central and Provincial Legislatures for purposes entirely foreign to those for which they were elected. I am inclined to think that the proposers of the scheme are themselves not entirely satisfied with it and are conscious of its drawbacks, and it is mainly because of our difficulty in finding any really satisfactory solution that they fell back on this particular one. It may be asked, why then does the Government not continue to join them in finding a via media? Why does it go back to the shareholders' plan? My answer is two-fold. In the first place, as the House is aware, the Government have been continuing the search for an agreed solution that would eliminate shareholders provided that they could be sure that that solution would embrace a settlement of other disputed points, and, in particular, would lead to the framing of a Directorate suitable and representative but not in any way dependent for its electorate upon the Legislatures, Central or Provincial. The second part of my answer is that the Government believe that the proposal they have now put before the House is really a via media. It is entirely different from the original plan contained in the original Bill, in almost every particular except in the particular of share capital. We have considered sympathetically the various objections put forward in the Joint Committee and in the Press. We had and have no desire to run any risk of the Directorate being such as to be potentially non-Indian in outlook or to fail to secure the full confidence of the Indian people. I do not think our original plan involved any such risk, but if it is thought to be open to such objections we are anxious—indeed determined—to do our best to amend it in such a way as to make assurance doubly sure. I think really all want the same thing. We want a Board of capable and businesslike men, of wise and mature outlook, fully conscious of their immense responsibilities, a Board with full and sympathetic understanding of Indian requirements and widely representative of India as a whole, a Board which will devote itself wholeheartedly and in singlemindedness to the business of making a success of the control of currency and credit in the interests of India, a Board which will be Indian in outlook and largely Indian in composition ; how can such a Board be framed ? The Government have taken note of the views expressed in the Joint Committee and they have deeply pondered over them. The plan framed by the Committee will not do. The Government are not prepared to accept it. In their opinion, it would be preferable to lose the Bill altogether rather than to accept that proposal as it stands. But the work of the Joint Committee will not be lost. The discussions in the Committee have been very fruitful in suggesting lines of thought and points of approach. The Committee were prevented by their original decision from going back on the question of having share capital. But since the Committee's work terminated, it has seemed to me it was just this difficulty which prevented the Committee from finding an agreed solution. In the absence of shareholders it is very difficult to frame a constituency wide enough to secure representation of the whole of India. We do not want them at all to represent narrow or sectional interests. The Board cannot be answerable to the Government, and in the absence of shareholders there is no one to jog the conscience of the Board when it becomes too easy going. Why not combine the original plan of share capital with all that is best in the various alternatives ? This is what the Government have tried to do in the plan that is now put before the House. I am strongly tempted to think that, if on the Committee the majority had been willing or able to go back to the starting point, they would have come to an agreement on very much the sort of plan that the Government now put before the House. First of all, as to the Indian character of the Directorate. The Government are in full agreement with the majority that it is desirable that the Board should be predominantly Indian, while not excluding the opportunity for that co-operation of European business experience with Indians which I regard as essential to the rapid and favourable development of Indian business and in particular Indian banking. The Government proposals ensure this result. We have dropped the proposal that some preference in the allotment of the original shares should be given to the shareholders of the Imperial Bank. Instead we propose to reduce the nominal value of each share from Rs. 500 to Rs. 100, and to make provision that preference in allotment shall be given to the shareholder domiciled or ordinarily resident in India. We further propose to fix the dividend at 6 per cent. cumulative instead of the original maximum of 8 per cent., a gilt-edged investment offering 6 per cent. and offered in shares of Rs. 100 each at par will be attractive to the small shareholder and within the reach of a very large number of small shareholders, and we shall thus ensure that the shares of the Bank will be widely distributed and predominantly in Indian hands. The strict limitation of the voting power of large shareholders will prevent the Bank from falling into the hands of the capitalist. In the matter of the constitution of the Directorate we have also taken most of the ideas that were put forward in the Joint Committee and incorporated these in the Government's new proposal. We propose that instead of 9 shareholder Directors being nominated by the Government for the first Board, 5 only should be nominated and 2 should be allotted to the Federation of the Indian Chambers and to the Associated Chambers, thereby meeting one of the objections which were raised that the Government would be entirely responsible for the first Board. We propose that there should be 3 Directors nominated by the Government as before in order that the Government may be free to secure adequate representation for any of the communities or localities or interests that might otherwise have been under-represented or not represented. This is the solution that the Government have put on the paper for the consideration of the Assembly. I very much hope that the House will accept this new plan in the spirit in which we put it forward, not as a mere compromise framed with a view to conciliate as many as possible of the opposite view points, but as a new plan containing all that was best in the alternatives hitherto considered and overcoming most of their difficulties. By doing so we shall be following up the good work of the Joint Committee by arriving at an agreement on this one big outstanding point. Government are very anxious that we should, if possible, pass this Bill through this House not by a narrow majority in a heated atmosphere, but with a considerable amount of good-will all round. In the interests of the future of the Bank and of the work that it will be able to do for India, it is most desirable that it should not come into being in an atmosphere of violent conflict. It is for this reason that the Government, even at the eleventh hour, have been making a further attempt to see whether some plan other than the one which I have now indicated can be framed which while it will not, I am afraid, possess all the virtues of the shareholder plan, will be acceptable to a larger body of opinion than possibly might otherwise be the case. We are very anxious that there should be a settlement on reasonable and amicable grounds that will not lead to this Bill being discussed continually in an atmosphere of conflict. The Government believe that the shareholders plan is far more satisfactory than any which has yet been before them and they have other reasons for preferring it, namely, that the plan is one which would be understood in the rest of the world, and the rest of the world will feel that in dealing with the Reserve Bank of India, it is dealing with something which it can understand and whose constitution it can appreciate.

Before sitting down I wish to sum up the general situation as I see it. We are dealing with a Bill which I have ventured to describe as one of the greatest measures of financial liberalism ever brought forward by the Government of India. The subject-matter of the Bill is technical, but even those who are not currency experts can appreciate the broad features of the measure. It transfers the control over Indian currency and monetary policy from governmental to non-governmental hands, from the Government of India and the Secretary of State to a non-official Indian business institution, entirely independent of the State, Indian domiciled and Indian in character, which will work in India, for India, along Indian lines, and it creates a Bank which will unify the control of currency and credit in India and provide the framework for the growth of a great co-ordinated banking system in India, an entire revolution in the financial machinery of India. We are fortunate in that the labours of the Royal Commission and of the Joint Committee have produced for our benefit a measure in which almost all the main technical points have been settled in a spirit of amity and compromise, it being recognised on all hands that the Bill must not be lost for want of a spirit of agreement on any points which are not vital. I hope the Assembly will agree to accept the settlement on all the technical points without making much modification. This leaves us only two points outstanding with which I have been dealing to-day, the question of the gold mohur and the question of the constitution of the Bank, the Directorate. On the first point I ask the Assembly to recognise that the difference of opinion is one which can best be settled by postponing. No immediate practical change is secured by including the gold mohur in the Bill. Whether the mohur appears in the Bill or not, any early coining and issue of gold coins is impracticable. Nothing will in fact be lost by leaving it out of the Bill. The time to come to a decision on it will surely be when it has ceased to be a hypothetical, almost mystical, problem and has become a practical problem for immediate action. On the second point I hope the House will beware of being misled by labels. We are, I understand, divided into State bankers and shareholders bankers. I submit that we should be careful of our definitions. I have often heard the Bank of England described as a State Bank. It is a State Bank in the sense that it does Government business and controls currency. But it has shareholders and is entirely independent of the Government. If by a State Bank, however, is meant a bank which is under the control of the Government and answerable to the Government, then it is agreed among us all that we do not want a State Bank. The difference between a State Bank and a Shareholders' Bank is an unreal one. Whether there are shareholders or not this bank is not to be a State Bank. It will not be directly or indirectly responsible to the State. It is common ground between us that it must be independent of the State. It is also common ground between us that it must be Indian in character and Indian in outlook. What then is the meaning of this acute controversy? If the difference of opinion is on the question whether the Legislatures are to elect members of the Board, then I agree that the difference is real and irreconcilable. But I do not believe that this is the real issue, and if it is, I am convinced that business opinion in India generally does not support the view that the Legislature should have anything to do with electing members to the Board of the Bank. In my view, the sole question really at issue is how best to secure both now and for the future a suitable Board for the Bank. The question of shareholders or no shareholders is mainly a question of means to an end. The view of the Government is that the device of shareholders is the one best calculated to secure the best and most representative Board. They have modified their original plan in order to meet the criticisms levelled against them, and they now set before the Assembly a via media which they think ought to result in meeting all the essential data of the opposition. The detailed discussion on these questions must be left till we come to the clauses of the Bill. If we must differ on these questions, we must, and we must recognise that our differences are likely to lead to the loss of the Bill altogether. I believe it to be a measure of very great value to India and for that reason and because of the keen interest that I have taken in the framing of the measure over many years it would be a great disappointment to me personally if the Bill were to fail to reach the Statute-book. I have given of my best and it is natural that I should feel some pleasurable anticipation of seeing the reward of all the skilled labour that I and others have put into this work of art in its completion. I have a feeling of pride in the model which has been created. But I would a thousand times rather retain that model in all its pristine beauty and retain unsullied the vision, though unfulfilled, of the edifice to be built after that model than agree to take part in the erection of a monstrosity, a bastard and reformed caricature of the model in which I took delight. After all the model will remain unsullied for me though the vision might recede into the far distant future, and the responsibility for the failure to realise that vision in concrete form will rest with the Assembly. The Government have gone to the limit of concession. If they are not met in a corresponding spirit the responsibility for doing a great disservice to India will fairly and squarely fall on the shoulders of the opposition and the world which, as I said, is taking a considerable interest in what is going on in this matter in India will come to the conclusion, perhaps not unjustly, that not only is the proposal to hand over the control of Indian currency and finance into the hands of an Indian institution premature and hazardous, as many critics are saying, but also that the people of India do not want it. But surely this will be a wrong conclusion. We are unanimous in desiring a Reserve Bank. Are we going to throw away our opportunity, perhaps for decades, for want of agreement as to details. Let us be quite sure before we make up our minds that the quarrel is really about vital matters. While we are still at the stage of the general consideration of the Committee's Report, let us make up our minds that for the sake of any points that are not absolutely vital we are not going to leave our currency system in an unsettled state, we are not going to risk losing for India all the expert labour, all the hard work of the Currency Commission and the Joint Committee and all the days and months and years of toil that have been put into framing this measure, but that we are going to do all that in us lies to secure that, when we have finished, we shall have put safely on the Statute-book a Bill which will be a landmark not only in the financial but also in the political and constitutional history of the Indian Empire. Sir, I move.

Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya (Allahabad and Jhansi Divisions : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : I rise to support the Report of the Select Committee before this House. It is an unfortunate circumstance that this task should fall upon me, but in the circumstances of the case it is inevitable. It was thought that when the Government got the Assembly and the Council of State to appoint a Joint Committee of the two Houses consisting of 30 members, the decisions arrived at by that Committee would be acceptable to the Government. We have found to our regret that that is not so. Matters which were decided after long and anxious consideration by the Joint Committee and by a substantial majority of votes have been cast aside by the Government so far as they are concerned, and we have heard from the Honourable the Finance Member that the Government are not prepared to accept the recommendations of the majority of the Committee. This, Sir, is unfortunate. But, however, we are face to face now with the situation. The Honourable the Finance Member agreed to the appointment of this Joint Committee. He agreed that the matter should be investigated by the members of the Committee. We discussed it and arrived at conclusions. If the Government were determined and had decided in the light of the wisdom of the Honourable the Finance Member and those who advised him that a share capital bank was the only bank to which they would agree, I submit it was not fair to the Members of the Council of State and of this Assembly to ask them to spend their time on the Joint Committee. The Government should have told us when the Bill was introduced in this House, as the Honourable the Finance Member has now told us, that they were adamant on the question of a share capital bank. They did not do so. We arrived at a conclusion after discussing the matter and I submit the Government were bound in honour and in fairness to accept the decision of the majority of the Joint Committee and not to question it. The Honourable the Finance Member has told the House his reasons for preferring a share capital bank. His main reason, as he has told us, is that this is a big scheme which he has put forward. An era of the systematic financial administration of the country is going to be ushered in and therefore the Government are anxious that the Directorate of the Bank should be a satisfactory one, and he cannot find any Directorate more satisfactory than a Directorate appointed by shareholders. It is only because he wants the shareholders to give us a good Directorate, as he considers it, that he sticks to the idea of a share capital bank. Now, Sir, I submit that there we do not agree with the Honourable the Finance Member. There are numerous joint stock companies and concerns, and I think there are at this moment in this Assembly many distinguished members of banking corporations and companies who can testify that, unless some shareholder begins to be mischievous or holds strongly to some idea, the average shareholder cares but little who the persons elected to the Directorate are or how the administration is carried on so long as he gets his dividends fairly regularly. And I submit, Sir, that that is not a sufficient justification for asking us to accept the proposal of a share capital bank instead of a State bank. The question of a State bank is not a recent creation. For a long time past the Government have had this question before them off and on. When the Chamberlain Committee reported in 1913 they advocated the consideration of the question of a State bank. In a minute appended to the scheme which Mr. Keynes prepared he spoke throughout of a State bank. And this Commission, with whose report we are concerned now, also considered the question of a State bank. There were two matters present before the members of the Committee. One was that there was already in existence a share capital bank in the shape of the Imperial Bank of India which was supported largely by Government balances, and there was a strong body of opinion that this Imperial Bank of India should be enlarged and expanded into the State bank. It was urged that the Government of India had helped the Imperial Bank of India with enormous balances and had enabled them to declare very handsome dividends for as long a time as possible, and it was said that the Imperial Bank of India, having been greatly brought under the operation of the Imperial Bank of India Act, 1920, and the Government having a control over it through the nomination of the Governors by the Governor General in Council, the next step was to expand the Imperial Bank of India into a State bank ; that the shareholders might be bought out, and there might be one State bank that would receive the support of the Government. Our Honourable friend, Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas, whose labours on the Royal Commission we have more than once gratefully acknowledged, said at page 119 of his minute :

* Speech not corrected by the Honourable Member.

"The main question to be determined in regard to the authority to which shall be entrusted the working of the Indian currency system is whether, as recommended by my colleagues, the new Bank should be started to exercise the functions of a central bank or whether the Imperial Bank of India, which now performs some of the functions of a central bank, should be developed into the Central Bank of India.

The first scheme would involve the existence of two banks working side by side, each supported, wholly or in part, by the user of the Government balances. Whilst fully appreciating the reasons which have induced my colleagues to propose the creation of a new central bank, and recognizing that this is perhaps the ideal system in the special conditions of India, I am of opinion that the ends in view, for as far ahead as we can see, will be better served by developing the Imperial Bank of India into a full-fledged central bank."

Now, Sir, this was from Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas. Other critics of this proposal have strongly supported the same idea that the Imperial Bank should be developed into the State bank. Among the many who have written on the subject I would refer to only one, Mr. B. F. Madon, who too has rendered very great services to the motherland in the discussions on the 1*s.* 4*d.* or 1*s.* 6*d.* ratio and on this question of the Reserve Bank. He too urged the same.

Now, Sir, when the Commission decided that the bank should be a new bank and when the Joint Committee met in Bombay to consider whether we should support the idea of a new bank being created, or whether we should support the idea of the Imperial Bank being enlarged, many of us felt that we should minimise the points of difference between the Government and ourselves, and for that reason we agreed to drop the idea of discussing the question of the Imperial Bank of India being expanded into the Reserve Bank and agreed to accept the proposal of the Commission that a new bank should be created to be called the Reserve Bank. I submit, Sir, that that was a concession to the opinion of the Government and the Commission on that point, in the desire that the points of difference between them and us should be minimised. We regret, however, that the attitude that we took up has not been appreciated. The question now is, what is the better course for the Assembly to recommend and adopt ? The Honourable the Finance Member says, "a share capital bank is better." I submit, Sir, it is not. Will the Honourable the Finance Member or anyone speaking on his side tell me if there is any other country in the world where the Government of the country supports two banks by its loans and by its cash resources and by giving them all the advantages in the manner in which the Imperial Bank of India and now the Reserve Bank are to receive support now ? I submit, Sir, that there should be so much anxiety shown to have a share capital bank shows that the Government have not realised the position of those who have supported the idea of a State bank. Why do you want the share capital ? The Honourable the Finance Member says, " Not for the money, but because the shareholders will bring pressure to bear upon the Director whom they will elect to act correctly according to his conscience and not sacrifice his interest." Now, Sir, there will be, according to the proposal of the Finance Member, shares of Rs. 100 each for a capital of Rs. 5 crores. That means 5 lakhs of shares. Are these shares going to be held by individuals ? Is there to be a limitation that none should hold more than one share, as my Honourable friend Mr. Joshi suggested ? Is it going to be laid down that any banker might purchase shares of Rs. 1 crore—a lakh of shares ? I heard this morning that there is one gentleman in Simla to-day who offers to purchase shares worth a crore of rupees, that is a lakh of shares, if the share capital bank comes into existence. Are these people going to be allowed, a few of them, to purchase shares and to boss over the bank ? Or is there to be a limitation of one share each or of 10 shares each ? I take it that the Government will not easily agree to one banker purchasing shares to the extent of a lakh of shares. But I wish to know, Sir, even if the shares are limited to one share each, does anybody seriously think that these shareholders, scattered over all parts of the country, not having anything to bring them together and to educate them on these questions, not having the guarantee that as individuals they will have the outlook that is needed in the management of the concern of a State bank, that these men will be able to work together and put on the directorate of the bank men in whom this Assembly can confide ? I submit not. Experience has shown that the shareholders do not take very much interest in the election of the Directors. On the other hand, what is the loss that the country has suffered by the share capital bank ? If a share capital bank comes into existence, one gentleman, as I have said, to-day wants to purchase shares to the extent of a crore of rupees, one-fifth of the total shares. I am certain that he is only one of the many who wish to do so. There are others who would be willing to subscribe a crore each for the capital of this bank. What of those who have not got the money to purchase shares ? In any event, only a handful of persons can purchase shares. There are many who have no money to acquire shares. There are others who have objections of a more serious character to becoming shareholders in a bank and earning interests. Therefore the interest which these shareholders will earn will be earned by only a handful of men. On the other hand, if it is a State bank, the capital of which will be subscribed by the Government, every pie of the interest earned by the bank—and it will be an enormous amount—every pie of the advantage earned by the bank will be the property of the people of India as a whole, including all classes, all sections, from the humblest to the highest. Is there any reason why this interest, the profits which are earned by the people as a whole should be sacrificed and handed over to companies ? We have had long and painful experiences of company management. The railway companies are the first we have to remember. India lost between 800 to a 1,000 crores of rupees by the management of railway companies (An Honourable Member : " Mismanagement ")—mismanagement if you please. You will remember, Sir, that when it was proposed that on the expiration of the term of the agreement between the East Indian Railway Company and the Government the management of the company should be taken over by the State, Honourable Members of the Government, including my Honourable friend the Finance Member, so far as I remember, expressed their opposition to the idea. Sir Charles Innes spoke straight and strong against the idea. And in the last Session of the Assembly when the matter had become a fait accompli and the advantages of the State management of the Railways had been seen, Sir Charles Innes acknowledged on the floor of this House that the State management had proved very successful.

Now, Sir, we do not wish to go back to earn further experience at the further sacrifice of the people's interests. What interests have we here as the representatives of the public in bringing another company into existence from which a few persons will earn interest and dividends. What gain will that be to the general tax-payer ? I submit none. It is said that it is much better that the shareholders should exercise a control over the Directorate. I submit it is a miraculous ideal. I submit, therefore, that the Government should definitely and decorously adopt the Report of the Joint Committee on this question of the State bank. The State bank, Sir, will be the property of the entire people of India ; its capital will be owned by the entire people of India. The profits which it will earn will be divided among the entire people of India through the Government. Secondly, Sir, there is another very important reason. Hitherto, the Secretary of State and the Government of India under the existing constitution exercise control and carry out the financial policy of the Government of this country. We have two authorities. The Government of India may be overruled by the Secretary of State, but the Government of India have a right and the duty of making representations to the Secretary of State on all questions which arise. And we remember with satisfaction that the Government of India have several times fought against the proposals of the Secretary of State in the interests of the tax-payer of India. Now, Sir, what is proposed is that the Secretary of State should be divested of the power which he exercises over the control of currency in this country and that that power should be vested in the Reserve Bank to a large extent. I submit the Secretary of State and the Government of India together constitute two bodies which discuss and settle questions of finance with regard to India. You are eliminating the Secretary of State and you are leaving the Government of India alone to deal with the situation on the spot, and our friend the Honourable the Finance Member has told us in what subtle way the Government of India will exercise that influence. He told us that in Bombay. I do not want the Government of India to exercise any control over the Reserve Bank and I want the Bank to be utterly responsible to the Legislature. In every scheme that has been proposed we have agreed with the Government that the Governor General in Council should have the power to nominate the Governor and the Deputy Governor. We have also agreed that he should have the power to nominate two other persons in order to provide representation for any interests that may not have come in in other ways. In every scheme that we have discussed so far we have agreed that the Governor General should have the power of nominating 4 persons out of the 15 on this Board. Will that not be exercising influence on the Directorate ? Certainly it will be.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : Certainly not.

Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya : Then, Sir, I say, most certainly, most emphatically. Will the Honourable the Finance Member tell me whether he is seriously asking the Assembly to believe that he is proposing to this Assembly that the Government of India should not exercise a direct control over the management of the Bank, that they will not appoint the Governor and that in choosing the Governor whom they have the power to appoint and whom they have the power to dismiss at any moment they will not take care that they put in a man in whom they have the utmost confidence ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : It would be absolutely contrary to my whole notion of the Bank that the Government should exercise any control whatsoever over the Bank. That is the fundamental principle on which the proposal is based.

Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya : That principle is entirely opposed to the existing facts in relation to State banks, as I shall presently show and I hope that the Government of this country will never be so unfortunate as to accept the view which the Honourable the Finance Member has just now expounded. Now, Sir, this Bank is to have control of credit in this country. It will be able in one moment to make the money dear throughout the land. It will be able to make money easy throughout the land when it so chooses. It will adopt all the steps that have been enumerated in the Bill which are all of the most serious character. It will have power to adopt all these steps. It will do all the business for the Government which are enumerated in the Bill. The Honourable the Finance Member might repeat what he has just now said a hundred times, but he will not be able to persuade me that he means seriously that the Government of India should not exercise any control over the management of such a Bank. If the Government were not to do so, it will fail to do its duty by this country. Here let me tell the House something about banks in other countries and what the Governments are doing for them. But before I come to it, I wish to point out that the position of the Bank of England and the position of the State Bank in India are quite different, in that the Bank of England is an old institution. It has been built up, like all other English institutions have been built up, by a number of accidents, as one of the English historians has put it, and the Bank of England stands to-day where it does. Let us see what other countries have done. In modern times, there is no country which has worked out its financial problems of administration on a more scientific basis than Germany. In the Bank of Germany, there is a statutory board of five curators, the Premier and one man appointed by the Government and three by the Legislature. The Board of eight managers are all appointed for life by Government on the nomination of the Legislature. Its resolutions are subject to the restriction and direction of the Premier and a committee of 15 to be elected by the shareholders in a general meeting. The functions of the committee are purely advisory. The power of control rests with the Premier and the persons appointed by the Legislature. This Act, I am told, was in force till it was modified in 1924. But even so, Sir, we have got this model which lasted in Germany for such a long period and it is also followed in other countries. Then, Sir, coming to Norway, in the Bank of Norway there are three supervisors elected by the Legislatures and there are five managers, two of whom, the Governor and the Deputy Governor, are named by the King after hearing the supervisors who are elected by the Legislature and the remaining three are to be appointed by the Legislature. The control rests in the supervisors who are all elected by the Legislature and the details of the management rest with the five managers who have powers nearly similar to the five managers in the Bank of Denmark. In that Bank, one director is appointed by the Government, the President and six directors are appointed by the Legislature and what is more, they are to be responsible to the Legislature. We are not asking that the directors of this bank should be responsible to this Assembly. Then in France the Governor and the two Deputy Governors, both are appointed by the Minister of Finance and are subject to dismissal by him. Then, Sir, in other places you have the Bank of Belgium where the Governor is appointed and is removable by the Government. Six directors are appointed by the shareholders. Then you have the Bank of Denmark. A Royal Commissioner is appointed to supervise and he takes the Chair at all meetings, but he does not vote. The President is appointed by the King. I submit, Sir, in all these cases the Governments of the countries in question have taken care to see that the Government authority should exercise control over the appointments of the directorate of the Bank in order that it should be satisfied that the Bank is properly managed. Therefore I submit that the proposal so far as the Government is concerned is the right one. I am supporting the proposal that the Governor General in Council should have the power to appoint the Governor, and the Deputy Governor, and of nominating two other directors ; and I submit, Sir, it is perfectly right. I hope this Assembly will never become a party to any Directorate of such a Bank being constituted over which the Governor General in Council will not exercise influence to that extent.

Now, Sir, what is the next provision ? What about the Legislature ? You are eliminating the Secretary of State, who, taking all the disadvantages into account, was another authority with which problems of Indian finance were discussed, and he had experts to advise him. If you are eliminating the Secretary of State, what is the guarantee you give to this House that the Directorate shall be a satisfactory one ? You say shareholders. Shareholders will not go down the throats of the Members of this House. Is a shareholder, who has managed to purchase a share, or ten or a hundred shares, to be trusted to exercise his duties better than the elected Members of this Assembly and of the Council of State ? I submit not. Then it comes to this, that the Government, in spite of all that the Honourable the Finance Member has said, has kept its control over the management of this Bank through the appointment of the Governor and Deputy Governor and two nominations. The Legislature represents the vast bulk of the people of India. It is not jealous that there should be certain persons appointed to represent commerce and industry. We also agreed, Sir, that two Directors should be elected by the Associated Chambers of Commerce. That was the Government proposal at one time. We agreed to it. We agreed also that two more Directors should be appointed by the Indian Federation of Chambers. That brought us to 8. We also agreed that there should be 1 Director appointed by provincial co-operative banks. That brought us to 9. Now in this arrangement the Government had 4 nominations, commerce and industry had 4 nominations, the provincial co-operative banks, which represent agricultural interests and to represent which interests we suggested the provincial co-operative banks as an electorate—they will have one seat ; and then we suggested, these being representative of special interests and mostly capitalist interests—commerce and industry—that there should be some provision for the appointment of some Directors who could be expected to represent the general mass of the people of India, not merely the general tax-payer but the general mass of the people of India. The policy and the operations which this Bank will pursue and carry out will affect the humblest of the humble people of this Indian Empire ; and I ask this House whether it is unreasonable to ask that 3 out of the 15 Directors of the Board of this Bank should be elected by the elected Members of the Central Legislature, namely, of the Council of State and of this Assembly ? These elected Members have been elected on the electoral rolls kept by Government, they are elected under rules laid down by Government, they come from all parts of the country, and they are elected by a larger body of electors than will be found in any constituency that has been dreamed of so far in connection with this Bank. And it also happens that they are a small number, a hundred Members in the Assembly and 34 in the Council of State. They together constitute 134 electors. Every year it is their duty to meet here. They met this morning ; and it is perfectly easy for them to meet together to discuss the matter and to propose 3 men whom they consider to be most qualified, most competent to look after the interests of the public. No other electorate is more certain to meet or to have the majority of its members meeting together than this electorate. And whom do they represent ? These 134 members represent every conceivable interest in the land. They include Europeans, Mussalmans, Christians, Hindus, Jews, Parsis, Sikhs, and all. They will be 134 in number ; and there is very little likelihood that these 134 electors would select any one but him whom they consider to be competent and qualified to sit on the directorate of such a bank. Therefore, I submit that the reason urged for preferring a shareholders' bank, namely, the possibility of getting a more responsible directorate than is otherwise securable, will not hold water. We come back to this, that the shareholders' bank will entail a loss of interest upon the general public without securing to them any advantage ; and I submit, Sir, that the Honourable the Finance Member has not been able to give us any reason why we should take that course. What it comes to is this : whether the directorate suggested is a satisfactory one ; and I submit it is perfectly fair that we should argue that matter with all the courtesy and consideration due to every proposal emanating from this part of the House and judge it on the merits ; and after judging it on the merits, if we feel satisfied that the Honourable the Finance Member has suggested an electorate which creates greater confidence in our minds, I certainly would expect the Members on this side of the House to give it their best consideration and if they are satisfied to accept it. On the other hand, what I pray for and what I wish is that the Honourable the Finance Member will be equally prepared to weigh the arguments, to consider the matter and if he found that he could not suggest an electorate more likely to create confidence than the one that we have proposed, he should accept our proposals. But I am sorry to find that he has said that this is a difference which is irreconcilable. Irreconcilable ! Why should it be irreconcilable ? Is it a matter which is being pressed merely from the point of view of urging a proposal which has been taken up by one side or the other side ? It is not so. We have given the matter our most anxious thought. We have considered it from every possible point of view. The Joint Committee carried the proposal in Calcutta by a majority ; and I submit the Government ought cheerfully to accept it. What will be the result if the Government did accept that proposal ? If the Government agree that three of these Directors should be elected by the Central Legislature, it will at once secure the confidence of the elected Members of both parts of the Legislature. Therefore, it will secure the confidence of the entire educated community throughout India ; and I submit it is a big proposition worth consideration even by the Government of India, that it should secure the confidence of the entire educated community of India and of the representatives on this side of the House. This bank is a new venture ; it is coming into existence as an experiment in India and it needs all the careful support that it can get and we are anxious to give it all that support, and I want that that support should be given on terms which will satisfy our consciences that we are discharging our duty to the people whom we have come here to represent. If we are satisfied on that point we are willing to accept any proposal which the Honourable the Finance Member may put forward which commends itself to this part of the House ; but, Sir, when we are told that the Legislature shall not be brought into this business merely because it is the Legislature, I wish to examine the point. The Government have proposed that a Member of the Legislature should not even be eligible as a director of the Bank. They started with that proposition when we met at Bombay. That proposition was overruled by a majority, but the Government are still considering or rather pressing that point against us. Now, I submit that the Legislature here stands on a different footing from the Legislatures in some other countries. Sir, this is a new experiment, and the Legislature has come into existence only recently. We have not many such institutions in this land as can be trusted to safeguard the financial interests of the country to the same extent as for instance the institutions in England can. The Central Legislature, the Assembly combined with the Council of State, I submit, Sir, is the custodian, the chosen and accredited custodian of the interests and the rights of the people of India at present. This being so, it has its duty to perform in seeing that any powers which are given to the proposed Bank shall be exercised under conditions which will satisfy it that the interests of the people will not be sacrificed. In a share capital bank the Governor and the Deputy Governor will to a large extent mould the proceedings and operations of the bank. There may be a few Directors who will always be siding with the Governor, while there may be a few who may not be siding with the Governor. I do not want that there should be opposition between them, but I want that matters of interest to the public should be examined fully and faithfully and conclusions arrived at in the light of those considerations. But, Sir, if the Legislature is not given the power to elect its own representatives, what is there left to us ? The Honourable the Finance Member has proposed various schemes. I wrote to him yesterday to ask for proposals by which he proposed to appoint the 9 Directors, and I take it that those proposals still hold good....

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : I would ask the Honourable Member that, if he is going into all the various proposals that have been made at various times, he should take them all, and not the particular one which I may have sent him at a certain stage for examination. My scheme has always been a shareholders' bank. It was for the Honourable Member to find some scheme which would satisfy the Government and which would include shareholders. I have suggested many, but for none of them do I take any responsibility.

Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya: I take it then, Sir, the position is that the Honourable the Finance Member does not want to submit to us any definite scheme at the present moment except one for a shareholders' bank. Is that so ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : Yes.

Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya: Then, Sir, it will be a waste of time now to discuss the various proposals which the Honourable the Finance Member had put forward regarding the directorate, and we must postpone it to a later stage of the discussion.

I submit, Sir, that the only reason that the Honourable the Finance Member has given for having a shareholders' bank is that it will enable him to have a directorate elected by the shareholders. That, I submit, is very insufficient to satisfy us, and I doubt if these shareholders will be able to bring greater knowledge to bear upon the election of directors than the Members of the Central Legislature, and I do not know if it is right for the Honourable the Finance Member to ask the Legislature to constitute a bank to which it should not have the power of nominating Members of the Legislature. At present we can discuss the policies and the operations of the Government of India. We know what policy the Government of India have pursued sometimes in regard to the question of the ratio ; we know what operations they have performed even during the last 12 months. Now, Sir, all these questions we can discuss fully and freely on the floor of this House. But once the Reserve Bank is constituted, and particularly if it is a shareholders' bank, we shall be met with the answer, " Oh, this is a matter for the Bank ; why should the Government be brought into it ? The Legislature has cooperated with the Government in bringing the bank into existence and has entrusted it with the power of dealing with all these questions. It is therefore improper for the Government to interfere with its management by raising these questions here ". I say, Sir, that we shall be completely shut out. All the time the Honourable the Finance Member, whoever he may be at the time, will be certain that he will be able to exercise his influence over the management of the bank through the Governor whom the Governor General in Council will appoint and whom he has the power to dismiss. I submit, Sir, it will place the Assembly and the country in a very disadvantageous position. I submit it will mean that instead of a bank being run in the interests absolutely of the people of this country, the bank may be run and managed in such a manner as to disregard and sacrifice those interests without the Assembly having sufficient opportunity or the means of controlling or checking the operations of the bank. I do not think, Sir, it is fair to ask the Assembly to place itself in that position. We further proposed that there should be 2 seats for elected Members of the Provincial Legislative Councils. Our reason was this. The Honourable Member himself has admitted the difficulty of forming satisfactory electorates at this time to elect the directors of the Bank. We found the existing bodies unsatisfactory. We therefore felt that the elected Members of the Legislative Councils are elected from a vast number of people ; they represent the people of the districts and are in direct touch with them. We felt that if 3 directors are elected from these elected Members of the Provincial Legislative Councils they are likely to be men who will safeguard, protect and promote the interests of the people. We therefore urged that 3 should be elected by these Provincial Legislatures. Now, Sir, I have not yet heard of any scheme which will better ensure the protection and promotion of the interests of the people as a whole. But the Honourable the Finance Member is not convinced. He made a remarkable speech this afternoon, Sir. He told us, first, the reasons of his preference for this share capital bank. He told us of the labour which he had bestowed upon it. He told us that it was a great thing that was going to be established in India and that it would be a great boon to the people. I venture, Sir, respectfully to differ from him. I doubt very much, Sir, if the Reserve Bank of India brought into existence in the conditions under which it is being brought into existence, having the powers which it will have and managed in the manner in which the Government propose, I very much doubt, Sir, whether that will be an advantage to India. The Imperial Bank of India is one Government-fed bank. The Reserve Bank will be another Government-fed bank. Between these two banks, Sir, between the two stones of the sill, I fear, Sir, that indigenous banking will be crushed. I fear that its growth will be very seriously hampered. All the resources of Government should be made available to promote banking throughout the land, to spread a net-work of banking and give as many facilities to the people as will enable them to earn a living and not starve and die as millions are doing to-day ; but, I submit that for this purpose it is undesirable that there should be two Government-fed banks, that the Government balance should go to help the Imperial Bank on one side and give it all the prestige of being a Government bank for certain purposes and give the Reserve Bank the prestige of being the Government bank besides being the bankers' bank also. Look at only one proposal. Every bank which is to be brought into the schedule of those which will be connected with this Bank has to deposit a reserve to the extent of 5 and 7½ per cent. It is 10 per cent. now. Now, Sir, this 10 per cent. of the working capital of every bank which is to be brought under the benign influence of the Reserve Bank will carry no interest from Government. It will be a mere deposit. Now, Sir, any bank will have to pay interest to its shareholders and depositors, but the Bank will get no interest on this amount which it will deposit as its reserve and this reserve, I am told, Sir, will come up to 6 or 8 crores of rupees. Just imagine 68 crores of rupees being drawn away from these banks which are to be left to earn greater interest in order that they should pay interest on this money which has been locked up idly in the Reserve Bank. I am not satisfied that this Bank is going to bring them any real gain. I am talking of the shareholders' bank. Even if it is a State Bank, Sir, I submit that this proposal that every bank should make its deposit to that extent is a disadvantage. We fought against it and we lost, and the question must come up again before the Assembly for consideration. But as the matter stands, I submit that the Bank will not be such a great gain as the Honourable the Finance Member would lead us to think it will be. And here I cannot do better than support myself again by the authority of my esteemed friend, Mr. Madon, who, in a letter dated the 25th August, in which he has sent me a number of matters which have helped me in this discussion, says :

"I have sent you separately yesterday four sets of news cuttings from the Chronicle giving my eighth article on the Reserve Bank Bill. This one article should suffice to show any unbiassed Indian that the thing which was being palmed off on India as a great boon was really a fraud and contained features that have been rejected by English bankers and financiers in their own case."

This is the opinion of a gentleman whose opinion is entitled to respectful consideration.

Now, Sir, are Indians alone so very chary of believing that this Bank will be an advantage ? No, Sir. The name of Sir John Bell is well known to Members of this House. He was a member of the Joint Committee. He is the President of the Bengal Chamber of Commerce. I invite the attention of this House to his minute of dissent.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : He was President last year.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : Sir John Bell has been careful to point out that the Chamber of Commerce do not agree with him.

Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya : If the Honourable the Finance Member had had a little patience, he would have heard me quote the whole of the remarks. I need hardly assure the Honourable the Finance Member that I shall not try to win on this question by any unfair or underhand means. This is what Sir John Bell says :

"I have signed the Report of the Joint Committee appointed to consider the Gold Standard and Reserve Bank of India Bill, 1927, subject to the following Minute :

> While the establishment of a Reserve Bank in India may be regarded as an ideal to be achieved in the future, I am not convinced that the present is an appropriate time.
> In the first place, the Government of India have just carried through an important change in the currency system of the country, by stabilising the rupee at 1*s.* 6*d.* sterling. I consider that, for some time to come, Government, and no other authority, should be responsible for maintaining the ratio which has been adopted."

I submit, Sir, that this is an opinion which is entitled to weight. The Government ought not to be in such a hurry to carry this Bank through. But the Honourable the Finance Member says, and rightly says, that he has a natural affection for this Bank, that it is his child, that he has created it as a beauty which he loves and adores. You know, Sir, when a parent becomes a fond parent and is lost in admiration of the beauty of his child, his judgment becomes less reliable. Some friends "warped". It becomes partial. I cannot imagine, Sir, any parent who had a monstrosity as his child who could not but feel tender affection for that monstrosity, and I fear that my esteemed friend, Sir Basil Blackett, with all his ability as Finance Member, has lost himself in affectionate admiration of his own child, which is really a monstrosity to be cast outside this Assembly and never allowed to enter Government records again.

Now, Sir, the Honourable Sir Basil Blackett made a remarkable speech. He put forward arguments, appeals, threats, demonstrations down to abuse. I am always ready to listen with respect to any member of Government. They appeal to Indians to consider this question with a sense of solemnity. Most certainly. Then, Sir, comes the threat. If you don't do this, then, they say, the responsibility will be on this Assembly and you will be doing a disservice to this country. Is that argument, Sir ? (The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : " Hear, hear.") My Honourable friend says, " Hear, hear ", but that does not advance the point, Sir. He says we will be doing a disservice to the country if we do not accept this Bill. I challenge the Honourable Member to take it argument by argument and consider it. Let us make the whole House our judge. Let us weigh every argument. If we are wrong, we shall bow to him and accept his view, but if, on the other hand, we convince every Member sitting in this House, who is free to exercise his judgment and to vote according to his judgment that we have got a good case, that our case is better than that of the Honourable the Finance Member, then the charge of doing a disservice will shift back from our shoulders heavily to the shoulders of Sir Basil Blackett. Then, he does not stop there. He says " You are on trial ". He says that the whole world is looking at what we are doing and the whole world will judge whether we have got the capacity to understand what a Reserve Bank is and how it should be constituted and how it should be managed. I challenged my Honourable friend to let our debates and our notes go before an impartial tribunal consisting of one French, one German, one American and one Japanese. Let us put the matter before them. It will then be a fair fight. Then, Sir, he threatens us and abuses us. He has got a certain number of nominated Members who are sitting in this House at his command. That is not fair play. The interests of India are at stake. The interests of 300 millions whom this Bill will affect are at stake. This Bill will affect the commercial and the financial destinies of vast masses of the population. We are as anxious as he is that the Bank should be started on the best lines. It should have a most unexceptionable Directorate that will satisfy everybody that it will manage its work on the most honourable lines. Let us have a fair discussion on it. What is the use of telling us the whole world will judge us. Let the whole world judge us. I have given instances of State Banks which have come down from a long time. How many shareholders' banks are there in existence ? That is the question which my friend should answer.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : May I ask how many of the banks he has mentioned have not got shareholders ?

Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya : When did they have it ? They have the shareholders' bank because England had the honour of starting its old institution, the Bank of England. Now, Sir, England has given many other institutions to the civilised world. Among them is the Parliament, the greatest institution, the institution of institutions. Other nations have copied the Parliaments they now have from England. England is entitled to all honour and credit for it. The Bank of England was in existence as a shareholders' bank, but when other countries came to create their State Banks, were they content to leave the management, as it was left in the case of the Bank of England, to the shareholders ? They did not. That is the crux of it. That is the test of it. In every constitution they provided that the Government should exercise control over the management and should not let the affairs of the Bank be mismanaged. I ask the Honourable the Finance Member to quote the case of a single country where the Government does not control or influence its State Bank in some form or other. I submit that if the world at large ever cares to read to our debates—I do not know why anybody should care to—but if they are persuaded to read our debates I am not afraid that their judgment will go entirely against us.

Then lastly, Sir, there was the threat that the Government would withdraw the Bill. Let them. If the Government withdraw the Bill, speaking for myself and speaking not in passion or heat but after most deliberate consideration, I say it will be a good thing for India if the Government do withdraw the Reserve Bank Bill. It is not in an atmosphere like that which my friend has described that a State Bank should be brought into existence. I agree with him there. But what is the atmosphere ? He talks of there being a conflict of interests. But I am as anxious as he is for unity of purpose. We for our part are offering the hand of fellowship and co-operation. We say to the Government, " You appoint as many Directors as you wish, but let this Assembly appoint three out of the 15 Directors ". We are told this cannot be, that it is an irreconcileable position. I submit, Sir, that that is not the way to treat this House courteously. That is not the way to secure harmony and co-operation from this House. If in this situation the sense of this House considers that the Government proposal should not be accepted and if the Government should withdraw the Bill, I submit that that will not be a matter for one tear or for one lament. But if this Bank is going to come into existence I am not less anxious than the Finance Member that it should come into existence not by the votes of a few on this side or the other, votes secured after the greatest canvassing and the exercise of influence and pressure, but by the unanimous vote of both sides of this House, with everybody feeling that it was a fair deal obtained by working together in harmonious co-operation to bring into existence a Bank which is going to control the destinies of 320 millions of people. And what is the attitude of the Finance Member ? Will he tell me that he is working in that attitude of mind ? Can we say that canvassing has not been carried on to an extent which is almost sickening ? Can anybody say that ? I do not object to canvassing. Everybody is entitled to educate those who come here to work. But in this case and other cases it has gone beyond that and, when it does, I submit that it is not a fair fight. I am not imputing anything wrong to any one. I am only submitting that as matters stand, a number of Members come here as nominated Members. Some of them, if not all, are under the impression that they are bound to support the Government in every way.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : And what about your own party votes ?

Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya : Party votes stand on a much fairer and honester footing than the Government pressure upon these other men. I can say, Sir, that it was suggested that we might also retaliate and adopt some similar course as that adopted on the other side. I am happy and proud to say we declined to accede to such a proposal. I can say, speaking for the parties represented on this side of the House, that the members voted according to their judgment. They may have erred, but I am proud to say that they voted according to the light within them and as they understood the interests of the country. But I submit that this is not the way in which a bank like this should be brought into existence. Let all pressure be taken off and let the matter be judged on its merits. Do not be in hurry to pass it this Session. I know the Finance Member's extension lasts only till April next, and I do not complain. I quite understand that as he believes that it will be a great service to India, I can quite understand his intense anxiety to see it brought into existence. I do not complain of it. But I wish to warn you, I wish you to note, that this is a matter in which the disappointment or the satisfaction of an individual counts like a straw in the weight of gold which in the shape of these transactions will pass through this Bank. I would like to give the utmost satisfaction to the Honourable the Finance Member, and though I am sorry we differed very strongly on many of the policies which he has pursued, it is not within our power ; we shall be sacrificing our duty to our people if in our desire to give a temporary satisfaction to a friend who is going shortly to leave us, we should accept a measure in a hurry lest our esteemed friend should be disappointed. What does it matter to Sir Basil Blackett whether the Reserve Bank of India does or does not come into existence ? It is written in the records of time that he laboured hard to produce this Reserve Bank and to bring it into existence. But, Sir, the satisfaction or dissatisfaction which we feel will be temporary, ephemeral, passing. On the other hand, if the Bank is placed on wrong foundations, if the Bank is constituted on a wrong basis, it will mean a loss and injury to 320 millions of people, and we do not know when we shall be able to remedy that. We have this heavy responsibility in front of us. The question of a little disappointment to an honoured and esteemed friend is of very little consequence, and I hope the Honourable the Finance Member will agree with me.

4 P. M.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : I said it would be a loss to India, not to me.

Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya : That is true. But he spoke of his dissatisfaction ; he made a personal appeal to us that it would be a great disappointment to him if he were to go away without seeing this Bank brought into existence. He says, he is only concerned with the loss to India and not with his own disappointment. I honour the Finance Member, I honour every Member of the House who thinks of the interests of this country ; and, as the Honourable the Finance Member says, he thinks of the loss to India, and that that is his guiding consideration, and I honour him. But will he also have the charity, the fair-mindedness to allow that we too on this side have the interests of the country at heart ? Will he too have the charity to allow that we too have considered this question, have studied it from every possible point of view ? And if we insist so earnestly, so prayerfully, in order that we should get this little satisfaction of having three members nominated to this Bank in the manner suggested, will he also allow that we too have a conscience to satisfy, a duty to perform ? That is the position. I submit the question stands on a very much higher footing than the dissatisfaction or disappointment of the Finance Member, and I hope every Member of the House who is free to vote according to his judgment will weigh the proposition very carefully before deciding which way to vote. There is in this matter no feeling on this side that this is a party question. I sacrifice all parties at the feet of the motherland. All parties are here to serve the motherland. Our one anxiety is to do that which is good for our people, and as we know that this Bank will be a tremendous power affecting the fortunes of the people, we are most anxious that the Bank should be constituted in a manner which will secure that these interests shall be properly understood and safeguarded. I strongly support, Sir, the Report of the Joint Committee, and I hope that the House will lend it its full support and see a bank brought into existence on the lines advocated by the Joint Committee and not on any other lines.

Sir Victor Sassoon (Bombay Millowners Association : Indian Commerce) : Sir, we have before us the Report of a Joint Committee which contained a large number of dissenting minutes, and it has, Sir, been difficult for you to understand the position of the Honourable the Finance Member when he moved the consideration and at the same time criticized some of the clauses in the Report. You will, Sir, therefore sympathise with me in having listened to the very eloquent speech of the Honourable the Pandit, who rose to support the measure, who has not even signed a minute of dissent, and who, as I understood it, made a suggestion that the Reserve Bank should not come into existence. At any rate, he made, what appeared to me a number of very pertinent arguments against the proposal of a Reserve Bank ; and perhaps I may be forgiven if I find that I neither can agree with the Honourable the Finance Member's point of view or yet the point of view of the majority of the Joint Committee. To my mind, in deciding the form which this Reserve Bank is to take, there are two principles which should be unswervingly followed. In the first place, the Governor, the Deputy Governor and the Board must be under some real control ; and, in the second place, the Legislature should have no hand in the direct election of members of that Board. Let me examine how the proposals of the rival Reports of the Joint Committee conform with these principles which I have laid down. I shall first take the recommendation of the Honourable the Finance Member that this Reserve Bank should be a shareholders' bank. I confess, Sir, in spite of what my Honourable friend Pandit Malaviya said, to a partiality for commercial undertakings being left to private enterprise and I should therefore have liked to endorse the Government views in this respect. Unfortunately, however, this would break one of the canons I have laid down, as in effect under these proposals the Governor and the Board will be outside the pale of criticism and the control would be more imaginary than real. What is this commercial corporation as put forward by the Honourable the Finance Member going to be ? It will be a company with a capital consisting of 5 crores of 6 per cent. cumulative preference shares to be subscribed for by the general public and should the general public not take them up, the Government, taking the position of underwriters in the commercial world, will take up the balance ; and besides these 5 crores of preference shares there will be a fluctuating amount of ordinary capital supplied by the State in the form of deposits without interest, and the surplus profits, after the preference dividend has been paid, will go to the ordinary shareholders, that is, the State.

That is how I visualise the shareholders' bank as suggested by the Government. But when we come to the constitution of the Board, we find it differs very largely from that of an ordinary commercial concern, for when we put on one side the Directors nominated or elected by special interests, we find that the majority are to be elected not by the ordinary shareholders but by the preference shareholders ; and as it is rightly felt that it will be unwise to let any large interests control the election of the Board by buying up the shares, the regulation is made that the votes are to be strictly limited irrespective of the number of shares held. So that in practice it is extremely improbable that any move against the Board will succeed as long as the Board safeguards the interests of the preference shareholders, that is to say, maintains a 6 per cent. dividend. The shareholders of this concern will be materially drawn from the class of small investors desiring a safe investment, or, trustees or trust concerns, who as a general rule take very little interest and know very little about problems of currency, exchange or national finance. As long as their dividends are paid, they will give their proxies to the Board and are likely to treat with suspicion any move or attempt that may be made to get their proxies by outside financial interests who may be expected to understand these problems and therefore are in a position to criticise the actions of the Government and the Board. As the Government are disclaiming all right of control or criticism over the Board, the Board may be said to be responsible for the earning of 6 per cent. dividend to their shareholders and responsible for the management of currency to their own consciences. So, Sir, I am very reluctantly forced to abandon the idea of supporting the proposed shareholders' bank and am driven to agree to the institution of a State Bank. (Hear, hear.)

So far, I am at one with the signatories of the Report. But, when I come to the proposals of the formation of a Board of Directors, I find myself at variance with some of their recommendations and so I am between two stools. This Bank is a business institution and its Board must consist of the best business men that India can provide irrespective of caste, colour or creed and I cannot allow the contention that a political body like the Legislature should have any direct voice in the election of this Board of Directors. I would allow, and I would welcome, the right of criticism by the Legislature on the main lines of policy and action of the Bank, though not on details, but I cannot see what greater qualifications a political body has for electing a business man than a commercial electorate must have, and I do see very grave disadvantages in having any trace of political influence in the making of their choice. I am prepared to examine with the greatest sympathy any proposal that may be put forward by either side of the House as to the composition or the choice of the electorate who are to choose these Directors, but I regret that I shall not be able to support any proposal which gives the power to a political body, either directly or indirectly, of electing those who will be responsible for guiding the fortunes of what is essentially a purely business concern.

Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya : Even if the Honourable Member is not able to suggest a better electorate.

Nawab Sir Sahibzada Abdul Qaiyum (North-West Frontier Province : Nominated Non-official) : Sir, I do not rise to make a speech on the subject which is quite unknown to me and of which I cannot claim to have much knowledge. But there are one or two points on which I should like to say a few words. In the first place, it is not uncommon that ironical remarks are directed towards the nominated Members on this side of the House. This is not justifiable.

No doubt some sort of suspicion may be passing in the minds of the Members on the other side of the House that votes are not given by the nominated Members according to their conscience or knowledge of the affairs, but I can assure them, Sir, if not on the part of all the nominated Members, at least on my own part and on the part of other non-official Members like my Honourable friend on my right, that we always try to understand things and to follow them. You may have noticed, Sir, that I am a regular and punctual attendant at the debates in this Assembly. (Applause.) I am always anxious to understand things, and if it generally happens that I do not go to the opposite lobby, it is simply because of my limited knowledge of technical subjects such as this and because I do not necessarily doubt the motive of Government measures. But, in order that I might give my vote in a more sure manner on this occasion, I should like to put a few simple questions, not very technical questions, to the Honourable Members on the opposite side and I hope they will kindly throw some light on those questions. The first question which I should like to ask is this. In ninety nine cases out of hundred, the Government is unreasonably accused of inefficiency, untidiness, slackness, carelessness and so on in managing their affairs in the various departments by the Honourable Members on the opposite benches, but why is it that in this most vital matter of running the finances of the country should the Government be left to manage the financial affairs of the whole country ? Why should an institution, where the precious money of the tax-payers is invested, be left in the hands of the Government, which according to their own verdict are not considered to be a very reliable machinery ? (Laughter.) I have got a little experience of the trouble and care that Members of this House take in checking and examining the State accounts. I have been a Member of the Standing Finance Committee for some three or four years and I have noticed that many of our elected Members come to that meeting without having read even the memorandum of those proceedings. (Laughter.) This is my little experience of the working of these things These Members are very careless about handling State money, while I am sure they are checking their hotel bills most carefully and most thoroughly. (Laughter.) I do not think that a shareholders' bank should be condemned simply because it is suggested by the officials. There may be a strategy in putting the measure in that way. Perhaps the Government suggests a shareholders' bank, because they want it just the other way. The Government perhaps knew that the opposite side will take the reverse view of what they suggest, and so may have thought of bringing them round to their idea of a State Bank in this way. (Laughter.) I remember a small note in a newspaper sometime ago in which somebody remarked as to how Pandit Motilal Nehru formed his opinion about political matters so easily and so fast The Pandit was reported to have said " I have no difficulty in arriving at a conclusion because when I see a note in the Pioneer about anything, I just take the opposite view ! " There is just the possibility that this Bill may have been brought in a similar way.

I think that a shareholders' bank with some limitation or condition for fixing the shares, etc., and with the ordinary Government control over it which is suggested in this Bill, ought to suffice for our purpose. What I mean is this, Sir, that if a percentage of the shares were confined to Indian money and the limit of shares to be purchased by one person was fixed at a small number, that ought to meet the objection of my Honourable friend the Pandit Sahib to a certain extent. A wealthy man need not be allowed to buy a lakh of shares worth a crore of rupees, and if there is any suspicion of foreign capital being invested in the Bank to any great extent, let there be, say, 75 per cent. of the shares specially, reserved for Indian money. That may meet the objection of my Honourable friend to some extent.

The other objection which he raised was that the Government would be depositing their surplus money with this Reserve Bank as they have been doing with the Imperial Bank, and that the profit on that surplus money would go to private shareholders. What I cannot follow is this, that if we have got a certain percentage of Indian money, why should we grudge them the profit if it ever goes to them, when the money is not required by Government? I think it already goes elsewhere. I have not studied the Bill and the speeches very thoroughly, but if the maximum of dividend is also fixed, then there is not much possibility of any huge sums going in that direction. Well, we should not at any rate grudge our countrymen that money.

Another remark which the Pandit Sahib made was that every penny of this income from this Reserve Fund ought to be the property of the tax-payer and must go to him. Well, I am not a great believer in the economy of public money by the Government of India. I do not believe that they will be as economic over expenditure as the shareholders will be. My Honourable friend referred to railway management and the buying up of private railway lines by the State. Well, that is a good illustration; but he may have noticed that even there the present arrangement has only allowed a certain percentage of profits going to the general revenue or Budget and the rest is spent in more constructions. Something similar might happen in the case of this Bank, when the shareholders get large profits of the business. I do not mean that they ought to hand over the profits to Government to be spent like the other revenues of Government, but that perhaps these profits will strengthen the financial position of India as a whole. If the control through the Directors, as is suggested by the Honourable the Finance Member, will bring in the Government of India's hand the control and supervision of the institution, I do not know if the shareholders' bank will not be more profitable. The question may arise whether there will be enough shareholders coming forward with so many conditions and checks laid on them, as they may not perhaps care to submit to the conditions laid down by the Bill or proposed by the Finance Member. In that case, of course, we shall have to go back to the State Bank. But if there are shareholders who will only care for safe dividends and at the same will be prepared to take a real interest in the matter, I think it will be a safer and a sounder policy to have a shareholders' bank.

As regards the election of a number of Directors from this House, there is one thing which makes me rather doubtful about the soundness of it. In the first place, the election of Honourable Members of this House is influenced by matters political in the country. And though we have been fortunate in having got good financiers and expert economists like Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas and Sir Victor Sassoon in this House, at present we cannot be sure that it will always be the case. The country is occasionally run by rash political ideas and we may possibly find one day a large following of Mr. Joshi's friends, and in that case the whole financial structure of the country may possibly be wrecked.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I ask of the Honourable Member whether this country does not consist of the people whom he calls my followers ?

Nawab Sir Sahibzada Abdul Qaiyum : I do not mean to criticise my friend's actions in any way ; but the possibility is there and perhaps we may get a labour majority here one day, who will not care much for the capitalists and their money. Moreover, somebody suggested to me outside the Chamber that, as Members of the Assembly, we can always discuss the bank's affairs in this House. I think, according to rules, we can discuss these affairs at least by a Resolution if not through the Board of Directors ; there is nothing to prevent this House from discussing the working of that institution. I do not know if I am quite correct on this point. I am open to correction and would like to be enlightened by my friends on the opposite side on the point. I do not like to say more on the subject ; all that I want to assure my friends opposite is that there is at least a little sense in us, that we do follow reasoning and that we do give our votes according to our conscience.

As regards myself, Sir, if the Honourable the Pandit Sahib had not denied us the right of election, possibly I might have had a chance of coming here as an elected Member more amenable to his advice and influence. I will say no more now, Sir.

The Assembly then adjourned till Eleven of the Clock on Tuesday, the 30th August, 1927.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

ASSISTANT OFFICER OF THE RANGOON PORT TRUST.

569. *Mr. N. C. Kelkar : Will Government be pleased to state :

(1) Whether their attention has been drawn to the recent advertisement of Commissioners for the port of Rangoon in the Times of India and other papers for the post of Assistant Officer on probation, which ran as follows ?—

"Assistant Officer.

The Commissioners invite applications for the appointment of Assistant Officer on Probation, on agreement for 3 years with prospect of subsequent transfer to permanent establishment on approved service, salary Rs. 450 per mensem rising by annual increments of Rs. 50 to Rs. 550 per mensem. Overseas pay, Rs. 150 per mensem admissible to an assistant of non-Asiatic domicile. Applicants must be under 30 years of age, of good education (University graduate essential in the case of applicants domiciled in India), and have had at least 2 years' practical experience of port or railway traffic work." * * * ."

(2) What is the nature of the two years' "practical experience" of port or railway traffic work required of the applicants ?

(6) If so, what constitutes "good education" in their case ?

(7) Whether applicants of Indian domicile possessing exactly the same education as applicants of non-Indian domicile will be disqualified because they are not university graduates ?

(8) If so, what are the Commissioners' reasons for this discrimination ?

(9) What is the nature of the work these assistant officers have to do and of the training they have to undergo during the three years' period of probation ?

(10) What are the reasons for not giving the officer a guarantee of transfer to permanent establishment on approved service ?

(11) What are the service-scales to which probationary officers of (a) Asiatic (b) non-Asiatic domicile will be entitled on transfer to the permanent establishment ?

(1) When the Rangoon Port Commissioners introduced overseas pay for officers of non-Asiatic domicile ?

(2) Whether any other Port Authorities have introduced overseas pay ?

(3) Whether Indian officers already in the service of the above Port Authorities at the time of the introduction of overseas pay got an increase of pay equal to overseas pay as on the Railways and in Government services ?

(4) Whether the Rangoon Commissioners have adopted any other Lee benefits and if so, which ?

(5) Whether any other Port Authorities have adopted any of the Lee Commission benefits (other than overseas pay) and if so, which are the Port Authorities and which benefits have they adopted ?

(6) Whether there were any discriminations in the pay and emoluments of Indian and European officers prior to the adoption of the Lee concessions in the service of those port authorities and if so, which ?

(7) What discriminations or additional discriminations were introduced by the adoption of the Lee concessions ?

(8) What is the annual cost on account of the grant of Lee benefits to the Trust or Commission ?

(9) Whether it is true that the port services consist almost wholly of Europeans and the service conditions are regulated by bodies with a European majority ?

(10) Whether the Lee Commission benefit schemes came to Government for approval in each case ?

(11) Whether the Port Trust (or Commission) or Government held any inquiry, similar to the inquiry held by Lee Commission, to ascertain whether it was necessary to stimulate the recruitment of Europeans and whether the European officers had real financial grievances ?

(12) What were the reasons for holding the Lee benefits applicable to port services which are not mentioned in the Lee Report ?

(13) What are the service scales in force as now revised in each of these port authorities and how do they compare with State Railway service and other Government services ?

(14) How do the total emoluments of officers in Port Trust Services compare with those of Government servants of corresponding rank and status ?

RECRUITMENT OF INDIANS TO THE SUPERIOR PORT TRUST SERVICES.

571. Mr. N. C. Kelkar : Will Government be pleased to state, in the case of each of the major ports :

(1) What steps have been taken by the Trustees or Commissioners since Sir Pheroze Sethna's Resolution on the Indianization of the superior Port Trust Services was accepted by Government in 1922, for the direct recruitment of Indians to superior posts in the (a) Port (b) Engineering and (c) General Administration Departments ?

(2) What percentage, if any, of Indian recruitment to total recruitment has been fixed ?

SUPERIOR POSTS IN THE PORT TRUSTS HELD BY EUROPEANS, ANGLO-INDIANS AND INDIANS, ETC.

572. *Mr. N. C. Kelkar : (1) Will Government be pleased to furnish, in the case of each major port, a detailed statement showing the cadre of superior posts (including vacant posts) in each department of the Trust or Commission as on 1st June 1927, and the names of existing holders, their educational qualifications, age, pay and scale, nationality (European, Anglo-Indian or Indian) and domicile (Asiatic or non-Asiatic) ?

(2) What is the position as regards Indianization of each department in the near future ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : With your permission, Sir, I will reply to questions Nos. 565, 566 and 569 to 572 together.

The information asked for in these questions is being obtained from the Local Governments and will be supplied to the Honourable Member on receipt.

Mr. N. C. Kelkar : The Honourable Member (Sir George Rainy) might take the other questions in such order as he likes and answer them. I cannot remember which questions he has answered already. So, he might take all the questions together and answer them in his own order.

Mr. K. Ahmed : If the number of the question is mentioned, it can be followed, otherwise it will be very difficult to grasp the answers.

Mr. President : No. 567.

THROWING OPEN OF THE MEETINGS OF PORT TRUSTS TO THE PRESS AND THE PUBLIC.

567. *Mr. N. C. Kelkar : Will Government be pleased to state, in the case of each major port :

(1) Whether any minutes of the meetings of the Trustees or Commissioners are kept officially ?

(2) Whether the meetings are open to the Press and the public ?

(3) If not, whether Government are prepared to issue the necessary orders or make the necessary amendments in the respective Acts to throw open the meetings to the Press and the public ?

(4) Whether the minutes of the meetings in (1) are available to the public ?

(5) If not, whether Government are prepared to issue the necessary orders or make the necessary amendments in the respective Acts to make the minutes available to the public on payment of a reasonable price if necessary ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : (1) Yes. The various major Port Trust Acts provide for this.

(2) There is no provision in any of the Acts on this point, but it is understood that the meetings are not now open to the Press and to the public.

(3) No such suggestion has previously been made, and the matter has never been considered by the Government.

(4) In Calcutta, Bombay, Karachi and Aden, the minutes are open to inspection by Trustees only. In Madras they are published in the Fort St. George Gazette. In Rangoon they are open to inspection by the public, except such portions as the Chairman may in any particular case direct.

(5) The question will be considered.

PURCHASE OF STORES BY PORT TRUSTS.

568. *Mr. N. C. Kelkar : Will Government be pleased to state, in the case of each of the major ports :

(1) What was the value (a) of stores imported direct (b) of imported stores purchased in India and (c) of stores of Indian manufacture or of indigenous origin, for each of the financial years 1924, 1925 and 1926 ?

(2) Whether the port authority is bound by Government rules governing the purchases of stores ?

(3) If not, (a) why not and (b) what are the rules governing the purchase of its stores ?

(4) Whether major ports being a central subject, the purchase is made through the Indian Stores Department ?

(5) If not, what is the agency for the purchase of stores ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : (1) Government have no information.

(2), (3), (4) and (5). Under the various Port Acts the Boards of Commissioners or Trustees are empowered to enter into contracts for the purchase of stores. They are not, therefore, subject to the Rules for the Supply of Articles for the Public Service, but are free to make their own arrangements for the purchase of stores. They occasionally utilise the services of the Indian Stores Department for this purpose.

INDIANIZATION OF THE SUPERIOR SERVICES UNDER THE VARIOUS PORT TRUSTS.

574. *Mr. N. C. Kelkar : Will Government be pleased to state whether they will submit annually, as in the case of Railway Services, a detailed statement showing how Indianization of the superior Port Services was progressing, giving details as to vacancies on the superior list, filled, department by department, at each of the major ports during the year, the nationality of the person selected and reasons in cases where an Indian is not appointed, for not appointing an Indian ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : Government will consider the suggestion contained in this question.

(Mr. President then called on Mr. M. S. Sesha Ayyangar in whose name question No. 575 stood.)

Mr. M. S. Sesha Ayyangar : I am not putting these questions.

Mr. President : Does the Honourable Member wish to put question No. 575 or not ?

Mr. M. S. Sesha Ayyangar : I am not putting the questions standing in my name, Nos. 575 to 578.

APPOINTMENT OF A COMMISSION TO INVESTIGATE THE POSSIBILITY OF FEDERATING THE BRITISH CENTRAL AND EAST AFRICAN COLONIES.

579. Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : (a) Are Government aware that the appointment of a Commission to investigate the possibility of federating the British Central and East African Colonies has excited serious apprehensions in this country with regard to the future position of Indians in those Colonies ? Has their attention been drawn in this connection to the article headed " A Betrayal " in the Servant of India of the 21st July 1927 ?

(b) Is it a fact that, while the White Paper of 1923 declared that His Majesty's Government regarded themselves as exercising a trust on behalf of the African population and that ' they are unable to delegate or share this trust the object of which may be defined as the protection and advancement of the native races ", the White Paper recently issued in connection with the appointment of the Commission referred to in the previous question lays down that the Whites' claim to share progressively the responsibilities cannot be limited to representatives of their community's interests ; and if clashes between these interests and those of the vast native population are to be avoided, their share in the trusteeship for the progress and welfare of the native must be developed ?

(c) If so, were the Government of India consulted before this change of policy, was announced ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : (a) The answer to the first part is in the affirmative. As regards the second part Government have seen the article in question.

(b) The Honourable Member is referred to the statement made on the 18th August, 1927, by the Honourable Sir Muhammad Habibullah on the scope of the announcement made in the White Paper regarding the claim to association in the responsibilities of Government of the immigrant communities.

(c) The Government of India were informed of the announcement, contemplated by His Majesty's Government.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Am I to assume, Sir, that their views were not invited before a decision was taken by the Imperial Government ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : I fear I can in no way supplement the answer which I have already given, namely, that the Government of India were informed of the announcement contemplated by His Majesty's Government.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : Are Government in a position to give the names of the personnel of the Royal Commission ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : No, Sir.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : When do Government expect to be in possession of the names ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : It is for His Majesty's Government to announce the personnel. We have no information as to when it will be done.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : I am sure that the Government of India are equally interested, if not more.

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : I did not for a minute, Sir, suggest that the Government of India were not interested. I was only pointing out the constitutional position which is that the decision rests with His Majesty's Government.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : Have the Government of India any information at all about the personnel yet ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : No, Sir.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : When do they expect to have the information, Sir ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : I cannot say.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : May I ask, Sir, if the Government know anything about the personnel and whether Indians would be appointed on the Commission ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : The position, Sir, was stated by the Honourable Sir Muhammad Habibullah on Mr. Roy's adjournment motion. Sir Muhammad promised that the substance of the discussion will be communicated to the Secretary of State. That has been done.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : Have the Government of India any objection to finding out the names before the House adjourns ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : None, Sir. We shall try and ascertain the names. Whether His Majesty's Government will be in a position to communicate the names I cannot say.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : May I inquire if the Government of India have not been consulted about the personnel of the Commission and if they have not made recommendations on the subject ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : The Honourable Member's question, as far as I can see, falls into two parts. As to whether the Government of India have been consulted regarding the personnel, I can only refer the Honourable Member to the discussion which took place in this House the other day. With regard to the other part, namely, whether they have made any recommendations, I think I answered the Honourable Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru a minute ago that the substance of the debate in this House was communicated to the Secretary of State.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Will the Government of India be asked to nominate the representatives of the Indian Government on the Commission or will they be appointed by His Majesty's Government without consulting the Government of India ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : The Honourable Member, I think, is fully aware of the statement made by the Secretary of State for the Colonies in the House of Commons, which was to the effect that the Secretary of State for India had been asked to nominate a representative.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Did the Secretary of State inquire from the Government of India as to who should be appointed ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : No, Sir.

Sir Pushotamdas Thakurdas : Do the Government of India not think it desirable, in view of the reply given to the last Honourable Member, to name their representative to the Secretary of State ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : I did not quite follow the question.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : Do the Government of India not think it desirable to give the name of their representative to the Secretary of State so that he may be put on the Royal Commission ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : I said just now, Sir, that the Government of India have communicated the substance of the proceedings in this House on the 18th, with their recommendations, to the Secretary of State. As to the nature of their recommendations, I regret to say that I can make no statement.

Mr. M. A. Jinnah : May I know whether the Government of India are not prepared to recommend definite names to form the personnel of this Commission ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : I did not say that that was the case, Sir.

Mr. M. A. Jinnah : Are the Government prepared to do so ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : I think, Sir, that Sir Muhammad Habibullah definitely stated on the floor of this House on the 18th that the Government were prepared to communicate the wishes of this House in regard to representation on the Commission to the Secretary of State for India.

Mr. M. A. Jinnah : Have they submitted any specific name or names yet ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : I can make no statement on that point.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Yes ; take shelter like this.

REPRESENTATION OF THE SECRETARY OF STATE ON THE COMMISSION APPOINTED TO INVESTIGATE THE POSSIBILITY OF FEDERATING THE BRITISH CENTRAL AND EAST AFRICAN COLONIES.

580. Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Is it a fact that the Secretary of State for India will be represented on the African Commission ? Is it a fact that he has acquiesced in the new policy ? If not, what steps have Government taken to protest against the change of the policy solemnly enunciated in 1923 ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : As regards the first part of the question, the Honourable Member's attention is invited to the statements made on this subject by the Honourable Sir Basil Blackett and the Honourable Sir Muhammad Habibullah on the 18th August 1927. As regards the second part, the Honourable Member is presumably referring to the policy of associating the European and other immigrant communities in the responsibilities of Government. The Government of India have no information on the subject. With regard to the third part, the Honourable Member's attention is invited to the statement made on the 18th August by the Honourable Sir Muhammad Habibullah on Mr. K. C. Roy's adjournment motion. The need of lodging a protest has not arisen.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Are Government aware that Mr. Thomas stated in the House of Commons that he regarded the new policy as a serious change in the old policy ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : Yes, Sir, Government are aware of the statement made by Mr. Thomas on the subject, but I do not think that Government are bound to share the gloom which appears to have characterised the attitude of Mr. Thomas in regard to the announcement.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Then, Sir, do they always accept the opinion expressed by superior authority ?

DISCONTENT AMONG SENIOR OFFICIALS IN THE POSTAL DEPARTMENT.

581. Mr. Bhabendra Chandra Roy : (a) Are the Government aware that owing to the 50 per cent. limiting rule the junior officials get higher pay than the senior officials in the Post Office Department and that discontent among the latter is acute ?

(b) Are the Government prepared to consider the question of sanctioning the benefit of the next below rule to remove the grievances of the senior officials ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) The Government of India are aware that in some cases the operation of the 50 per cent. rule has resulted in a senior drawing less than his junior which has led to a certain amount of discontent.

EXTENSION OF THE POST OFFICE LIFE INSURANCE SCHEME TO THE EXTRA-DEPARTMENTAL AGENTS.

582. Mr. Bhabendra Chandra Roy : Will Government be pleased to state the decision at which they have arrived in respect of extension of the Post Office Life Insurance scheme to the Extra-Departmental Agents ?

Mr. H. A. Sams : The matter is still under consideration.

SALE OF QUININE BY POSTAL EMPLOYEES.

583. Mr. Bhabendra Chandra Roy : With reference to the fact that the postal employees are not bound to sell quinine under the departmental rule as stated in reply to question No. 817 during the winter season of the Assembly will Government state whether the postal employees' views have been ascertained as to their willingness to sell quinine at the commission granted to them or not ? If not, why ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : No. It was not considered necessary to consult the postal employees, as there is no compulsion on them to undertake the work.

THE POST OFFICE GUARANTEE FUND.

584. *Mr. Bhabendra Chandra Roy : Are Government now in a position to furnish the information as assured in reply to starred question No. 819 on the 9th March 1927 regarding the Post Office Guarantee Fund ?

Mr. H. A. Sams : The information was supplied to the Honourable Member in the demi-official letter No. 111-R.|27—D.I., dated the 10th June 1927, from the Secretary, Industries and Labour Department. If the Honourable Member has not received that letter and its enclosures, I shall be glad to give him a copy.

SANCTION OF CONTINGENT ALLOWANCES TO THE EXTRA-DEPARTMENTAL AGENTS.

585. *Mr. Bhabendra Chandra Roy : (a) Is it a fact that the Extra-Departmental Agents were sanctioned contingent allowance for stationery ?

(b) Will Government be pleased to state the consideration which led the Government to sanction their contingent allowances ?

(c) Do Government propose to sanction to them the contingencies according to the formula prescribed by the Director-General of Posts and Telegraphs in his letter No. 25-7-A.|25, dated 16th November 1925 addressed to the Postmaster-General ?

Mr. H. A. Sams : (a) No.

(c) No. The monthly payment made to them is intended to cover the cost of stationery. Most of the stationery used by them consists of printed forms supplied by the Department.

†586.—588.

RECRUITMENT TO NEW PROVINCIAL SERVICES.

589. *Mr. B. Das : With reference to the recommendations of the Lee Commission that Provincial Governments shall recruit all posts for superior services on the transferred side and the pronouncement of His Excellency the Viceroy in the opening address of the Simla Session 1926 that Provincial Governments have been empowered by the Secretary of State to recruit and organise such new Provincial Services, will Government be pleased to state :

(a) What definite steps have been taken by each of the Provincial Governments to create these new cadres of services ?

(b) Which of the Provinces have started recruitment under this new system and if so what are the departments on the transferred side to which such services are recruited ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Local Governments are preparing the necessary schemes, which they will embody in rules regulating the methods of recruitment, conditions of service, pay, allowances and pensions for their new Provincial Services. Until Local Governments have settled these principles, they are not in a position to start recruitment.

† Not put at the meeting, owing to the absence of the questioner, but the questions and answers to them will be found at page 3628 of these proceedings.

DELEGATION OF CONTROL OF THE CENTRAL SERVICES TO THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

590. *Mr. B. Das : With reference to the following passage in the speech of His Excellency the Viceroy at the August Session of the Central Legislature of 1926 :

"With a few exceptions, it has been decided that control over these great central Services, should be delegated by the Secretary of State in Council to the Government of India. The necessary rules are at present under preparation, and I hope that within a few months the delegation will be an accomplished fact."

Will Government be pleased to state :

(a) the Departments of Central Services that will hereafter be recruited in India ?

(b) whether the necessary rules have been prepared and if so will Government be pleased to lay a copy of the same on the table ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Draft rules are at present under the consideration of the Secretary of State. Until the rules are finally made I regret I am not in a position to give the Honourable Member the information for which he asks.

PREVENTION OF FLOODS.

591. *Mr. B. Das : With reference to the following passages in the speech of the Honourable Sir Clement Hindley on the Resolution on investigation into causes of recurring floods moved in this House on 24th September, 1924 :

"I hope my friend who moved this Resolution will agree with me that I have to some extent established the case for the care with which the Government and the Railways deal with these matters when they are brought to their notice. I would like to suggest that the matter be left with us for the present and we will look into it generally to see whether it is necessary to address Local Governments, with an invitation that we should assist them in any particular case in which they may be concerned."

Will Government be pleased to state :

(a) What was the nature of letter if any addressed by the Railway Board on floods to these Local Governments ?

(b) What specific assistance was offered by the Railway Board to these Provincial Governments ?

(c) In how many cases waterways have been enlarged by the Railways under the pressure of the Railway Board at the request of the Provincial Governments and what is the total length in feet of such extended waterways ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) and (b). Government called the attention of all major Local Governments to the debate on the resolution referred to by the Honourable Member and in doing so said that while flood prevention and protection were primarily provincial matters the Government of India were prepared, in view of the importance of the subject, to assist the Local Government to the utmost extent of their powers wherever there was reason to believe that excessive floods were due to central works such as Railways or where assistance was required to obtain co-ordination between a Railway and the local authorities or between two provinces or in any case in which technical advice was required which was not available locally.

(c) I have been unable to trace any such cases though there have been several in which Local Governments and railway administrations have acted together in concerting measures to prevent a recurrence of flood damages.

Mr. K. Ahmed : In view of the fact that Government have not done anything in the matter though it was promised by the Honourable Member's predecessor in this House, do Government propose now for the benefit of the country to act up to that promise, so that the people may not suffer again from floods and their houses and homesteads may not be submerged in water ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : As I am unable to accept as accurate the statement of fact with which my Honourable friend began his remarks, I am afraid I am not prepared to argue the point with him.

Mr. B. Das : Is it not a fact that after the North Bengal floods in 1923 (An Honourable Member : " 1924 ") the Railway Board appointed a special enquiry committee which was presided over by Rai Bahadur Lala Rallia Ram and thereafter the Railway Board compelled the Railways to expand their waterways to the required extent ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The facts are not within my memory, I did not then hold the position which I do now. But I am quite prepared to take it from the Honourable Member that they are correctly stated by him.

Mr. B. Das : Is it not also a fact that after the floods in 1900 on the Bengal Nagpur Railway between Balasore and Bhadrak the Bengal Nagpur Railway authorities constructed new bridges whereby floods in that area have been prevented thereafter ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I am afraid that when my memory does not carry me back to 1923, still less does it carry me back to 1900.

Mr. B. Das : In referring to the Honourable Member's reply that the Railways or the Government of India in the Railway Board are not primarily responsible for the economic distress owing to floods enhanced by the railway embankments, will Government be pleased to state whether the economic disasters to the agriculturists and the villagers are not greatly enhanced by the railway embankments, and whether the Railway Board being responsible for the railway embankments are not responsible for the distress ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I am afraid I am not prepared to argue the question at present, or to accept without a great deal of qualification the suggestions made by my Honourable friend in his question.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Are Government aware that a cause of action lies against them and that they will have to pay a considerable amount for the damage done to these people ? Will Government understand the question then only ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I am not aware that a cause of action lies against Government, but I should be quite prepared to receive notice.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Did they not get a notice some time ago when there was a flood in North Bengal and the Honourable Member's Department, on behalf of the Secretary of State received the notice ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Not that I am aware of.

Mr. K. Ahmed : In view of the fact that the Honourable Member was not in the Department in which he is now, he is not in a position to explain that. Is that so ?

PREVENTION OF FLOODS.

592. Mr. B. Das : (a) Will Government be pleased to lay on the table all correspondence between the Provincial Governments and the Central Government (including the Departments of Railway Board and Industries and Labour) arising out of the Resolution on the investigation into causes of recurring floods ?

(b) Have Government reached any definite conclusion on the causes of these floods and their remedies since their observations made on the Resolution on causes of floods in 1924 and if so what are they ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) A copy of the correspondence is laid on the table.

(b) The Government of India have reached no definite conclusions on the causes of these floods or the remedies for them since the observations made on the Resolution on the causes of floods in 1924. It will be observed from the papers laid on the table that Local Governments were addressed by the Government of India shortly after the Resolution referred to was withdrawn, and the Government of India offered to assist Local Governments in investigating the causes and remedies for recurring floods. With the exception of the Bihar and Orissa Government which recently addressed the Government of India on the subject, no Local Government has asked for assistance, but it does not follow that they have not, in the meantime, been investigating causes and remedies themselves.

COPY OF LETTER NO. 1-7|41, DATED THE 19TH NOVEMBER 1924, FROM THE DEPUTY SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA, DEPARTMENT OF INDUSTRIES AND LABOUR, PUBLIC WORKS BRANCH, TO ALL MAJOR LOCAL GOVERNMENTS.

Investigation into Causes of Recurring Floods.

I am directed to invite a reference to the debate which took place in the Legislative Assembly on the 24th September 1924 on the above subject and which is printed on pages 4083—4101 of the accompanying Legislative Assembly Debates, Vol. IV, No. 60. In doing so, I am to say that while flood protection and prevention are primarily provincial matters the Government of India are prepared, in view of the importance of the subject, to assist the Local Governments to the utmost extent of their powers.

(i) wherever there is reason to believe that excessive floods are due to central works, such as Railways ;

(ii) where assistance is required to obtain co-ordination between a Railway and the local authorities or between two provinces ; and

(iii) in any case in which technical advice is required which is not available locally.

COPY OF LETTER NO. 6790-I., DATED THE 3RD FEBRUARY 1925, FROM THE SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF BOMBAY, PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT, TO THE SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA, DEPARTMENT OF INDUSTRIES AND LABOUR, PUBLIC WORKS BRANCH.

Investigation into Causes of Recurring Floods.

Referring to your letter No. 1-7|41, dated 19th November 1924, I am directed by the Governor in Council to observe that this Government is fully alive to the necessity of maintaining drainage lines intact and the Bombay Irrigation Act of 1879 provides ample safeguards to that end. In all canal, road and building projects the utmost care is taken to provide for adequate drainage works. It is, therefore, not considered necessary to carry out at present any investigation into causes of floods and the measures for their prevention. I am, however, to request you to convey this Government's thanks to the Government of India for their offer which will be availed of, should the occasion arise.

APPOINTMENT OF EXPERT COMMITTEES BY PROVINCIAL GOVERNMENTS TO ENQUIRE INTO THE CAUSES OF FLOODS.

593. Mr. B. Das : With reference to the telegram of H. E. the Governor of Bihar and Orissa addressed to H. E. the Viceroy on floods in Orissa and the announcement of that Government to appoint an expert Committee to enquire into causes of floods as occurring in the following passage—

"This Government has decided to take steps with the assistance of the Government of India to set up a strong expert Committee to review fully the conditions and report on any action that can be taken for relief and is addressing the Government of India."

Will Government be pleased to state :

(a) if they have received the despatch from the Government of Bihar and Orissa on the subject ?

(b) if they have received any communications from other Provincial Governments such as Bombay, Bengal, etc., on the advisability of appointing an expert Committee to enquire into the causes of floods ?

(c) in case they have not been approached by many Provincial Governments, if they propose to invite the attention of those Governments to the necessity of appointing an expert Committee to enquire into the causes of floods ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) Yes.

(b) No.

(c) In reply to the previous question I explained that the Government of India had addressed Provincial Governments on this subject. In view of the general distress caused by the recent heavy floods, the Government of India propose, apart from the action which will be taken on the letter from the Government of Bihar and Orissa, to address other Local Governments again, and ask them whether they consider that any useful purpose would be served by the appointment of an expert Committee by the Central Government to consider such questions.

APPOINTMENT OF ENGINEERS FOR THE TRAINING OF RIVERS.

594. *Mr. B. Das : (a) Have Government considered the advisability of appointing waterway engineers with a view to train the rivers of India ?

(b) Is it not a fact that the Floods Enquiry Committee which was appointed by the Burma Government and reported early last February recommended to that Government the appointment of waterway engineers for the training of rivers in Burma ?

(c) Has any of the other provinces besides Burma decided to appoint waterway engineers for the training of rivers ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) The question of appointing engineers to train rivers is one primarily for Local Governments. Such Local Governments as are interested in the subject have already either appointed engineers or have the question of their appointment under consideration.

(b) Yes.

(c) Yes. The Bengal Government for example have engineers who have been trained in such work.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Is it not a fact that Mr. Lala Ram or Ganga Ram (An Honourable Member : " Rai Bahadur Rallia Ram "), Rai Bahadur Rallia Ram was making enquiries into the North Bengal flood in 1923 and 1924 and he submitted a report to the Government of India ?

I am sorry the Honourable Member does not appreciate the point. Is it not a fact, Sir, that Mr. Rallia Ram was deputed by the Government to make enquiries regarding the waterways on the occasion of the North Bengal floods in 1923-24, and he submitted a report recommending that more space should be afforded for waterways ? But still Government have not acted upon it in the recent floods. Do Government now propose to act upon that report ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : I did not quite catch the name of the particular engineer referred to by my Honourable friend, whether it was Ganga Ram, or Lala Ram. But whatever his name was, I have no recollection of any such report having been submitted to the Government of India.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Did not the Government of India in the year 1924 say, I think it was Sir Clement Hindley who said it, that they are awaiting a report by Mr. Rallia Ram, the engineer deputed to make inquiries about the waterways ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I do not remember the statement of Sir Clement Hindley, but it is quite possible he may have said something of the kind.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Is not the principle set out in that report grasped by the present members of the Government answering the question from those seats ?

SEPARATION OF JUDICIAL AND EXECUTIVE FUNCTIONS.

595. Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : Will the Government be pleased to state :

1. When the question of the separation of the judicial from the executive was taken up for investigation by the Government of India ?
2. When were the Provincial Governments asked to give their opinions ?
3. Which of the Provincial Governments have submitted their opinions and to what effect ?
4. Which of the Provincial Governments have not yet submitted their opinions ? And what efforts have been made by the Government of India to obtain their opinions ?
5. Do Government propose to handle the matter seriously at an early date ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : As was explained in the Council of State last February, certain proposals were received from four Local Governments. These proposals have been considered carefully by the Government of India who are addressing the Secretary of State on the subject.

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : The Honourable Member has not given a reply to part (5) of my question.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : My reply on that point was that the Government of India are addressing the Secretary of State on the subject and I hope the communication on the subject will issue at a very early date.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Is it not a fact, Sir, that the first Resolution on the subject for the separation of the judicial from the executive was moved in the latter part of the first reformed Assembly by Mr. Mukherjee and it was carried in this House ? What are the Government doing since then ?

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : May I know when the Government of India addressed the Secretary of State on the subject ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I explained that the Government of India were about to address the Secretary of State on the subject.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : May I know when the opinion of the last Local Government was received ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I think the last communication on the subject from a Local Government was at the end of 1924 or the beginning of 1925.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : May I ask if all the Local Governments have submitted their recommendations ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Only four Local Governments to which I have referred. Those were the Governments of the United Provinces, Bihar and Orissa, Bengal and Madras.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Why have the Government of India taken 2½ years to address the Secretary of State ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : The question is one of great complexity and difficulty.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Is it not going to be barred by limitation ? Is it not a fact, Sir, that the Committee appointed by the Government of Bengal under instructions from the Government of India submitted its report on the separation of judicial and executive functions in 1924, and, if so, what have the Government done to it up till now ?

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Is it a fact that Sir William Vincent promised in 1921 that if there was any Local Government which approved of the separation of judicial and executive functions and came up to the Government of India, the Government of India would be prepared and give effect to its wishes.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : It is correct that there was a debate on the subject and a Resolution was issued in which Local Governments were informed that if they decided to submit proposals they would be considered by the Government of India and if any legislation was required I think it was stated that the Government of India would be prepared to give effect to it.

Mr. K. Ahmed : If the Government of India acting in the name of the Secretary of State is tired of doing their work, do the Government of India propose to transfer this work to the Honourable Members over here in this Assembly who will be able to advise them on the subject ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I do not think that question arises.

Mr. K. Ahmed : The Honourable the Home Member said the matter is under consideration. What is the difficulty ? Are there any points of law in it ? If so, they can be easily transferred to some talented brain for their solution.

NUMBER OF MUSSALMAN OFFICERS AND CLERKS ON THE BENGAL NAGPUR RAILWAY.

596. Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : What is the total number of officers and the clerks respectively on the Bengal Nagpur Railway and how many of them are Mussalmans ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I would refer the Honourable Member to Appendix F in Volume I of the Railway Board's Report on Indian Railways for 1925-26 and to Appendix C of Volume II of the same report which gives the available information.

REPRESENTATION OF MINORITY COMMUNITIES ON THE BENGAL NAGPUR RAILWAY.

597. Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : Was the communiqué of the Government of India relating to the representation of the minority communities communicated to the authorities of the Bengal Nagpur Railway ? If yes, what measures were taken by the Railway to give effect to it ? If not, why not ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The policy of the Government of India in this matter was communicated to the Bengal Nagpur Railway administration and to other railway administrations. With regard to the latter portion of the question, I can only invite the Honourable Member's attention to the reply given to him on the 27th January 1927 by the Honourable Sir Charles Innes.

598. Mr. M. S. Aney : (a) With reference to the reply given on 3rd February 1925 in this House to starred question No. 744 put by Mr. N. C. Kelkar, will the Government be pleased to publish the list of 42 persons referred to in part (a) of the aforesaid question and reply ?

(e) If so, from whom and with what result ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a) The list was compiled by the Forward and published in its issue of the 24th February 1924, to which I would refer the Honourable Member.

(b) The attitude of the Government is the same as it has been (1) from the beginning, namely, that they will take individual cases into consideration when any of those concerned applies for facilities to return to India.

(c) Government do not propose to do this.

(d) and (e). In a few cases since February 1925 Government have received applications for permission of return to India from persons included in the above list. In none of these cases have Government refused the formal facilities for return.

GRANT OF FACILITIES TO PROFESSOR KHANKHOJE TO RETURN TO INDIA.

599. Mr. M. S. Aney : (a) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to the article appearing under the heading " An Eminent Indian exile, Professor Khankhoje and his deportation " in the issue of the Bombay Chronicle of 26th of June 1927 ?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to state clearly whether they are prepared to give the necessary facilities to Professor Khankhoje if he applies for a passport to the proper authorities in Mexico to return to India ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a) No.

(b) If and when an application is made, it will be dealt with on its merits.

(b) If the answer be in the affirmative will the Government be pleased to state what that decision is and when was it arrived at ?

Sir Denys Bray : (a) No, Sir.

(b) Does not arise.

601. Mr. M. S. Aney : Will the Government be pleased to state for the information of the Members of this House in a tabular form, the points of difference if any in regard to the principles of the Land Revenue system in Berar, between :

(a) The Berar Legislative Committee and the Government of India ?

(b) The Berar Legislative Committee and the Government of the Central Provinces ? And (c) The Government of the Central Provinces and the Government of India ?

Sir Denys Bray : Government regret that they cannot supply the information asked for. But I may assure the Honourable Member that their views will in due course be placed before the Berar Legislative Committee.

Mr. K. Ahmed : How much of the land revenue collected in Berar is distributed between the Government of India, the Central Provinces and the local legislative committee, per year ?

Sir Denys Bray : I would ask for notice

Mr. K. Ahmed : In view of the fact that Berar is in the possession of the Government of India under the perpetual lease granted by His Exalted Highness the Nizam, what course will Government propose to adopt and what principle will be followed in the repayment of the land revenue realised, in case Berar is to be returned to His Exalted Highness in future, as they say that there was no question of the granting of a perpetual lease to the Government of India when His Excellency the Viceroy, Lord Curzon, in 1902, had an interview with the Nizam in his Palace at Hyderabad ?

NUMBER OF OFFICES IN A POSTAL INSPECTOR'S SUB-DIVISION.

602. Mr. M. S. Aney : (a) Is it a fact that there is a rule in the Postal Department that an Inspector's sub-division should not ordinarily consist of more than 40 offices ?

(b) Is it a fact that at present the number of such offices have been increased from 40 to 60 and even more in certain cases ?

(c) If so, will the Government state in how many sub-divisions throughout British India and Burma, the number of offices exceeds 40 ?

(d) The question of the adequacy of the authorised strength of Inspectors with a view to reduce the bulk of work ?

Mr. H. A. Sams : (a) No.

(b) and (c). Do not arise.

(d) The question of the adequacy of the authorised strength of Inspectors is examined by me from time to time with a view to increasing their number when required.

APPOINTMENT OF CLERKS FOR THE OFFICES OF INSPECTORS OF POST OFFICES.

603. Mr. M. S. Aney : (a) Is it a fact that the All-India (including Burma) Postal and R. M. S. Conference has adopted resolutions recommending the appointment of a clerk for the office of Inspector of Post Offices since the last several years ?

(b) Do the Government intend to sanction the aforesaid appointment immediately ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) Yes.

(b) Government do not consider the appointment necessary at present.

INCREASE OF THE TRAVELLING ALLOWANCE OF OFFICIALS IN THE DISTRICT OF BERAR.

604. Mr. M. S. Aney : Is it a fact that the Central Provinces Government has increased the travelling allowance of officials in Berar (District of Berar only and not the Central Provinces) owing to the high cost of living about two years ago ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : The Government of India have no information on the subject.

605. Mr. M. S. Aney : (a) Will the Government be pleased to publish what decision the Postmaster Generals' Conference held in 1926 arrived at regarding the increase in travelling allowance of Inspectors of Post Offices who are not given mileage allowance at present ?

(b) Do the Government intend to sanction the increase at an early date ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) The Government of India are not prepared to publish such decisions.

(b) The matter is under consideration of Government.

(c) expenses charged to Capital and Revenue both recurring and non-recurring incurred on account of these trains during the same period ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) The names of through trains which do not provide accommodation for third class passengers are as follows :

(1) Imperial Indian Mail between Calcutta and Bombay.

(2) 1 Up and 2 Down East Indian Railway 61 Up and 62 Down North Western Railway.

(3) 5 Up and 6 Down East Indian Railway Punjab Mails between Calcutta and Saharanpur.

(4) 85 Up and 86 Down Bombay Mails between Lahore and Delhi ?

(a) running of mail and fast expresses,

(b) running of passenger trains,

(c) running of goods trains,

(d) shunting ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I have sent a statement to the Honourable Member giving such information as is available.

COAL FOR THE MAJOR INDIAN RAILWAYS.

611. *Mr. N. C. Kelkar : Will the Government be pleased to lay on the table a statement showing the coal, described with reference to the collieries in which they are mined, which meet the requirements of each of the major Indian Railways under each of the following heads :

(a) running of mails and fast expresses,

(b) running of ordinary passenger trains,

(c) running of goods train, and

(d) shunting ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The Honourable Member is referred to the reply given to Mr. Neogy's unstarred question No. 54.

USE OF COAL RAISED IN THE COLLIERY OF ONE STATE RAILWAY BY ANOTHER RAILWAY.

612. *Mr. N. C. Kelkar : (a) Is it a fact that the coal raised in the colliery of one State Railway is used for another ? If so, will the Government furnish full particulars of all such recent instances in point ? Will the Government be pleased to state how the quota of each railway is determined when a colliery is jointly owned by two or three railway owners ?

(b) Is it a fact that the coal raised in collieries owned by State Railways is used on the Company-managed Railways ? If so, will the Government furnish full particulars of such instances in point occurring within the last two years ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The Honourable Member is referred to the reply given to Mr. Neogy's unstarred question No. 55.

CONSTRUCTION BY THE BOMBAY, BARODA AND CENTRAL INDIA RAILWAY OF SPECIAL ENGINES TO SUIT THE CONSUMPTION OF SECOND CLASS COAL.

613. *Mr. N. C. Kelkar : Is it a fact that the Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway constructed some special engines three or four years back to suit the consumption of second class coal thereon ? If so, will the Government please state wherein exactly lies the speciality of such locomotives ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The Honourable Member is referred to the reply given to Mr. Neogy's unstarred question No. 56.

ELECTRIFICATION OF RAILWAYS.

614. Mr. N. C. Kelkar : Have the Government now under contemplation any scheme of electrification of any section of any Indian Railway ? If so, will the Government be pleased to state the full particulars of such scheme ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Schemes are under investigation for the electrification of the suburban lines in the Calcutta and Madras areas and the Trichinopoly-Madura and Podanur-Pollachi sections of the South Indian Railway. The two latter are interconnected with the Madras Government's investigation into the Pykara Hydro-Electric Scheme. It is also proposed shortly to examine the possibilities of electrifying some sections of the North Western Railway with power obtained from the Punjab Government's Mandi Hydro-Electric Scheme.

None of these schemes are sufficiently advanced to permit of particulars being given of them yet.

AMOUNT OF CAPITAL OUTLAY SO FAR MADE BY THE PROPOSED RAILWAY COLLIERY IN THE TALCHUR FIELD AND IN RELIGARI-DARI.

615. Mr. N. C. Kelkar : Will the Government be pleased to say what is the amount of capital outlay so far made by the proposed railway colliery in Talchur field and in Religari-dari ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The information asked for is being obtained and will be furnished to the Honourable Member when received.

AVERAGE PRICE PER TON OF COAL PURCHASED FOR THE RAILWAYS.

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The Honourable Member is referred to the reply given to Mr. Neogy's unstarred question No. 58 on the same subject.

VETERINARY ASSISTANT SURGEONS OF THE ARMY VETERINARY CORPS AND THE ARMY REMOUNT DEPARTMENT OF THE INDIAN ARMY.

617. Khan Bahadur Makhdum Syed Rajan Bakhsh Shah : (a) Is it a fact that since 1916 Veterinary Assistant Surgeons of identical qualifications are recruited on different initial salaries in the Army Veterinary Corps and the Army Remount Department of the Indian Army ?

(b) Is it a fact that before 1918 Veterinary Assistant Surgeons serving with units and in the Army Remount Department had equal starting pay while the prospects of the latter were much better than those of the former ?

(c) Is it a fact that now besides better pay and prospects Veterinary Assistant Surgeons of the Army Veterinary Corps are entitled to free quarters, ration and clothing under the military regulations while the Veterinary Assistant Surgeons of the Army Remount Department having identical qualifications are denied those privileges ?

(d) Is it also a fact that though both the Army Veterinary Corps and the Army Remount Department are under the Quartermaster General and Veterinary Assistant Surgeons of both are liable to be sent to the front in the event of war, Veterinary Assistant Surgeons of the Army Veterinary Corps are rated as combatants ?

(e) Will the Government be pleased to state if they are prepared to consider the amalgamation of the Veterinary Assistant Surgeons of the Army Remount Department with the Army Veterinary Corps in order to remove this differential treatment towards men of equal qualifications serving under one and the same Quartermaster General ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) The Indian Army Veterinary Corps was not in existence before 1918. The initial rates of pay of Veterinary Assistant Surgeons of the two services have varied since that date, but the initial pay in both services is now Rs. 60 per mensem.

(b) The initial pay of Veterinary Assistant Surgeons serving in units and the Army Remount Department was nearly the same. The latter had slightly better prospects.

(c) Yes, because those in the Indian Army Veterinary Corps serve under military regulations whereas the others serve under Civil Service Regulations and are not subject to military discipline.

(d) Yes.

(e) Government have considered the amalgamation of the two services and have found it impracticable.

APPOINTMENT OF RAI BAHADUR MANGAT RAI, AS OFFICIATING COMMISSIONER OF INCOME-TAX, PUNJAB AND THE NORTH-WEST FRONTIER PROVINCE.

618. Khan Bahadur Makhdum Syed Rajan Bakhsh Shah : (a) Is it a fact that the present Commissioner of Income-tax, Punjab and North-West Frontier Province, went on a few weeks' leave in May or June last, and R. B. Mangat Rai, Assistant Commissioner of Income-tax, Rawalpindi Division, officiated in his place ?

(b) Is it a fact that Mr. W. R. Pearce, Assistant Commissioner of Income-tax, Lahore Division, is senior in service to R. B. Mangat Rai ?

(c) If the answer to part (b) above be in the affirmative will the Government be pleased to state why Mr. Pearce was not granted the officiating chance ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : (a) Yes.

(b) and (c). The Government do not think it desirable to discuss on the floor of this House the relative claims or merits of individual officers or the reasons that have led to one officer being preferred to another for promotion.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Why was not Mr. Pearce given the opportunity to officiate and show his merit and ability and why was Mr. Mangat Rai, who is junior to him, promoted ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : Government are not prepared to discuss the question on the floor of the House.

Mr. K. Ahmed : The Government of India exercise their own discretion without giving a chance to the Members of this Assembly to know whether their action was right or wrong ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : I would ask the Honourable Member to realize that it is not in the interests of Government officials that their merits or demerits should be discussed on the floor of this House.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Is it not in the interests of the people of India, and for us, to see that the Government's action is right ?

DISCHARGE OF M. BAHADUR KHAN, CLERK IN THE INCOME-TAX OFFICE AT CAMPBELLPORE.

619. Khan Bahadur Makhdum Syed Rajan Bakhsh Shah : (a) Is it a fact that the services of M. Bahadur Khan, the only Muslim clerk in the Income-tax staff at Campbellpur, have been dispensed with by the Income-tax Commissioner, Punjab and he has been or will be replaced by some Hindu candidate ?

(b) Is it also a fact that the same M. Bahadur Khan was for sometime an Income-tax Inspector, but was humbled down to accept a clerkship of which, too, he has now been deprived ?

(c) If the answer to the whole or any portion of (a) and (b) is in the affirmative, the circumstances which have justified such action, may please be stated ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : (a) The answer to the first part is in the affirmative ; the Government of India have no information as regards the second part.

(b) and (c). I do not think it is in the interests either of the Government or of the officer concerned to enter into details of the kind asked for. The officer in question was given a trial in more than one capacity but in the end his services had to be dispensed with on the ground of unsuitability.

Mr. K. Ahmed : In view of the fact that the Honourable the Finance Member cannot satisfy the Members of this Assembly.....

Mr. President : Order, order.

Mr. K. Ahmed : I will put it in a milder form, Sir.....

Mr. President : Order, order. Khan Bahadur Makhdum Syed Rajan Bakhsh Shah.

PAUCITY OF MUSLIMS IN THE INCOME-TAX DEPARTMENT OF THE PUNJAB AND THE NORTH-WEST FRONTIER PROVINCE.

620. Khan Bahadur Makhdum Syed Rajan Bakhsh Shah : (a) Is it a fact that out of the 3 Assistant Commissioners of Income-tax in the Punjab and North-West Frontier Province, none is a Muslim ?

(b) Is it a fact that out of 26 Income-tax Officers in the Punjab only 5 are Muslims ?

(e) Will the Government be pleased to state what has been the cause of such a minority ?

(d) Are Government aware that the Muslims of the Punjab attribute the cause of this minority to the anti-Muslim policy of the present Income-tax Commissioner, Mr. Darling, and that they are highly dissatisfied with him ?

(e) If answer to (c) above be that efficient Muslims are not available, will the Government be pleased to define the standard of efficiency required ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : The answer to parts (a) and (b) is in the affirmative.

(c) and (e). Under standing orders, appointments of Income-tax Officers are made by the Commissioner, subject to the approval of the Local Government. The Government of India understand, however, that the Commissioner is also assisted by a Selection Committee appointed by the Punjab Government. The comparatively small number of Muslim Income-tax Officers is reported to be due partly to the difficulty which was felt, in the earlier years, of obtaining a sufficient number of Muslim officers with the requisite qualifications, and partly to the failure, in recent years, of Muslim officers to pass the departmental examinations, particularly in accountancy. The standards required are those laid down by the Punjab Government.

(d) I have every reason to believe that the suggestion in part (d) of the question is not in accordance with the facts. The officer in question is one to whom the Punjab and particularly the Punjab agriculturist owes a deep debt of gratitude.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Are the Government aware that they have acted unconstitutionally in not paying attention to the declaration of Lord Reading made in solemn terms at Belvedere to the Muhammadan community at the time of great difficulty and distress, which flattered them too much at the time, but now it is not acted upon ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : Government are quite aware that they would not be acting correctly if they were not giving full effect to that promise. I would suggest that the Honourable Member is acting rashly in making the statement that they are not doing so.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Is it not a fact that Lord Reading in clear terms said that the representation of the Muslim community in the public services would not by any means be less than one-third ? Is that so, yes or no ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : If the Honourable Member will put his question down he will get an answer.

NUMBER OF CHANCES GIVEN TO INCOME-TAX OFFICERS AND ASSISTANT INCOME-TAX OFFICERS IN THE PUNJAB TO PASS THE DEPARTMENTAL EXAMINATION.

621. Khan Bahadur Makhdum Syed Rajan Bakhsh Shah : Will the Government be pleased to lay on the table information on the following points :

(i) The number of Assistant Income-tax Officers and Income-tax Officers in the Punjab who had to appear four times to pass the Income-tax Officers' departmental examination ? How many of them were Muslims ?

(ii) The number of Assistant Income-tax Officers and Income-tax Officers who had to appear more than four times to qualify ? How many of them were Muslims ?

(iii) The number of Assistant Income-tax Officers and Income-tax Officers (excluding P. C. S. hands) who were exempted from the departmental examination or any part of it ? How many of them were Muslims ?

(iv) The maximum number of chances taken by an Assistant Income-tax Officer or Income-tax Officer to qualify, giving names of officers who were allowed such chances ?

(v) The number of Assistant Income-tax Officers and Income-tax Officers now on probation ? How many of them are Muslims ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : (i) Five, of whom two were Muhammadans, two Hindus, and one a Sikh.

(ii) Two officers, of whom one was a Muhammadan.

(iii) Six, of whom two were Muhammadans, two Sikhs, one a Hindu and one a Christian. Four were exempted in one subject only, one in two and one in all subjects except accounts.

(iv) Five chances were given to two officers—one a Hindu and the other a Muhammadan. I am not prepared to give the names of the officers on the floor of the House.

(v) Thirteen, of whom seven are Muhammadans.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Has not the Honourable the Finance Member violated and shown disrespect to the solemn undertaking given by His Excellency the Viceroy, Lord Reading, and is not his Department doing gross injustice to the Muhammadan community ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : I may assure the Honourable Member that gross injustice is not being done to the Muhammadan community.

NUMBER OF INCOME-TAX OFFICERS CONFIRMED IN THEIR APPOINTMENTS BEFORE PASSING THE DEPARTMENTAL EXAMINATION.

622. Khan Bahadur Makhdum Syed Rajan Bakhsh Shah : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state whether before confirmation it is necessary for an Assistant Income-tax Officer to pass or to be exempted from the Income-tax Officers' examination, while he is only to be confirmed as an Assistant Income-tax Officer and not as an Income-tax Officer ?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to state the number of Income-tax Officers in the Punjab, if any, who were confirmed in the capacity of an Assistant Income-tax Officer or Income-tax Officer before passing the departmental examination ? How many of them were Muslims ?

(c) Will the Government be pleased to state whether the Muslim probationers will get the same number of chances as the non-Muslims have taken to qualify ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : (a) The answer is in the affirmative.

(b) Four, of whom two were Muhammadans.

(c) The number of chances given has nothing to do with the religious faith of the officer.

WITHDRAWAL OF THE CARD PASSES OF EMPLOYEES OF THE RAILWAY MAIL SERVICE.

623. Khan Bahadur Makhdum Syed Rajan Bakhsh Shah : (a) Are Government aware of the fact that great difficulty is being experienced by the working as well as the supervising staff of the Railway Mail Service in the execution of their duty on account of withdrawal of card passes ?

(b) Is it a fact that the Postal Department offered to pay a subsidy to the Railway for the restoration of these passes ; if so, what is the cause of delay in restoring them ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) Government are aware that, owing to the withdrawal of card passes a certain amount of difficulty has been experienced by the supervising officers and officials of the Railway Mail Service.

(b) The Director General proposed to the Railway Board a scheme whereby a lump sum would be paid on the estimated cost of the passes required. As, however, the Railways are not in favour of this scheme, an alternative proposal is being considered.

RECOMMENDATIONS OF THE JOINT PARLIAMENTARY COMMITTEE REGARDING LAND REVENUE SETTLEMENT AND LAND ASSESSMENTS.

627. Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : Will the Government be pleased to state :

(a) What the present position is in regard to the steps that were directed to be taken by the Joint Parliamentary Committee in 1919 in regard to the enactment of legislation in the provinces to fix the principles of land revenue settlements and to bring land assessments within the purview of the Legislature ?

(b) What are the provinces that sent up Bills in this behalf for the sanction of the Government of India and what has become of these Bills ?

(c) What are the Bills (i) which the Government of India refused to sanction, (ii) in which the Government of India required modifications, and (iii) what is the basis and the substance of such modifications in each case ?

(d) Have the Government of India taken any steps to see that these enactments are completed before the next Statutory Commission in accordance with the Joint Committee's recommendations ?

Mr. A. R. Dalal : (a) Five provinces, namely, Madras, the United Provinces, Assam, the Punjab and the Central Provinces, have attempted legislation on the subject, but in no province have the proposed measures successfully passed into law.

† Not put at the meeting, but the questions and answers to them will be found at pages 3630—31 of these proceedings.

(b) No Bills were sent up for the previous sanction of the Government of India under section 80 (a) of the Government of India Act, but all the provinces mentioned above sent up their Bills for consideration by the Government of India in their executive capacity.

(c) There was no occasion for the Government of India to grant or refuse sanction. The Government of India suggested certain modifications in the case of some of the Bills. They regret their inability to disclose the basis and substance of such modifications.

(d) In 1920 the Government of India drew the attention of all Local Governments to the recommendations of the Joint Parliamentary Committee upon this subject and have recently again impressed upon them the importance of introducing legislation at an early date.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : May I know, Sir, when this " impression " was again made upon the Provincial Governments ?

Mr. A. R. Dalal : Recently.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : I want to know more precisely.

Mr. A. R. Dalal : Very recently.

Mr. President : The Honourable Member has not quite answered the question put by the Honourable Member from Madras.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : I want to know when these instructions were again sent to Provincial Governments. Was it after those questions were put down on the paper ?

Mr. A. R. Dalal : I could not say that definitely.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : You will not deny that ?

Mr. A. R. Dalal : I am not sure of it.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : Is it a fact that in consequence of modifications insisted upon by the Government of India, Provincial Governments were unable to get any land revenue legislation through in their provincial Legislatures ?

Mr. A. R. Dalal : If the Honourable Member will specify what the Provincial Government is, I may be able to answer his question.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : I am speaking of my own province, Madras.

Mr. A. R. Dalal : In Madras I understand a Bill was introduced in 1924 which fell through.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : I am putting it to the Honourable the Secretary in the Department of Education, Health and Lands whether the Bill that was introduced in the Madras Legislative Council in 1924 was introduced in virtue of the modifications insisted upon by the Government of India and, in consequence, whether that Bill could not get through the Legislature.

Mr. A. R. Dalal : I am not aware of that, Sir.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : Is not the Honourable Member aware that the Honourable Sir Arthur Knapp specifically mentioned to the Legislative Council that the original Bill as proposed by the Committee appointed by that Government was not accepted by the Government of India, and that therefore the Local Government was bringing in a modified Bill ?

Mr. A. R. Dalal : I am not aware of that, Sir.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : Will the Honourable Member find it out and find us a way out of this trouble ?

Mr. A. R. Dalal : As I said, we have recently again addressed Local Governments, and perhaps the Honourable Member will await their reply.

CONSTITUTION OF A CENTRAL ROAD BOARD.

628. Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : Will the Government be pleased to state whether they have made proposals to or invited proposals from Provincial Governments in regard to the constitution of a Central Road Fund and a Central Road Board ? If so, will the Government lay the material proposals on the subject on the table of the House ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : In pursuance of the Resolution on the subject adopted by the Council of State last Session, it is proposed to appoint at an ealy date a Committee, including Members of both Houses of the Central Legislature, to examine the desirability of developing the road system of India, and in particular the means by which such development could most suitably be financed. The Committee will also no doubt consider any proposals that may be made for constituting a Central Road Board. But as Sir Charles Innes stated in the Council of State during the discussion on the Resolution, roads are a transferred provincial subject, and it is necessary to consult Local Governments before proceeding further. The matter has been referred to Local Governments, and it is being arranged to hold a conference of provincial representatives, including Ministers and their advisers on the 22nd of September, which is the earliest date convenient to all Local Governments. The Government have no papers to lay on the table at present.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : May I inquire, Sir, if this conference of provincial Ministers and officers is to be held simultaneously with the conference of the Committee of the House that is proposed to be set up ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : When the representatives of the Local Governments come up, their meeting will be a conference and will last only a day or two, I should imagine. But the Committee which it is proposed to constitute, including Members of both Houses, must obviously last for a much longer time. I cannot indicate at present when they will be able to report, but it will be on a different basis from the conference.

CONSTRUCTION AND DEVELOPMENT OF LIGHT RAILWAYS OR TRAMWAYS.

629. Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : Will the Government of India receive any proposals from any Provincial Government for the construction and development of light railways or tramways coming under Item 6 (d) of Part II of Schedule I of the Devolution Rules ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The answer is in the negative.

RECOMMENDATION OF THE TAXATION ENQUIRY COMMITTEE REGARDING LAND REVENUES.

630. *Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : Will the Government be pleased to state what action has so far been taken on the recommendations of the Taxation Committee in regard to land revenue ?

Mr. A. R. Dalal : No special action has been taken by the Government of India. It has been left to each Local Government to take such action as it thinks fit upon the Taxation Enquiry Committee's recommendations.

Mr. R. K. Shanmukham Chetty : Is it a fact, Sir, that the Government of India brought up a special officer who had something to do with the Taxation Enquiry Committee, to consider what action the Government of India could take on that Report ?

Mr. A. R. Dalal : In connection with land revenue legislation ?

Mr. R. K. Shanmukham Chetty : In connection with the recommendations of the Taxation Enquiry Committee.

Mr. A. R. Dalal : This question relates entirely to the recommendations of the Taxation Enquiry Committee regarding land revenue.

So far as that part of the Taxation Enquiry Report is concerned, the Government of India have decided that it will be left to Local Governments.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : May I assume that the decisions of Provincial Governments will not affect in any way the proposals of the Government of India in regard to the Taxation Enquiry Committee's recommendations ?

Mr. A. R. Dalal : It is impossible to anticipate what decisions the Local Governments will come to.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : May I know, so far as this Assembly is concerned, whether this Assembly did not pass a Resolution last year asking the Government of India to proceed with the recommendations of the Taxation Enquiry Committee ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : This question is getting more general than the recommendations of the Taxation Enquiry Committee regarding land revenue. It is true that a special officer was brought up to examine all the recommendations of the Taxation Enquiry Committee, and as the result of his examination and of the examination of the Government of India in the matter, definite conclusions have been come to with regard to particular portions of the Report. As regards this particular portion, the view taken is that it is for the Local Governments in the first instance to consider what action to take ; and if that action affects the Central Government, they will no doubt communicate with the Central Government on the subject. As regards the last question, my recollection is that this House eventually decided that they did not want to discuss the Taxation Enquiry Committee's Report !

THE METTUR RESERVOIR SCHEME.

631. Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : Have the Government of India been pleased to state :

(a) On what dates administrative sanction may be accorded to the Mettur Reservoir scheme in the Province of Madras by the Government of India and by the Secretary of State ?

(b) What were the final estimates of expenditure on which the scheme was sanctioned ?

(c) Whether any and if so, what variations have been made in the scheme and whether sanction was obtained for them ?

(d) Whether the scheme as well as the estimates were examined and sanctioned by the Government of India and the Secretary of State ?

(e) Whether the Government of India took any steps to see that the Indian Stores Department was employed in the purchase of materials and machinery required wherever possible ?

(f) Whether Indian cement was sought to be obtained through the Stores Department ?

(g) What is the total amount of cement expected to be consumed and what are the orders therefor so far placed through (i) the Stores Department, and (ii) the High Commissioner for India ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) The sanction of the Government of India was not required under the rules to the Metur Reservoir scheme. The Secretary of State accorded his sanction to it on the 3rd March 1925.

(b) The construction of the scheme was sanctioned at an estimated cost of Rs. 6,12,00,000.

(c) So far as the Government of India are aware, no material variations in the scheme sanctioned have so far been made or sanctioned. The Government of India have no information whether any minor variations have been made. The Local Government have power to sanction such variations without reference to the Government of India.

(e) The Government of India are not in a position to enforce the utilisation of the Indian Stores Department by major Local Governments which have full autonomy in this respect.

Officers of the Indian Stores Department have, however, visited Madras and explained to the authorities concerned the advantages of making purchases through that Department and the Government of India understand that departmental orders have been issued by the Government of Madras that all orders for plant and machinery required for this project, except special machinery for placing concrete, should be placed through the Indian Stores Department. Orders to the extent of Rs. 4,25,000 have actually been placed by that Department for stores, including plant and machinery, required for the project during the last and the current financial years.

(f) An indent was placed on the Indian Stores Department by the Chief Engineer, Metur Project, in March 1927 for 7,000 tons of Indian cement but was cancelled in April. It is understood that the cancellation was due to the fact that a final decision as to whether cement or lime should be used in the construction of the dam had not been reached.

(g) The Government of India are unable to state the total amount of cement which is expected to be used on the project. No orders have yet been placed, so far as they are aware, either by the Indian Stores Department or through the High Commissioner.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : May I know whether, in respect of the statement made by the Honourable Member, while the indent for Indian cement was cancelled on the ground that no final decision was taken as to the use of cement or of lime in the construction of this dam, machinery for placing cement to the extent of 30 or 40 lakhs had already been ordered by the Government of Madras ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : I have no information on that point, Sir. As I have already said, the Madras Government have got full powers in regard to the matter.

REMOVAL OF THE CAPITAL OF THE UNITED PROVINCES FROM ALLAHABAD TO LUCKNOW.

632. Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : Has the attention of the Government been drawn to the protests made by the people of Allahabad against the gradual removal of the capital of the United Provinces from Allahabad to Lucknow ? If so, will the Government be pleased to state whether they propose to take any steps in the matter, and if so, what steps ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Government received certain representations a few years ago alleging that the capital of the United Provinces was being transferred to Lucknow. The Local Government then reported that there was not and had not been any question of the transfer of the capital to Lucknow. The memorialists were so informed and the Government of India do not intend taking further action in the matter.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Are Government aware that one office after another is being removed from Allahabad to Lucknow ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I am not aware.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Is the Honourable Member aware that a new Council House has also been built at Lucknow ?

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : In view of the fact that Allahabad is the capital and that its important position might be affected, will Government inquire whether it is a fact that one office after another is being slowly removed to Lucknow ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : If any representations are addressed to the Government of India on the subject, they will no doubt be considered.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : Will not the Government make an enquiry and let the House know whether it is a fact that office after office is being removed to Lucknow ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : The mere removal of individual offices is a matter entirely within the discretion of the Local Government. On the suggestions made, I do not think there is sufficient ground for addressing the Local Government.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Are we to understand then that there is absolutely no proposal to shift the capital from Allahabad to Lucknow ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I am not aware that any such proposal is under consideration.

PRESUMPTION OF THE DIRECT TELEGRAPH LINE FROM DELHI-SIMLA TO LUCKNOW DURING THE LEGISLATIVE SESSION.

633. *Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : (a) Is it a fact that in spite of the growing importance of Lucknow, the telegraph office is still a second-class office there ?

(b) Is it a fact that in 1922 a largely-signed petition by the trading community and number of other citizens was addressed to the postal authorities ? If so, will the Government be pleased to state what steps were taken thereon ?

(c) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to numerous articles which have recently appeared in the Indian Daily Telegraph of Lucknow mentioning the inconveniences to which the public and the press of Lucknow are put by the present inadequate telegraph arrangements due to the limited hours of their work ? If so, will they be pleased to state what steps have been taken in connection therewith ? If not, why not ?

(d) Is it a fact that the Chief Editor of the Indian Daily Telegraph of Lucknow addressed the Director-General of Posts and Telegraphs in March last requesting resumption of the direct telegraph line from Delhi-Simla to Lucknow during the legislative Session, which was stopped in 1926 ? If so, will the Government be pleased to state what reply was given ?

(e) Is it a fact that after the Director-General's reply to the Chief Editor of the Indian Daily Telegraph of Lucknow, there was an article which appeared in the paper drawing attention to the loss which the Government were put to by the measures which the paper was obliged to take, consequent on the refusal to give a direct telegraph line from Delhi to Lucknow ? If so, are the Government prepared to reconsider their position ?

(f) Are Government in a position to state how long it will take to convert the telegraph office in Lucknow from second class to first class ? If not, why not ?

Mr. H. A. Sams : (a) There is no classification of telegraph offices into 1st and 2nd.

(b) No such petition was received in 1922. A representation was received from the Manager of the Indian Daily Telegraph, Lucknow, who was told in reply that there was no justification for keeping the office open throughout the night, as it would entail considerable expense, and the press traffic expected between 11 P.M. and 6 A.M., when the office was closed, would not pay its way.

(c) Only one article dated 26th February 1927 has come to notice, and in consequence orders were issued for the expeditious disposal of Multiple press traffic from Delhi to Lucknow via Calcutta. Arrangements have been made during the current Session of the Assembly for the Simla office to work the Lucknow office direct.

(d) Yes. No further action was taken in view of the action taken as indicated in the reply to (c).

(e) No such article has come to notice.

THE INDIAN SANDHURST COMMITTEE'S REPORT.

638. Mr. K. C. Neogy : Will Government be pleased to state whether they consulted the Provincial Governments and the principal Army Staff officers on the Sandhurst Committee Report, and to indicate briefly their views, if obtained ?

Mr. G. M. Young : Provincial Governments have not been consulted. The principal Staff Officers were very fully consulted, as they are the chief military advisers of Government. Government are not prepared to publish their views.

FEDERATION OF THE EAST AND CENTRAL AFRICAN STATES AND MANDATED TERRITORIES.

639. Mr. K. C. Neogy : (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether the British Government consulted them on the publication of the White Paper, in July 1927, foreshadowing the federation of the East and Central African States and mandated territories ?

(b) Will Government be pleased to state the opinion, if any, given by them on this question ?

(c) Was the question of federation examined by the Kenya Committee of 1924, and if so, will Government be pleased to lay their opinion on the subject on the table ?

(d) Is it a fact that the Kenya Committee made definite recommendations for adequate Indian representation on the proposed Federation Commission ? If so, were these accepted by the Government of India and the Secretary of State ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : (a) The Honourable Member is referred to the reply given by me this morning to part (c) of Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru's question No. 579.

(b) Does not arise.

(c) In connection with Sir Sydney Henn's motion, made in the House of Commons on the 8th April 1924, that the Secretary of State for the Colonies should send out a commission to Africa to report on the practicability of co-ordinating policy and services throughout the territories of Kenya, Uganda, Tanganyika, Zanzibar, Nyasaland and North

† Not put at the meeting, owing to the absence of the questioner, but the questions and answers to them will be found at page 3631—32 of these proceedings.

Eastern Rhodesia, the Colonies Committee of the Government of India, to which the Honourable Member is presumably referring, made certain suggestions regarding the representation of the Indian point of view on the proposed Commission, and the preparation and presentation of the Indian case before that body. The principle of federation was not examined by the Committee. Government regret that they are unable to comply with the Honourable Member's request to lay a copy of the Committee's memorandum on the table.

(d) As regards the first part of the question the Honourable Member is referred to the answer just given by me to part (c) of this very question. The two suggestions to which I have alluded were accepted by the Government of India and, it is understood, also by the Secretary of State for India.

ENLARGEMENT OF THE POWERS OF RAILWAY ADVISORY COMMITTEES.

647. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Is it a fact that members of the Committee of the Bengal National Chamber of Commerce met the Financial Commissioner of Railways, in Calcutta, recently ; and expressed their views that the Railway Advisory Committees " have proved unsuccessful, owing to the impotence that has been thrust on them. No self-respecting man wants to serve on these Committees twice..... At present the members have no authority to suggest any subject for discussion. The Agent can disallow any subject on the flimsiest ground " ?

(b) Are Government aware that the above view is shared by the general public, and by members of the Advisory Committees ; and do Government propose to consider the question of enlarging the powers of these Committees, and including more representative men in them ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) I had the pleasure of meeting the members of the Committee of the Bengal National Chamber of Commerce recently, but the quotation in the Honourable Member's question does not to my recollection, accurately represent what transpired at our discussion which was of an informal character. No statement was made to me by any member of the Local Advisory Committee that members of the Local Advisory Committee have no authority to suggest subjects for discussion ; so far from this being the case, I understand that the majority of the subjects discussed by Local Advisory Committees are suggested by members themselves.

PROVISION OF QUARTERS FOR INDIAN EMPLOYEES OF THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.

648. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Is it a fact that about 80 per cent. of the Indian employees of the East Indian Railway have not been provided with railway quarters ? Are Government aware that at places like Asansol, Ondal, Dhanbad, Jharriah, etc., rented houses are not available ? Do Government propose to build railway quarters for them ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The required information is being obtained and will be supplied to the Honourable Member on receipt.

† Not put at the meeting, owing to the absence of the questioner, but the questions and answers to them will be found at pages 3632—34 of these proceedings.

ISSUE OF EIGHT-MONTHLY RETURN TICKETS BY THE NORTH WESTERN RAILWAY.

649. *Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh: (a) Is it a fact that the North-Western Railway administration does not issue 8-monthly return tickets at reduced rates? If so, why?

(b) Are Government aware that the Bengal and North-Western Railway proposed to issue first and second class 8-monthly return tickets at reduced rates for Simla or Kalka, but the North-Western Railway, when approached on the subject, refused to agree to the proposal?

(c) Will Government kindly give the names of Railways on which the system of issuing return tickets is not in existence? And do Government propose to take necessary steps to have the system introduced?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons: (a) The North-Western Railway do not issue 8-monthly return tickets. The matter is one which rests with the Agent of the Railway.

(b) Yes.

(c) All important railways issue return tickets though the conditions and the periods for which they are current vary on different railways.

The introduction of return tickets is a matter within the discretion of the Agent of the Railway concerned.

DEVASTATION CAUSED BY THE RECENT FLOODS IN INDIA.

650. *Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh: Will Government be pleased to make a detailed statement regarding the devastations caused by the recent floods in different parts of the country, together with an estimate of the probable loss of life and property, and the measures taken to relieve the distress?

Mr. A. R. Dalal: The floods in the Bombay Presidency caused serious damage in the Ahmedabad, Kaira and Broach districts and Baroda State territory in Gujarat and in parts of Kathiawar and considerable damage in the Thar Parkar and Hyderabad districts in Sind. The loss of human life in the British Districts in Gujarat was not large, but the damage in other respects has been heavy. The population of the tract affected is 1½ millions. The principal damage has been to house property. As for crops vigorous resowing operations are going on. The loss of cattle is not so serious as was originally conjectured. Communications have been re-established.

It is hoped to have a reliable estimate of the total extent of the damage and the amount of financial assistance required from provincial revenues within a few days.

The Government of Bombay is distributing takavi grants and making grants of timber and other building material. The Central Relief Fund in the Presidency has reached well over 7 lakhs. Other Funds such as the one started by the Honourable Mr. V. J. Patel have also succeeded in collecting substantial sums. (Applause.) The Indian Peoples' Famine Trust are making a grant of Rs. 3 lakhs on certain conditions. (Applause.)

2. In Bihar and Orissa severe floods have occurred in the Singhbhum, Cuttack and Balasore districts and about 50 persons are believed to have lost their lives in the Bhadrak sub-division. There has been considerable damage to houses in the affected tracts, but much of the damage can be repaired without great expense. The damage to crops is not extensive. Serious damage has been caused to the main railway line. Grants for gratuitous relief for the next three months and for takavi for retransplantation of crops in August have been sanctioned by the Local Government, and further loans and contributions for house building and for the loss of cattle will be given if necessary. Arrangements for medical relief and for feeding the population affected have been made, and the situation is reported to be well in hand.

Mr. B. Das : In view of the distress described by the Honourable Member in Gujarat, Orissa and different parts of India, may I request the Government of India to see their way to appoint an all-India Flood Enquiry Committee, so that the permanent causes causing floods may be removed ?

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : Has the Indian Peoples' Famine Trust Fund been approached by a non-official Committee for a grant from the Fund or for charitable relief ?

Mr. A. R. Dalal : No, Sir.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : Do Government think that there is scope for non-official relief to supplement Government relief measures in Bihar and Orissa ?

Mr. A. R. Dalal : That is for the people of Bihar and Orissa and the Government of Bihar and Orissa to consider.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : Has no non-official fund been started in Bihar and Orissa for this purpose ?

Mr. A. R. Dalal : I am not aware that non-official funds have not been started, but the Government of India have not received any application for help.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : If any application does come from non-official leaders in that Province, do I take it that it will be sympathetically considered ?

Mr. A. R. Dalal : That will depend on the circumstances and the facts represented.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Are Government aware that a non-official fund has been started under the auspices of some of the leading men of the Province ?

Mr. A. R. Dalal : I am not aware.

Lala Lajpat Rai : Is it a fact that Orissa has been affected by floods for the last several years consecutively ? Have any steps been taken to prevent those floods ?

Mr. A. R. Dalal : May I draw the attention of the Honourable Member to the reply given by the Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra to a question this morning ?

Mr. B. Das: Have the Government of India ascertained from the Government of Bihar and Orissa the total estimate of losses to the villages caused by the recent floods ?

Mr. A. R. Dalal: I have read out the summary of the reports received from the Government of Bihar and Orissa just now and I daresay the Government of Bihar and Orissa will present a more accurate estimate of the losses in course of time.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh: Will that statement be available ?

Mr. A. R. Dalal: If a question is put down to that effect, certainly.

Mr. B. Das: Do I take it that the Honourable Member takes it for granted that the mere description of the 60 per cent. loss in life and property does not in any way indicate the total estimate of damage and losses to the people of Orissa ?

Mr. President: The Honourable Member has not heard the answer given by the Honourable the Secretary for the Department of Education, Health and Lands.

CIRCULATION OF THE QUESTIONNAIRE OF THE ROYAL AGRICULTURAL COMMISSION TO MEMBERS OF THE INDIAN LEGISLATURE.

561. *Mr. B. Das: (a) Will Government be pleased to state why the questionnaire of the Royal Commission on Agriculture was not circulated to Members of the Indian Legislature ?

(b) What is the general practice of the Government in the circulation of questionnaires to representatives of the public ?

(c) Was this questionnaire circulated in the Provinces at the instance of the Provincial Governments or was it done on the sole responsibility of the Secretaries of that Commission ?

Mr. A. R. Dalal: (a) and (c) The procedure as regards the circulation of the questionnaire was settled by the Commission itself. The questionnaire after distribution to certain officials at the headquarters of the Government of India was circulated by the Commission to all Local Governments and Administrations, who were given a free hand to distribute it as they considered suitable.

(b) The Committees or Commissions issuing the questionnaires are left discretion as to their circulation.

Mr. B. Das: Do I take it that the Honourable the elected Members of this House are not the representatives of the public and that the Government of India are not responsible to advise the Commission that their questionnaire should be sent to the Members of this House in order that they may give their views and do I further take it that only the officials in the Agricultural Department were asked to give evidence before the Commission ?

Mr. A. R. Dalal: The Honourable Member is very well aware that it was not the official members of the Agricultural Department only who were consulted by the Royal Commission on Agriculture.

Mr. B. Das: Will not the Honourable Member forward a copy of this question and the previous question that was replied to yesterday by my Honourable friend Mr. Bajpai to the Secretaries of the Royal Commission in order to draw the attention of the Commission that they have not done their duty properly ?

Mr. A. R. Dalal : We will certainly send copies of the questions and the replies to the Secretary of the Commission.

PERMANENT APPOINTMENT OF THE TARIFF BOARD.

562. Mr. B. Das : (a) Will Government be pleased to state if they have come to any decision about the life of the Tariff Board ?

(b) Was it not a fact that Government wanted to approach the Legislature a year after the first appointment of the Tariff Board as to its future permanency ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : (a) As announced in their Resolution No. 291-T.-(27), dated the 30th June 1927, the Government have decided to extend the appointment of the Tariff Board for two years from the 5th July 1927.

(b) It is a fact that according to the Resolution of the Assembly of the 16th February 1923, the Tariff Board was constituted for one year in the first instance. Since then the appointment of the Board has been extended from year to year but it has not been proposed that the Board should be made permanent.

Mr. B. Das : Is the Honourable Member aware that there is no representative of the Assembly at present on the Tariff Board and no Member or ex-Member of this House is now a member of that Board ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I think, Sir, that by the acceptance of the office of member of the Tariff Board, any Member of the Assembly who was so appointed would immediately have to vacate his seat under the Government of India Act.

Mr. B. Das : Was it not implied at the time that the Tariff Board was formed that one Member of the Assembly having the previous experience of this House would be a member of that Board in order to acquaint the Board with the procedure of this House ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : That is not within my recollection, Sir, but I would point out that the President of the Tariff Board, Sir Pestonji Ginwala, was an elected Member of this House before he was appointed to the Board.

Mr. B. Das : Why was not another Member of the Assembly substituted in his place ?

Several Honourable Members : Order, order.

PERIOD FOR WHICH A MEMBER OF THE TARIFF BOARD HOLDS HIS APPOINTMENT.

563. Mr. B. Das : (a) Will Government be pleased to state if they have fixed any definite period for which a member of the Tariff Board can occupy that post ?

(b) If the reply be in the negative, will Government be pleased to state if they propose to fix the maximum period ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy: (a) and (b). The Tariff Board is a temporary body and its life is extended from year to year. The Government have not yet found it necessary to fix a maximum period for the tenure of office by a member of the Board.

QUESTIONS NOT ASKED AT THE MEETING, OWING TO THE ABSENCE OF THE QUESTIONER, WITH ANSWERS TO THE SAME.

PROVISION OF ACCOMMODATION FOR POSTMEN AND LOWER GRADE STAFF ETC

586. Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan: (a) Are the questions of provision of accommodation for postmen and lower grade staff and the restriction of recruitment of outsiders in the clerical cadre so as to give preference to suitable candidates amongst postmen in service for appointments in such cadre, under the consideration of Government ?

(b) If so, have Government arrived at a decision ?

(c) If a decision has been arrived at, will Government please communicate their decision to the House ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra: (a) Yes.

(c) Does not arise.

ARRANGEMENTS FOR TRAINING MARINE WIRELESS OPERATORS AT THE GOVERNMENT WIRELESS TRAINING ESTABLISHMENT IN CALCUTTA.

587 Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan: (a) Have arrangements been made to give training to marine wireless operators at the Government Wireless Training Establishment in Calcutta ?

(b) If so, will Government please state what these arrangements are ?

(c) If the arrangements have not been made yet, will Government please state by what time the arrangements are expected to be completed ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra: (a) and (b). The question is still under consideration.

(c) The decision is expected to be reached shortly.

THE ROYAL INDIAN NAVY.

588. Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan: Will Government please state :

(a) Whether the proposed Royal Indian Navy will be a part of the British Royal Navy or independent of it ?

(b) Whether the East Indies Squadron is a part of the British Royal Navy or independent of it ?

(c) Whether the Dominion Navies are parts of the British Royal Navy or independent of it ?

Mr. G. M. Young: (a) and (c). I would invite the attention of the Honourable Member to the reply given by me in this House on the 8th March, 1927 to starred question No. 790.

(c) The East Indies Squadron is a squadron of the Royal Navy.

NOMINATION TO THE INDIAN CIVIL SERVICE IN INDIA SINCE 1922.

608. *Sardar Kartar Singh : (1) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to the Indian-edited Press, as for instance, the Tribune of Lahore, dated 29th May 1927 and 2nd June 1927, on the matter of nominations in India to the Indian Civil Service since 1922 ?

(2) What is the number of Indians so far nominated to the I. C. S. in India since 1922 when the I. C. S. competitive examination was started in this country ?

(3) How many of them were Hindus, Muhammadans, Sikhs, Indian Christians, and Anglo-Indians, and what was the nationality of each nominee, that is to say,—British Indian subject or an Indian State subject ?

(4) In this principle of communal representation what matters are taken into consideration ?

(5) In determining the share of the Sikhs, are their military services to the State taken into consideration ?

(6) What is the population in India of Anglo-Indians; Indian Christians, and Sikhs, respectively, and how many of each have been so far nominated to the I. C. S. since 1922 ?

(7) Is it true that the Government have reserved this year seven posts to be given by nomination ?

(8) If the answer to question No. 7 is in the affirmative, do the Government intend to secure due representation to each of the four communities, namely Hindus, Muhammadans, Sikhs and Christians ?

(9) Is it true that the rule hitherto has been to take the said I. C. S. annual nominees from amongst the candidates who had sat for that examination ? Has any departure from it taken place hitherto ? If so, in how many cases out of the total number and why ?

(10) Are Government aware that the departure referred to in No. 9 causes discontent among the people ?

(11) Are Government going to observe this year the rule referred to in No. 9 ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (1) Yes.

(2) The number of Indians (including Burmans) nominated to the Indian Civil Service since 1922 is 21.

(3) The information required is as follows :

Hindus	2
Muhammadans	7
Sikh	1
Indian Christians	3
Anglo-Indian	Nil.
Burmans	8

As far as I am aware one of these was the subject of an Indian State.

(4) and (5). The only consideration is that of preventing the preponderance of any particular communities in the Services.

(6) I would refer the Honourable Member to the Census Reports and to my answer to part (3) of his question.

(7) Yes.

(8) 4 Burmans, 2 Muhammadans and 1 Indian Christian are being appointed. These are included in the figures given in my answer to (3).

(9) and (11). Candidates are selected primarily from among those who have appeared in the competitive examination, but selections are made from outside the examination list where suitable candidates are not otherwise forthcoming. Up to and including the present year six candidates, all Burmans, have been so selected. The reason is that few Burmans have hitherto appeared at the competitive examinations. The whole question of improving the arrangements for recruiting Burman candidates is at present under consideration.

(c) Will Government please state the Districts situated in the United Provinces where a permanent settlement exists ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a) I refer the Honourable Member to the speech delivered in this House by Sir Alexander Muddiman expressing the view that for the present any idea of a separate administration for Orissa would be premature. Government have not in contemplation any scheme for the separation of the Benares Division from the United Provinces and joining it to the province of Bihar and Orissa.

UNSTARRED QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

PRESENT POSITION OF RAILWAY PROJECTS IN EASTERN BENGAL.

75. Mr. K. C. Neogy : Will Government be pleased to lay a statement on the table showing the latest position in regard to each of the different projects of railway expansion in Eastern Bengal which are included in the present quinquennial programme ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : A statement showing the information asked for is laid on the table.

Statement showing the present position of railway projects in Eastern Bengal.

1. Ishurdi-Pabna-(Bera).—This project is being re-investigated. It is possible that with the construction of the Nawabganj-Abdulpur and Dinajpur-Ruhea lines, paddy from these railways will be diverted to the Pabna and Bera area via Ishurdi. If this happens the traffic prospects of the project will materially improve. This area, however, is well served by navigable rivers and competition with boat traffic will be severe.

2. Singhjani-Pingna-Tangail.

3. Mymensingh-Pingna.—As a sequel to the Dacca Aricha Railway the Agent, Eastern Bengal Railway, now proposes a line from Dacca, via Tangail and Gopalpur to Mymensingh which would take the place of the above two lines. It is proposed to survey the alignment in 1928-29.

4. Faridpur Charmaguria Barisal.—This project was again examined during the year and the impossibility of keeping open an artificial harbour at Charmaguria established. It is proposed to re-examine the project as for a 2′ 6″ gauge line with ferries over the larger rivers instead of bridges.

5. Serajganj Bogra.—It is proposed to survey this line in 1928-29 as a broad gauge line.

6. Dacca Aricha.—The line has been surveyed during the past working season and the engineering and traffic reports and estimates are expected to be ready shortly.

7. Rajbari Kamarkhali Jessore.—The Agent, Eastern Bengal Railway, now proposes to build a line from Kalukhali, via Kamarkhali to Bhatsapara in place of the above line. A report and estimate have just been received in the Railway Board's office for the alternative proposal and are being examined.

8. Feni-Bilonia.—This line has been surveyed and the report and estimates are expected to be ready during this month.

9. Chittagong Fatikchari.—The report and estimates of this line are expected to be ready shortly.

10. Sarachar Atharabari.—The construction of this line is at present under consideration.

11. Rajapur Ramchandrapur.—The estimate for this line is at present under revision.

SERVICE CONDITIONS AND EMOLUMENTS OF TELEPHONE OPERATORS IN THE INDIAN POSTAL AND TELEGRAPH DEPARTMENT.

76. Mr. K. C. Neogy : (a) Have Government received any representations from telephone operators, serving under the Department of Posts and Telegraphs, regarding their service conditions and emoluments ? If so, what action has been taken thereon ?

(b) Is it a fact that telephone operators who were not holding permanent appointments in July 1919, have been placed on a non-pensionable footing ; and that all recruitment thereafter has been on a non-pensionable footing, the operators being also liable to discharge on a month's notice ?

(c) Is it a fact that signal room clerks, who were graded together with telephone operators till March 1917, on the same conditions of service, enjoy a pensionable status ? If so, what are the reasons for the disparity of service conditions as between these two classes, as indicated in clauses (b) and (c) ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) Petitions have been and are being received by the Director-General who will consider the requests made.

(b) Yes.

(c) The reply to the first part is in the affirmative. It became necessary on administrative grounds to separate the telephone operators from signal room clerks as there was nothing in common between the duties of these two classes. The service conditions of each class were subsequently revised quite independently with reference to the dissimilar qualifications and nature of employment of the two classes.

PROVISION OF FREE QUARTERS FOR POSTMASTERS.

77. Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : (a) Will Government be pleased to say if it is a policy of the Post Office Department that Postmasters shall be provided with free quarters and that where such quarters are not available, a house-rent allowance shall be granted in lieu of free quarters ? And is it not the policy of the Department that the Postmasters shall live in the quarters wherever provided ?

(b) Can the quarters intended for the use of the Postmaster be utilised for the residence of officers other than the Postmaster of the Office ?

(c) Are there any proposals to give away the Postmaster's quarters at the newly constructed Government Post Office building at Dadar (Bombay) for the residence of a gazetted officer earning a house-rent allowance ?

(d) If the answer to the above be in the affirmative, will Government be pleased to say if such use has their approval ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) Yes.

(b) Yes, if it is in the public interest.

(c) Proposals to this effect have recently been received.

(d) The matter is under consideration.

ATTEMPTED BURGLARY IN THE PREMISES OF THE CLARE ROAD POST OFFICE IN BOMBAY.

78. Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether it is a fact that there were two cases of attempted burglary in the premises of the Clare Road Post Office in Bombay ?

(b) Is it a fact that as a precautionary measure cash and postage stamps of the Clare Road Post Office are daily required to be removed to the Byculla Post Office since the last attempt at burglary ?

(c) If so, were these circumstances considered in renewing the lease of the said premises ?

(d) Were the requirements of the Post Office in that particular locality duly advertised before the renewal of the lease ?

(e) Is it a fact that after the renewal of the lease there has occurred a theft in the same building next to the said Post Office ?

Mr. H. A. Sams : (a), (b) and (c). Yes.

GRANT OF LEAVE ON MEDICAL CERTIFICATES TO NON-GAZETTED GOVERNMENT SERVANTS.

79. Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : (a) Are non-gazetted Government servants permitted to obtain leave under the Fundamental Rules on support of the certificates of their medical attendants ?

(b) Is there any provision in the Madras Medical Practitioner's Act that the registered medical practitioners certificate should be accepted by the authorities empowered to sanction leave ?

(c) Have Government invested such authorities with powers to reject certificates granted by the registered medical practitioners or medical attendants ?

(d) Under what circumstances should a medical certificate be sent for countersignature by the authorities empowered to sanction leave ?

(e) Is the authority sending a certificate for countersignature authorised to direct the absentee on plea of illness to present himself for examination before the countersigning officer ? If not, is it the discretion of the countersigning officer to call for the absentee and examine him if necessary ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : (a) The Honourable Member's attention is invited to Rule 228 of the Supplementary Rules.

(c) The Honourable Member will observe from Rule 228 that the discretion to accept a certificate from the medical attendant of an applicant for leave, without counter-signature by a Presidency Surgeon or a medical officer-in-chief medical charge of the district, as the case may be, is vested in the authority competent to grant the leave. The normal rule is that the certificate of the medical attendant of an applicant should be countersigned by either of the officers referred to in the rule. The authority competent to grant the leave can reject the certificate of the applicant's medical attendant only if the applicant for leave cannot or will not, if required, get it countersigned.

(d) Countersignature is the normal rule and no special circumstances are prescribed under which countersignature shall be required.

(e) The answer to the first part of the question is in the negative and to the second part in the affirmative. With regard to the second part, the Honourable Member's attention is invited to rule 230 of the Supplementary Rules.

Copies of Rules 228, 229 and 230 of the Supplementary Rules are attached.

GRANT OF LEAVE ON MEDICAL CERTIFICATE TO THE EMPLOYEES OF THE RAILWAY MAIL SERVICE, T. DIVISION, TRICHINOPOLY.

80. Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : (a) During the month of June and July how many medical certificates were sent for countersignature by the Superintendent, R. M. S., T. Division, Trichinopoly, and how many were accepted without countersignature ?

(b) On what principle is the Superintendent to send the medical certificate for counter signature ? Is it by knowledge obtained by enquiry that the officials were not ill or on suspicion ? If the latter, in how many cases were certificates granted by medical attendants found unreliable ?

Mr. H. A. Sams : Government have no information nor do they propose to call for the information. If any official feels aggrieved at the action alleged to have been taken by the Superintendent it is open to him to appeal to the next higher authority.

MEDICAL CERTIFICATE OF T. V. NANDAGOPAL NAIDU, AN EMPLOYEE OF THE RAILWAY MAIL SERVICE, T. DIVISION, TRICHINOPOLY.

81. Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : (a) Did the Superintendent, R. M. S., T. Division, furnish a medical requisition addressed to the District Medical Officer, Tanjore, to T. V. Nandagopal Naidu, after he had produced a medical certificate dated 21st June 1927 from an M. B. B. S. at Trichinopoly ?

(b) Is it true that the Superintendent threatened Mr. T. V. Nandagopal Naidu with suspension if he did not obey his order to proceed to Tanjore for medical examination ?

(c) Is it true Mr. T. V. Nandagopal Naidu was absent from duty from 21st June 1927 ?

(d) Was the salary from 22nd June 1927 to 30th June 1927 disbursed ? If not why not ?

Mr. H. A. Sams : The information is being collected and will be furnished to the Honourable Member in due course.

(2) Are Government prepared to direct the Director General of Posts and Telegraphs to make enquiries whether the Superintendent, R. M. S., T. Division, has deprived his subordinates of their legitimate rights ?

Mr. H. A. Sams : The information is being collected and will be furnished to the Honourable Member in due course.

SPECIAL BAG DESPATCHED BY THE SUPERINTENDENT, RAILWAY MAIL SERVICE, T. DIVISION, TO MR. ASLAM, SUPERINTENDENT OF POST OFFICES, MADURA DIVISION.

83. Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : (a) Is it a fact that on the 10th November 1926 one special bag from the Superintendent, R. M. S., T. Division, to Mr. Aslam, Superintendent of the Post Office, Madura Division, (camp Kodaikanal), was despatched by section T.-4 Out to the Sub-Postmaster Ammayanakanur, for delivery to the addressee ?

(b) Is it also a fact that the section T.-4 Out did not receive this bag in the usual manner from the connecting section T.-2 In from Madras to Trichinopoly but loose ?

(c) What were the contents of the bag ?

(e) Are Government prepared to enquire if an authorised use of transport by railway has been made for articles intended for the personal use of the officer ?

Mr. H. A. Sams : Government have no information. An enquiry is however being made and the information will be furnished to the Honourable Member in due course.

ABOLITION OF THE LOWER DIVISION SCALE IN THE OFFICE OF THE ACCOUNTANT GENERAL, POSTS AND TELEGRAPHS.

84. Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : (1) Is it a fact that the entire lower division work was strongly recommended to be classed as upper by the several Deputy Accountants General ?

(2) Is it a fact that Mr. J. C. Mitra, the A. G. P. T. in his D.-O. No. 571, dated 28th July 1921, to the A. G. Railways, considered that the lower division scale might be abolished, if it was possible to enforce the lower efficiency bar strictly ?

(3) Is it a fact that the lower division clerks submitted a memorial to the Auditor General on 31st August 1921 ?

(4) Is it a fact that the Auditor General in his reply to the said memorial assured the lower division clerks that their prayer (in clause "B" if the classification be maintained a time scale of pay of Rs. 60—6—210 may be sanctioned) will be considered in time of revision (will see to this in time of revision) ?

(5) Is it a fact that the upper division scales in offices under the A. G. P. and T. were distributed according to the province, i.e.

	Rs.
in Calcutta	60—230
in Madras, Nagpur	60—175
in Delhi	60—200

(6) Is it a fact that no such distinction of province was preserved in the lower division scale, i.e., an uniform scale of Rs. 40—80 was sanctioned for all ?

(7) Is it a fact that the lower division clerks in other Government Offices enjoy a better scale than those of the A. G. P. and T. ?

(8) Will the Government lay on the table the lists of lower division scales which have been sanctioned for the different Government offices ?

(9) Do Government propose to reconsider the lower division scale under the A. G. P. and T. at an early date ?

(10) Was the scale (Rs. 60—6—210) asked by the lower division men in their memorial of 31st August 1921 also promised by the Auditor General ? Are Government prepared to recommend this scale ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : (1) and (2). The Government are not prepared to publish the opinions of their officers in such cases.

(3) and (4). The attention of the Honourable Member is invited to the final reply conveyed to Mr. Jogiah's starred question No. 1241 in the Finance Department letter No. D.|1251-F.E., dated the 16th April, 1927, a copy of which is in the Library of the House.

(9) and (10). The attention of the Honourable Member is invited to the concluding portion of the final reply given to Mr. Jogiah's question No. 1241 referred to above.

Pay of Telegraph Masters, Telegraphists and certain classes of Postal Officials.

SIR,

I am directed by the Secretary of State for India in Council to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 31st August No. 1634-P.W. and to inform you in reply that he confirms the orders already issued by the Government of India regulating the pay (i) of Telegraph Masters and Telegraphists on transfer between the General and Station services, and (ii) of certain classes of postal officials transferred from one to another of the time scale sanctioned for the same class.

I am, Sir,
Your Obedient Servant,
Sd. W. STANTIALL.

The Secretary to the Government of India,
Public Works Department.

No. 1634-P.W.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT.

POSTS AND TELEGRAPHS ESTABLISHMENTS.

From

Colonel Sir S. D'A. Crookshank, K.C.M.G., etc., Secretary to the Government of India,

To

His Majesty's Under Secretary of State for India,

India Office, London

Simla, the 31st August 1922.

SUBJECT:—Regulation of the pay (i) of Telegraph Masters and Telegraphists on transfer between the General and Station services, and (ii) of certain classes of postal officials transferred from the one to another of the time-scales sanctioned for the same class.

SIR,

I am directed to report, for the approval of His Majesty's Secretary of State for India, the orders issued by the Government of India in the following cases.

2. First, in sub-paragraphs (2) and (3), paragraph 2 of the Resolution of the Department of Commerce No. 1629, dated the 30th April 1920, a copy of which was forwarded with the despatch from Lord Chelmsford's Government No. 385, dated the 12th August 1920, the Government of India laid down the method of bringing Telegraph Masters and Telegraphists on to the revised scales of pay at corresponding points according to length of service, on the introduction of the Station Services approved in paragraph 4 of the Resolution, transfers from the General and the Local Service to the new Station Services were admitted with effect from the 1st September 1920, and the Director General of Posts and Telegraphs rules that the method referred to above should be adhered to in fixing the initial pay of the officials thus transferred. It has now been brought to notice that these orders are not in accordance with Fundamental Rule 22 and as they are not covered by the orders contained in Mr. Stantiall's letter No. P.W.-1552|22, dated the 4th May 1922, the principle applied requires approval by the Secretary of State. The intention of the Government of India in issuing the orders contained in sub-paragraphs (2) and (3) of the Resolution in question was that transfers from one parallel scale of pay to another should be made at the corresponding point and not in accordance with the rule in Article 157 of the Civil Service Regulations, which would have proved both costly and unsuitable. There can be no doubt, therefore, of the propriety of the procedure actually followed, and in view of the desirability of regularising the position as soon as possible, the Government of India have issued orders, in anticipation of the formal sanction of the Secretary of State, approving the application of the general principle laid down in the Resolution of the 30th April 1920 to the cases mentioned above and also the cognate cases of transfers from the Station Service to the General Service and between the Station Service "A" and "B" with effect from the 1st September 1920.

3. The other matter which the Government of India desire to submit relates to the regulation of pay in connection with transfers which have occasionally to be made from one to another of the different time-scales sanctioned respectively, for

(a) the clerical staff in post offices,

(b) sorters in the Railway Mail Service, and

(c) postmen and village postmen, in the Resolutions of the Department of Commerce Nos. 6458, 6584 and 4737 of 1920, copies of which were forwarded to you with the Finance Department letter No. 1076-E.A., dated the 5th May 1921. As the various scales for each of these three classes of officials were fixed with reference to the cost of living in the different localities embraced and were intended to be equivalent, the Government of India issued orders that an official on transfer from one time-scale to another should receive the pay which he would have drawn if during the whole of his previous service he had been on the time-scale to which he was transferred. This is obviously the only fair principle which could be applied in the cases in question, which were in fact not contemplated when the Fundamental Rules were issued. At the same time, the principle is not in conformity with rule 22 of those rules, and as such also calls for confirmation by the Secretary of State.

4. I am to request that His Majesty's Secretary of State may be moved to confirm the orders of the Government of India in the cases referred to above.

I have the honour to be,

SIR,

Your most obediend servant,

Sd. S. D'A. CROOKSHANK,

Colonel,

Secretary to the Government of India.

REVISED PENSION RULES.

86. Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : (a) Is it a fact that the Secretary of State for India has sanctioned revised pension rules ? If so, will the Government kindly lay on the table a copy of the same for the information of this Assembly ?

(b) Is it a fact that no provisions have been made for widows of deceased pensioners who on account of premature death could not enjoy the pension ? If so, will the Government be pleased to state the reasons ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : (a) No. The Secretary of State has not sanctioned any revised pension rules.

BARS IN THE TIME SCALE OF PAY OF POSTAL EMPLOYEES.

87. Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : (a) Is it a fact that the Postal Enquiry Committee recommended only two bars in the time scale of pay of the postal employees ? If so, have the Government accepted the same ?

(b) Is it a fact that the Deputy Accountant General, Posts and Telegraphs, Calcutta, has allowed the reckoning of three bars in bringing the men held at Rs. 92 stage into the revised scale of March last ?

(c) Will the Government be pleased to intimate what orders have been passed in the appeal made by G. N. Mukherji, clerk, Burdwan H. O., and Sib Ch. Bhattacharya, Sub-Post Master, Burnpur (Burdwan) ?

Mr. H. A. Sams : (a) Yes.

(b) No. The second efficiency bar of the revised scale of Rs. 40—140 is fixed at the Rs. 100 stage.

(c) The cases of both the officials are under consideration.

APPOINTMENT OF RELATIONS OF RETIRED POSTAL OFFICIALS IN THE POSTAL DEPARTMENT.

88. Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : (a) Is it a fact that the sons and relations of retired Postmasters and sub-postmasters do not get any consideration in securing appointments in the Postal Department ?

(b) Is it a fact that the Local Governments show special favour to such candidates for appointment in the Police, Excise, Registration and many other Departments under them ? If so, are Government prepared to grant the same privilege to the postal candidates related to the retired staff ?

(c) Will the Government be pleased to state the number of candidates related to the retired staff appointed, and the total number of vacancies during the last 12 months in the Calcutta G. P. O. and its sub-offices ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) No.

(b) Part I—The Government of India have no information.

Part II—The answer is in the negative.

(c) Government do not possess the information nor do they propose to call for it as the expenditure of time and money involved in the collection will not be justified by the advantage to be gained thereby.

ALLEGED ASSAULTS ON POSTAL EMPLOYEES.

89. Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : (a) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to letter No. P.R.-88, dated 18th May 1927, from the General Secretary, Provincial Postal and R. M. S. Association to the Deputy Postmaster General, Railway Mail Service, Eastern Circle, and the letter No. R.L.-12-P., dated 20th May 1927, from the Deputy Postmaster-General, Dacca Range, to the Postmaster, Dacca, published in the " Samity ", an organ of the Dacca District Postal and R. M. S. Association in its issue of June and July 1927 ?

(b) Is it a fact that the assault was made by a deck passenger on the porter and mail Agent at Tarpassa steamer station and it was immediately reported to Babu Raj Kumar Mukherjee, Inspector, Railway Mail Service, 3rd Sub-division, who refused to identify the accused before the Police at Narayanganj and thereby frustrated the prosecution of the accused ?

(c) Is it a fact that Babu Raj Kumar Mukherjee has been transferred as Inspector, Railway Mail Service, Sadar Sub-division, and the Mail Agent who reported the case to the Inspector to Narayanganj by way of punishment by Babu Mohini Mohan Lahiri, Superintendent, Railway Mail Service, S. Division ?

(d) Is it a fact that Mr. Querry, Superintendent of Police, Dacca, assaulted Rajendra Chandra Das, a postman, Ramna Post Office, while he was on duty and the Deputy Postmaster-General, Dacca Range, did not think it worth while to take any action for the protection of the Government servant within his jurisdiction ?

(e) Are Government aware of the fact that an European officer at Kharagpur railway station assaulted a postman of the Kharagpur Post Office ?

(f) Do the Government propose to take any action against the officials concerned who assaulted the postal officials and those for whose neglect the prosecution was frustrated ?

(g) Do Government intend to take steps for the future protection of postal employees from such assaults ?

Mr. H. A. Sams : The information is being collected and will be furnished to the Honourable Member in due course.

EXAMINATION OF RESERVE CLERKS IN THE POST OFFICES.

90. Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : (a) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to letter No. A.S.|18-11, dated 22nd June 1927, from the Director-General, Posts and Telegraphs, to the Postmaster-General, Bengal and Assam Circle, prescribing the examination of the reserve clerks in the Post Offices after a year or in case of their failure a second examination after 18 months by the Deputy Postmaster-General or Personal Assistants of the Postmaster-General at different centres ? (c) Will Government state the expected amount of expenses to be incurred for travelling expenses on account of holding the examinations at different centres of the Deputy Postmasters-General and the Personal Assistants in the Bengal and Assam Circle and other Circles of India ?

(d) Is it in contemplation of the Director-General to appoint substitutes in place of the Deputy Postmasters-General and Personal Assistants during their absence at different centres for management of the office work ? If the reply be in the affirmative is it a fact that the number of the Deputy Postmasters-General and Personal Assistants are in excess over the actual requirements ?

(e) Will the Government be pleased to state if in any other service in any other department of the Government, probationary clerks are discharged after a certain period on such examination to the ruin of their prospects ?

(f) Is it a fact that the Divisional Superintendents and first class Postmasters take in the reserve clerks after holding a departmental test examination ?

(g) Why was the old system of recruiting reserve clerks by the Divisional Superintendents and the first class Postmasters done away with ?

(e) The information is not readily available and Government do not propose to ask for it.

(f) No. A copy of paragraphs 1 and 2 of Rule 469, Post Office Manual, Volume II, is attached.

(g) It has not been done away with.

POST OFFICE MANUAL, VOLUME II.

APPOINTMENTS.

469. Rules to be observed for the recruitment and training of candidates for reserve clerkships in the Post Office.

1. The leave reserve sanctioned for the post office should be a trained reserve and for this purpose there should be a recognised body of candidates in each Division and first class Head Office group recruited in the manner below :—

(a) In connection with each permanent vacancy which is due to occur owing to the retirement of an official, a candidate should be selected and his training begun just early enough to admit of its completion by the date of the vacancy. The time of selection will, of course, depend on whether it is necessary to train the candidate in both telegraph and postal work or only in the latter. Care should be taken to have a suitable proportion of the candidates trained in telegraphy, and the period of postal training, which in the case of men who are to be trained in both classes of work should precede their deputation to the Telegraph Training class, should ordinarily not exceed 3 months. If this matter receive the attention that it deserves, there should seldom be an interval between the completion of a candidate's training and his appointment as a reserve clerk.

(b) In addition to the men referred to in the preceding paragraph, a few candidates (the number being fixed by the Head of the Circle according to the requirements of the Division or Head Office group) should be selected from time to time and after being trained for the requisite period should, while waiting for reserve clerkships, be employed as far as possible in filling vacancies due to—

(1) the creation of temporary or season appointments or

(2) the deputation of postal signallers temporarily to departmental telegraph offices or

(3) The deputation of officials to field service in Iraq, etc., or

(4) the placing of officials under suspension.

While not filling such vacancies, the candidates should be required to attend the post offices at the places where they live.

These candidates should be appointed as reserve clerks in vacancies due to death or the creation of new permanent appointments. As it is most undesirable that such candidates should have to wait for appointments for any considerable period after their training is complete, it will be necessary for each Superintendent and 1st class Head Postmaster to gauge his requirements in this respect with great care and, in order to satisfy himself that this is being done, the Head of the Circle should demand an explanation in every case in which a trained candidate is not provided with a reserve clerkship within 6 months of the completion of his training.

(c) No candidate should either before or after training be employed in filling the place of an official on leave.

(d) Heads of Circles should submit for the Director-General's information at the beginning of each official year a statement showing the number of candidates enrolled in each Division and 1st class Head Office group and containing in respect of each candidate the following particulars :—

(i) Date of enrolment as candidate ;

(ii) Period of training ;

(iii) Period of employment in acting or temporary vacancies ; and

(iv) Date of appointment as reserve clerk.

2. The chief conditions required of a candidate for clerical appointments in the Post Office are the following :—

(1) That the candidate should not be above 25 years on the date he is appointed as a reserve clerk ;

(2) That evidence has been produced by him of having passed the educational standard prescribed for the locality concerned which standard should ordinarily be the matriculation examination of a recognised University, or its equivalent ;

(3) That a satisfactory certificate of moral character has been produced from some respectable and trustworthy person ;

(4) That the candidate's handwriting is neat and legible and that he is quick at figures ;

(5) That he is willing to furnish security for Rs. 300;

(6) That before commencing work he produces a certificate of physical fitness signed by a Civil Surgeon.

ALLEGATIONS AGAINST BABU MOHINI MOHAN LAHIRI, SUPERINTENDENT, RAILWAY MAIL SERVICE, S. DIVISION.

91. Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state the rule of the Civil Service Regulations or Fundamental Rules under which a Divisional Superintendent is competent to issue standing orders refusing leave on medical certificate ? If there is no such rule, will Government be pleased to state under what authority Babu Mohini Mohan Lahiri, Superintendent, Railway Mail Service, issued standing orders declining to accept medical certificates in certain cases and refusing the leave recommended by medical practitioners as stated in reply to question 90 (d) of the last Session of the Assembly ?

(b) Are the Government aware of the orders issued by Sir Ganen Roy late Director General of Posts and Telegraphs, urging the relief of the officials who apply for leave on medical certificate ?

(c) Will the Government be pleased to state in how many cases (giving the names of particular individuals) leave on medical certificates was refused to the employees ?

(d) Will Government be pleased to state the number of transfers made by Babu Mohini Mohan Lahiri during his administration in the S. Division and the amount of travelling expenses paid for such transfers and to enumerate the particulars of interest of public service for which this amount has been spent out of the public revenue in the shape of travelling expenses ?

(e) Is it a fact that Babu Mohini Mohan Lahiri never examined the vans on running railway sections and the condition of service of the sorters ?

(f) Is it a fact that all the vans except one of the S.-13 section are so small that during the working season in winter the space is quite insufficient to contain the mail and parcel bags and the Calcutta mails are being carried from Narayanganj to Dacca in ordinary third class passenger trains and Babu Mohini Mohan Lahiri failed to take any preventive action for the safety of the mails ?

(g) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to letter No. P.R.-15 (2), dated the 23rd July, 1927 published in the " Samitee " issue of August, 1927, an organ of the District Postal and Railway Mail Service Asociation, addressed to the Deputy Postmaster General Railway Mail Service, Eastern Circle from which it appears that Babu Mohini Mohan Lahiri abused in damaging and defamatory manner Babu Sarat Chandra Chakraborty, a mail guard and caused him to be criminally prosecuted under the Penal Code and the Post Office Act and has kept him under suspension though the court of justice acquitted him without framing any charge ?

(h) Are the Government aware that Babu Mohini Mohan Lahiri on one occasion abused the Sub-Postmaster, Kulaura Railway Junction Post Office, and the General Secretary, Provincial Postal and Railway Mail Service Association, Bengal and Assam, brought the facts to the notice of the higher authorities ?

(i) Are Government prepared to consider the question of re-instating Babu Sarat Chandra Chakraborty, the mail guard, and issuing orders for payment of his pay with effect from his date of suspension ?

Mr. H. A. Sams : The information is being collected and will be furnished to the Honourable Member in due course.

RETRANSFER TO RAILWAY MAIL SERVICE, S. DIVISION, OF BABU KASISWAR LALA, ETC.

92. Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : (a) Are Government aware that due to the patronage of Babu Mohini Mohan Lahiri, present Superintendent, Railway Mail Service, S. Division, Babu Kasiswar Lala secured a re-transfer in the S. Division wherefrom he was transferred in the year 1911 by way of punishment ?

(b) Will Government be pleased to state the number of sorters in the S. Division whose senior claims were overlooked by Mr. Mohini Mohan Lahiri, the Superintendent, Railway Mail Service, in conferring on Babu Kasiswar Lala the post of Sub-Record Clerk as stated in reply to question No. 89 during the last winter Session of the Assembly ?

(c) Are Government aware whether any attempt was made to test the efficiency of the senior sorters to prove that they were unfit to hold the charge of Sub-Record Clerk ? If not, will Government be pleased to state the ground on which the Superintendent arrived at a decision that Babu Kasiswar Lala is the only man capable to hold the charge ?

(d) Will Government be pleased to state the educational and other qualifications for which Babu Kasiswar Lala has been given preference to by Babu Mohini Mohan Lahiri, the present Superintendent ?

(e) Is it a fact that no less than 13 sorters have been transferred during this short tenure of service of Babu Kasiswar Lala in the interests of public service from the Narayanganj Railway Mail Service office to distant parts of the S. Division and two of them were retransferred to Narayanganj for the same reason ? If the reply be in the affirmative, will the Government be pleased to state the particular interests of public service that these transfers served and the amount of public revenue spent for the transfers ?

(f) Will the Government be pleased to state the action taken, if any, for putting the sorters in double and triple duty by Babu Kasiswar Lala as admitted in reply to question No. 90 in the last winter Session ? If the reply be in the negative will Government state why he has been set free ?

(g) Are Government aware of the fact that the Sub-Record Clerks at Tinsukia and Gauhati in Assam under the Superintendent, Railway Mail Service, S. Division are senior to Babu Kasiswar Lala and have been serving long in more unhealthy and costly stations while Babu Kasiswar Lala although recruited from outside the S. Division has been posted by Babu Mohini Mohan Lahiri, the present Superintendent, at Narayanganj without considering their claim ?

(h) What action do the Government propose to take in this matter ?

Mr. H. A. Sams : (a) The facts are not as stated in the question.

(b) It was not stated in the reply to question No. 89 in the last winter Session of the Assembly that the claims of any senior men were overlooked when Babu Kashiswar Lala was appointed Sub-Record Clerk.

(c) and (d). Government have no information except that Babu Kashiswar Lala was considered by the authority competent to fill the appointment to be best fitted for it. They do not propose to call for any further information. If any official felt aggrieved by the appointment of Babu Kashiswar Lala, it was open to him to appeal to the next higher authority.

(e) Government have no precise information about the various details, nor do they propose to waste time and money in endeavouring to collect it. The particular interest of public service served by transfer is its efficiency.

(f) No action was taken, because no action was considered necessary.

(g) and (h). The facts stated are not wholly correct. Further, it is understood that the present men at Gauhati and Tinsukia are unwilling to be transferred.

INSPECTION OF POST OFFICES BY AUDIT OFFICERS.

93. Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : (a) Will Government be pleased to state if the information as assured by the Honourable Finance Member in reply to starred questions Nos. 355 and 356 on the 14th February 1927, regarding inspection of post offices by Audit Officers, is now ready ? If not, when is the information expected to be furnished ?

(b) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to letter No. H.-13|d., dated 31st March 1927, posted at the Ramna Post Office on the 1st June, 1927, from the Deputy Postmaster General, Dacca Range, to the Secretary, District Postal and Railway Mail Service Association published in the Samitee, an organ of the Association in its issue of June and July, 1927 demanding " either to establish the truth of the allegations or to withdraw them within 15 days "?

(c) Will the Government be pleased to state the result of the enquiry promised ? If no enquiry has yet been made do the Government propose to expedite the enquiry ?

(d) Are Government aware that an Audit Officer other than the one referred to by the Postmaster General, Bengal and Assam Circle, went to inspect the Chittagong Head Office in the month of June 1927, but the Postmaster, Chittagong, did not allow him to inspect the office until sanction of the Postmaster General was received ? If the reply be in the affirmative, will Government state why this irregularity was committed ?

(c) Do Government propose to discontinue the system of inspection of muffasil post offices by the Audit Officers ?

(f) Will Government state the amount of travelling expenses incurred for inspection of muffasil post offices by the Audit Officers and particulars of serious irregularities detected by them during the last five years in India ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : (a) and (c). A complete reply to the Honourable Member's questions Nos. 355 and 356 was sent to him on the 15th March 1927 and a supplementary reply, containing the results of the enquiry referred to by him, on the 6th May 1927. A copy of the replies is in the Library of the House.

(b) and (d). Government are enquiring into the points raised and a further reply will be sent to the Honourable Member in due course.

(e) No. As stated in the reply to part (b) of question No. 356, Government attach the greatest importance to these inspections.

(f) Government do not consider it necessary to obtain any further information beyond what was given in reply to question No. 355 (a) and (c).

Secretary of the Assembly : Sir, in reply to the message of sympathy from this House for the distress caused by the floods, the following telegram was received from the Government of Bihar and Orissa on the 22nd of August last :

"His Excellency the Governor of Bihar and Orissa greatly appreciates the message of sympathy which the Legislative Assembly has communicated through him to the people of Orissa who have suffered from the devastations of the recent floods. His Excellency desires to thank the Legislative Assembly for their cordial interest in the welfare of the afflicted and to assure it that the Local Government have already undertaken comprehensive measures for the relief of distress and generous aid has been received from charitable organisations."

THE GOLD STANDARD AND RESERVE BANK OF INDIA BILL—contd.

Mr. President : The House will now resume further discussion of the motion made by the Honourable Sir Basil Blackett, namely, that the Bill to establish a gold standard currency for British India and constitute a Reserve Bank of India, as reported by the Joint Committee, be taken into consideration.

Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya (Madras : Indian Commerce) : Sir, I beg to rise to speak on the motion and also to move my amendment, of which I have given notice, that the Bill to establish a Gold Standard for British India and constitute a Reserve Bank of India, as reported by the Joint Committee, be re-circulated for the purpose of obtaining further opinion thereon.

The Standing Orders have a very wise provision in Rule 44 that, after the presentation of the final Report of a Select Committee on a Bill, it is open even to the Member in charge of the Bill, if he is dissatisfied with the reshaping of the Bill by the Select Committee, to move that the Bill be re-committed either without limitation or with respect to particular clauses or amendments only or to make additional provisions in the Bill.

Why does not the Honourable Member feel inclined to appeal to the Committee ? Does he feel that it is no use appealing to Philip drunk again ? Does he feel that the Committee is not sober enough to be appealed to ? Or the Honourable Mover has no new convincing arguments to persuade them to come to his point of view ? If he is confident that he is in the right and he can carry the country with him, it was open to him under the same Rule 44 to move that the Bill, as reported by the Joint Select Committee, be re-circulated for the purpose of obtaining further opinion thereon. If he had done so, the Honourable Mover of the Bill would have fortified himself with the view of the public and then approached this House to reconsider his original Bill. But what do we find ? The Honourable Member in charge of the Bill, who has been in petulant mood from the beginning, instead of taking this wise course, has sent a series of amendments which practically seek to restore his own old Bill. Is this not insulting the Joint Committee of both the Chambers of the Indian Legislature ? Twenty-five gentlemen of both the Houses went to Bombay and Calcutta at considerable inconvenience to themselves in the hottest part of the year and spent a full fortnight in their deliberations, and the Bill and the Report are the result of their labours. If he wanted to have his own Bill only to be considered and adopted, why did he waste the time of the members of the Joint Committee, and why was all the expenditure incurred ? The Joint Committee was constituted of the Honourable the Finance Member's own free choice and nomination. He probably felt that by constituting a Joint Committee of both the Houses he had a better chance to get support for his Bill. He thought the Members of the obliging Upper House would give him greater support. But he did not reckon with his host. The credit is due to the Members of the Upper House who sat on the Joint Committee that they took a firm attitude and a broad outlook in shaping the Bill. We must thank the majority of the Committee for their work. In justice to the Joint Committee the Honourable Member in charge of the Bill should have moved the House that the Bill, as reported by the Committee, be re-circulated for the purpose of obtaining further opinion thereon. The majority has made what improvements they could under the peculiar circumstances they had to do their work. Unfortunately they did not go far enough. The reasons are obvious. On several occasions, the Honourable the Finance Member threatened to drop the Bill altogether, if the Committee did not agree to what he or the packed Royal Commission called the fundamental essentials of the Bill.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett (Finance Member) : On a point of personal explanation, Sir. May I ask the Honourable Member what authority he has to say that certain things happened inside the Committee, that I said this or I said that ? I take strong exception to that because the reports in the Press were entirely unauthorised and they were sometimes very misleading. I think it is unfair that I should be accused in this House of a statement of fact which is obviously only a statement of hypothesis.

Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya : I may say in this connection that this was even mentioned in the House yesterday. The Members were led to believe that the country would lose the wonderful benefits of the so-called gold standard and the Reserve Bank if they insisted on making the changes they wished to make in the interest of India. The Damocles' sword of withdrawal of the Bill was always hanging over their heads. The result is that we have got a Bill passed by a narrow majority with a number of minutes of dissent. I feel the majority would have been greater but for the fear of losing the whole Bill. Even this House was similarly told yesterday that if the Bill is dropped the responsibility will lie on the opposition. But what is the use of the Bill if it is not in the full and best interests of the country ?

I shall give some of my reasons in requesting this House to accept my amendment. This Bill is a very important measure which vitally affects everybody in the country. It should not be fought on pugilistic grounds, as the Honourable Sir Basil Blackett is reported to have rightly said elsewhere when he was probably in his calmer mood. The various interests of this vast continent should be convinced that the measure is really in their own interests and not devised to suit the European needs first and to allay the fear of the United States of an immediate and direct setback from any action in India. The United States has an exaggerated fear that the gold coinage and the gold coin circulation in India would mean a withdrawal of about 500 million dollars worth of gold within the next ten years and would correspondingly accentuate the decline in world prices. In fear of the additional depression and further complication in an already depressed financial situation the experts of England unanimously opposed any proposal for gold coinage and gold circulation in India and the American witnesses supported their position before the Royal Commission on the close lines of whose recommendation the original Bill is drafted. Thus the Indian public must be given ample opportunity to compare and scrutinise both the Bills, that is, the original Bill drafted on the lines to suit first the alien requirements on alien recommendations and the draft now submitted by the chosen Indian representatives who have their own country's interest at heart and have re-drafted the Bill though not so fully as they might have, if they were not threatened at every stage with the dire calamity and responsibility of losing the very first measure of fiscal autonomy. Is it not therefore very necessary that the Bill should be circulated for further opinion thereon before we proceed with the Bill ?

Another reason for this re-circulation is that in their Report the Committee themselves say they have made a number of changes—several of them of considerable importance. For instance, as they say, and rightly too, that they have made what is perhaps the most important alteration to substitute a bank with a capital supplied by the Government in place of one with private share capital. It is no use creating another East India Company to exploit the country in partnership with the Imperial Bank of India with several of the wholesome restrictions on the nature of the business to be done by them in future removed and also the Government control withdrawn. But the Honourable Sir Basil Blackett's amendment goes to create an East India Company. (Laughter). I am sure the country would approve of the State Bank only if other safeguards provided by the amended Bill are also carried out. It is no use forcing a scheme down the throat of the people and yet saying we are getting rid of the octopus of the Secretary of State and giving India fiscal autonomy.

[Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya.]

What the shareholders' bank as devised by the original Bill amounts to is transfer of control of currency from the Secretary of State in England responsible to Parliament to the alien exploiters and imperious bureaucracy here, which may mean a change probably from King Log to King Stork.

We had again been regaled with the great advantages of having a shareholders' bank. The Honourable the Finance Member regards it as fundamental that the majority of the members of the Board must be chosen by constituencies independent of the State, and he and his colleagues are by their experience convinced that the device of private share capital, which is well understood in other countries, is the method best calculated to serve India in this connection. The objects of share capital, we are told, are firstly that a body of directors elected by persons who have subscribed some share capital would have greater interest in the institution and command more confidence than directors selected by other means. Secondly, the Bank would be conducted from the point of view of commercial advantage and of what is best in the economic interest of the country. Thirdly, the object is to create a democratic constituency to which the controlling body of directors would be responsible.

I have been connected with banking in India for the last quarter of a century and with the courtesy of the India Office I had the rare privilege of acquainting myself with the inside working of the Bank of England and the five big banks of England when I went to give evidence before the Chamberlain Commission, and I had the opportunity of comparing the banking system both in England and in India. From my experience in India, I find that the three objects are very nice in theory. But in practice the control and direction of the Bank is vested in a group of men responsible to nobody but themselves without any effective supervision and check by shareholders whose interest does not go beyond fat dividends. The directors at the shareholders' meeting are practically left to pass accounts submitted by themselves to re-elect themselves or the partners of the firms to which they belong or their successors, if any of them are removed by the hand of death and to appoint auditors of their own choice to audit their own accounts. This applies to the Imperial Bank and the old Presidency Banks. Owing to the general apathy of the shareholders the directors simply comply with just the formalities required by law and issue a report and balance-sheet. They are not inclined to give any information to the shareholders.

Lest it may be considered I am exaggerating matters I have in my hand a list of attendance at the shareholders' meeting of the Imperial Bank for the last five years. The Imperial Bank is our present State Bank under the ideal scheme of shareholders. Here is the attendance at the general meeting of the shareholders of the Imperial Bank of India for the last five years. In 1921, the meeting was held at Calcutta and only 11 shareholders were present, 9 Directors and Managing Governors, and only 2 gentlemen from outside out of 5,000 shareholders.

Nawab Sir Sahibzada Abdul Qaiyum (North-West Frontier Province : Nominated Non-Official) : Whose fault is that ?

Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya : It is the fault of the system. In 1922, at Bombay, there were 33 present in person and 881 were present by what they call proxy. In Madras, in 1923, 41 were present in person and 1,621 were present by proxy. In 1924, at Calcutta, 16 were present in person and 908 were present by proxy. In 1925, at Bombay, 34 were present in person and 841 were present by proxy. In 1926, at Madras, 13 were present in person out of 5,000 shareholders, while 788 were present by proxy. I may just here explain why in 1923, in Madras, 41 were present in person and 1,621 by proxy. The occasion was that some of the Indians were anxious to have an Indian auditor. Both the Bank and the friends of the auditor had worked to secure proxies. I may also say that a large number of proxies are always registered and remain with the Bank, and that is why you find in the amendments to the Imperial Bank Act a request that the proxies should not be transferred from one office to another whenever there is a meeting.

Now, Sir, as I have explained, out of about 5,000 shareholders distributed all over the continent of India, except on any rare occasion, the directors and the officers of the Bank are left to conduct meetings held only once a year.

The directorate of a bank practically becomes a close borough confined only to certain favoured firms. The directors by mutual courtesy have a freehold and life-long tenure of their offices. The Government have tried on the old Presidency Banks' funeral additions of one or two Government officers in the past, probably to restrain the exuberance of commercial directors, but of what earthly use they were to the Bank it is difficult to say, as they too were generally mute like other directors. The Bank of Bombay failed in spite of an official director on the Board. If there are any independent directors, they and their firms languish under the cold shade of the Secretary or Managing Governor's displeasure and their contempt is seldom purged. Under the present system, a seat on the direction of the Imperial Bank becomes apparently an asset in the partnerships of certain firms but is not a wise or prudent one. The directors in a shareholders' bank in India have not much independence. In the hands of a strong Secretary or Managing Governor, they become dummies or pawns to play with. In short, the Bank is in the pocket of the Secretary or Managing Governor.

Mr. N. M. Joshi (Nominated : Labour Interests) : Is that true of all shareholders' banks ?

Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya : Of a number of banks even under European management.

Take another case, the case of the Alliance Bank of Simla, Limited. I have seen some of the shareholders' lists some years before it failed. We had a galaxy of European high officials including Viceroys, Commanders-in-Chief, Members of Council, Secretaries to the Government, etc., among the shareholders. What interest did they take in the Bank as shareholders ? We know how miserably it failed. How a Bolton got hold of the Bank under the ideal arrangement of a Bank with private capital and on commercial lines !

Now I shall take the case of France which is practically a State institution in the form of a limited liability company. I shall read an extract from a book based on information supplied from an official source.

Mr. H. G. Cocke (Bombay : European) : What is the name of the book ?

Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya : I will tell you, Sir. An Honourable gentleman wants to know the name of the Book. Here it is—" French Public Finance in the Great War and To-day " by Harvey E. Fisk, published in New York by the Bankers' Trust Company. I have got it by the courtesy of our Imperial Bank.

" Ownership (of the Bank of France.) The bank is entirely owned by its stockholders. For many years none of its stock has been held by the State, that which was originally purchased having been disposed of to the public. The stock is 182,500,000 francs divided on December 24, 1921, among 33,781 stockholders. The par value of the shares is 1,000 francs, equal at par of exchange to $ 200. Its market value at the close of 1921 was 5,530 francs—say, $ 1,106. There were then 11,952 stockholders holding only one share of stock each. There were 7,398 persons who had only two shares and 7,509 who held between three and five shares. Thus 10.6 per cent. of the stock was held by those who owned two shares or less, and over 20 per cent. by those who owned five shares or less...."

That means that probably 30 per cent. had no right of voting.

" .... A very large percentage of the stockholders are women...."

That is, out of the 33,781 stockholders a very large proportion are women.

" .... Only the 200 largest stockholders have a voice in the management of the bank."

Now we can understand what a shareholders' bank implies. Out of 33,781 shareholders, we have got only 200 people to manage the whole show. Thus it is clear there is hardly any control of the shareholders on the Board of Directors in a commercial Bank even under European management, and the idea to create a democratic constituency to which the controlling body of Directors would be responsible is moonshine at present so far as India is concerned.

There appears to be a sort of conspiracy to finally make this new Reserve Bank of India a sort of annexe to the Bank of England. That is why they are so keen about making the Bank as a shareholders' bank for it would be difficult to do so with a State Bank. The Governor of the Bank of England and of the Bank of France had been on a visit to the United States in this connection and an officer of the Bank of England had been to Australia on such a mission. Here I have got a copy of a letter from Australia which would be of some interest to the House. It says :

" Another aspect of the matter which we ourselves are keeping prominently before us is the desirability of the establishment of central reserve banking throughout all the self-governing parts of the Empire, all such institutions working in co-ordination with the Bank of England, which may be described as the Mother Central Reserve Bank of the Empire. At the present time we are enjoying the privilege of a visit by Sir Earnest Harvey, K.B.E., Controller of the Bank of England who has, by the courtesy of the Governor of the Bank of England, come to Australia to give us at first hand the benefit of his wide knowledge and experience. We feel that as a result of this visit the establishment of Central Reserve Banking in Australia on broader lines and conforming to the practices of the Bank of England will eventuate."

Another important alteration made by the Standing Committee is the selection of three directors each by the elected Members of the Central and Provincial Legislatures. The Honourable the Finance Member in his Minute of Dissent waxes eloquent as under :

" Our objection to members of the Legislatures being eligible for the office of Director applies with even greater strength to the proposal that the Indian Legislature and the Provincial Legislatures should be formed into constituencies for the election of members of the directorate. Such a proposal seems to us to be fatal to the scheme of a Reserve Bank altogether. Under this proposal eight out of fifteen voting members of the Board will be chosen by the Central Executive or the Central Legislature, while three more will be chosen by the Provincial Legislatures, making eleven out of fifteen voting members (in addition to the non-voting Government officer) who will owe their presence on the Board to State intervention. We regard it as fundamental that the majority of the members of the Board must be chosen by constituencies independent of the State. Only so can the full independence of the Board be secured. The proposal further offends against the principle....''

I want to draw special attention to this sentence :

'' The proposal further offends against the principle that the constitutional functions of the Legislature do not and ought not to extend to the exercise of executive functions, such as the appointment of persons to specific posts. In so far as such a function has to be exercised at all in the case of the Reserve Bank by or on behalf of the State, it is a function of the Executive and not of the Legislature.''

Really a Daniel has come to judgment ! When this House asks for the separation of the judicial and executive we are told that it is impracticable. Why do these Members sit here in the Legislative Councils and also lord as Members of the Executive Councils ? How do they reconcile their principles with practice ? Why do they in their own case allow constitutional functions of the Legislature to extend to the exercise of executive functions, such as appointment of persons to specific posts ? Why not ask the country what they want ? But the Government is imperious and would not consult the country but wishes to force the change. The Government which is itself the biggest political party in the country choose to call the directors elected by the Legislatures as politicians ! What are the members of Government and their nominees ? They represent the Government politics. Yet the kettle calls the pot black !

Then, we come to another very important but halting change about the gold standard coin. The Joint Committee, though they regard it as a matter of first importance that gold standard coin should be introduced. yet hesitate to give the public the right to take the gold bullion to the mint to get the gold mohurs proposed by themselves. They talk of the '' gold mohur '' as a definite proof that the Indian currency has been linked to gold, but leave it to the absolute discretion of the most unwilling Governor General in Council to coin it or not. We are told that only two gold mohurs will be struck in the mint as the conspicuous and visible sign of the linking of our currency to gold ! One probably will be sent to the next World Exhibition, and the other kept in Imperial Delhi as a souvenir of the momentous coinage ! This kind of linking of our currency to gold proposed by the Committee reminds me of the platonic marriages where the connection does not extend beyond the sacramental marriage tie as in the famous Russel case. Here also our currency is linked to gold, but the gold goes to the third party. The gold standard is ours, but the gold goes to aliens for remittances abroad, and every effort is made to deprive or rather to cheat Indians of their gold. It is a mercy that sovereigns are retained as legal tender by the Committee, but Sir Basil wants to torpedo them. I remember to have seen a war cartoon in the Punch wherein John Bull proudly points at a big gold sovereign and says : '' This is not torpedoed ''. But Sir Basil desires to do so in India in peace times.

Similarly, there are other important matters such as about the bank notes, etc. If the provisions of the Bill are carried out, currency notes, specially under Rs. 5, become practically inconvertible. The determination is to force paper currency on the country, and yet it is called a gold standard. If Sir Basil Blackett's ideas are to be carried out fully, I shall have to use an epigram which was in vogue in the times of Pitt :

[Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya.]

"Of Augustus and Rome,
The poets still warble,
How he found it of brick,
And left it of marble."
"So, of Blackett and India,
Men say without vapour,
That he found it of gold,
And left it of paper".

Another feature unfortunately approved of by the Committee is the total exclusion of the directors of other banks from the Board of Directors of the Reserve Bank.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : It is the greatest defect.

Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya : While in other countries banks are given a special direct share in the capital and representation on the Boards of the Central Reserve Banks, here the Committee considers it a distinct disqualification. Directors of other Banks have sat on the Board of the Imperial Bank for the last 5 years. Government themselves have nominated directors of other Banks who had the additional sin of being Members of the Legislature on the Central Board of the Imperial Bank. What calamity has befallen the Imperial Bank ? How have they abused the confidence ? Now, all of a sudden, the directors of other Banks are treated like lepers and left out. Even on the Board of the Bank of England which is held up as a model, there are out of 26 directors, 15 persons who are connected with joint-stock banks and leading banking firms. Why is an exception made in the case of India ? In England members of Parliament are not disqualified. In fact, the Bank of England had, and has, on its Board members of Parliament, though one or two. Though they are not nominated by Parliament, they are not debarred from sitting on the Board of the Bank of England simply because they are members of Parliament.

I do not wish to take up any more time of the House. But there are similarly other important matters in which changes are made in the framework of the constitution proposed by the Royal Commission. The public have no knowledge of these important changes. The Joint Committee's Report and Bill reached us only on the 19th instant. It was first published in the Gazette only on Saturday last. While we are discussing it here, the public outside has not yet seen it, much less studied it. Standing Order No. 42 requires that the Report of the Select Committee with the amended Bill shall be published in the Gazette. The object is to give the public ample opportunity to study and offer its opinion and criticism. The Bill was published in Simla on the 27th instant and contains very important changes as shown by me. It has not yet reached all parts of the country. For instance, it could not have reached Madras, Rangoon, Karachi and it could not have reached some people yet, for we have got some letters from other places asking us to send copies of the amended Bill and the Report. Representing as I do the commercial community of the Madras Presidency, I had not enough time to consult either the important bankers, merchants or the Chambers and commercial associations in the Madras Presidency. It is no use our assenting to the Bill without first consulting the important Chambers and trading associations and other public bodies who have a stake in the country. Nothing is lost by postponing the consideration of the Bill till opinions are expressed by the country, especially the commercial and public bodies.

Further, all the papers connected with the Report should be laid before the public and I am sure that if the full report of the proceedings of the meetings of the Joint Committee at Bombay and Calcutta are published, they will go a great way to clear the matter. The Committee has postponed the date of starting the Bank and Sir Basil Blackett has shifted certain dates still further, and if the new Bank is started after another 12 months or so, it will even further simplify the question of the agreement with the Imperial Bank and the amount to be handed on account of the over-generous terms still allowed to the Imperial Bank can be saved and the Government can distribute the agencies of the Reserve Bank among a number of banks. The various commercial and financial bodies as the Chambers and the Banks who are so closely connected with this important measure have had no time even to read, much less to study and express their views or to instruct their representatives to press their views here. We must also take into consideration the views expressed in the minutes of dissent like Sir John Bell and others and there is a large body of the business community represented by him who cannot and must not be over looked. They would be opposed to the views of the majority report. They must equally have an opportunity to express their views, specially in view of the differences among the members of the Joint Committee. All the papers laid before the Joint Committee and the full report of the proceedings of their meeting must be made available to the public. I hope I have made out a good case in support of my amendment, and I move that the Bill to establish a Gold Standard and constitute a Reserve Bank of India as reported by the Joint Committee be re-circulated for the purpose of obtaining further opinion thereon.

Mr. R. K. Shanmukham Chetty (Salem and Coimbatore cum North Arcot : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I am glad to have an opportunity of intervening so early in this important debate ; for curiously enough on this occasion it has fallen to the lot of Members sitting in the Opposition Benches to effectively support the motion moved by Sir Basil Blackett and it has fallen to his lot more to criticise the Report that he has presented than to speak in support of it. From what I have seen of the amendments of which Sir Basil Blackett has given notice, it is evident that on almost all the fundamental issues raised in this Bill he has thrown to the winds the recommendations of the Joint Committee and is anxious to go back to the Bill as it was originally presented by Government. My Honourable friend in making his motion yesterday remarked that on most of the technical matters he had accepted the recommendation of the Joint Committee, but it was only on the question of shareholders' versus State Bank and on the question of the gold mohur that there was difference of opinion between Government and the majority of the Joint Committee. I beg to submit that it is not merely on these two questions but on almost all the other technical questions as well that the amendments given notice of by Sir Basil Blackett will have the effect of upsetting the decision of the Joint Committee. Sir, to my mind the most fundamental clauses of the Bill are those relating to its constitution, its management, to the composition of the currency reserve and the question of the gold mohur, and

[Mr. R. K. Shanmukham Chetty.]

I maintain that on all these points Sir Basil Blackett is endeavouring to upset the decision of the Joint Committee.

As a member of the Joint Committee I would like to take this opportunity of explaining to the House some of the salient features of that Report. So far as the question of shareholders' versus State Bank is concerned, my task has been made considerably easy by the very lucid exposition which the Honourable the Pandit gave last evening. I do not therefore wish to speak at any great length on that point, but I would like to add one or two words on this subject. In support of a private shareholders' bank it is no good either for Sir Basil Blackett or for any Honourable Member of this House to rely upon what has been said on this point by the Royal Commission on Indian Currency and Finance ; for I submit that the Royal Commission has not taken into consideration the question of the advisability of having a State Bank. They proceed on the assumption that it must be a private shareholders' bank and in paragraph 91 they remark :

"There is no need nor is it in fact desirable that a Central Bank should be endowed with any very great amount of capital"

They have not sufficiently considered the question whether it is necessary and desirable for a Central Bank to have share capital subscribed by private shareholders. In paragraph 89 they take it for granted that every true Central Bank must contain in its charter a provision for private shareholders, and I therefore submit that they have not devoted their attention at all to this aspect of the question. Even if the other countries of the world may have Central Banks constituted on a private shareholders' basis, under the peculiar circumstances of the case of India it would not be desirable to have a State Bank. My Honourable friend Sir Basil Blackett in support of his scheme of a private shareholders' bank said that a bank constituted on that basis would be one that is most easily understood by other countries of the world. I realise, Sir, that most of the Central Banks of the world are banks with private shareholders' capital, but I ask this House to consider whether there is not one fundamental difference in the conditions that exist in the other countries of the world and in the conditions that exist in India, which would justify us in discarding this precedent of Central Banks in other countries. Sir, if I am not mistaken one of the fundamental provisions of the charters of Central Banks all over the world is that every shareholder must be a person belonging to the nationality of that country and, even in those banks where persons who do not belong to the nationality of the country are allowed to be shareholders, they are not allowed to exercise the right of voting at meetings. I ask whether Sir Basil Blackett would for a moment be prepared to concede this fundamental point which is incorporated in the charter of every Central Bank in the world ? Would he be prepared to say that no one except an Indian can be a shareholder in the Reserve Bank of India ; or as an alternative that even if outsiders who are not Indians are permitted to be shareholders they will not be permitted to exercise the right of voting at general meetings ? Sir, if my Honourable friend is prepared to concede that, I would straightaway agree to the constitution of a Central Bank with private shareholders.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : May I say that I shall be perfectly willing to add to the draft amendments I have that no one who is not an Indian or a British subject ordinarily resident in India should have a vote.

Mr. R. K. Shanmukham Chetty : Sir, that does not satisfy the point that has been raised by me. If the right to vote is confined to Indians and Indians alone, persons belonging to the Indian nationality—in which statutory natives represented by my friend Colonel Gidney would be included—I for one would have no objection to a shareholders' bank. But that is not practicable. We on this side know that Government would not even look at such a proposal. But my Honourable friend Sir Basil Blackett said yesterday that we might introduce certain special safeguards, as, for instance, that the majority of the shares should in the first instance be given to Indians and those who are resident in India. But I ask him whether in practice it would be possible to put this restriction upon the future transfer of shares. I maintain that it will make the working very complicated and cumbrous if we are going to say that not merely in the first instance but even in the case of future transfers the majority of the shares shall always be held by Indians or persons ordinarily resident in India. Our apprehension against having a shareholders' bank is this ; we cannot keep members representing European commercial interests from being shareholders in such a bank. And whether our apprehension is right or wrong, the impression remains that the interests represented by European commercial men come very often directly into conflict with the interests represented by Indian commerce. And so long as that state of affairs continues it is not possible for us to agree to any scheme which would hand over the management of the entire financial system of our country to foreign capitalists. Even if the management of the financial system of the country were to be entrusted to Indian capitalists, I would still have some objection to such a course. I do not want that on an important concern like this vested interests should be created. For we all know as a result of the experience of almost every joint stock concern, not merely in India but all over the world, that the control exercised by the small shareholder is absolutely negligible if not non-existent. The managing agents or directors of any joint-stock company will tell you how ineffective and unreal the general control of the shareholders of the affairs of a corporation is. It is therefore no use to say that provisions might be made in the Bill to ensure that persons should not be allotted more than a certain number of shares, thereby safeguarding against the passing of control into the hands of a few capitalists.

Sir, to look at this problem from the point of view of a shareholders' versus a State Bank is, I submit, not the correct way of looking at it. For even the scheme which has been evolved by the Joint Committee does not provide for a State Bank in any real sense of the term. I submit that the use of the word " State " in this connection is in a very loose sense. The Central Bank, as recommended by the Joint Committee, is not a State concern in the sense that it is to be managed and controlled by the State. The fact that the Governor and Deputy Governor and certain Directors are to be nominated by the Government does not necessarily make it a State Bank subject to the control of the Government. I would like to give to the House an analogy in support of my contention. The Judges of the High Court are appointed by the Executive. They are paid by the Government, but is it for a moment contended, Sir, that the High Court is under the control of the Executive, that the Judges of the High Court are subordinate to the Executive ? We have again the recent example of the Public Service Commission, the members of which are appointed by the Executive. But is it for a moment contended that the Government of the day controls the actions of the Public Service Commissioners ? I maintain it does not. The fact therefore that a certain number of Directors are to be nominated by the Government and that Government subscribes 5 crores does not necessarily make this bank a State Bank in the real sense of the term. Sir, what is it that makes Sir Basil Blackett insist upon having a private shareholders' bank ? Is it because he wants to find this 5 crores of capital which is to be subscribed by the shareholders : or is it because he wants to devise an electorate which will be independent of Government control ? Obviously a shareholders' bank is not wanted simply for the purpose of finding this 5 crores of rupees, because even if this is so subscribed, look at the huge assets, the solid assets which the Government will be handing over to the shareholders' bank. From the Currency Reserve some 230 crores will be handed over to the bank ; and apart from this there will be the Government balances, amounting at times to 40 or 45 crores of rupees. Is it contended, Sir, that a shareholders' bank subscribing 5 crores of capital should be entrusted with these huge reserves amounting to about 270 crores of rupees ? I submit that it is not the proper thing to do. And the fact that Government is going to contribute 5 crores of rupees would not, I submit, make the bank necessarily a State Bank.

[Mr. R. K. Shanmukham Chetty.]

Sir, I am at one with the Honourable the Finance Member in wanting that the bank that we are to establish must be entirely free from the control either of the Government or of the Legislature. There is not the slightest difference of opinion on that point. I am sure nobody on this side contends that in the day to day management of the affairs of the bank or in the control or direction of the general policy of the bank either the Executive Government or the Legislature of the country should have any voice at all. If it is taken for granted that there is no serious difference of opinion on this point, I submit there is no meaning in the Honourable the Finance Member still insisting that the shareholders' bank is the most ideal scheme that can be devised. Having thrown out the idea of a private shareholders' bank the Joint Committee devised what appeared to them the best scheme of management possible under the circumstances. One very important provision that we made is that of the Governor and Deputy Governor, one of them at least must be an Indian. I find now that the Honourable the Finance Member has given notice of an amendment to delete this provision. We are accused of introducing racial discrimination in this matter. Sir, it is unfortunately in this country that we have to make provision that these high appointments have to be given to Indians. In other countries, the idea of giving these appointments to anybody who does not belong to the nationality of the country will not be entertained for a moment. We are told that the best man available must be chosen irrespective of the fact whether he is an Englishman or an Indian. Sir, if Government are to ask us to subscribe to that dictum, I ask the Honourable the Finance Member to state whether, if the best man available for the Governorship of the Bank happens to be a Czecho-slovakian, are Government prepared to nominate him to that post ? If the best men available among Englishmen only are to be appointed, we want to restrict the choice further : " appoint the best man available among Indians ", and surely it is not an unreasonable request to make. And I would draw the attention of the House to the necessity of seeing that this safeguard is kept in the Bill, for, if it is left to future developments and to the promises that might be made on the floor of this House, those promises would suffer the same fate that other promises have suffered in the past. By bitter experience we have realised that there is no more use pinning our faith even to solemn declarations made on the floor of this House : and nothing short of a statutory provision of this nature will satisfy the Honourable Members on this side of the House. I want the House to bear in mind this, that if the first Governor or Deputy Governor is not to be an Indian, for 15 years you may not have an Indian for these posts. If the first Governor and Deputy Governor happen to be non-Indians, we may have to wait for 15 or 20 years to get an Indian Deputy Governor on the Board ; and I would therefore implore the House to bear the importance of this proviso in mind.

Apart from this provision that we have made in the directorate, the Joint Committee devised a scheme of management which, as I have said, seemed the best under the circumstances. The scheme as finally settled by the Joint Committee has come in for a good deal of criticism at the hands of the Honourable the Finance Member, especially that portion of it in which we make provision for the representation of the Legislatures. Well, Sir, I want to make my own position clear, and I am sure that is the view shared by many others who have been associated with me on the Joint Committee. I did not subscribe to that scheme on the assumption that the representation of the Legislatures was a fundamental principle which we could not ignore. The only principle that I wanted to be accepted is that the Board must consist of a majority of elected Indian members. If my Honourable friend the Finance Member is prepared to give us an alternative scheme or schemes, which will ensure that there will be on the Board a majority of elected Indian members, then, Sir, I for one am prepared to consider the matter. I did not and do not consider representation of the Legislature as a sine qua non. That being the case, it is no use for the Honourable the Finance Member to say : " Now that you have thrown overboard my shareholders' scheme, it is for you to devise an electorate ". I confess it is very difficult to devise a suitable electorate. That does not necessarily mean that we must go back to a scheme which according to some of us is very vicious at least under present circumstances. Sir, I may assure my Honourable friend, the Finance Member, that if the scheme is to be wrecked merely on this one issue, he may rest assured that we will not allow that to be done. It will depend upon the Honourable the Finance Member to give us a satisfactory alternative which will ensure a majority of elected Indian members on the Board.

Sir, so much for the constitution and management of the Bank. I would now like to say a word or two about certain other salient features of the Bill as amended by the Joint Committee. The clauses referring to the business that can be transacted by the bank are a very important part of the Bill. and in amending these clauses we have always kept in view the one fundamental principle that the Reserve Bank should not come into competition with the ordinary commercial banks of the country. We have kept that limitation absolutely clear in our minds. But the provisions of clause 12 of the Bill have come in for a good deal of criticism from certain quarters. In that clause provision is made that under certain circumstances the Reserve Bank will be permitted to enter the open market for transactions This, it was represented to us, would give to the bank the power to come into competition with the ordinary commercial banks. But the Joint Committee thought that a provision of this nature was necessary if the bank is to discharge effectively the obligations imposed upon it, and we have taken good care to see that this provision would not be abused under any circumstances. Provision has been made that, if this clause is to be brought into operation, it can only be by a majority of two-thirds of the directors present at a meeting, and we have also provided that the directors should decide to put into effect this clause only if they are satisfied that it is necessary in the interests of Indian trade and commerce. Sir, it may be necessary that, on certain occasions, to make its discount policy effective, the bank may have to go to the open market to neutralise the activities of the ordinary commercial banks, and under such circumstances I submit it would be very unwise to take away this power of entering the open market completely from the Central Bank. The provision of clause 11 (3) has also come in for a good deal of criticism. That clause refers to the exchange business that might be conducted by the bank. It was pointed out to us that the only function of the bank, so far as exchange was concerned, was to intervene when exchange touches the upper or lower gold points, and that in conducting the remittance operations of the Government, the bank should act only as the agents of Government and not on its own independent responsibility. The main argument that was advanced in support of this contention was that if the Reserve Bank is given unlimited powers of operating on exchange, it might gamble in exchange with a view to make money. No doubt there is a danger, but we have provided that, normally, the bank should enter the exchange market solely to conduct the remittance operations of the Government of India and to conduct remittances on behalf of bona fide customers. I maintain it is essential, if the bank is to undertake the obligation of maintaining the exchange, that they must be given perfect freedom to remit money at the time which in their opinion seems suitable. To give this discretion to the Government would, I submit, perpetrate the evils of the present system.

Sir, I would now turn my attention to the composition of the currency reserves which is covered by clause 25. An analysis of this clause would show that it is provided that the gold assets of the currency reserve must be not less than 40 per cent. and that the bullion portion including the coin must be at a minimum of 30 crores of rupees, but that at the end of the 5th year it must be 20 per cent. of the total and at the end of the 10th year it must be 25 per cent. of the total ; and we have also made a provision that at the end of the 10th year the gold securities should not be more than half of the gold assets. I find that the Honourable the Finance Member wants to delete this important proviso that at the end of the 10th year the gold securities should not be more than half of the total gold assets. I submit that the provisions as embodied in this clause are the result of a compromise. If we are to have our own way we would provide that at least 40 per cent. of the reserve must be gold bullion and gold coin ; but as a measure of compromise, we accepted the proposal of Government subject to this important proviso that at least at the end of the 10th year the gold securities should not exceed half of the total gold assets. We have also made a provision that 85 per cent. of the gold in the reserves must be held in British India. These provisos, which the Joint Committee thought it necessary to embody in the Bill, are meant to secure a free inflow of gold into the country and also to ensure that most of the gold bullion would be held in British India.

With regard to the obligation imposed upon the bank to sell gold or gold exchange, the Joint Committee has made a very important amendment. The obligation to sell gold is restricted to obligation to sell gold only in India and not in outside countries. This amendment was made by the Joint Committee with a view to enable them to press that a greater percentage of gold should be held in India than would otherwise be possible. The obligation imposed upon the bank to maintain exchange at the lower gold point is, I submit, achieved by the obligation to sell gold exchange at that point. It is not therefore necessary that the obligation to give gold in foreign countries should be imposed upon the bank and thereby introduce complicated provisions in the Bill.

Sir, I now come to an important matter on which the Honourable the Finance Member wants to upset the decision of the Joint Committee, and that is the provisions relating to the gold mohur. In this matter again, I submit, the decision of the Joint Committee was in the nature of a compromise. If some of us had our own way, we would have liked to see that provision is made that gold coins must be minted and circulated in India immediately. People who demand that would be dubbed as extremists, but even the moderates would ask that if not in the immediate present that at least at some very defined and definite future the obligation to redeem notes in gold coins must be imposed upon the bank. But, Sir, we did not press either of these points, and the provisions as finally agreed to are in the nature of a compromise. Now, what are those provisions ? It provides for the minting of a gold mohur worth Rs. 20. Discretion is entirely left with the Governor General in Council to coin and issue such quantities as the Governor General in Council may think proper. We do not want to impose upon the bank the obligation to give gold mohurs in exchange for bank notes. At first sight, it would appear that the provision that we have made is so innocuous that one cannot understand the opposition of Government to such an innocuous provision. But what is the reason which made us insist upon a provision of this nature ? To have a provision of this nature would ensure, and visibly ensure, that the standard coin of India is a gold coin. Whether that gold coin is actually in circulation or not is a different matter. But we want to establish the principle that our standard of value is no more a silver rupee but a gold coin. But my Honourable friend Sir Basil Blackett would say : " You have got that even now ; the rupee that you have got is in effect a gold rupee (as he would call it) ; the rupee represents 8.4 grains of gold and not so many grains of silver ". Sir, that was the impression under which the Indian public had been labouring all these years, and it was only very recently that we were told that we were wrong in that impression, that the value of the rupee is a value that the Finance Member may choose to attach to it. If the value of the rupee had represented certain grains of gold there would not be any justification for any Finance Member to alter that standard of value. That standard of value has, as we all know, been altered in the last Delhi Session. Sir, we do not want that anything of that nature should happen in the future. I know that the imposing of the obligation to give gold bars in exchange for currency would be considered as a safeguard against the recurrence of any such danger ; but I want our people to realise that after all our standard of value has been founded upon a gold coin and the question of that gold coin coming into active circulation will be a question only of time. I am really very surprised that the Honourable the Finance Member should have thought fit to oppose this innocuous provision that we have made. The importance of this provision would be seen from the stoutness of the opposition which the Honourable the Finance Member gives to that, and I would request the House not to agree under any circumstances to delete this important provision that we have made.

Sir, these are some of the salient points that have been embodied in the Bill as finally amended by the Joint Committee. If Honourable Members will look at the Schedule to the Bill, as amended by the Joint Committee, they will find that the list of banks included in the Schedule has been greatly enlarged. While under the original proposal of Government only a few select banks were included in the Schedule, we thought it fit that as many banks in the country as possible should be brought into this reserve system, and we finally decided that every bank which has got a total paid-up share capital and reserve of over Rs. 3 lakhs should be included in the membership system of the Reserve Bank. These are the main changes that we have made in the Bill and the Honourable the Finance Member has been very much perturbed over these. Sir, this measure for the establishment of a Reserve Bank for India has been heralded as the greatest measure of financial liberalism ever offered to India. It has been received in certain quarters with a certain amount of scepticism, if not with suspicion. There is no need to go into hysterics either over the merits of this measure or over the defects that may lurk in it. It must be conceded that to place the financial system of our country on a sound and secure basis there must be a co-ordination of the currency and the banking reserves of the country and a unified policy in these two matters. Now, this co-ordination and this unified policy cannot be achieved without the establishment of a Reserve Bank. For obvious reasons no Government in the world can have control over the banking reserve, and if the financial system of a country is to be placed on a sound basis, there must be a co-ordination between the banking and the currency reserve. I would submit to the Honourable the Finance Member that the Bill as it has emerged from the Joint Committee is certainly a very good measure. Let him not be frightened at it. I would like to conclude my speech with the metaphor which the Honourable Member himself used when he brought his pet child before this House in the last Delhi Session, we thought that, though it was not quite a monster, it was an ugly, unwashed and uncouth child. There were those in this House who thought that under no circumstances could this child be made to look decent. Sir, we thought we might nurse this child in the Joint Committee, and with that object we undertook in our hands the care of this child. In June we took this child to Bombay. Some people may think that Bombay in June is not a sanitorium for a sickly child. But, Sir, we took it there with the hope that, even though the climate of Bombay may not be quite suitable, in that city we could seek for expert medical advice. And when we took the child to Bombay to our consternation on the very first day there was the danger of the child succumbing to the baneful effects of the unhealthy and mosquito-infested marshes of the Back Bay of Bombay. Fortunately, the child survived and we took it again to Calcutta, and after breathing the fresh air of the beautiful maidan there, the child revived life. Sir, we now present to the House that child, washed and clothed, and more healthy than it was when presented by the Honourable the Finance Member. And now the Honourable the Finance Member wants to disown it. Sir, if he wants to disown it, the blame will not rest on our shoulders. If this Bill fails to become law, I can assure the Honourable the Finance Member the blame will rest upon him and upon him alone and not upon Members on this side of the House. (Applause.)

The Assembly then adjourned for Lunch till Half Past Two of the Clock.

The Assembly re-assembled after Lunch at Half Past Two of the Clock, Mr. President in the Chair.

Mr. M. K. Acharya (South Arcot cum Chingleput : Non-Muhammadan, Rural) : Sir, I had no mind to make any very long speech on the Bill before the House ; and indeed I should not have been tempted to stand up at all, but for the excellent thought-provoking paper that was read to us this morning by my Honourable friend Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya. I think I listened to one of the very best speeches in this House which yet was a little too good for the official Benches who had almost cleared away at the beginning of his speech. But I think the Honourable Sir Denys Bray was here listening to the speech of Mr. Pandya and he seems to have relished that speech as much as I relished it myself. I am glad, Sir, that with the long experience in banking that Mr. Pandya commands he has given his ideas on this technical subject with a literary grace and ease, enlivened with the great humour and illustrated with a lot of facts, which as I said I greatly relished. I thought it was a great pity that the Honourable Member in charge of the Bill was not present to listen to the very trenchant criticisms that Mr. Pandya made against which I thought should weigh with most people to give up once for all the idea of a shareholders' bank. He quoted from the annals of the Imperial Bank of India as to how the directors were conducting the business of that bank year after year during the past five years ; and the figures that he placed before us were such as not to encourage any man with a free mind, such as I think all of us should have, to vote for a new shareholders' bank which might be managed no better, possibly much worse than the Imperial Bank as it is at present managed. I therefore thought that there was very great cogency in Mr. Pandya's arguments when, considering the divergencies of opinion between the Honourable the Finance Member and his great desire to present the Bill as originally introduced by him on the one hand and the divergencies to be found in the Bill as it has come out from the Joint Committee on the other. I thought there was very great cogency in Mr. Pandya's contention that the Bill might well be sent back for opinion to the country, to those who may be interested, to all who ought to be interested and who indeed will be vitally interested in the passing of a Bill of this kind. However, Sir, I am not very sanguine that Mr. Pandya's amendment for referring the Bill back to the country for opinion would be acceptable to the majority of the Members. Unfortunately in the very imperfect world in which we live, in my own philosophical way, the only consolation that I can give to my Honourable friend Mr. Pandya is that arguments do not always carry the day ; no, not at all in this imperfect world of ours. If arguments alone would weigh with us, I think Mr. Pandya's arguments were cogent enough to send back this Bill to the country for opinion ; and it is only after such public opinion has been elicited that the Government will be justified in proceeding further with the amendments that have been put forward either by the Government Benches or by very many of my friends on this side, who, of course, claim to be all experts over this banking Bill. Luckily, I do not claim to be an expert. As I have already said, I have scrupulously taken care to keep myself out of the danger zone of pullings, counter-pullings, re-pullings and things of that kind ; and I hope it will be vouchsafed to me to be able to give my vote in a perfectly free manner.

Only one word more I wish to say ; that is, on behalf not of the commercialist, who of course always will have his interests safeguarded, not on behalf of the great industrialists who will be able to take care of themselves and whose interests indeed almost everybody here seems to be very particular about ; I only wish to say a word about the interests of the vast bulk of the people who really contribute to the revenues of the Government and whose money, therefore, in reality would form the bulk of the money in any State Bank. I wish to put in a word that their interests should be adequately safeguarded. Just at present, from what I have heard, I do not believe there is going to be any very great contest as to whether it should be the old shareholders' bank or the new State Bank. If what I hear is true, if all that the little bird that has been whispering in my ear turns true, I think the Honourable the Finance Member will act up to the old adage that discretion is the better part of valour and give up his shareholders' proposal, for even the empty benches here, I am sure, will be quite loud in imposing their will against him on that point. (Laughter). Therefore, if it is going to be a State Bank of some kind, the only other moot question is going to be, I fear, with respect to the directorate. On that directorate, however formed, as I have already said, I am perfectly sure that in all human probability the rich men, the rich landlords, the rich merchants, the rich industrials and the rich capitalists and so on will all be more than adequately represented. I do not hold a brief for any of the above-mentioned men. I do not represent them. I represent the average man. I represent the vast bulk of the people in India, the great agriculturists. My constituency specially consists of those who pay land-revenue varying from very small sums of money, such as Rs. 50, Rs. 75, Rs. 100 to Rs. 200, and so on. I would appeal to the Honourable Sir Basil Blackett that in any scheme of directorate that he is going to evolve—I dare say the pot is melting and something will come out soon which will be acceptable to all parts of the House—in any scheme that he is going to evolve, the interests of the vast bulk of the agricultural people of this country would be adequately safeguarded. At present, in the Bill as it is drafted and placed before the House, I find there is only one member given to what are called the co-operative banks. I do not believe that is quite adequate. I am not going to waste my breath in opposing that clause, as I hear it is not going to be the final thing at all. Some other thing is being talked and talked, and talked over and talked about. Therefore when the final thing is shaped, when the members in the directorate are fixed, I urge very strongly that at least three or four members should go to represent what I call the great bulk of the people, the ordinary tax-payers, not exclusively the great big income-tax payers who pay Rs. 1,000 or Rs. 2,000, not these exclusively. The vast bulk of people contribute small sums of money, it may be ; but it is really these small sums that will go to make up the large capital of the State Bank that is going to be established. I would make an earnest appeal to all, officials and non-officials alike, and I hope that this will be made a non-party point, namely, that at least three or four directors should be drawn from people who will represent the great agricultural masses of this country. My only point, I repeat, is that agricultural interests should be adequately represented on the directorate ; but as to what the electorate that would represent them should be, I hope those who are going about doing very restlessly the melting and the remoulding business will look to it. Whether after all it is to be through agricultural registered societies or through co-operative banks or through any other medium, to me it does not matter, the only point I am keen about is this—that there ought to be adequate or sufficient representation on behalf of the great millions of the people, who, I hope, it will be worth repeating, contribute the largest share to the credit of the State Bank or in fact to the finances of the country. These are the few remarks that I wish to offer. Once more, at least so far as I am concerned, I wish to tender my hearty thanks to my Honourable friend Mr. Pandya for what I consider to be the best speech that has been made during this Session. Indeed I hope, when his speech is printed and read, the official Benches who were conspicuous by their absence all with the exception of Sir Denys Bray, and two others—I am proud to observe that both of them were Madrasis, setting a better example to their official Superiors—I hope that these absentees will feel sorry that they were not here to enjoy the good humour with which Mr. Pandya's speech abounded and which relieved the sharpness of the very strong thrusts which otherwise he made into the position of those who would contend for a shareholders' bank. For the very good reasons advanced by him I should have indeed supported the amendment of Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya ; but I fear there is no chance of its being carried through. I therefore content myself with once more urging the claims of the agricultural population of India to have adequate representation in any scheme of directorate that may be finally evolved ; and I trust that this point will receive the sympathetic consideration of the Honourable the Finance Member.

Mr. Kikabhai Premchand (Bombay : Nominated Non-Official) : Sir, I rise to support the principle of the proposed Reserve Bank with great pleasure, since it has won my approval through the slow educational process of conversion, but I cannot support the Report of the Joint Committee. When the project of a Reserve Bank was first broached, it was my feeling then that this could best be accomplished through the medium of the already existing Imperial Bank. Although I have veered from this opinion, I still believe we morally owe that institution certain obligations, if only in proper protection to the investors in its stock. I cannot concede that the terms proposed are over-generous. To those who would charge me with inconsistency in this connection, I would say that

I have endeavoured at all times to keep open the avenues of my mind for the reception of new thoughts and ideas, and I disavow mental obstinacy.

The outstanding merit of the suggestions now embodied in this Bill is the aim, for the first time in the history of our currency, towards bringing the control of both currency and credit under a single institution through healing the breach from which so many shortcomings of the administration of our currency have accrued. Of no less importance to my mind, is the first concrete proposal to give the main provisions of our currency system the use of law. It is quite simple to make out a strong case for the thesis that many of the difficulties and disadvantages we propose repairing to-day have arisen from the decision adopted, when the gold standard was officially accepted, that it be left for development by administrative action and not in accordance with the ruling of law. I recognise that when funds were fluid it was desirable to admit of a certain degree of latitude in pursuing this new objective. I also appreciate the skill and fidelity with which the succession of Finance Members endeavoured to make the principles of the standard effective. Circumstances were too strong for them largely because they were not reinforced by the authority of the Statute. Now these great ends—the linking of credit with currency under commercial management and the establishment of the rule of law for the practice of administrative discretion—are of such vast importance to India, that all things being equal, the proposals should command our unhesitating acceptance.

Examining the Indian situation in the light of these necessities, my first reaction to the recommendations of the Currency Commission relative to the Reserve Bank was a feeling of regret that the Commission had not set their gaze on the development of the Imperial Bank into a Central institution, charged with the true functions which it is now proposed should be committed to the Reserve Bank. Some of the Members in this House may be acquainted with my correspondence with the Honourable the Finance Member on this subject. The Imperial Bank has a franchise from the Legislature, on the authority of which large investments, some of them of a semi-trustee character, have been made in its stock. The Imperial Bank is the chief institution which by the rapid opening of new branches, can coax into circulation the very large " stores of value "—I will not call them hoards—which will strengthen our financial system. Anything which might impair the power of the bank to prosecute this activity would be detrimental to our true interests. However, I am satisfied, from a close examination of the Bill before us, that the interests of the Imperial Bank and its shareholders are not sacrificed, but rather that the terms proposed are equitable in view of the suggestions to broaden the scope and increase the usefulness of that institution. I am further satisfied now that there are very serious practical difficulties in entrusting to one institution the note issue and the handling of Government balances and remittances, especially when that institution, namely, the Imperial Bank is to be made still freer, than under the present Act, to carry out its fundamental work, the extension of banking facilities in India. For all these reasons, which have not been easily accepted, I am convinced that the establishment of a Reserve Bank on the broad lines now proposed is best of true Indian interests.

Sir, I believe it erroneous to hold that the greater latitude which we propose conferring on the Imperial Bank will result in unfair competition to indigenous banks or that their scopes of operations will thereby be curtailed. There is surely room for all and there is not yet in existence, nor is there likely to exist, any institution capable of replacing the Imperial Bank in resources or in ability to develop mufassil credit. In past periods of depression our industries have been courageously upheld by this great corporation and to shackle it now with the fetters which would necessarily be imposed on any bank entrusted with a note issue, would scarcely be to our industrial and commercial interest.

Sovereigns : Sir, I believe the argument for the retention of sovereigns and half sovereigns as legal tender coins to be untenable, for they have at no time in the past been employed as legal tender coins.

Gold Mint : I can see no advantage in the opening of a gold mint at this particular juncture ; in fact, it will wholly defeat the object of the gold bullion standard. A gold mint would retard the strengthening of our gold reserves ; it would add to the difficulties of maintaining a stable exchange ; it would depreciate our holdings of silver, and it would disturb the gold standards of other countries, with resultant suffering to the trade of India. For the same reason, despite the value attached to the sovereign, I accept the necessity of demonetising that coin, for such a step is imperative if we are to prosecute successfully the gold bullion standard and ultimately pave the way for an effective gold standard.

Shareholders' Bank : Sir, there should be no need to lengthily discuss the necessity of a Reserve Bank as this is generally accepted by the responsible commercial community, and having made mention of the desirability of its co-operation with the Imperial Bank, I now turn to the all important subject of the ways and means by which the desired end may be most effectively achieved. I am unable to support in the interest of trade and commerce a Reserve Bank without share capital or the manner in which it is suggested by the majority of the Joint Committee that the directors be elected. In establishing a banking institution, the most important function of which is to control and stabilise credit and note issue, every precaution should be taken to ensure its direction by qualified men. It is my sincere belief that the most efficient operation of such a bank is to be obtained only by means of a shareholders' bank, for directors who have much at stake through their ownership in industry and allied commercial interests, will obviously be more concerned with the success of the bank and its subsequent utility to the public than mere political office holders. Furthermore, there is the likelihood that if a Reserve Bank is established without shareholders' capital, politicians will canvass votes from various public bodies having the right to nominate members to the Board of Directors.

I also cannot agree with the opinion expressed that a directorate responsible to private shareholders would tend to be controlled by vested interests or that conflicting motives would arise within the management between Indian and foreign capital. As for the fear that foreign interests might gain control, I would point out that if the majority of the Board is to be Indian as recommended, there is nothing to prevent its refusing to permit objectionable individuals having any interest in the Bank. This fear may be allayed, by fixing the value of the shares to the small denomination of one hundred rupees instead of five hundred each as suggested by the Currency Commission, by limiting at allotment the amounts to be individually held and also by the reduction of the maximum rate of interest to 6 per cent. in order that small investors will have very little temptation to part with their holdings.

Granting, Sir, without prejudice to my opinion, that it may be desirable to start a bank without a share capital, it is certainly contrary to the interest of any bank to have its directors nominated by Legislatures. This procedure inevitably results in the consignment of the bank to the mercy of the political party in power, and with so many parties in the various Legislatures, it is easy to understand that it would prove extremely difficult for them to select qualified and practical men to conduct the business of a bank. As a result, we would have at the helm men of many masters, with possibly very little knowledge of finance. An equally grave defect resulting from this procedure would be the lack of continuity in bank policy due to political dictation. Political control and political agitation are factors which should not be permitted to affect the operations of any bank, especially a note issue bank. It seems to me that since the one great objective in establishing a Reserve Bank is to exclude currency and exchange from the hands of the Legislature and Government, there is every sound reason to keep the authority which controls currency out of politics. If, by investing control in the Legislature and Government, the bank is brought under their control, its worthy object will be completely defeated. I therefore maintain, Sir, that a shareholders' bank is the sole solution for keeping politics and banking apart, particularly in a bank of this type.

For these reasons I cannot support the motion before the House.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta (Bombay City : Non-Muhammadan Urban) : I rise to support the motion for taking this Bill into consideration. The Honourable the Finance Member in his speech on the motion spoke in a hyperbolic and panegyric strain about the virtues of this measure. He described them more as a rhetorician than as a sober business man that he is credited to be. But, Sir, when robbed of the rhetoric and the verbiage with which he has surrounded this Bill, I cannot help feeling that much ado is being made about nothing, in particular, in his insistence on the starting of the Reserve Bank. The first question is whether a Reserve Bank is at all necessary. It is said that it is a measure of unexampled liberalism in finance and that it will bring in its train beneficent consequences which this country has never enjoyed before. In the latest issue of the paper, the Financial News, which the Chairman of the Currency Commission edits, he also has written of this Reserve Bank as the greatest boon which this country has ever received. Therefore, Sir, let us examine in a sober mood whether a Reserve Bank is after all such a great boon as is claimed.

There are two opinions about a Reserve Bank. Some think a Reserve Bank should be the foundation stone under the shelter of which banking will develop in a country, and under which production will be stimulated, trade will be encouraged, and the social life of the people, as a result of a stabilised currency, will proceed on a more normal course. Others, on the contrary, hold that until a network of banking institutions has been developed in a country, there is no necessity whatever for such a luxury like the Reserve Bank. The curious part of all this is that, while this country is being given this alleged boon, almost all the British Dominions and Colonies refuse to have a Reserve Bank, and even in England there is nothing like the Reserve Bank that is proposed here. There is no Reserve Bank in Canada, there is no Reserve Bank as such in Australia. I do not know that there is a Reserve Bank in New Zealand, and a Currency Commission recently appointed in Ireland came to the conclusion that it was not necessary to have a Reserve Bank in the present stage of the development of that country. The only unfortunate country that has so far got a Reserve Bank is South Africa, and ours is the second country within the British Commonwealth, as it is called, which is being subjected to this experiment. Canada, Sir, is most fully developed in banking. It has a bank for every 2,500 of population, while in India in a population of 315 millions all the banks and their branches do not come to more than 360. That shows that Ireland which is undeveloped in a banking sense, and Canada, which is most developed in a banking sense, both of them do not consider that either for their credit or for their currency policy there is any necessity whatever for a Reserve Bank. But it is said that outside the British Empire there are Reserve Banks in European countries and in the United States and that more Reserve Banks are being started. Sir, not one of the Reserve Banks which existed in the pre-war days except to some extent perhaps the Federal Reserve Board in America can be said to have deserved all the praises that are being bestowed on them. Almost in every European country under stress of war the Reserve Bank failed to maintain stability of exchange or of prices. In most countries currency became depreciated and in some the notes were entirely repudiated. In France even to-day the franc is barely one-fifth of the value which it used to have in pre-war days ; it cannot be suggested that the history of the pre-war Reserve Banks encourages the idea that a Reserve Bank is either a haven of rest or safety ; and the post-war Reserve Banks need not be considered at all because they have been started to meet a wholly different state of things. Most of the European countries became bankrupt during the War and the Genoa Conference was more concerned with making them stand on their legs again than with dealing with normal countries. The problem before that Conference was not the starting of Reserve Banks for normally constituted countries, and, as Professors Joshi and Wadia pointed out before the Royal Commission, it is misleading to quote that Conference as any guide for a normally constituted country. Therefore, Sir, I do not think that either the pre-war banks or the post-war banks of the reserve character lead us to any sure and reliable guidance for the purpose of starting such a bank in India, and I ask the House not to expect too much, not to build any hopes of an extravagant character on a Reserve Bank even if we start one. After all it is an instrument for doing something. It is not the thing itself. The more important thing is the stability of the currency itself, and, Sir, unless there was an honest standard, honestly maintained, no Reserve Banks could ever give us that stability which we all desire. Although Government called it a minor point we know that the substance lay in the ratio question and not in the machinery with which we are concerned to-day. But I do not say that a Reserve Bank of a properly constituted character under national control is not desirable even in a backward country. The second point therefore is whether it was not possible to have converted the Imperial Bank into a Central Bank of reserve instead of having this multiplicity of institutions. I do not want that there should be any misunderstanding in this matter. I do not suggest that the Imperial Bank should have been allowed to retain its present shareholder character ; but the Imperial Bank has been doing the work of centralising credit in this country for several years past and with a proper modification of its charter we might well have entrusted this existing institution with the work which the Reserve Bank will do ; well-informed opinion in the initial stages of public discussion of this question was in favour of entrusting the Imperial Bank with the function for which the Reserve Bank is to be started. The Times of India published voluminous correspondence between the Finance Member and my Honourable friend Mr. Kikabhai last year. At that time no one strove harder than Mr. Kikabhai in favour of the Imperial Bank. To-day he has been educated, he says, into acceptance of the Reserve Bank. I know that he has got the best tutor in the Finance Member of the Government of India. (The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : " Thank you ".) I know that Mr. Kikabhai could be educated into almost anything by the Finance Member of the Government of India. He is the aptest pupil. Although he has to-day spoken strongly in favour of a shareholders' bank, his education is proceeding at such a rapid rate that if to-morrow the Finance Member accepts a State Bank, Mr. Kikabhai will be forthwith educated into accepting it.

3 P.M.

[Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta.]

But, Sir, let us lay aside all these considerations whether a Reserve Bank is necessary and whether the Imperial Bank could have been constituted into a Reserve Bank. The Joint Committee has now definitely said that we must have a separate bank from the Imperial Bank. Then the question arises whether it should be a shareholders' bank. A controversy has been raging over it ever since the Bombay sitting of the Joint Committee and that controversy is not yet over. Why is so much stress laid by Government on the shareholders' bank ? They profess to believe that the shareholders' bank will be a bank, independent of any control either of Government or other agency. Now, Sir, why is so much faith being placed in a body of shareholders who invest their money primarily for earning dividends ? The shareholders' bank is a bank where people invest their money for making more money. A tailor, a tinker, a motor driver, any man can invest his money in a shareholders ' bank, and I would like respectfully to invite the protagonists of the shareholders' bank to tell me whether a tailor or a tinker is really qualifed to be entrusted with the control of the banking reserves and the currency reserves of any country and, if so, why. What is the special qualification of a tailor or a tinker of which the Finance Member is so enamoured ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : What is the present qualification of people other than tailors and tinkers ?

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : At least they are on equal terms. I am not making light of the qualifications of a tailor. He has to dress us all well but he cannot dress this thing. That is quite certain. Therefore,

Sir, I have been unable to understand the great stress that is being laid on the private shareholder. Is he qualified to control a Reserve Bank ? Is there any guarantee that you will obtain qualified shareholders ? Is it to be laid down as a condition in the share application form that only those who understand currency and banking will be allowed to become shareholders ? Certainly not. It will never pass the mind of an investor in a shareholders' bank that his institution is going to take care of the banking and currency reserves. 99.9 per cent. of the shareholders of this bank will never give a single thought to the object with which this bank is concerned. Why then so much insistence on a shareholder's bank ? Even supposing we get a qualified body of people—supposing by some miracle in a shareholders' bank you get people who are educated enough to understand the position—of course we know that many of those who will buy shares will be interested in nothing but their dividends—but supposing some qualified people do come there, does the Finance Member realize that shareholders of a corporation like this will be scattered all over India and that the meeting at which they are supposed to exercise their control will be held once a year in one centre only ? And is it possible to imagine that any man who holds from one to five shares will go to the extent of travelling from, say, Lahore or Calcutta to Bombay, to attend a meeting when his sole interest in it is a matter of six rupees or 30 rupees, while the cost of the journey is 60 rupees ? It is absurd and on the face of it ridiculous to expect such a body of shareholders, disorganized, scattered, interested only in small dividends, ignorant of the whole object with which this bank is to be brought into being, to take an intelligent interest in its operations. The idea has only to be stated to be scouted by any intelligent man. It is said that the shareholders will elect the directors who will therefore be independent. I invite anybody in this House to tell me when the shareholders of any limited company in any part of the world have ever effectively asserted themselves in the election of the Board of Directors. I have in my hand a book written by Mr. Hartley Withers, who will not be regarded as unqualified to speak on the subject. Writing about the Board of Directors of the Bank of England, which is a body of shareholders, Mr. Hartley Withers says that the shareholders do not really take any part in the election of the Board of Directors. I shall read the quotation from his book on the " Meaning of Money ", page 215. The Board of Directors in the Bank of England is called the Bank Court. Mr. Hartley Withers says :

" The Bank Court is a Committee recruited chiefly from the ranks of the accepting houses and merchant firms and its members are nominated by itself subject to the purely formal confirmation of the shareholders."

That is how the Bank of England elects its Board of Directors, and we have that on the authority of a great banker and publicist. So I say, the mystery remains why such stress is laid by Government on a shareholders' bank. There is another objection to the shareholders Bank. The 8 per cent. which was going to be paid to them is now reduced to 6 per cent. cumulative. What does that mean ? Government could today borrow at 4 or 4½ per cent. Why should the income of this new bank be frittered away in paying 6 per cent. cumulative interest to a body of 5,000 people at the cost of 320 millions when Government can get that money at 4½ per cent. ? From all points of view therefore, economy,

[Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta.]
